That is a state-like approach, comrades. That is the creative attitude to the task in hand and it is something I think we should welcome. [applause] I want to also say that I had great pleasure in acquainting myself both with the work the VAZ men are doing on reconstruction and with their plans for reconstruction. In general, VAZ is a young enterprise and so it was all the more pleasant to hear that, at this new, young enterprise, the managers, the engineering and technical staff, and the whole labor collective are constantly seeking and finding ways to improve the technical level of the enterprise. I was shown the modern forge plant, the press plant. I am perhaps inclined to believe the comrades who told me that today press production is possibly one of the most modern forms of production, not only in our country but in the world. In any case, they utilize many achievements, world achievements. It is already a completely new form of production plant. The comrades now have big plans for reconstruction. I think that what the VAZ, you, are doing — from the point of view of raising technical levels as well as mastering new models — deserves all possible approval, although I do have some criticisms in reserve for you. [applause]

But, at times, one gets to hear this: The Congress adopted good decisions, but locally everything is going as it did in the old days. Help set things to rights. This is altogether like in the good old times: Come and put things to rights! Of course, comrades, we will help; we will be demanding and will hold you to account. But, to be blunt, is it possible to resolve all questions centrally?

Strengthening discipline, improving organization of production work at the enterprise and in the shop, making correct use of equipment and resources — this is necessary in the work forces themselves. It is the direct duty, it is the sacred obligation of each work force to their own conscience and to the whole of Soviet society. It is only in this way that we can pose this question. [applause]

Can you manage an economy which runs into trillions of rubles from Moscow? It is absurd, comrades. Incidentally, it is in this, in the fact that we attempted to manage everything from Moscow up until very recently, that our common and main mistake lies. [applause]

However, this is also still ahead of us, I have a special liking for this theme and will make use of it during our meeting.

Take questions of social development. In this sphere it is also not certain that everything in this matter should be resolved in Moscow. Naturally, the planning and allocation of resources for this sphere's development should be worked out on a nationwide scale. However, a great deal, a very great deal should be resolved locally, and resolved with vigor and persistence. We will hold you answerable for this.

One more thing, comrades, we live and work in difficult, but interesting times. Work with initiative is now needed as never before. But that is the very thing many are lacking.

I often talk with people engaged in production, heads of enterprises and branches about the reasons for lagging behind and for nonfulfillment of plans. One gets to hear all manner of justification; moreover, these refer to objective reasons and, in particular, to shortcomings in the work of one's partners. This is a sickness that has taken root in everyone. It must be treated in a thorough manner. It is, at long last, essential to stop putting the blame on each other and for everyone to discharge his duties conscientiously, to do his work honestly. [applause]

If that happens, if everyone fulfills what is expected of him, then there will be no need to blame others. But more than that, now — when we are undertaking tremendous work to restructure the entire national economy and accelerate the country's social and economic development — one has to treat one's partners [smezhniki] with due attention, one has to meet them halfway, cooperate with them. To be sure, if we take your example, if we take the car factory, today's modern car is a final product that demonstrates the achievements of contemporary human civilization. I've been told that 400 of the country's work collectives take part in the production of this article, this product. That's very interesting and important. How can one expect that if there is no feeling of comradeship, no mutual understanding in the collaboration? How can one hope for progress, for a successful solving of tasks?

No. For that reason it is necessary to seek ways for initiative in the work of all those who participate in creating the final product. This is now the most urgent task for our country. After all, if a good model is worked out by the designers, even if it is a good model mechanically, but something doesn't work in the electrical side, or something is wrong with the plastic — and these days the proportion of plastic is several percent and will probably grow even more — then all the enormous work of all the remaining collectives is wasted. That shows the importance of responsibility to one another and enterprising work. I would say we should now develop and strengthen a good socialist tradition, the tradition of cooperation between the country's labor collectives. I think this issue is also of great importance to you, comrades, since you have many partners and you have to arrange businesslike, fruitful cooperation with them.

In speaking about initiative, about work done with a spirit of initiative, I would like to say this to those employed at the Volga car works, to make this suggestion. It is well known that you produce wonderful cars, cars widely know in our country and in a number of other countries. Even so, your cars, in certain indices, fall short of the best foreign equivalents. Each time the works presents its latest model, we hear that the new car will be on par with the world's best. This is all very good; in fact, we were also shown such models today. But I want to put this question to you: Why are the Volga car works' collectives content with the new cars being merely on par with the world's best? Why do the Volga car works' collectives not set themselves greater tasks? Why does it not become a type of trendsetter, a trendsetter in world car styles? [applause] I think, comrades, that your adolescent period is at an end. [laughter] Your works are already mature with a mature labor collective and a creative staff of engineers and technical personnel, and not a bad staff — this is known by the whole country and the world — not a bad staff of designers. This is why I think the Volga car works' qualified collective is very capable of fulfilling the task I have been talking about. [applause] We will support you in this. [long applause]

I understand you may say that not everything depends on you, that much is connected with the subcontractors, with those who supply the metal, electrical and rubber equipment, and other components. The designers have their own problems in developing their talent. I mean that today they are not happy with the level of equipment available in design work. This is all true, but you know that there is a well-known expression used when one sets oneself great goals: a great goal will create energy. The main point is that if VAZ sets about solving such a task, then supporters will be found, both among subcontractors and at the ministry. I think, Viktor Nikolayevich [Polyakov, USSR minister of the automotive industry] and I even promise that in the Central Committee of the party and the government. [applause]

All in all, comrades, I do not want this immense affair that has just been received with applause to be forgotten tomorrow. I ask you, think over all of this and tell us your view. Think it over. Invite the scientists, also. I know there are problems you have posed in order for you to be equipped with other facilities for development of, for example, work the designers need for checking the models, facilities for design so that models can be finished off from this point of view. Of course, a new model should include everything.

We will try to support you, to help. But, comrades, the decisive part is up to you. Incidentally, what I am talking to you about today also relates to other enterprises and scientific organizations, to the design bureaus of the country. The causes of many of the negative trends in our machine-building and other industries are not connected with being oriented toward the creation of fundamentally new technology that is the best in the world, but often toward petty perfections of machinery that has already been mastered. Recently, I was sent material on this matter by Academician Marchuk, chairman of the State Committee for Science and Technology, and he expressed a very profound thought — that the whole trouble with our machine building over recent years — practically in all branches — has been that we have only been concerned with perfecting this machine building to bring it to an average standard. This has led to us putting capital investment into solving problems that have taken our machine building only to an average standard. As a result, in recent years capital investment has begun to perform considerably worse from the point of view of returns and our machine building began to lose its technical standard, to lose ground.

Now, when we are working out plans for the current 5-year period and for the longer term, for the deployment of technical progress in every labor collective — first and foremost, machine-building — we have to make arrangements that will lead to new technology, to completely new, frontranking technology. That is the main thing now. If we are to repeat the mistakes of the past year, then we will be throwing money away once again, losing time and not attaining, not achieving a boost in our machinebuilding. And, through machine building, we should be ensuring a boost in the national economy. If there is to be a breakdown in machine building, then there will also be a breakdown in the whole national economy. There will be no kind of acceleration at all.

I would like all of us to understand this well. Making mistakes in technical policy means driving the economy further into an impasse.

We have at our disposal fundamental science; we have at our disposal industrial science; we have at our disposal a huge army of designers, engineering and technical workers, an educated working class. It is within our power to set and tackle such tasks. The only thing needed is to reform one's thinking and to stride ahead. [applause]

On the whole, one needs to abandon the philosophy of imitation. It does not do to follow someone else's tracks in everything, to follow well-trodden paths. We have all been educated in other traditions and we must discover new promising sectors in the development of the homeland's technology. [applause]

The orientation toward exceeding world achievements must, as the saying goes, become part of the flesh and blood of all labor collectives, of all economic bodies. This must become the principle of our work, one of the most important goals of socialist competition. The advantage of socialism needs to be confirmed not only by the political system and social benefits but also by economic results, progressive technology, and high-quality products.

I assume that the machine builders of the country, including those who are present here, will be the first to set an example in this exceptionally important matter.

When we speak of our immediate reserves, comrades, that need to be used to fulfill the plans of the present 5-year plan period — so far we are still reconstructing the national economy, beginning the programs whose implementation must bring us to a new level, to a new labor productivity — we need to search for, to search for and find reserves that will ensure a successful solution of the plans of the 12th 5-Year Plan period. This is the main feature of this present 5-year plan period in which we live.

Talking about all that, I would like to draw your attention to one essential issue where huge reserves are hidden. I am speaking here about the quality of production. At the congress, delegates spoke about that frankly and demandingly. Without improving quality, we cannot solve the questions of quantity either, to radically accelerate the scientific and technological progress and our advancement. Acutely criticizing shortcomings here, we do not at all want to present everything negatively and, as it were, negate in one move the huge achievements both in our machine-building, light, and radio and electronics industry, and so forth. But, I am sure, you understand well that we are talking now about something else: Everything produced in the country should be of high quality. We obviously paid attention to the considerations expressed in the Political Report — that it is intolerable when workers who produce good and bad products receive almost the same wages and enjoy the same benefits. I would like to continue this conversation at today's meeting and ask you if this is not a violation of social justice? I think you will agree that it is so. But, if it is so, if we all agree with that — and all the congress delegates agree — presumably, comrades, it is time to act now, to act decisively in order to erect a barrier against low quality and defective products both in the collectives themselves and by the state. The time has come, the question of restructuring the system of quality control at the enterprises is also ripe. It is no secret that, even with good initial materials and modern equipment, low-quality products are frequently leaving some plants and factories. How many of them are being sent back, how many are in need of adjustment by the consumer at his huge expense? It is difficult to list everything, comrades.

Here, clearly, not everything is in order. The quality control service is, obviously, under the strong moral and material influence of those who produce low-quality products, those who manage enterprises. That is why, lately, the issue of transfer to nondepartmental control is being persistently proposed.

Comrades, yesterday and today during my conversations with workers, specialists, and managers of enterprises, it was again brought home to me what enormous importance is attached to the application of management methods. Lately, we have been devoting a great deal of attention to these vitally important issues, and quite rightly.

I say to you: If we do not solve these questions, we shall not solve the task of acceleration. This, I would say, is the central element in all our affairs at the present stage of economic development. That is not a slip of the tongue, comrades. This is the central problem. To a considerable extent, the success of our movement forward depends on how quickly we assimilate new management methods.

In this regard, the congress put forward the main directions of this work. Incidentally, when formulating these tasks we proceeded in many ways from the experience accumulated at our enterprises, including — and above all — the VAZ collective. Here, I would like to do justice to the collective of the Volga auto works, to all of you, dear comrades, for your very necessary and important work. [applause]

We, comrades, are very interested in your success in mastering new methods of management and we hope the VAZ collective will not let us down. [applause]

The labor collective of the Sumy machine-building association has also travelled along your path, along the same path. Your experience and the experience of the Sumy machine builders has demonstrated once again that the system of self-financing is an effective means in the struggle against the notorious stress on production volume. It acts as an antiwaste mechanism and this, comrades, is one of our most important tasks today. At the same time, life shows that it is impossible to achieve a radical reorganization of the administration and of management methods without reorganizing the central bodies of management — ministries and departments and state economic bodies. Thorough work must also be done here. This is what is important to bear in mind: It is through the work of central bodies of management that the immense advantages of our planned economy are realized, comrades. When we say it is necessary to perfect methods of management, often one may hear that people understand everything must be decentralized. If we posed the question like that, it would be a new extreme, and a new mistake, for which you and I would pay dearly.

It is precisely through the work of the central bodies that we enjoy the immense advantages of a planned economy. It is a question of a need to intensify the role of the central management bodies in regard to ensuring a sense of proportion and balance in the national economy and the right combination of state, branch, and regional interests, in accordance with monetary incomes and the growth of consumer goods, and so on.

All this must be done, especially as time and again, because of shortcomings in planning, we come up against all kinds of misunderstandings [neuvyazka] in the national economy, which has a negative effect on its long-term results. At the same time, we must firmly pursue a line towards freeing all central departments from having to bother themselves with things that should be solved by enterprises, and from what is the direct responsibility of labor collectives. Indeed, can it be normal when it is not only ministries and other bodies of branch management, even those like the Gosplan and the Ministry of Finance — and comrades here have been speaking about this: that the Ministry of Finance got involved with the VAZ, I believe. [laughter] It began editing the experiment against the decisions of the Central Committee and the government. I made a note of this and we will check on why this is happening. [applause]

Is it really justified for these powerful organizations of ours, the central bodies of leadership of the planned economy in such a large country as ours, to take upon themselves the solution of practical issues, which should be solved by the labor collectives and the enterprises themselves? This is wrong and it should not happen. It dissipates energies and does not give the central economic departments the chance to concentrate on long-term issues and safeguard working conditions at enterprises and associations. We must of course reject such practices immediately.

In line with this, I cannot avoid once again bringing up the need to quickly carry out the congress' directives on expanding the economic independence of our labor collectives — I mean, of both enterprises and construction sites, kolkhozes and sovkhozes design offices and scientific-research institutes. We must unleash the creative initiative of the labor collectives everywhere. We must do this in practice; especially now, comrades, because the solutions to many problems having to do with improving the economic mechanism lag behind the task which we put before all labor collectives and before our own cadres. A paradoxical situation is arising and many leaders and even labor collectives find themselves in an ambiguous position. On the one hand, we demand independence from them, efficiency in their work, and socialist enterprise, but on the other hand, we tie them hand and foot with numerous instructions and unjustified limitations. [applause]

It's no good when — as sometimes happens — enterprising workers who display a creative attitude to affairs end up among the violators for one reason only: their actions do not correspond to outmoded rules and instructions. [applause] I want to back that up with one example. You may even have read about it — if you have, I expect it aroused the same reaction in you as it did in me. Once upon a time on the initiative of the Komsomol a movement was born of multishift [skvoznye] teams producing goods of excellent quality. In various corners of the country workers at light industry and trade enterprises concluded contracts on cooperation. In Chelyabinsk they then decided to go even further. Here they set up an interbranch multishift team consisting of young footwear manufacturers and vendors at a trade center. The people joined efforts and they combined the wage funds and material incentive funds. A living link came about — direct dependence of payment for labor on the demand for the goods. The system worked, comrades. Defective goods were practically eliminated. The quality of the women's footwear produced was no worse than that of the most distinguished foreign firms. Naturally, the demand for the shoes rose sharply. The article describes how queues formed at the shop the night before just to get these shoes. If you read about it, you'll remember. I am not making any of this up. How did the RSFSR Ministries of Light Industry and of Trade react to this, Vladimir Kuzmich? One would think they would roll up their sleeves and set about spreading this magnificent experience. Nothing of the sort happened. The workers at the ministry saw only one thing in the experience of the Chelyabinsk Komsomol — that it did not correspond to the instructions of Gosplan, the Ministry of Finance, and the State Committee for Labor. The conclusion was: Of course it is not a bad initiative, but if it is introduced it will cause a lot of bother, we will have to reorganize ourselves. And, as they say, they closed down the young people's initiative and that was the end of a good idea. That's what happened, comrades, very recently. But it must not happen again. [applause]

In a word, there is now no more pressing and urgent task than perfecting the management of the economy and elaborating the economic mechanism that will open up scope for initiative, independence, and responsibility at collectives and enterprises. You know the Central Committee is firmly pursuing this policy line. A few days ago we adopted important measures for transferring the entire agro-industrial complex — above all, agriculture is the central link — to new methods of management. Henceforth, kolkhozes and sovkhozes will have firm plans for the entire 5-year plan and all that is produced above plan, even part of the planned produce, will be marketed at the discretion of the kolkhozes and sovkhozes. In order to give them an incentive for increasing production, in order for oblast, rayon, and republican organs to have an interest in efficient work and work which produces results by kolkhozes and sovkhozes, we adopted the following decision: that after the fulfillment of fixed delivery quotas, which were already determined in advance for the years of the 5-year plan, to the union and republic-level consumers, the stock and all remaining produce will be at the disposal of rayons, oblasts, krays, and republics. This will also give a powerful incentive for the oblasts to increase agricultural production. All that is extra — all that will stay on the spot. [applause]

A paradoxical situation has come about in light industry, where, in particular, the notorious stess on production volume has begun to cause enormous censure of the goods by our people. Things have reached such a situation: If you take the price indicators, for example, for the 11th 5-Year Plan, you will see that the production in rubles of footwear significantly increased in the country. However, if you take specific pairs of footwear, then their number not only did not increase, but was even reduced.

That means the average price increased, cheap footwear disappeared, and the production of children's footwear fell because it was necessary to accmulate gross volumes; this is what pay is based on and it is from this that all funds are derived. In connection with this, the system operated in the opposite way from what we expected from light industry.

We have now given this instruction. The plan for light industry should be formulated on the basis of trade orders by quantity, range, and quality. [applause] What trade requests is what should be included in the plan. Yet, it should not leave light industry workers in a difficult situation. Indeed, they have that capricious lady, fashion, in light industry. Today the fashion is for silk dresses. The price of silk fabric is three times, four times, five times more than cotton. Next year the fashion is for cotton items. How is the enterprise to cope? How is it to amass this gross in rubles? Is it to resolve the gross problem or satisfy demand? What should it do?

So, of course, we have to untie the hands of workers in light industry. Preparation of a proposal on this very important matter is being completed. We are making it so that the new mechanism comes into operation even in this important industry, which supplies many consumer goods. All in all, comrades, I want to say unequivocally: Our party has the serious intention of taking the matter of perfecting the running of the economic mechanism to its logical end. We will not stop halfway; we are doing everything so that the immense creative potential of the people is revealed in all its might and enables our country to rise to new heights of social progress. [applause]

Until now I have spoken about our tasks in the sphere of the economy, but the improvement of the economy is not an end in itself. It is necessary for us, first of all, to enhance the well-being of the people, to improve the labor and living conditions of Soviet people. And, finally, it is a very, if not the most important factor, to have a reliable defense, to firmly keep to and conduct a peace-loving foreign policy. All these tasks are connected with our work in the sphere of economy. Comrades, at our congress — you probably paid attention to this fact — we presented questions about how the development of our society's social sphere has begun affecting the development of the economy itself, people's mood, everything. We have firmly chosen the line toward acceleration in the development of the social sphere in order to overcome a noticeable lagging there. In this respect, serious measures were taken and the necessary corrections to the planning principles have been introduced. A redistribution of capital investments in favor of the social sphere was made. The needs and specific features of the regions are being taken into account more fully.

I would particularly like to speak about housing construction. You know we are making enormous efforts here and millions of people received new housing in the course of the last few years, but this issue remains acute even now. That is why the party Central Committee and the Soviet Government are taking additional measures to expand housing construction. While here in Kuybyshev Oblast, in Tolyatti, I felt once again that the issues of housing, the problem of housing, the problems of providing food are the paramount issues we have to solve as nationwide tasks. [applause]

I must say that both party and economic bodies and our cadres need to turn to these questions. I have in mind the entire range of social questions. I have already been to Tolyatti — where we toured I can't remember now. Here is a piece of paper an elderly woman put into my hand. What is written here? It is written in pencil: There is nowhere to go with the children. There is no theater and one cinema. That is all. This is precisely what I am speaking of, comrades. One should not have such a mighty industrial giant and have in the Avtozavodskoy Rayon, or in the city, one cinema and none in the Avtozavodskoy rayon. Surely, this is not sufficient for 300,000, or for over 300,000 to have one cinema — this will not do.

This is an oversight, a serious oversight, both in the work of the central bodies — the minister will take this into account — and in the work of local bodies. How can that be? People have come here from all over the country — educated people, who know how to work — but they want to live a full life. All this must presuppose the presence of amenities that comprise the social and cultural sphere. This is one more reminder that here we overlooked a great deal; now things need to be rectified. We now see a great deal of enterprising work in many sectors of the social sphere. Take the catering system at the Riga VEF [Order of Lenin State Electrotechnical Factory imeni V.I. Lenin]; the industrial safety and public health measures for Belorussian chemical workers and Lipetsk metallurgists; the construction of youth complexes in Podmoskovye, Kaliningrad, and Sverdlovsk; the organization of trade in Klaipeda; the development of consumers' cooperative societies in Volgograd, and so forth. Much has now been accumualted, much experience. It needs to be utilized in order to seriously solve, seriously advance in the matter of improving the social sphere of people's lives.

Here lies the great responsibility of local bodies because, frequently, even when questions with regard to financing the construction of some or other projects in this important sphere have been solved, the projects are being built very slowly. This is intolerable. This needs to be rectified in this 5-year plan period. I have received information from Sergey Ivanovich, the first secretary of the town party committee, and I feel you have a great deal to do.

The town is young. There are many children and this is very good, one can only be pleased with this. However, it turns out that 17,000 are in line to get into kindergartens and creches. There are not enough, although 2,000 are being built a year — er..kindergartens with a total of 2,000 places are being built every year. This means that even so there must be more. There are shortfalls in housing. Now, certain projects have been started. I was shown a palace of culture under construction and a music school and movie houses are being built. This is generally good.

I have already noted a very right and proper suggestion made here by Viktor Fedorovich Shevanov and Sergey Ivanovich Ogapov [not further identified]. They, together with their comrades, decided that this year they would spend no less than 3 days off working on the construction of hospitals, schools, and houses of culture. They called on all inhabitants of Tolyatti to do likewise. This is a good initiative. [applause] I think this initiative is not Tolyatti or even Kuybyshev in scope, but is all-union in its scope. [applause] One should take this up. [applause]

Comrades, the strength of the party has always been in initiative and example. After all, it was at the party's initiative that the burning problems to be faced in the development of our society were posed and are today finding their solution. It was at the party's initiative that we started to strengthen order and discipline, to increase exactingness and a sense of responsibility for one's actions. It was at the initiative of the party that, within the party itself, we started making those changes that had become necessary and demanded immediate solutions. There is also no doubt that today it is the party organizations which are leading the work in implementing the decisions of the congress, every Communist will be an example of selfless labor. [applause] Above all, cormades, we need to preserve and further develop the political and labor activity of the masses and involve them in carrying out projected plans. The party, as the chief guarantor for the implementation of the planned course, sees as its task the creation of an atmosphere of quest, initiative, and creative labor for tens of millions of Soviet people. We believe, comrades, that the starting point of everything must be from the party and senior leading cadres, whatever we take up. [applause]

During the congress — this is very important — and after it, the Central Committee received many letters and telegrams from literally all areas of the country. Workers and peasants, young people and veterans, men and women, with all their hearts support the decisions of the congress and welcome the measures that were outlined. With one voice they are calling for the course, which has been worked out, to be continued, discipline and order in society to be further strengthened; I have seen all this in these past 2 days in Kuybyshev and Tolyatti. [applause]

I should say that the Soviet people are not sparing with words from the heart and they are saying they will follow the party, if the party does not turn away from the path that has been chosen. [applause] It is the duty of the CPSU, its Central Committee, and all of its organizations to fulfill this order. We will continue to consult with the working people in the future to maintain in Soviet society an atmosphere of exactingness, sincerity, confidence, and creativity — everything that will accelerate our development. [applause]

Comrades, now to international affairs — the last part of my speech.

The other day I had a meeting with U.S. congressmen and promised them I would also tell you what I told them: We do not have two policies; we have one policy that expresses the interests of the Soviet people and takes account of the interests of all other peoples.

The 27th CPSU Congress produced a comprehensive analysis of all the controversies and relationships in today's world. What is needed to resolve its problems is an entirely new way of thinking, an innovative approach, and an awareness of the fact that the arms race and the development of military technology have reached a critical point. This is what we proceed from. In so doing, we understand that we exist side by side in world politics with an opposite system in class terms and are confronted by just as serious a reality from the point of view of safeguarding peace as the United States. Meanwhile, the leadership of that country cannot drop past habits and, to all appearances, does not want to reckon with the reality of the USSR. This fact, however, does not stop us from seeking a way out of confrontation. For there is simply no alternative. The other alternative is a race toward nuclear catastrophe. Our conduct and our policy are prompted not only by our principles and morality but also by the fact that we understand that any other approach is unrealistic. That is why, at the decision of the party Central Committee, I went to Paris and Geneva. That is why the Soviet Union has put forward an entire series of major initiatives. That is why we set out, immediately after Geneva, to translate the accords and the joint statement achieved there into practical actions.

Twice, we extended our unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions and offered to immediately begin talks on ending nuclear tests altogether. We put forward compromise proposals, meeting the West halfway at the Vienna and Stockholm conferences. Another major initiative was our statement of 15 January that contained a concrete and clear plan for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction and for reductions in other weapons to limits necessary for defence. We have taken account of the Europeans' worry about medium-range missiles and operational tactical nuclear weapons and came up with a compromise option for the European zone. We suggested the mutual withdrawal of the Soviet and U.S. navies from the Mediterranean. The 27th CPSU Congress not only approved all those measures but also formulated basic principles for the establishment of a comprehensive international security system.

But what about the West, on whom an end to the arms race and an improvment in the international climate also directly depends? How have they been behaving since Geneva? What is their policy? To begin with, we have not received a satisfactory reply to the statement of January 15; what they have sent us evades the heart of the matter and attempts to make do with half-measures and to mislead the world public with vague promises.

As for a reply on substance, it is being supplied by the actions of the United States and by the actual policy of NATO. In Geneva, both sides agreed that there would be no winners in a nuclear war, just as in the nuclear arms race. However, when we put forward a simple and clear stage-by-stage plan for the reduction and elimination of the nuclear arms arsenals, we were told "No."

Or else, they have kept harping over the years that the Russians cannot be trusted because they do not permit on-site inspection. We have agreed to it. In response, President Reagan offers to verify not a ban on nuclear explosions but the procedure of improving nuclear weapons. As a U.S. newspaper aptly remarked the other day, it is the same as asking a man advocating the abolition of capital punishment to witness an execution.

We, naturally, have not accepted and will not accept it. We put the matter differently: Let us discuss both our proposal on ending explosions and the U.S. proposal of verification. The only thing the U.S. Administration seems to have left from Geneva is talk about a new meeting between the U.S. President and the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. To make the matter absolutely clear, I will repeat again: We stand for holding such a meeting. We make no preconditions for it. However, we want it to pass in accordance with what the President and I agreed on; namely, it should mark a step forward, that is, produce practical results toward ending the arms race.

One more thing. It can take place if the atmosphere of Geneva is preserved or, it would be more correct to say, revived. Just look at what is taking place. Shortly, after Geneva, an anti-Soviet campaign was relaunched with new force in the United States, full of every type of fabrication and insult to our state.

Then, more serious matters arose: namely, the demand that the Soviet Union reduce the number of its diplomats in New York by 40 percent. A U.S. naval squadron appeared off the shores of the Crimea; they made it plain the action was sanctioned by the top authorities. An attack was carried out against Libya to show U.S. might and to demonstrate that it is, allegedly, at liberty to do whatever it wishes. A high-yield nuclear explosion is being carried out in Nevada with an obviously provocative purpose on the eve of the expiration of our moratorium. And when we proposed a meeting without delay on just one truly urgent question, that of nuclear explosions, it took less than 24 hours to answer "No."

Do they in Washington think that they are dealing with faint hearts? Do they believe that today it is possible to behave like compulsive gamblers? Is this how they in the United States understand the spirit of Geneva? Do they think that we do not see how the just started Soviet-U.S. dialogue is being misused to cover the implementation of military aims? All this makes one wonder, involuntarily, what content and what meaning Washington is imparting to a new Soviet-U.S. meeting.

And what about Western Europe? In reply to our proposals, which are also meeting the wishes of the European public and many governments, they are now saying to us: The U.S. missiles cannot be removed from Europe because the Soviet Union, supposedly, has more conventional weapons. But our January statement unambiguously also offers reductions in conventional weapons and armed forces.

They also say another thing: The United States, they say, will have to take the missiles across the ocean while Moscow will merely ship them to Siberia, from which they can be easily and promptly carried back. In so doing, they pretend not to know that the USSR offers the elimination of the missiles rather than their transfer anywhere. In sum, they stand for peace in words, but for missiles in fact. No, evidently neither Britain nor France is displaying a serious approach here.

Take the attitude toward the Strategic Defense Initiative. The West European governments and big business are using all sorts of pretexts for becoming increasingly involved in that disastrous plan and are thus becoming accomplices in a new, even more dangerous round of the arms race.

Finally, perhaps, the most essential point. The United States is putting its "star wars" program into full gear. The President claims this is a defensive and non-nuclear program. But the general in charge of that project publicly describes how the space weapon will hit the enemy on earth, while the U.S. defense secretary says it also includes nuclear components.

I say, frankly, that if the United States persists in that course, contrary to common sense, we will find a convincing response and not necessarily in space. [applause] We know well the potential of contemporary science and our own potential. There is nothing that the United States can do that we cannot. We can do everything. [applause] We can do everything if the situation turns out like that. But we are against such a choice. We are against the absurd U.S. weapons logic. To us a ban on space strike weapons is not a problem of fearing a lag behind but a problem of responsibility.

I wish to say the following in that connection: It is time to give up building relations with the USSR on erroneous concepts, on illusions. One of the most dangerous such illusions is that the Soviet Union's peaceful intentions and calls are evaluated as a sign of weakness. Well then, the arms race will not wear us out, we will not be removed from outer space and will not be overtaken in technology. Nothing good will come of these attempts. [applause]

As is evident from numerous letters coming in to the Central Committee, quite a few of our people are concerned about whether it will happen that, under cover of conversations about peace and fruitless talks, the West will make a spurt forward in arms that we will not manage to react to. I can assure you, comrades, this will not happen. [applause] It will not happen because the Soviet leadership clearly sees the difference between words and deeds. [applause] So the policy of the Soviet Union takes into account the entire sum total of real factors. We will not be taken unawares. The Soviet State has repeatedly proven that it will be able to meet any challenge. If need be, it will also respond in due manner this time.. [applause] We do not claim greater security, as the 27th congress placed on record. However, we will not agree to less security either.

Nobody, certainly, expected that the implementation of our program of advancement toward peace without wars and weapons would proceed smoothly, like a Zhiguli car running on a good asphalt road. [laughter] We are in for a long, tough struggle. Not only detente, but even a warming in Soviet-U.S. relations does not suit certain circles. They are trying to find any pretext to wreck the improvement in the international situation that began to manifest itself after Geneva. The whole world knows who they are. They are the circles associated with the military business, those who personify the military-industrial complex, sending its representatives to the upper echelons of power and taking them back after they loyally serve it there. They are those who earn billions on the arms race and confrontation.

At the congress we outlined the main directions in the struggle against nuclear war, and we will act consistently and perseveringly. We have great opportunities.

Our true friends, the socialist countries, are with us in this great effort. We have a special responsibility to them. This is the common responsibility for the destiny of socialism. It is very important that we pursue the policy of peace jointly, coordinating our strategy for the long term and each important step toward peace.

A majority of the world community is for preserving peace, including the governments and peoples of the nonaligned countries and the working people of the capitalist countries.

We are for preserving the impetus of Paris and Geneva. We will not let ourselves be provoked, neither will we pour fuel onto the cold war bonfire being kindled now. One should not play politics in this nuclear age.

We will count on the common sense of the working people of all countries, the common sense of ordinary people, the growing sense of self-preservation, and the awareness of new realities by political figures and parties, including NATO member-countries.

We ourselves must continually remember: The main issue in ensuring success in the struggle for peace is solving the tasks of perfecting socialist society. The state of our national economy and the development of science and technology; the qualitative restructuring of the economy; and the building up of the spiritual, intellectual, and moral potential of the Soviet land are determining factors. In the final analysis, the matter lies in the labor of each of us. In short, a strong, healthy economy also ensures success for the policy of peace and this is called linkage between foreign and domestic policy. [applause]

Comrades! Life has confronted us in full measure with the most urgent problems and we are called upon to give an answer to the challenge of the time. It must not be evaded: We simply do not have the right to do so. The congress decisions must be realized, no matter what efforts may be required of the Central Committee, of the government, or of the whole people. The program of our actions is concrete, purposeful, and realistic, but, if we are to fulfill it, we must begin, as Lenin taught, at once both from the top and from the bottom. Success in practical work will only be achieved if we all begin together and at once, from the party Central Committee to the primary party organizations; from the government to the production brigade; from the minister to the worker, kolkhoznik, and employee. Each person must do what is to be done, do it conscientiously and to the limit of his strength. That obligation is laid on us by the acuteness of the time we are living through, by the feeling of patriotism and civil duty, and by our responsibility for the present and future of our homeland, for the cause of socialism and peace.

I wish you success in that great work; glorious new feats of labor, good health, and happiness to your families; and all the very best in life. [applause]

Exchanges With VAZ Workers

PM091518 [Editorial Report] Moscow SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA in Russian in the 9 April First Edition publishes on pages 1 and 3 a 1,800-word own special correspondents, V. Lysenko and N. Mikhaylov, report on Gorbachev's visit to Tolyatti under the headline "Volga Motor Vehicle Plant — Dynamism of Experiment." After discussing the plant's history through workers' reminiscences, the article concludes with the following passage:

"M.S. Gorbachev's first meeting with the working people of the Volga Motor Vehicle Plant [VAZ] was at the plant entrance. The topic of the conversation was the development of the city and the improvement of production. Today it is no longer enough to say that the enterprise produces motor vehicles equal to world standards. Simply 'equal' is inadequate, they must be the best in the world. But the production sphere, the party leader stressed, cannot be divorced from the social sphere. Party organizations must focus on housing, schools, social services, and urban transport.

"The conversation also touched upon youth leisure. In this area Tolyatti people still have many unresolved problems. In particular, it must not be tolerated that in an enormous region of auto workers there is just one movie theater and few sports facilities or cozy cafes. But in developing social, cultural, and consumer services, M.S. Gorbachev noted, a great deal also depends on the initiative of young people themselves.

"In all shops at the plant where meetings were held there was a lively and interested exchange of opinions on the most topical questions. How is the economic experiment proceeding? How accurately do associated suppliers work? How resolutely is production being modernized? What must be done to improve output quality?

"Questions were asked about strengthening order and the struggle against drunkenness. Touching on this topic, M.S. Gorbachev noted that the work done in this direction has already had notable results: Injuries have been reduced, the divorces rate has fallen, as have the number of offenses. But this does not mean that efforts can be relaxed in overcoming this social evil.

"It is necessary to uncompromisingly combat embezzlement of socialist property and pilferers. 'Pilfering,' M.S. Gorbachev stressed, 'must become a thing of the past.' Our society's democracy is incompatible with a liberal attitude to lawbreaking.

"The auto workers also asked Mikhail Sergeyevich to share his impressions of his familiarization with VAZ.

"'The first thing that struck me,' M.S. Gorbachev said, 'was the scale. I very much wanted to visit you straight after the congress and get a feeling for the people's mood after the congress and the decisions it adopted, although I know the mood among VAZ workers has been good for a long time. After all, it is on the basis of your initiative that we are now encouraging the entire country to raise productivity and quality and to save resources. In general, to improve all indicators. I have a good impression, a very good impression. Do you know what is good about it? The feeling that there is a great potential in the collective and that it is capable of resolving great tasks. The leading cadres are young and the entire working staff is young. They can do so much!'

"'Of course,' M.S. Gorbachev continued, 'there are still many problems. But what we have heard today gives us confidence that the work will proceed further. You have accomplished a great deal, but there is a great deal still to do. I repeat, I have a good impression of the plant and, first and foremost, of the people working here. Do not forget, comrades, the entire country is now taking its lead from you; you have nowhere to go, but forward, not just at walking pace but with brisk strides.'

"The general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee answered production workers' questions. At the auto workers' request he talked about how the work to implement the decisions of the party congress is proceeding and dwelt in detail on the problems of the struggle for peace and ways of developing socialist democracy. M.S. Gorbachev wished the VAZ auto workers new production successes, health, and happiness.

"The Tolyatti motor vehicle giant has enormous technical and human potential and, in many respects, is an example of innovatory approaches to the resolution of the tasks of scientific and technical progress. Experiments and initiatives which give a lead to the entire country are born here. The decisions of the 27th party congress call for such bold questing."

Visit to Kuybyshev

PM091101 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 8 Apr 86
First Edition p 1

[Special correspondents A. Chernyak, V. Shalgunov, and G. Yastrebtsov report: "Translate the Energy of Intentions Into the Energy of Actions: M.S. Gorbachev's Stay in Kuybyshev Oblast"]

[Text] Kuybyshev — M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, left Moscow for Kuybyshev on 7 April.

He was seen off at the airport by CPSU Central Committee Politburo Members G.A. Aliyev, V.I. Vorotnikov, A.A. Gromyko, L.N. Zaykov, Ye.K. Ligachev, N.I. Ryzhkov, M.S. Solomentsev, V.M. Chebrikov, and E.A. Shevardnadze, and other comrades.

Here on the banks of the mighty Volga — the main thoroughfare of Russia — many major industrial enterprises are concentrated. They include industrial giants such as the Volga motor vehicles plant, the Novokuybyshevsk oil refinery, the Tolyattiazot association, the V.I. Lenin metallurgical plant, and others. The TU-154 passenger airliners, born in Kuybyshev, are well known at airports throughout the world.

M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, arrived in Kuybyshev City 7 April.

M.S. Gorbachev was met at Kuybyshev airport by Ye.F. Muravyev, first secretary of the CPSU Obkom, members of Kuybyshev party obkom bureau, and leaders of a number of ministries and departments.

The first conversations took place with workers, engineers, scientists, and young people. In the course of the conversations, the working people unanimously approved the domestic and foreign policy of the CPSU and the Soviet state and spoke of their support for the peace initiatives and their determination to work in a new way so as to scale the heights mapped out by the 27th CPSU Congress.

The CPSU Central Committee general secretary visited the shops of the Kuybyshev V.I. Lenin metallurgical plant. This enterprise is widely known in our country. Its output is sent to thousands of places — the "winged metal" aluminum, which ensures progress in many sectors of the national economy. The plant is not 30 years old, but it is constantly being renewed. For the 12th 5-Year Plan, the metallurgists explained, a modernization program is planned, making it possible to increase the output of rolled aluminum fourfold in comparison with the original design capacity. In general, the modernization has already made it possible to double the speed of rolling. The production of output has doubled without increasing the number of workers, and more than half a billion rubles have been saved for the state.

The metallurgists shared their own ideas and plans for the future. The collective's immediate goal is to reach a new standard of output quality and ensure the 100-percent fulfillment of contracts not only in terms of volume but also in terms of the entire extensive range of products. And, of course, the steady growth of labor productivity, which can be achieved only on the basis of the constant renewal and modernization of equipment and the rapid and efficient introduction of the achievements of scientific and technical progress.

Much is being done at the plant in this regard. Take, for instance, the heat treatment line for aluminum alloy tape, where computers and automation help the people. This line is 10 times more productive than before. But even this kind of equipment grows old. That is why the plant engineers think ahead, nurturing ideas for new machines working on the basis of fundamentally different technologies. Unfortunately the renewal of equipment is not taking place as rapidly as the scientific and technical revolution requires. And even innovations, by the time they have traveled the thorny path from the idea to introduction into practice, sometimes turn out to be obsolete.

In collaboration with the sector scientific research and design institutes, the plant specialists have elaborated technical and economic substantiation for the modernization of the hot rolling line, without stopping production and with rapid (in about 2 years) recovery of expenditure. Modernization will be three times cheaper than building from scratch and will produce a return four times more rapidly. As for the technical stand of rolling production at the plant, in many respects it will surpass the achievements of many foreign firms.

"Of course, success does not come of its own accord. Work has become harder but more interesting," party group organizer A.V. Obidin, leader of a Komsomol youth team, said during the meeting at the plant. "It all depends on people, on their will and their professional skill. The slogan 'From modernization and retooling to the highest labor productivity and the fulfillment of 5-year plan targets!' is, one may say, the closest and most comprehensible to us; it permeates the collective's entire life. Take our hot rolling mill. It has become a 'bottleneck' at the plant. Not surprisingly. It is about 3 decades old. However hard we try to improve output quality still further, we cannot achieve the necessary results. The old mill does not fit into the new technological scheme.... Yes, life itself demands renewal. The first two phases of the plant's modernization have been completed. Ask anyone, and they will tell you: There is an appreciable return."

But this is basically only the start of major, very difficult work. And the need to work in the new way, with great commitment, must penetrate not only the workers, plant engineers, and directors of enterprises, but also workers on planning organs and leaders of ministries and departments, who are largely responsible for providing material backup for the labor collectives' pledges and ensuring their efficient, prompt fulfillment of plan targets.

"I have worked at several enterprises in the sector, but I have never seen people taking the modernization so much to heart and carrying it out so persistently," plant director M.B. Ovodenko acknowledged in conversation. "At the busiest time, 300-400 people at a time were involved in dismantling the obsolete equipment, breaking up the old foundations, and laying new ones. Those who were left at the work stations, in order to prevent stoppages, worked twice as hard. The organizational and political work of the party committee is involved as closely as possible in the modernization. Temporary party groups have been set up at the 'hot' spots."

The Communists work in the front line, where the fate of all our plans and pledges is resolved. And the more actively they influence the state of affairs in the collective, the more cheerful and pure life becomes in the party family and the more rapid the acceleration.

"We say: Improve the economic machinery, so that it works efficiently, smoothly, effectively. Yes, that is necessary. But also, each of us, in his place, must work without interruptions, conscientiously," Z.A. Belova, a delegate to the 27th CPSU Congress, noted in the course of the conversation. "Not infrequently we hear indignation expressed about all kinds of shortcomings and complaints about shoddy workers or people who are downright idle. But they live and work alongside us. So who but the Communists should call them to order?"

The plant party organization seeks not superficial, "cosmetic" improvements, but a radical, deep restructuring. Paramount importance is attached to exactingness and to increasing everyone's responsibility for the task in hand. And the metallurgists do not regard exactingness as a single action. It is a system. The same system for everyone — ordinary Communists and leaders. It is the microclimate of the entire party organization. Here they do not fear publicity; they talk about the truth not in secret, but out loud, without the least trace of so-called "kindness," false fear, or deterioration in relations among themselves.

At the same time it was noted in the course of the meeting with the metallurgists that by no means everyone everywhere has yet grasped the necessity for restructuring. There is still evidence of a desire on the part of certain party workers and economic leaders to remain in their accustomed rut. The idea was voiced with new force that we will not be able to advance by a single step unless we work in a new way; we will not be able to overcome stagnation and conservatism in our work, in all their manifestations, if we lack the courage soberly to assess the situation and to see it as it really is.

The CPSU Central Committee general secretary inquired about the organization of educational work in the collective. He stressed the need to bring its content into line with the realities of domestic and international life. Dialogue with people, frank discussion with them, and the lively, warm exchange of opinions are part of our daily practice. Today it is very important for party organizations to adopt measures to strengthen work with young people.

The course of acceleration is not confined merely to transformations in the economy. It provides for the implementation of a strong, active social policy. In the conversations, the workers warmly approved this party approach and described what is being done at the plant in this sphere. The enterprise has its own cultural institute, movie theater, swimming pool, dispensary, kindergarten, a 40,000-seat stadium, and an excellent balneological treatment center. In the 12th 5-Year Plan nearly all these facilities are to be modernized and extended.

A characteristic feature is that the metallurgists do not wait for some project or other to be built for them. They do the building themselves, using their own resources. They have the forces to do this. Incidentally, a request to the sector staff was also expressed — the ministry is holding back the development of social, cultural, and consumer facilities. For instance, in the current 5-year plan the enterprise plans to double the number of housewarmings and increase to 100,000 square meters the area of housing being handed over. Yet the funds allocated have been reduced by three-fourths.

The Kuybyshev metallurgists informed the CPSU Central Committee general secretary that they are participating actively in the implementation of the Food Program. They have one of the best subsidiary farms in the oblast. It is an independent, financially autonomous subunit with its own balance. It has been allocated 900 hectares of land formerly considered to be of low productivity. From the very beginning the subsidiary farm was conceived as a comprehensive, multisector entity.

Unfortunately, this experience is still being disseminated only weakly in the oblast.

In the course of conversations with the workers, the CPSU Central Committee general secretary noted that the success of our entire struggle to implement the life of the 27th congress will be determined by the conscious participation of the broadest masses in communist building. The acceleration of economic development and the improvement of people's living conditions can only be ensured by the intensive, high-quality labor of all the people. Work and more work — that is the demand of the day. It is necessary to become still more actively involved in the great work, not sparing efforts and energy.

...The city of Kuybyshev is closely associated with V.I. Lenin's name. The monument to V.I. Lenin stands in a place which Ilich frequented — close to the building of the Samara [now Kuybyshev] district court. He once worked here as a lawyer's assistant. Other sites associated with Lenin are close by.

The figure of a worker with arms raised stands proudly above the Volga. He holds securely the wings which have become the symbol of the city, which this year marked its 400th anniversary. Here on the steep slope of the Sokoli hills, at the monument to Glory, the group of memorials spreads out, telling of the feat of the people of Kuybyshev in the years of the revolution, the Civil and Great Patriotic Wars, and the 5-year plans of peaceful labor.

The eternal flame is never extinguished. It was kindled from a torch brought here from the V.I. Lenin Monument in Revolution Square. The link of time is firm! The CPSU Central Committee general secretary visited the commemorative sites here and laid flowers.

The party has set a resolute course of radical transformations of the economy and the entire system of social relations and of achieving a qualitatively new living standard. We want to advance more rapidly, and we will. We want to resolve more complex, multifaceted tasks than before, and we will. The strategy of acceleration put forward by our party's 27th congress has been received by all the people as a workers' program, a program for every working person. The energy of intentions is being translated into the energy of actions.

New Computer Committee Chief Gorshkov Profiled

[Unattributed profile of Nikolay Vasilyevich Gorshkov, newly appointed chairman of the USSR State Committee for Computer Equipment and Information Technology]

[Text] Nikolay Vasilyevich Gorshkov was born in 1927 in the village of Grigorovo in Moscow Oblast's Ramenskiy Rayon. He graduated from the All-Union Correspondence Polytechnical Institute in 1963. He is a candidate of technical sciences. He has been a member of the CPSU since 1952.

He began his labor career in 1948 as a design engineer, and then worked as shop chief, production chief, and deputy chief engineer at an electrical engineering plant.

Since 1965 he has been on the staff of the Ministry of Radio Industry central apparatus: chief engineer and chief of a main administration and member of the ministry Collegium. Since 1974 he has been deputy minister of the radio industry.

A Hero of Socialist Labor, he has been awarded two Orders of Lenin, the Order of the October Revolution, the Order of the Labor Red Banner, the "Badge of Honor," and other medals. He has also won USSR State Prizes.

Moscow Gorkom Plenum Discusses Congress Decisions

PM071438 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 30 Mar 86
First Edition p 2

[A. Zolin report under the general heading "A Time of Sustained Work"]

[Text] Moscow — Almost a month has passed since the 27th CPSU Congress. Not a long time, of course, but sufficient to measure against its decisions today's practical actions to restructure work style and methods and speed up the socioeconomic development of countryside and city. What has already been done? How effective are our efforts? Among the positive trends observed, what has justified itself and fully corresponds to the spirit of the time, and what must be renounced once and for all? These are examples of the range of issues discussed yesterday at a Moscow party gorkom plenum.

It is well known that specific questions require equally specific answers. And the discussion held proceeded without embellishment, without hushing anything up, directly, in a businesslike manner, and with clear recognition that the elimination of shortcomings that have accumulated over the years will require endurance, persistence, and self-discipline in every Communist in the capital. The discussion of the tasks stemming from the decisions of the 27th party congress was analytical and constructive. This was largely helped by the report delivered by B.N. Yeltsin, candidate member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Moscow party gorkom, which was aimed at highlighting the principal areas of the city party organization's work.

What steps have already been taken in the interests of restructuring and mobilizing to the maximum the masses' creative energy and experience? A clear-cut work schedule for all public organizations has been established on the initiative of the party gorkom. The number of meetings, conferences, and gatherings of the party aktiv and economic leaders has been reduced. One-third fewer bureau resolutions are now being adopted and the number of documents sent to party raykoms and primary organizations has also been reduced. A firm line is being pursued to demarcate the functions of party, soviet, and economic organizations. As a result, the volume of papers of an executive and economic nature sent to gorkom departments has been reduced by one-third. Emphasis is laid on studying the situation and giving practical assistance at local level.

A considerable number of new approaches and new work forms and methods have been found. Thus, taking into account the most urgent problems in the city, the plenum confirmed specific instructions for members of the gorkom bureau. Henceforth each of them must present an account of how he has carried out instructions. It is also planned to broaden the practice of hearing Communists' reports and talking with them and to increase the effectiveness of adopted decisions, monitoring, and verification of fulfillment. The plenum also supported the course aimed at forming a more efficient system of work with cadres and their reserve.

The turn toward direct organization of matters and toward working people's needs and requirements contributed to our successfully meeting plan targets in the first quarter of 1986. Industrial production will have increased by 5.6 percent and labor productivity by 5.9 percent. The dispatching of products in accordance with contractual obligations has also noticeably improved.

There are certainly changes for the better, and not bad ones either. But, the participants in the plenum unanimously agreed, under no circumstances must we falter with these changes. If only for the reason that the present high growth rates are largely the "result" of the lightened plans of last year with which comparison is now being made. And also because 30 enterprises completely failed to meet targets for the quarter, and the leaders of associations such as "Raduga," "Salyut," "Vympel," "Vostok," and certain others have once again followed the path of least resistance and engaged in amending targets set earlier.

In this connection the speakers proposed that rigid, daily party control must be established over the fulfillment of plans and pledges. The targets for the first years of the 5-year plan must be regarded by every enterprise, shop, and team as the minimum. Their overfulfillment will be a real contribution to speeding up the country's socioeconomic development.

Specialists have calculated that there are 500 newly completed and highly effective scientific developments in Moscow today. But some of them cannot carve a way for themselves into production for years. In order to rectify the matter, the speakers proposed creating a unified science and technology program, "Efficiency and Quality," which would set two goals — to save resources and improve output quality.

A great deal was pointedly said at the plenum on the participation of party, soviet, and economic organs in developing the integrated program for the social and economic development of Moscow for the period through the year 2000 and elaborating the plan for the 12th 5-year period. The majority of ministries and departments have become actively involved in this matter, which marks a sharp turning point in intensifying production and improving the quality and efficiency of work in all units of the city's national economy. At the same time it was noted that the Ministry of Power Machine Building, the Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry, the Ministry of the Machine Tool and Tool Building Industry, the Ministry of Heavy and Transport Machine Building, and the Ministry of the Automotive Industry try to evade their responsibility for the development of Moscow enterprises within their jurisdiction and set lower rates for reducing the proportion of manual labor and renewing production than envisaged by the congress decisions. This attitude does not correspond to the spirit of the time or the aims of acceleration, and Muscovites cannot agree with it, the speakers said.

Ensuring the integrated, accelerated development of the capital's national economy largely depends on how soon the Moscow city planning commission restructures its work and whether it does this properly. Preliminary discussion and validation of plans and calculations is frequently replaced by directives here. Just criticism was also leveled by the speakers at banking and financial organs and organs of material and technical supply. They still only play a weak part in the development and introduction of economic management methods and in the struggle to save labor and material resources.

It was with great interest that participants in the plenum discussed tasks connected with radically improving medical services, trade, public catering, transport, and citizens' cultural leisure. There are considerable problems here. It is proposed that party organizations take active part in developing the integrated "Health" and "Young Family" programs and improve people's working and living conditions with greater persistency.

Questions of improving ideological work were discussed exactingly. This work, the speakers said, must be more closely linked with life, organizational and economic activity, and the solving of topical problems; and formalism, a campaign-like attitude, and cliches must be more energetically overcome. The ideological wealth of the congress documents must be fully utilized in order to increase Muscovites' working and social activeness and cultivate an organic need to work with initiative.

In the resolution it adopted, the plenum set a broad program of action for the city party organization to fulfill the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress and the plans for 1986 and the 12th 5-Year Plan as a whole.

Criticisms Leveled at Kazakh Party Plenum

PM080938 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 5 Apr 86
First Edition p 2

[Correspondent A. Petrushov report: "Reserves Into Action; at the Kazakh Communist Party Central Committee Plenum"]

[Text] Alma-Ata — A Kazakh Communist Party Central Committee plenum has discussed the results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the republic party organizations' tasks in fulfilling its decisions. In the first 3 months of the year as a whole total industrial production grew by 8.1 percent as against a planned figure of 4.5 percent. Construction workers coped successfully with the construction of hospitals, health centers, schools, and apartment blocks that were planned.

"Our economy has immense reserves," D.A. Kunayev, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Kazakh Communist Party Central Committee, noted. "And the right thing for us to do is to amend our socialist pledges. Above-plan labor productivity growth of 0.5 percent is planned for 1986. Our potential makes it possible to broaden the task — to raise labor productivity by an additional 1 percent, which will provide additional output worth R430 million."

The main speaker and the other speakers at the plenum spoke about the need to more rapidly restructure work in the new way. Since the CPSU Central Committee April (1985) Plenum there have been certain positive changes in the style and methods of the work of party obkoms, gorkoms, and raykoms; but in many cases they are still of a purely external and superficial nature. An atmosphere of creativity, innovation, and professionalism has been created in by no means all collectives. In certain places stage-managing and indecision have taken hold. Order and high executive discipline have not been ensured everywhere. This is confirmed by the unstable work of a number of industrial sectors. In the first quarter 95 enterprises failed to cope with output sales targets; over 300, or 1 in 5, failed to fulfill contractual delivery pledges; and more than 200 did not ensure the planned labor productivity growth.

How can it be ensured that there are no laggard enterprises in the republic? What must be done to unconditionally fulfill the plan for 1986 and for the 5-year plan as a whole?

Currently a number of ministries and departments have still not carried out the necessary restructuring. For instance,

V. Kazachkov, the republic's minister of power and electrification, did not even manage to examine the structure of the plan for the introduction of new technology and essentially sanctioned a drop in labor productivity that was twice as great as last year's. The Ministries of Nonferrous Metallurgy and Communications and the republic's State Agro-Industrial Committee have again included a number of obsolete measures in the plan for developing science and technology.

Sharp words were spoken at the plenum about shortcomings in the work of the Kazakh SSR Academy of Sciences and sector institutes. These have not yet oriented themselves to the needs of production. For a long time millions of metric tons of phosphorite fines have not been processed at the "Fosfor" association in Chimkent, even though the only institute dealing with the problems of the phosphor industry in the country is located in the oblast center. The "Karagandagiproshakht" Institute developed a plan for reconstructing the "Bogatyr" strip mine at Ekibastuz. Detailed analysis revealed that, were it to be introduced, labor productivity and returns on capital at the mine would fall and the prime cost of coal would rise by almost one-third. Who, one wonders, needs such a plan?

Particular mention was made of the following facts. Were enterprises to work at full capacity, it would be possible to produce additional output worth almost R1.5 billion. Last year 18 percent of enterprises permitted overexpenditure of materials and lost large amounts of worktime.

There was a critical analysis of affairs in capital construction. Through the fault of the republic Gosplan and ministries many inadequately funded projects have once again been included in this year's program. The Ministry of Nonferrous Metallurgy, having failed to allocate around R6 million for 7 carryover building projects, has put down 30 new projects in the plan. More than R600 million is today frozen in incomplete construction. Inertia and old approaches still abound in the sector. There is a need for a bolder reorientation toward the reconstruction and retooling of existing production, yet this work accounts for only one-fourth of the work of the Ministry of the Construction of Heavy Industry Enterprises.

An alarming situation has emerged in the construction of the Ekibastuz GRES-2. Construction of the Shulbinskiy and South Kazakhstan power stations is being conducted extremely unsatisfactorily.

The plenum discussed in detail how to overcome the lag in agriculture. Today there are favorable conditions in the republic for obtaining a good harvest: Good stocks of moisture have been accumulated, high-quality seed has been prepared, and the volumes of mineral and organic fertilizers to be applied has grown.

Stockraising and other agro-industrial complex sectors require higher development rates. There are still many farms and rayons where less than 1,500 kg of milk is produced per cow and where underweight and scrawny livestock are delivered to meat combines. This is largely explained by the poor feed base and the low standard of work at livestock units. This year we are being set the task of saving in the republic not less than 19 quintals of feed units per standard head of cattle.

Feed procurement, particularly in southern Kazakhstan, will soon be upon us. Yet one-fifth of all mowing machines and rakes have not yet been prepared in Alma-Ata, Dzhambul, and Chimkent Oblasts.

During the examination of the questions of boosting agriculture, serious complaints were made about the Eastern Department of the V.I. Lenin All-Union Academy of Agricultural Sciences (Chairman K. Medeubekov). The research pursued here is not systematic and in a number of areas notably lags behind the demands of production intensification.

More than half of the republic's schools work on a two-three shift basis, one in three vocational and technical colleges is housed in makeshift premises, and allocated funds are not used. Many of the republic's industrial enterprises, kolkhozes, and sovkhozes still do not have their own kindergartens.

Tasks of improving ideological work were discussed. There are 800,000 ideological fighters on the roll. That is a considerable force! Party organizations, it was noted at the plenum, are obliged to use that force skillfully. The matter must be posed in such as way as to ensure that the positive changes that are taking place are reinforced as rapidly and reliably as possible in people's consciousness and behavior and are manifested in their labor actions.

The plenum adopted a resolution and ratified organizational and political measures to fulfill the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress and the plans for 1986 and for the 5-year plan as a whole.

Ukraine CP Plenum Examines 27th Congress Results

PM080810 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 30 Mar 86 First Edition p 2

[Report by O. Gusev, M. Odinets, and I. Tikhomirov under general heading "A Time of Sustained Work"]

[Text] The Ukraine

Workers in the Ukraine have begun the 12th 5-year period fairly well. In comparison with January-February last year industrial production has increased by 7.5 percent. Virtually all growth is the result of increased labor productivity. Heavy industry sectors, the construction ministries, and transport are working stably. Consumer goods valued at R411 million have been manufactured in excess of the plan. In agriculture growth in meat, milk, and egg procurements has been ensured. Targets relating to growth in trade turnover and in the volume of consumer services have been met. According to preliminary figures, performance indicators for the first quarter will considerably exceed those planned.

However, the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee plenum, which discussed the results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the tasks of the republic's party organizations to fulfill its decisions, stressed the pressing necessity to get rid of the idea that if things are going fairly well as a whole we can limit ourselves to partial improvements.

"The production, scientific and technical, and cadre potential created in the republic and the experience we have accumulated in resolving major economic and political tasks make it possible to work better and to greater effect and to resolve qualitatively new tasks," V.V. Shcherbitskiy, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee, noted when delivering his report.

The speaker and others addressing the plenum discussed in detail how to do this. Achieving the indicators planned in the economy will depend to a considerable extent on reconstructing production units on the basis of the latest scientific and technological achievements. But things are not progressing here as we would wish. According to statistics from a selection check, in the republic's Ministry of Ferrous Metallurgy 43 out of 105 construction projects are being carried out on the basis of plans that are 5 or even 10 years old. The reconstruction of the Kremenchug automobile plant has been in progress for more than 10 years.

The growth in machine building production in the republic planned for the 5 years must be achieved by starting up production of progressive types of machines and equipment. For this purpose the production of products being assimilated in the country for the first time must be increased sixfold. Nevertheless, in Voroshilovgrad Oblast one-fourth and in Vinnitsa Oblast almost one-third of machine building production has not been renewed for more than 10 years; and at Odessa enterprises even fewer new types of machines, equipment, and instruments are being assimilated than 5 years ago. The matter must be rectified — and immediately. How this can be done was shown by the example of Kharkov machine builders. It was noted that as yet poor use is being made of the experience of the Dnepropetrovsk combine plant in certification and rationalization of workplaces and in increasing the equipment shift index by this means. Large resources are expended on studying this experience but the return is not great.

Technically, reconstruction of the national economy is impossible without radically improving capital construction. The speakers pointed out that the volume of construction work in the republic is increasing considerably. And this work must be managed with care.

Analyzing progress in implementation of the Food Program, participants in the plenum demanded that the republic's party and soviet organs and the State Agro-Industrial Committee organize work in such a way as to substantially improve the population's supply of foodstuffs in the current 5-year period. The main course here is to increase soil fertility and livestock productivity, take in hand those farms lagging behind, and rely on the achievements of the best collectives. The plenum noted the positive experience of Poltava Oblast, where an effective soil conservation system of crop farming has been introduced.

Reserves in stockraising are great. The following figures were cited: Last year many of the republic's kolkhozes and sovkhozes obtained less than 2,000 kg of milk per cow. The number of such farms is particularly large in Chernigov, Rovno, Voroshilovgrad, and Kirovograd oblasts.

The question of the need to improve production quality was sharply raised. The proportion of products with the state seal of quality at enterprises under the Ukrainian SSR Ministry of Ferrous Metallurgy, Ministry of the Construction Materials Industry, and the Ministry of Local Industry in Donetsk, Dnepropetrovsk, Poltava, and other oblasts is considerably lower than the average republic level.

Outlining ways to implement the party's social policy, participants in the plenum thoroughly analyzed the state of affairs in housing construction, consumer service, public welfare in cities and villages, health care, and mass cultural work. It was noted that the attention paid by party and soviet organs to the general educational and vocational school reform has weakened recently.

Questions of restructuring work style occupied a large place at the plenum. Many party and soviet organs are being slow to carry this out. Thus, last year reports by leaders of the "Kerchmetallurgstroy" trust and its subdivisions were discussed more than 30 times in the party gorkom and raykom, the gorispolkom, and the city and rayon people's control committees. Despite this, the trust failed to fulfill the production program for the year and for the 5-year period as a whole. In a number of places, the speakers noted, the matter is submerged in a flood of speeches and papers. For example, during the last 5-year period the Kharkov party obkom and Oblispolkom adopted 11 resolutions aimed at increasing corn production, but the yield nevertheless remained low.

The overwhelming majority of the republic's leading cadres are people loyal to the party who value the trust placed in them. At the same time there are still many shortcomings in work with cadres. B. Turbayevskiy has been working as first secretary of the Bratskiy party raykom in Nikolayev Oblast for 18 years now. For two 5-year periods in succession, the rayon has been following a downward path: the grain yield has fallen and milk yields likewise, although throughout all these years the work of the party raykom and its first secretary has received a positive appraisal. It was stated at the plenum that we must more boldly replace leaders in those sectors where the state of affairs does not improve for years on end, and we must promote workers who have received a good schooling and deserve the right to head collectives.

Such an effective means of educating cadres as criticism and self-criticism were discussed. Just criticism was addressed to the Dnepropetrovsk party obkom, where for the past 2 years at plenums and meetings of the aktiv not 1 of the 125 speeches have contained any criticism of the obkom bureau and secretaries. On the other hand, a considerable number of compliments have been given its First Secretary V. Boyko.

The standard of ideological work was analyzed in the light of the tasks set by the congress. It is essential, the speakers pointed out, to sharply gear educational work to life and to resolutely eradicate any manifestations of formalism. The businesslike, creative enthusiasm aroused by the congress should be supported and developed in every way possible.

The plenum adopted a specific resolution aimed at unconditional fulfillment of the 27th CPSU Congress decisions.

Bagirov Addresses Azerbaijan Party Plenum

[Report on the address by Kyamran Bagirov, first secretary of the Azerbaijan Communist Party Central Committee, delivered at the Azerbaijan Communist Party Central Committee plenum on 5 April]

[Text] Dear listeners: The Azerbaijan Communist Party Central Committee held a plenum on 5 April. Kyamran Bagirov, first secretary of the Azerbaijan Communist Party Central Committee, addressed the convocation. We now draw your attention to a report on his address. The leader of the Communists in Azerbaijan said the following:

It is now 1 month since the 27th CPSU Congress concluded its work. With each passing day we have a better understanding of the scope and historic importance of its decisions. In its critical debate on the situation of the country, the congress not only summed up the work carried out during the past 5 years but also reviewed the work of the party during the past 25 years. It drew up decisions having the characteristics of programs which established the main directions of the Soviet community's development during the forthcoming years and the 10-year plan periods. The congress unanimously upheld the CPSU Central Committee's political line and meaningful work and the conclusions drawn from and the recommendations made by the Central Committee's Political Report, approved the new edition of the CPSU Program, the party rules and regulations, together with the changes effected, and the Basic Guidelines of social and economic development from 1986 to 1990 and from 1990 to 2000, and decided on the adoption of a resolution based on the Central Committee's accounting report.

The great political decisions adopted by the congress have added great importance to it from the viewpoint of domestic and international development [words indistinct] and indicated that the party must correctly tackle the inevitable programs of the present time without delay and that the system of socialism established in the Soviet Union is capable of drawing up well-calculated and realistic plans. The Political Report on the CPSU Central Committee and the address delivered by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, have openly explained the nature of the complex and responsible tasks put forward by the party and the ways and means of resolutely fulfilling them.

The Political Report has given a magnificent picture of the present [word indistinct] and adversities in the world, confirmed the objectives and directions of the foreign policy strategy pursued by the CPSU, and put forward a concrete program for consolidating the struggle made for safeguarding and strengthening peace and for developing good-neighborly relations and mutually beneficial ties among all the countries. The noble objective of Soviet foreign policy and the work of the (?party) leadership is to rid mankind of its continuous fear over its future through using the large funds allocated for rearmament for meeting peaceful needs.

The CPSU and the Soviet Government are endeavoring to make use of every opportunity — even the smallest — to halt the upward trend of the threat of war. A new and convincing proof of this is Mikhail Gorbachev's address on Soviet television in which he called on the U.S. Administration to put an end to nuclear arms and terminate the fast pace of nuclear rearmament.

Later, Kyamran Bagirov discussed the tasks before the Communists and all the people of Azerbaijan SSR as derived from the decisions adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress. He said:

The Communists and workers of Azerbaijan have unanimously approved the party's and Soviet state's domestic and foreign policies and the historic decisions drawn up by the 27th CPSU Congress. The Azerbaijan SSR party organization fully supports the assertions put forward in the Central Committee's Political Report and the conclusions drawn from it, including the program of radical changes established by the congress.

The Azerbaijan SSR is making a worthy contribution toward the effort made to realize the important tasks put forward by the party. As a whole, the republic's workers have successfully realized the plans of the first quarter of the current year. The tasks concerning the industrial plan are (?being realized) at a faster pace. The increase in production has been 5 percent instead of the 4 percent stipulated by the annual plan.

Kyamran Bagirov also discussed in detail the measures to be put into effect during the 12th 5-Year Plan period for consolidating the structure of the industrial field and for further upgrading the pace of development in oil machinery production, oil and gas extraction, and in other industrial fields — including the chemical and petrochemical industry, power generation, and the ferrous and nonferrous metallurgy domain. He also discussed the work to be carried out for further improving the material welfare of the workers, broadening the construction of dwellings, and further consolidating the various services taken to the people.

Kyamran Bagirov concluded his address by saying:

I would like to assure the CPSU Central Committee and the CPSU Central Committee Politburo that the Communists and workers of Azerbaijan will channel all their strength, knowledge, and experience toward the great work which concerns communist construction and the strengthening of the Soviet state's economic and defense power.

Deputy Petroleum Minister Discusses Prospects

LD082021 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0900 GMT 8 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Moscow, 8 Apr (TASS) — The oil recovery industry of the USSR has sufficient resources to satisfy completely the country's needs for many years. In the next 5 years the level of annual oil and gas condensate recovery in the USSR will rise to 625-640 million metric tons, Valeriy Igrevskiy, first deputy minister of the USSR petroleum industry, stated in a conversation with a TASS correspondent.

The growth in recovery planned for the current 5-year plan (1986-1990) is lower than in previous years; this is not a sign of the exhaustion of oil resources, but of a new approach by the USSR to oil recovery and processing, Igrevskiy noted. Over 5 years, instead of a 20-30 million metric tons annual increase in fuel recovery, as was the case in the sixties and seventies, the USSR will save 100 million metric tons of oil by using it more economically and by replacing it where possible with gas and a greater refinement of this valuable raw material.

Today this is the most rational way of developing the oil industry, Igrevskiy thinks. Its aim is to save as much as possible of the irreplaceable reserves of hydrocarbons for future generations. Predictions show that the likelihood of finding major new deposits in the USSR has far from been exhausted; however, oil extraction conditions are becoming more difficult.

In Western Serbia the largest deposits have passed their extraction peak, although only 78 of 300 deposits discovered by geologists are under exploitation there, he emphasized. In the USSR as a whole, 70 percent of the extracted oil comes from only 5 percent of the deposits. This proportion will change in the near future. The less productive deposits will be put into operation.

Economist Zateyev Examines Reform Plans

PM081115 Rome AVANTI! in Italian 23-24 Mar 86 AVANTI! DELLA DOMENICA Supplement pp 2-4

[Interview with Gennadiy Nikolayevich Zateyev, "deputy chief of the Gosplan department for the propsects and dynamics of development," by Libero Lizzadri in Moscow; date not given]

[Excerpt] [Lizzadri] What are the aspects in common and the differences in the present action to regenerate economic management, compared to the proposals put forward at one time by Liberman and compared to the "Kosygin reform"?

[Zateyev] There seems to me to be a basic difference. First, in the sixties the country's economic situation was completely different from that of the second half of the eighties. And if we look at the entire postwar period, the difference from the sixties emerges more clearly. Indeed at that time there were adequate opportunities to increase raw materials resources; we were then only just starting to exploit the West Siberian regions. Furthermore, at that time there were no manpower problems. Also during that period we had only just begun to supply the market with consumer durables: in fact the majority of the population had no television, refrigerator, dishwasher, and so forth, so the demand was very strong. Because of the low living standards the population needed everything. Because of all this the reform was in response to everything that was not taken into consideration under Khrushchev. There were positive economic aspects but also "distortions," that is, what we called "voluntarism," because unfounded experiments were carried out, especially in agriculture. I should add that the Seventh 5-Year Plan (1960-65) was a special kind of plan since there was a large number of investments for a large number of objectives, many of which remained unrealized and were only attained during the period of the eighth plan (1966-70). In that situation, with the economy in a favorable position, it would have been easier to carry out economic reforms, since the burden of problems was much lighter than at present. Now the burden is much greater. I should add that in the sixties the world economic situation was favorable: All countries were experiencing a boom. So reform could have been carried out much more easily at that time. This is the first basic difference compared to the current reform, which has to be carried out under much more difficult starting conditions. Of course there are some shared elements. At that very time attention was being devoted to the principles of the role of profit, the problems of interdependence between economic and administrative management methods, of technical and scientific research, of material involvement, of economic calculations, and so forth. Basically these are things that we are returning to now, such as the autonomy of enterprise management, enterprises' self-financing, and so forth, so the general issues raised then retain their significance and topicality. But these are only general economic issues; the specific situations differ greatly. Furthermore, according to our economists' assessments, the 1965 reforms were not further extended and developed, the issue was laid aside; so one could say that we now want to implement more consistently the sketches and ideas that were outlined at that time. I would say that there are no rigid constraints here because the present reform plans must be examined in conjunction with the specific situations that came about in about the mid-eighties. It is a fundamental difference. You see, then too we spoke in terms of the need for technological and scientific progress, to keep an eye on quality, and so forth, but we were not prompted by objective considerations. Now there is a necessity, an ineluctability — there are no other alternatives. At that time there were other alternatives: People talked about quality, but at the same time great emphasis was also placed on quantity; there was talk of saving raw materials, but major resources were readily available to us. This is why basically we now find ourselves on the threshold of radical changes. Before, we did not use terms of this kind. The very term "radical reform" means that we are moving toward a major change in the economic mechanism, and the party and government will have to examine even more thoroughly the problems of improving this mechanism. This is demanded by life, by the specific situation. So I would not say that we are returning to the old ideas of Liberman or of the Kosygin reform, because the specific situation has changed greatly and demands different solutions.

[Lizzadri] Is it possible to talk in terms of another New Economic Policy [NEP] and, if so, in what way?

[Zateyev] Personally, I believe that one can. If there is a new economic situation there must be a new economic policy. But, strictly speaking, I would say that the NEP remains Lenin's policy of the twenties. The situation then was one of complete economic disaster and famine: It was necessary somehow to revive the country's economy. Under those conditions the only option was to concentrate on the distribution of goods, commerce, and capital; to develop private enterprise; to limit the state monopoly on foreign trade; and to accept unemployment. Since there were no alternatives it was necessary to approach the economic situation proceeding from traditional market principles. There is a semantic similarity; but today's new economic policy does not signify that we are preparing to return to the traditional laws of the market and of merchandise, to the spirit of private enterprise, and to Robinson's laws of economic interplay. In our country socialist ground rules apply and we build the economic rules within the framework of the basic principles deriving from socialism. This means that we are not moving toward a market economy, automatic price formation; opening the way to free trade, unemployment, or competition between workers; or copying the market economy model — especially since the most highly developed capitalist countries abandoned those models some time ago. At the present stage of capitalist development, many laws have changed, to the extent that it is difficult to rediscover the market behind them. So with regard to the substance of the problem, we can say that we are on the threshold of a formulation of economic policy based on the specifics of our new economic situation. So we are not planning to copy automatically what we did in the twenties.

[Lizzadri] When do you intend to complete the changeover to the new method of management of all production organizations and all Soviet enterprises?

[Zateyev] The task is just beginning, but we already have a joint view on many things. The general direction in which we should head is clear. The country should elevate the method of central planning and enhance the role of the Gosplan, which should no longer deal with routine matters, as it does now, but rather with strategic issues, the major options of economic policy. It should also bring about enterprise autonomy by delegating many tasks to the enterprises and eliminating the practice of supervision and attention to details; the principle of bureaucratic management of the economy should be abandoned, aiming especially at the methodological orientation of the broad outline of production. So far as what does not directly concern the Gosplan is concerned, it should be said that the Ministry of Finance should not concern itself with fiscal matters alone, as it does now; it should play itsrole as an economic filter: On the one hand, the financial bodies should block fanciful projects which do not guarantee a high return and which require large investments of capital; on the other, they should support projects which guarantee a high return on expenditure. Hitherto the financial system has maintained a passive stance; now it should optimize its functions. If we talk instead about price formation, the country is rebuilding its central core — the State Committee on Prices — which is currently inflexible and is adjusting only slowly to the new structures. There are so many causes. The underlying problem lies in the fact that prices should perform their economic role better, that they should be better able to measure expenditure, that they should take account more effectively of quality and consumer demand. So I would say that, with respect to what we should do, we are taking the first steps in a major rebuilding of the sphere of management. And here lies the delicacy of the issue, in the sense that in broad outline everything is clear, but in practice sometimes there is not complete clarity or complete harmony of views; there is a difference of viewpoints. It is clear that at some point we will have to make decisions; and it is not certain that these decisions will always be correct, because the complexity of the problems is such that incorrect decisions could be made. The trial and error method must be learned and applied well. There could be problems, certain costs. This is why we use the term "economic experiment." First we examine what influence a new measure has, then we start to extend it. There are no models in this field; we do not know at the outset what results we will achieve, so it is very difficult to speak of specific time scales. For instance, it would be wrong to say that it will take 2 or 3 years, after which we will be able to sit down and see how dynamically the national economy is developing.

In a broad sense, this is an unending process. Situations are changing constantly, therefore there should be a constant adjustment of the economic mechanism. It is difficult to give precise information, because the situations could change in the course of the changeover. We will certainly introduce the changes soon, and then we will see what problems arise from practice. Certainly, if the economic situation were good, it would be easier to carry out transformations and changes. If the economic situation improves, the necessary changes will be effected more easily and better, because it is easier to introduce changes when the economy is growing, when everything is going well. It is more difficult if things are going badly, because contradictions which it is difficult to sort and to surmount, can always arise.

[Lizzadri] Subjective difficulties notwithstanding, the transition phase also presents problems that are objectively difficult to resolve: Is it possible that the transition phase, even if it is implemented with good will and skill, will lead in some sectors and factories to a temporary fall in production?

[Zateyev] With regard to the economy as a whole, I hope that there will be no obstacles; but in individual sectors and factories there could be occasional hiccups due to experimental errors. But probably the envisaged economic reforms cannot worsen the situation, because basically they should facilitate the improvement of the economic mechanism and because the experiments that we have been conducting for the past 3 years show that they produce at least an improvement of economic development. We can already see that discipline has been introduced into supplies between enterprises and into contracts; that enterprises want to earn their wages; that there is a decline in the numbers of extra workers in factories, with a simultaneous pay increase for those who remain; and that enterprises are more responsible in placing orders, to the extent that we have fewer instances of enterprises which first order a product then cancel the order when the time comes to pay.

In general factories have become more accuate with regard to planning. With regard to current results, the situation has improved. With regard to technical restructuring, technological progress, and product quality, the economic experiment cannot be said to have yielded any major results, so it is necessary to find new ways and means of improving this experiment. We are trying to link the two objectives. We have two experiments under way — at the Volga automobile plant and at the Sumsk machine building plant. The essence of this experiment is that the two enterprises are providing themselves with stable normatives for calculating profits and the running capital balance and they base most of their technological development on their own resources and profits. Furthermore the plants' cash profits guarantee them sufficient foreign currency to purchase additional equipment. The experiments in these two enterprises are being conducted with very rigid normalitives, with a constant need to think and act to improve output — not from a competitive standpoint but with much more rigid normatives than before.

In general the restructuring will not be rapid because the matter is so complex and varied that it is very difficult to say what kind of national economic mechanism will emerge from it, because the experiment could develop differently and cause various new problems to emerge. But it would be wrong to look only at the economic mechanism. It is not the sole parameter for defining economic development. And it would be a great exaggeration to link the country's entire economic development solely to the processes whereby we are changing the economic mechanism. It also depends the country's situation, on the general sociopolitical atmosphere, on many unmeasurable elements. It also depends on the implementation of changes, responsibilities, and initiative. Basically all the discussions now under way in the country, in the press and so forth, involving an in-depth self-criticism of the past, provide a more favorable background for the performance of greater tasks than have ever before faced the national economy to ensure that there are no hiccups.

[Lizzardi] In recent years the proportion of the national income allocated to production investments has diminished, while the modernization of the production apparatus will inevitably entail major investments. How do you intend to accumulate enough capital without lowering the people's living standards and cutting defense spending?

[Zateyev] How to accumulate with a view to investment without making the population tighten their belts? Actually this dilemma does not exist in our country. In the new 5-year plan we envisage both higher investments and raising the people's living standards. Investments slightly exceed consumption, correcting the tendency of recent 5-year plans, when investments fell. On what basis do we intend to accelerate the accumulation of investment capital? We are counting a great deal on the development of engineering and the equipment industry. In these sectors there are many possibilities, many unused reserves: they can yield tens of billions of rubles just by reducing metals wastage. There is also the whole question of repairs. Many of the engineering industries are below world technological standards. In general we intend to accelerate investments in the development of engineering. To this end we are carrying out a structural maneuver which allocates a considerable proportion of investments to engineering so that it in turn will impart an impetus, a boost to investment. With regard to consumer goods, the main revenue derives from light industries, food, and, of course, agriculture. The agro-industrial complex receives a major share of investments: No other country invests as much in agriculture. We believe that the accumulated potential will make it possible to step up the increase of agricultural output, with a positive impact on the light and food industries. It is true that agriculture also depends on investments, but not directly. Be that as it may, agriculture's reserves are so great as to make a major increase possible there.

Merchant Marine Minister Stresses 5-Year Plan Goals

LD090718 Moscow TASS in English 0630 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 8 TASS — The main objective of the Soviet Merchant Marine in the new five-year plan period (1986-1990) and the period ending in the year 2000 is to meet even fuller the requirements of the economy and population for carriage and improve the efficiency of operation of the Merchant Marine. A statement to this effect was made to newsmen by Timofey Guzhenko, USSR minister of the Merchant Marine. Over the five-year plan period, the efficiency of the dry cargo fleet is to increase by 10.5 per cent, the tanker fleet — by 15.9 per cent, the combined fleet — 27.3 per cent.

Agricultural Developments for 3-6 Apr Reported

LD090609 [Editorial Report] The following is a compilation of reports on agricultural developments in the USSR carried by Moscow Domestic Service in Russian on 3-6 April. Times of broadcasts are given in parentheses at the end of each item.

3 April

Work in the fields is now under way in the central areas of the USSR, not just in the south. Pre-sowing soil preparation is taking place in the northern part of Rostov Oblast, and an occasional mechanical sower can be seen. Farmers in Belgorod Oblast started selective moisture retention work today. The sowing machinery is ready to go. Machine operators in Kazakhstan's Pavlodar Oblast have nearly finished work to ensure that all machinery is ready. Nine out of 10 tractors were ready by this morning. Repairs to plows, flat-cut plows, and cultivators have been completed. (0430 GMT)

4 April

Farmers in Stavropol Kray today completed the sowing of early grain and pulse crops. Most kolkhozes and sovkhozes managed to cover-in the barley, oat and pea seeds in 1 and 1/2-2 days. The sowing of annual grasses and other early feed crops is also coming to an end. (1100 GMT)

Sowing of rice has begun in the south of Uzbekistan. At the same time herbicides are being added. Rice will be sown on a total of 148,000 hectares in the republic this year, which is somewhat less than last year. However, due to the use of intensive technologies, 50,000 more metric tons of grain is expected to be harvested. (1300 GMT)

Early cereal grains have been sown on an area of over 50,000 hectares in Amur Oblast to date. (2130 GMT)

The farms in Chimkent Oblast are the first in Kazakhstan to complete top-dressing of winter eared-crops with fertilizer. Throughout the republic crops have been top-dressed over an area of nearly 1 million hectares, which is much more than by this time last year. (2330 GMT)

5 April

Construction on a major greenhouse combine has commenced near a new housing estate in Ulyanovsk. The existing growing areas under cover are also being considerably extended; and next year production of early vegetables will grow by more than 1 and 1/2 times. (0204 GMT)

In Uzbekistan mass common sowing has begun. About 2 million hectares are allocated to cotton this year. (0320 GMT)

In Orenburg Oblast all the tractors, cultivators, and sowers are ready. Chimkent Oblast has finished sowing lucerne. New plantations occupy 108,000 hectares, 12,000 hectares more than previously envisaged. (1100 GMT)

MI-2 helicopter crews have started introducing nitric fertilizers under clumps of winter crops in Georgia. They are cultivating about 4,000 hectares of grain crop fields in the Kakhetia valley. (2130 GMT)

6 April

Today cotton has been sown on the first 100,000 hectares in Uzbekistan. In Kursk Oblast, machine operators are harrowing perennial grasses, adding fertilizer to the winter crops, preparing the soil, and getting ready for the additional sowing of early eared crops. In the Chechen-Ingush ASSR sowing of grain and pulse crops in the Sunzha area, the main grain-producing region in the republic, was completed in just 3 days. (1100 GMT)

Murakhovskiy Addresses Council of Kolkhozes Session

LD081327 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1100 GMT 8 Apr 86

[Text] A session of the Union Council of Kolkhozes is taking place in Moscow today. The tasks of the kolkhoz soviets concerning the fulfillment of the decisions of the 27th CPSU Cpngress are being examined. Comrade Murakhovskiy, first deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, and chairman of the USSR State Agro-Industrial Committee, read a report on this question. He noted that kolkhoz soviets of republics, krays, oblasts, and rayons, in collaboration with the management bodies of the agro-industrial complex, are to implement organizational and economic measures, a set of technological undertakings, securing the efficient use of the productive capabilities which have been brought into being. Included among the most important tasks of kolkhoz soviets are the acceleration of the social reconstruction of villages and the creation of stable labor collectives.

Participants in the session accorded high estimation of the decision of the party and the government on the further perfecting of the economic management mechanism. (Ivan Ivanovich Kukhor), chairman of the Vladimir Ilich kolkhoz farm in Moscow Oblast and Hero of Socialist Labor, was elected chairman of the Union Council of Kolkhozes.

Agro-Industrial Chief Cites Production Figures

[Text] Moscow, April 8 TASS — Over the first three months of this year the state purchases of meat in the USSR grew seven per cent, milk and eggs — six per cent as compared with the same months last year, Vsevolod Murakhovsky, chairman of the USSR State Agro-Industrial Complex (Agroprom), told a TASS correspondent today. Plans for an increase in the production of grain, a large part of which is used as animal fodder, are designed to meet the demands of stock-rearing. To this end the supply of mineral fertilizers to farms has been increased by six million tons.

Cosmos-1739 Earth Satellite Launched 9 April

LD091502 Moscow Tass in English 1453 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 9 TASS — The artificial earth satellite Cosmos-1739 was launched in the USSR today. It is designed to continue the programme of exploration of outer space. It was put into orbit with the following parameters: the initial period of revolution is 89.5 minutes; the maximum distance from the surface of the earth — 352 kilometres; the minimum — 182 kilometres; the inclination of the orbit — 64.9 degrees.

The equipment aboard the sputnik is functioning normally.

'Mir' Cosmonauts Hold Press Conference From Space

[Text] Moscow, April 8 TASS — TASS special correspondent reports from mission control centre:

Cosmonauts Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovyev have been working aboard the Mir station for twenty five days now.

The crew held a press conference from space yesterday. During two communication sessions, including a lengthy one with the use of the "Luch" relay satellite, the cosmonauts answered numerous questions by Soviet and foreign correspondents.

Under the planned programme of the flight, the crew continues today tests of the station's units and systems and adjustment of the equipment. The work schedule provides for performing a technical experiment to evaluate the dynamics of the exterior elements of the station's structure, the control of the computers' operation and correction of the manned complex's orbit. There are also plans to conduct geological survey in the area of the city of Dushanbe and observations of winter crops in the territory of Central Asian republics.

According to the reports from orbit and telemetry data, the flight proceeds normally.

The cosmonauts are in good health and feel well.

Unmanned 'Vega' Probes Continuing Research

LD082015 Moscow TASS in English 1607 GMT 8 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 8 TASS — Soviet unmanned probes Vega-1 and Vega-2 continue their flight. After passing on March 6 and 9 through the gas-and-dust cloud of the Halley's Comet, most instruments on board the station have remained operational. They are used, during the flight, to study the structure and characteristics of interplanetary magnetic fields, probe into plasma phenomena, including measuring the parameters of solar wind and registering electrons and ions of different energies.

The both stations' TV systems, their electronic and optical elements are in good condition following the encounter with the comet which is proved by the results of filming the Jupiter.

At present, stations Vega-1 and Vega-2, which are 25 million kilometers apart, are continuing their flight around the Sun. Distance from the Earth is respectively 93 and 181 million kilometers.

According to telemetric information the on-board systems of the interplanetary stations Vega are functioning normally. Scientific information received from outer space is being processed and studied.

Dunayev Discusses Soviet Space Industry

Dunayev noted that, for many years, automatic and manned space devices have been engaged in searching for minerals and monitoring the condition of crops. They have also been an aid in safeguarding forests and making efficient use of the country's water resources. Space communications and navigation, weather satellites, and a system of search and rescue from orbit have become a permanent features.

The present 5-year plan, 1986-1990, will be an important step in implementing a broadly differentiated system of collecting and using space data for the analysis and practical utilization of an enormous amount of information that will become an inalienable part of the planning activity of many Soviet ministries, departments, and research institutes.

Dunayev said that on the Salyut-6 and Salyut-7 stations, for example, more than 300 million square km of the earth's surface had been photographed over the past few years by stationary cameras alone. The economic effect of space photos and observations by the cosmonauts over the past 5-year plan for the Central Asia regions alone amounted to tens of millions of rubles. This is just pure income from the space economy calculated in the industrial sphere — prospecting and extracting oil and gas, cartography, supplies of water to towns and pastures, protecting crops from pests, calculating spring floods and even forecasting earthquakes.

Joint efforts of different countries in the study of space are opening up the possibility for implementing space projects which have significance for mankind in general and which are a natural alternative to the "star wars" program being built up by the U.S. Administration, Dunayev stressed. Without such humanitarian aims, without genuine, and not superficial, concern for the future of the planet, world space exploration cannot develop, he said.

Armed Forces Ideological Tasks Viewed

[Editorial: "To Carry Out Ideological Work Creatively"]

[Excerpts] Defining the party's general domestic and foreign policy line — a line of accelerating the country's socioeconomic development and strengthening peace on earth — the 27th CPSU Congress pointed out that the human factor, the people's living creativity, is the decisive condition for implementing it.

"The most important thing on which the whole force of party influence must be concentrated today," the Central Committee Political Report to the congress emphasized, "is to ensure that everyone understands the acuteness of the present moment and its crucial nature. Any plans of ours will remain hanging if they leave people indifferent and if we are unable to awaken the masses' labor and social activeness and their energy and initiative." Here a broad field of activity opens up before ideological cadres and the ideological aktiv, including in the Armed Forces.

Called upon to actively mobilize people to resolve the new tasks of our time, ideological education work must itself be updated and improved — this was the demand the congress set for it. Today it must be characterized, above all, by innovation. And this has been given a sound foundation. For the very substance of the material which now constitutes the basis of propaganda and agitation, political talks, lessons in the system of political training of Army and Navy personnel, meetings between party congress delegates and servicemen, and many other measures is innovatory in essence and spirit. All this is subordinated to conveying the ideas of the 27th CPSU Congress to the mind and heart of every serviceman and mobilizing people to fulfill its decisions.

However, it would be wrong to overestimate what has been done. It is impossible not to see that effective propaganda is seriously hampered by formalism and didacticism, by blather and verbiage, and by the inability to speak with people in simple and convincing language. Many of these shortcomings have been brought about by force of inertia and by the tenacious habit of ideological cadres themselves of working in the old way.

Elements of mere enlightenment still frequently predominate in propaganda work. It sometimes appears as a collection of numerous propaganda measures poorly connected with the vital affairs of military collectives. The force of inertia is so great that even the introduction of new forms of ideological work, such as unified political days, frequently boils down in practice just to filling them with old substance. In a number of formations, units, and ships unified political days have essentially turned into information sessions on general political topics conducted according to a unified text.

Among the troops and in the fleets there are still many agitation and propaganda collectives and groups and staff and nonstaff lecture groups which mainly report on the work done just on paper while in fact doing virtually no agitation work with anyone. Visual agitation which does not really influence anyone has become widespread in some places. The individual approach is still frequently underestimated in the practice of ideological educational work, and not enough attention is paid to the needs and interests of different categories of servicemen. However, it is quite obvious that mass political work must now be distinguished by special flexibility, by a sensitive and prompt response to new problems and phenomena of Army life, and by an orientation toward resolving specific tasks of combat training and strengthening military discipline.

Unfortunately, such a very important principle of political work as unity of word and deed is still frequently violated. A certain commander, political worker, or nonstaff propagandist says one thing but acts differently in life. He urges people to adopt high pledges but does not fulfill them himself or create conditions for realizing them. He urges others to be modest and tactful and to observe the norms of morality, while he himself flouts these norms. He discourses on the use of criticism and self-criticism, while at the same time he overlooks unsolved problems, avoids asking acute questions, and hushes up shortcomings. Such an approach and a propensity for ostentation and fuss, the congress documents point out, do not help the cause, but just hamper the resolution of educational and other tasks.

A responsible, innovatory, creative approach to the assigned task and a real impact on achieving concrete practical results, particularly on successfully completing winter training and fulfilling competition pledges — this is the chief thing today for the organizers of ideological educational work in the Army and the Navy and for the entire ideological aktiv. It is important to persistently seek new potential for increasing the strength of the party word and to effectively help raise the political awareness and the businesslike activeness of servicemen and resolve the tasks of strengthening discipline and combat readiness. This will be the propagandists' worthy response to the demands of the 27th CPSU Congress.

Pacific Fleet Commander on Officer Qualities

PM031346 [Editorial Report] Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian on 5 April in its Second Edition publishes on page 2 under the rubric "Combat Potential: Military Skills" a 2,200-word article by Admiral V. Sidorov, commander of the Red Banner Pacific Fleet, entitled "The Art of Interaction."

Sidorov's article is devoted to summing up an analysis of the results of exercises held in the course of the fleet's winter training, at which "the main accent was placed on working out joint actions by different categories of forces." He cites several examples to show how the success or failure of an operation was determined by precise and coordinated actions of all participating forces, saying that "today the role of accurate and reliable interaction has increased immeasurably."

The author then examines the qualities that are required from commanding officers, who "need a broad overview of modern combat and broad tactical horizons." He criticizes officers who "think narrow-mindedly, superficially, and without profound understanding of the laws of modern combat" and "senior officers who simply treat the organization of interactions in a formal fashion."

Following some additional criticism of the pacific fleet's work in general terms, Sidorov concludes:

"It is necessary to hold most strictly to task those who are unwilling to look beyond their personal interests and have no desire to think or act in the interests of the entire fleet.

"Political organs and party and Komsomol organizations are called upon to have their weighty say in this respect. After all, the reorientation of military cadres' views is a problem concerning the reorientation of their mentality, in the process of which they develop a truly state approach toward their activity. This is demanded by the interests of strengthening the Armed Forces' combat potential."

Patriotic War Veterans Committee Holds Plenum

PM080952 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian

[TASS report: "Plenum of the Soviet War Veterans Committee"]

[Text] Participants in the Great Patriotic War must make their contribution to resolving the tasks concerning the USSR's socioeconomic development laid down by the 27th CPSU Congress. This was said at a plenum of the Soviet War Veterans Committee held 4 April at the M.V. Frunze Central House of the Soviet Army in Moscow.

The report by Committee Chairman Colonel General A.S. Zheltov and other other speeches noted that quite a few participants in the war are continuing energetic labor activity and are engaged in extensive social work. It was emphasized that one of the veterans' most important tasks is to assist in the propagandization of the party congress decisions, the military-patriotic education of young people, and their preparation for service in the USSR Armed Forces. It is also necessary to continue to implement practical measures aimed at strengthening the unity of action of international veterans organizations in the common struggle waged by progressive forces against the danger of nuclear war.

World War II Veteran, DRA Hero Receive Awards

[Report by Major A. Klevakin: "For Soldierly Valor"]

[Text] The fascists offered fierce resistance. And then, as though in spite, the machinegun supporting the infantry fell silent. The attack could have misfired. And then the slain machinegun operator's place was taken by Junior Sergeant Kh. Malakhov, who was wounded but had not left the battlefield. His accurate rounds of fire forced the enemy fire position to fall silent.

The Soviet servicemen drove the fascists from their stronghold. Junior Sgt Kh. Malkhov was awarded the "For Valor" medal for that battle in October 1944 but was unable to receive it on time.

...Guards Senior Sergeant G. Zhidkov, who recently fulfilled his international duty on the soil of fraternal Afghanistan, was in a difficult situation. The vehicle he was driving had broken down. The dushmans tried to capture it. But with accurate rounds from his submachine gun, Zhidkov forced the bandits to lie low and he held out until reinforcements arrived.

Colonel V. Lobayev, military commander of Uralsk Oblast, recently presented soldiers of two generations, Kh. Malakhov and G. Zhidkov, with their awards.

CRITICISM OF U.S. TEST BAN REFUSAL CONTINUES

PRAVDA Recalls History of Issue

PM091438 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 8 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[Article by N. Prozhogin: "Nuclear Tests Must Be Banned. The Goodwill of the USSR and Washington's Irresponsible Course"]

[Text] The world has entered a stage of its development where new approaches to questions of international security are essential. We can no longer think in terms of the past, because now it is a question not only of the preservation of peace but also of mankind's survival.

Yes, mankind has reached a point that demands the utmost responsibility on the part of each and everyone, and primarily, of course, from the leaders of powers possessing nuclear weapons.

It is still not too late to stop the nuclear arms race. But the first major step in this direction must be taken without delay. Such a step could be the cessation of nuclear tests by everyone -- starting with the Soviet Union and the United States, but also other nuclear powers. M.S. Gorbachev once again urgently called for this when speaking recently on Soviet television.

The wise tale by the Dane Hans Christian Andersen, "The Emperor's New Clothes," is popular throughout the world. However, even the wisest parables do not benefit everyone. High-ranking figures in the present Washington administration, who, it is to be hoped, also read Andersen in their childhood, have sewn the splendid attire of peacemakers out of words and arrayed themselves in it, supposing that they can thereby conceal their militarist nudity from the world. And they have found themselves in the position of the naked emperor.

On 22 March the United States carried out another nuclear explosion and, to all appearances, intends to repeat the test in the immediate future. This blatant challenge has been thrown down not only to our country, but to all peoples, including the American people, who urgently demand that nuclear testing be stopped.

If these tests were to be stopped everywhere, this would signify a real step in the direction of curbing the nuclear arms race. It is a secret to no one that they serve to perfect and improve new forms and types of mass destruction weapons even more dangerous than those already in existence. Conversely ceasing tests would signify the automatic "ageing" of nuclear weapons. Also obvious is the fact that nuclear explosions cause great damage, the extent of which is not yet fully known, to the environment in which mankind lives. The problem of ceasing nuclear testing has its own, already long history. It is useful to recall the basic stages of this history.

As early as 1955 the Soviet Union appealed to all states possessing atomic and hydrogen weapons to pledge to cease testing these weapons. The stand taken by the Western powers was negative. But the Soviet Union continued to expend efforts to achieve this aim. They had decisive significance for the conclusion in 1963 of the Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, banning nuclear weapon tests in the atmosphere, outer space, and under water. Let us note that even then the USSR was in favor of stopping all tests, including those underground, but the United States, Britain,and France refused.

The persistent, consistent policy of the Soviet Union led to treaties being signed between our country and the United States in 1974 and 1975, the first of which limited the size of underground nuclear explosions. It is not our fault that both these treaties remained unratified.

It is indicative that in the very interim period between the signing of these documents -- in 1975 -- the overwhelming majority of states of the world supported the Soviet draft multiparty treaty on a total ban on nuclear tests that was submitted for discussion by the UN General Assembly. However, it was rejected by those on whom this matter primarily depended.

In 1977, again on a Soviet initiative, tripartite negotiations began between the USSR, the United States, and Britain to work out a treaty on a complete and general ban on nuclear weapon tests. Considerable progress had already been made during the talks when, in 1980, the United States, followed by Britain, refused to continue them. Thus, through the fault of the Western powers, primarily the United States, the problem of stopping nuclear explosions remained unsolved.

Then last summer the Soviet Union took an extremely important step. Recognizing the great responsibility that rests with the nuclear powers and demonstrating the practical political will necessary to solve present buring problems, the USSR announced a unilateral moratorium on any nuclear explosions, be they for military or peaceful purposes. The date the moratorium was introduced -- 6 August, the 40th anniversary of the nuclear bombing of Hiroshima -- is symbolic, in the highest sense of this word. It was to remain in effect until 1 January 1986. Urging the United States to do the same, the USSR simultaneously announced that the moratorium would remain in force even longer if the United States for its part also refrained from carrying out nuclear explosions.

This was a real step in a direction leading to our planet being cleansed of nuclear weapons. It is obvious that, once it has become mutual for the two largest nuclear powers, the moratorium would serve as a good example for other states possessing these weapons and would create favorable conditions for concluding an international treaty on a complete and general ban on nuclear weapon tests.

The results of the Soviet-American summit meeting in Geneva and the hopeful joint statement prompted the USSR to take another goodwill step -- the unilateral Soviet moratorium was extended until 31 March 1986. A special section of the 15 January statement by M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, containing an integrated program to rid mankind of mass destruction weapons was devoted to the task of stopping nuclear explosions.

After a certain degree of confusion and an awkward attempt to declare the Soviet moratorium a "propaganda trick," Washington refused to follow the Soviet example and announced that it would continue nuclear explosions. According to a report in THE NEW YORK TIMES, high-ranking officials in charge of arms control problems have said that "objections must be raised as before against any moratorium on testing, as nuclear weapons age in exactly the same way as their creators do, and their efficiency at any given moment can be verified only with the aid of tests." An example of militarist logic!

However, the universal approval, including in the United States itself, of the step taken by the Soviet Union and the hopes it has inspired throughout the world of freeing mankind from the nuclear threat have forced Washington to seek arguments to justify its course of continuing nuclear tests and, consequently, the nuclear arms race itself. Two such "arguments" have been put forward.

The first amounts to the fact that the United States is supposedly lagging behind the Soviet Union in the nuclear weapons sphere and that is why, they say, they must continue improving these weapons by conducting new tests. Meanwhile it is well known that the United States has carried out considerably more nuclear tests than the USSR. Thus, according to statistics from the Stockholm Peace Research Institute, at the time the Soviet moratorium was announced the United States had carried out approximately one-third more nuclear explosions than the USSR and, together with other nuclear powers in the West -- 1.5 times more.

It is not, however, a question of arithmetic. In making the decision on a unilateral moratorium the Soviet Union was guided by principled political considerations. For us it is not a question of a breathing space between explosions but of contributing to a complete and general cessation of nuclear weapon tests.

The second "argument," according to which it would supposedly be impossible to monitor observance of a ban on nuclear tests, is utterly false. Highly qualified specialists, including American specialists, confirm that scientific and technical means available not only in the USSR and the United States, but also in other countries, give the necessary degree of confidence that a nuclear explosion, even of small yield, be detected. Convincing evidence of this was the Soviet Union's announcement of information on a scheduled American nuclear explosion carried out on 17 August last year: yield of less than 20 kilotons, a 330 meter deep silo 120 km northwest of Las Vegas. Claims by American politicians concerning the ineffectiveness of national monitoring means were thereby once again clearly refuted.

The Soviet Union has said more than once that, in conformity with a ban on nuclear tests, monitoring could be ensured both by national technical means and with the aid of international procedures -- in necessary cases also with on-site inspection. The USSR has proposed to the American side that an agreement be reached on granting the opportunity to observers from both sides, on a mutual basis and in accordance with corresponding requirements, to visit the sites of indeterminate phenomena in order to eliminate possible doubts as to whether they are connected with nuclear explosions. The Soviet Union is also agreeable to both itself and the United States using assistance in verification, including the on-site inspection proposed by the leaders of six countries -- Argentina, India, Mexico, Tanzania, Sweden, and Greece.

One month remained until the expiration of the extended Soviet moratorium when the leaders of the six aforementioned countries put to M.S. Gorbachev and R. Reagan a new urgent appeal not to sanction any nuclear tests before the Soviet-American summit meeting. The six leaders, who are the heads of states situated on different continents and belonging to the groups of nonaligned, neutral, and even NATO countries, had every reason to state: "We are sure that this would be regarded throughout the world as evidence that you both are prepared at this meeting to draw practical conclusions from your joint statement in Geneva that 'nuclear war must never be unleashed and there can be no victors in such a war.'"

The ideas on universal security without nuclear weapons that they expressed in their message are highly consonant with the concept, put forward at the 27th CPSU Congress. of forming an all-embracing international security system, one of the principled bases of which must be the total and irreversible elimination of nuclear weapons.

Replying to this message, M.S. Gorbachev announced: "The Soviet Union will not conduct nuclear explosions even after 31 March -- until the first nuclear explosion in the United States."

And what was Washington's response? Without waiting for the extended Soviet moratorium to expire, the United States conducted the explosion of a nuclear device at a testing ground in Nevada, and now it is preparing for another. It also rejected, out of hand as they say, the USSR's new peace initiative delivered on 29 March by the Soviet leader, who proposed, in particular, meeting the U.S. President in the near future to reach an agreement on the question of stopping nuclear tests. The United States is thereby openly demonstrating its reluctance to make use of a real opportunity to halt the qualitative arms race in its most dangerous area. What is more, the continuation of nuclear explosions is openly connected in the United States with realization of the "star wars" program and with the development of space-based strike weapons.

Under these conditions the Soviet Union has had every reason to resume its own nuclear tests. It cannot extend its unilateral moratorium indefinitely. By not conducting any nuclear explosions -- either for testing or for peaceful purposes -- for more than 8 months, our country has already incurred costs in both the military and economic respects.

But the Soviet Union is true to its word. Even after the expiration of the Soviet moratorium on 31 March our country will not conduct nuclear explosions. So it will be in the future if the United States takes similar action. If the reverse should be the case, and this must be clear to all, the USSR will be forced to resume its own tests as our country cannot forgo either its own security or that of its allies.

However, the Soviet leadership has nevertheless expressed the hope that the U.S. President, his closest associates, and the American Congress alike will still consider the USSR's proposal to conclude an agreement on stopping nuclear explosions.

It is Washington's fault that the fate of mankind is now under real threat. And the peoples -- of this there is no doubt -- will continue to step up their struggle to stop all nuclear weapon tests and conclude a treaty on a complete and general ban on such tests.

'Top Priority' Discussion

LD091615 Moscow in English to North America 2300 GMT 8 Apr 86

["Top Priority" roundtable program hosted by Vladimir Posner, with Dr. Radomir Bogdanov and Dr Sergey Plekhanov of the USSR Academy of Sciences Institute of the United States of America and Canada]

[Text] [Posner] (?We) proposed that the test ban would last until the end of the year, from the 6th August when it was announced to the 31st January 1986. But if the United States would join, then it would become permanent. The United States did not join, and in January the Soviet Government reannounced its decision to prolong (?its) test ban until the 31st March 1986, and again invited the United States to join so as to make it a permanent test ban on all nuclear tests as the first step toward capping the arms race and as a major step towrads disarmament. The United States has clearly refused.

[Bogdanov] You know...

[Posner, interrupting] Professor Bogdanov.

[Bogdanov] Vladimir, my reaction is rather a sad one, because I have no hope that this administration is really able to produce any dramatic (?change).

They are just paralyzed by one idea, to go ahead with nuclear testing for gaining superiority over the Soviet Union. Now, if you read their statements -- official statements, semi-official statements, explanations and so on -- you will see the truth, and the truth is that this administration is in very great need to improve their nuclear capability, to create, develop and test new nuclear war (?acts).

[Posner] I'd like to interrupt.

[Bogdanov] That's number one.

[Posner] I want to interrupt you because you say this administration, meaning the Reagan administration, is in need to develop. Now, you use the word need. What do you mean by that?

[Bogdanov] (?Here) I deliberately, I deliberately used this word; they are really in need, they need it, because if you have a policy of nuclear superiority, then you need to improve always, always improve your warheads, your nuclear capability. That's why you are in need; that's why I mean by that.

[Posner] But they mean something different. They, they say that we have superiority. You've heard them say that we're ahead of them.

[Bogdanov] You know that's a very old story, and there's no bit of truth in that. You know, as to the number of nuclear tests, we have one-third less than they had, and if you add to that the nuclear tests of American allies, you will see that almost two-and-a-half or three times more they had nuclear tests. Then you know you have, you have another very important point. They say that what we are proposing, what we are suggesting, subjecting [words indistinct]. We don't mean that. We have been offering them several times; please, for heaven's sake stop the nuclear arms race. We give you very good chance. It is in interests of both parties to stop testing. If they call it propaganda, OK, let it be propaganda; I'm for that propaganda, I'm for that propaganda. But within the meaning, we, we've been insisting on that. (?Though) they say -- you know for instance, I met several days ago some rather important Americans. They were telling me: Look, you Soviets from the very beginning, you were sure that the President will not accept your offer, but still you have suggested that he should accept it. So you would like to put our President in an awkward position. I don't see any logic in that. You know, if you have to keep in mind, you know, the President's stature as a statesman, that's one thing, but if you have in mind something very substantial [word indistinct] (?security of vodka).

[Posner] Some national interest?

[Bogdanov] National interest something, something else, you know. Then we witness now, you know, we witness now a very very dangerous situation. You, we, witness if you like, it's a kind of historical event. You witness the (?looming) of another nuclear arms race.

[Posner] A new spiral?

[Bogdanov] (?With) a new spiral of the nuclear arms race. We have offered to our American counterparts, please stop it; we are ready to do whatever is necessary for that, including all the verification procedures. We open ourselves; we invite you to discuss the procedure, all the details connected with verification, but stop it. They say no! They (?said) three times no to us. Now they resume. What does it mean? It means they [are] resuming (?a) nuclear arms race.

[Posner] Professor Bogdanov, just excuse me one minute. I'd like to ask your colleague, Professor Plekhanov, I'd like to pick up on what you said about the American side treating our proposals as propaganda, calling it propaganda. You said that that's OK with us because if that's propaganda that's fine. But you know that the American meaning of propaganda is really to state one thing while to be doing something else. Now, what I wanted to ask you, Professor Plekhanov, is do you believe that American officialdom is sincere when it calls our offer to have a permanent test ban propaganda?

[Plekhanov] Well, that's just an old trick; whatever is unacceptable to you, you will call propaganda.

[Posner] I won't.

[Plekhanov] No, no, no. I mean, this, this is (?a) trick which the U.S. Government always, often, uses and I think it can be seen through very clearly. I think that the moratorium which we observed, the unilateral moratorium...

[Posner] You're using the past tense.

[Plekhanov] Which we have observed...

[Posner, interrupting] We're still observing it.

[Plekhanov] We're still observing it as of this moment, is, was, a very worthwhile policy and is something which I think will go down in history as an important contribution to the cause of disarmament. You may call it, people may call it propaganda or anything else but the fact is that the Soviet Union unilaterally refrained from testing its nuclear weapons and any other nuclear devices in the face of a continuing military buildup by the United States, in the face of new arms programs being pushed by the U.S. Administration, in the face of very provocative policies, steps, and gestures by the other side. I believe that by doing that, the Soviet Union demonstrates that it is seriously committed to a new kind of an approach to the problem of security. We are convinced that really the arms race is in nobody's interests, in nobody's best interests. It is in the interests of some very narrow and narrow-minded groups in the U.S., groups in the U.S. society; very influential, very dangerous, but still minority groups which have been able to foist their agenda on the U.S. Government and on the United States as a whole.

[Bogdanov] No, no, no, I don't agree, Sergey, with one point of yours, that they are (?foisting) their agenda on the U.S. Government. My point is that this government has the same agenda, you know [words indistinct] because there are no...

[Plekhanov, interrupting] Because there are no. .

[Posner, interrupting] Allow me to get back to what I was asking originally. Are you saying, then, that when official America calls Soviet proposals propaganda, that same official American knows very well that those offers are not propaganda and that the Soviet Union is quite serious in what it (?has proposed)?

[Plekhanov] Oh, I think if, if they have not, have not lost their last touch with reality, if they are able to see things as they are, they must be aware that we are sincerely interested in stopping the arms race, stopping the development of new kinds of weapons, and engaging (?in) this kind of competition. But the problem is that when they see that, they see it as a kind of a sign of weakness on the Soviet part.

They push forward a proposition that well, the Soviet Union is doing that because it knows it can't compete with the United States in the arms race, because it's allegedly technologically not on a par with the United States because economically GNP is smaller and productivity is lower, and so on and so forth. Thus if it is, if, you know it's zero (?sum game) logic. If something, if there is something that the Russians are putting forward, (?the) Russians support, then that must be against the interests of the United States, and the United States should be doing just the opposite. But this ridiculous, and totally irrelevent logic, which has been defeated so many times in the past, will not succeed this time (?even) because this arms race is dangerous to both sides.

[Posner] You know, some of the liberals. the more liberal segments of the U.S. Congress, have been calling upon the President to accept the Soviet offer, and one of those gentlemen has said that the Soviets have seemed to agree to the possibility of on-site verification. Let's call their bluff, I'm now quoting him, let's call their bluff and see whether or not they are indeed open to that. Now again I want to ask you, first of all, is the Soviet willingness, at least in words, to accept on-site verification a bluff?

[Bogdanov] Well let them really test it.

[Posner] Uh-huh.

[Bogdanov] Because I, I'm afraid that we have no, in the Russian language or even in English, vocabulary, enough convincing words to convince these people in this administration that this is not a bluff. OK, if (?you conceive there to be) a bluff let's get together around a table on experts level, on any level, and let's open our cards.

We are ready to do that, and as to on-site inspection problems we are very much willing to discuss, very much willing, and let me remind you Vladimir by the way as to the verification problem, as a fact we are in that in much much you know inferior position than the Americans. Less advantageous position than the Americans. The Soviet Union has been surrounded by 200, (?mind you), by 200 capabilities if you like, checkpoints, American checkpoints monitoring from different (?distances) and in some cases in very very nearby distance what's going on in the Soviet territory.

But we have only 20 checkpoints, only 20, mind you which are very long distance from the American territory. So we are in less advantageous position but still we say OK, we are open, we are open. Come over, let's discuss if you like on the parallel with discussing how to stop testing; if you like, separately, whatever, whatever (?it is). But you know, so far we hear from the American side only accusations, only bad words about Soviet propaganda, but we don't hear any concrete proposals. OK, let's get together and let's discuss it. That's why I say OK, if it is a bluff, let's test it.

[Posner] Eight months ago, 8 months and 2 days ago to be exact, when the Soviet Union first announced and began to adhere to a unilateral test ban, the door was was open to what looked to many people, including myself, a real step toward capping the arms race because stopping testing means effectively stopping development of any new kind of nuclear weapon.

[Bogdanov] You're right.

[Posner] The fact that this has gone on for 8 months I think is quite indicative of the Soviet position. The fact that the United States has consistently refused to join is, I also think, indicative of the present administration's position.

Looking back, let us say 20 years from now, hopefully if there are people who can, who will be able to look back 20 years from now, what do you think, how do you think they will assess the historic role of the two governments, of the two countries, at this period in time?

[Plekhanov] Well, I think the contrast, historic contrast between the two positions will be (?recorded) in history. I don't think that the current situation is, should be seen, as cause for despondency. The fact that the Ronald, that the Reagan administration demonstrated its unwillingness to join with us in (?the) search for new approaches to security need not discourage those people who are interested in such a search. And I think that we have a majority of the world public, including the majority of Americans on our side, in this quest for more rational approaches to security and I don't think that the struggle is over. If we go back 20 years from this moment, and [words indistinct] 25 years and recall the events of the late fifties and early sixties, there are some similarities. There was a moratorium then and then it was discontinued and the testing resumed, and that created a great deal of public concern and displeasure over the whole situation, and that created the favorable climate of opinion for the conclusion of a test ban, partial test ban of 1963.

[Posner] So what you're saying is that the fact that this particular test ban has not been accepted, should not be read as the bottom line?

[Plekhanov] No, no, of course not.

[Bogdanov] No, it is (?not). I agree with Sergey's analysis. It is not the bottom line. But what worries me, you know, to be frank with you, not history's judgment; maybe it's important, but really what worries me (?is if the future) is lost, or maybe, maybe -- a historical (?chance), you know, a real chance to (?cap) the arms race in a very simple and very (?efficient way); that's what worries me now.

[Posner] I think that worries everybody. I would only like to qualify your statement, if you'll allow me to. I don't think we have lost; because that's the wrong pronoun. I believe that the other side has, if you wish, drowned, destroyed, lost indeed an opportunity that would lead to capping the arms race.

[Bogdanov] When I say we I mean both, because we are so much interconnected, interlinked, that that's another case, you know, when it'll work for them and also work for us.

[Plekhanov] And for anybody else.

[Bogdanov] And the rest of the world.

[Posner] Thank you very much, Professor Bogdanov, Professor Plekhanov. Until the next time, this is Vladimir Posner saying good-bye for "Top Priority."

Chervov Interview

AU100752 Bratislava PRAVDA in Slovak 8 Apr 86 p 6

[Interview with Colonel General Nikolay Chervov, chief of a directorate at the General Staff of the USSR Armed Forces, by APN military commentator V. Morozov: "Key to the Door Into a Nuclear-Free World; Once Again on the Problem of a Nuclear Test Ban;" date and place not given]

[Text] [Morozov] In his television address Mikhail Gorbachev reiterated that the Soviet Union would not carry out nuclear tests even after 31 March, as long as the United States does not carry out a nuclear explosion of its own. How can this highly responsible approach of the USSR to the problem of a nuclear test ban be appreciated?

[Chervov] It was not at all easy to adopt such a decision. The USSR cannot show one-sided restraint in the area of nuclear tests indefinitely. By having refrained for 8 months from any nuclear tests -- both experimental and for peaceful purposes -- we have already permitted a certain delay to arise in the military and national economic areas. The measure of responsibility for exploiting all possibilities of achieving a practical step on the path toward liquidating nuclear weapons is too big.

The USSR regards the discontinuation of all tests of nuclear weapons as one of the most important elements of establishing an all-encompassing system of international security, the fundamental principles of which were formulated by the 27th CPSU Congress.

Nuclear tests are kind of an accelerator of the nuclear arms race. The tests help to verify new kinds and types of these mass destruction weapons and to perfect their existing systems. An end to tests would be an effective measure to significantly slow down this entire process. The nuclear arms race without tests has in reality meanwhile become an impossibility. There in lies the meaning of the USSR's policy, which is aimed at a complete and general ban on nuclear arms tests.

An end to tests also represents a path leading toward the liquidation of already amassed nuclear arsenals. Without tests there can be no modernization of existing nuclear weapons, which will as a result gradually lose their efficiency and, ultimately, they will have to perish. This would be a reliable guarantee of averting a nuclear war.

In its consistent endeavor to attain this goal, our country more than 30 years ago, as early as 1955, appealed to all states possessing nuclear weapons with the proposal that they undertake to stop testing these weapons. Unfortunately, because of the negative attitude of Western powers, this proposal did not materialize.

However, the Soviet Union continued to exert efforts in this direction, which played the decisive role in bringing about the conclusion in 1963 of the Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, banning nuclear arms tests in the atmosphere, outer space, and under water. It must be stressed that even at that time the USSR fought for an end to all testing, including underground tests. The United States, Great Britain, and France, however, did not accept this. That is why the task of completely halting nuclear arms has remained unresolved to date.

Certain progress in this area was achieved when in 1974 the USSR and the United States signed an agreement limiting the yield of underground nuclear arms tests, and in 1976 an agreement regulating nuclear tests for peaceful purposes. Through the fault of the United States, these agreements have remained unratified.

Even in those years the USSR strove for a complete and general ban on nuclear arms tests. In 1975, immediately after the signing of the Soviet-American so-called "threshold" agreement, we submitted to the UN General Assembly the draft of a multilateral agreement on a complete ban on nuclear tests. The absolute majority of states backed this proposal, except for those, naturally, on which its realization primarily depended.

A general end to nuclear arms tests remains the Soviet Union's aim. Today, more than ever before, there is need for practical measures to break the vicious circle of the arms race.

An end to nuclear arms tests is precisely one such important measure. The best thing would be, of course, if all nuclear powers proceeded in this way. And if the United States followed the example of the Soviet Union, this would set an example for other states having nuclear weapons as well. In the final analysis, this is a problem, the solution of which corresponds to the longings and vital interests of all nations.

[Morozov] Some U.S. officials claim that by advocating an end to nuclear arms tests the USSR strives to consolidate its previously attained "supremacy" over the United States in the area of the development and perfection of nuclear weapons. How would you respond to these claims?

[Chervov] Nothing is further from truth than the claim that the USSR has an edge in the area of nuclear arms tests. Facts bear out that the opposite is true. According to data of the Stockholm Peace Institute and some American organizations, the United States has since 1945 carried out more nuclear blasts than all the world's nuclear powers put together. It has carried out one-third more nuclear blasts than the USSR and, together with other Western powers, 1.5 times as many.

In every individual environment, the United States has carried out more nuclear blasts than the USSR (in the atmosphere, underground, and under water). It holds first place in the intensity of explosions (with 96 blasts in 1962). In 1985 the United States carried out 18 blasts (compared with 9 blasts for the USSR, before the introduction of the moratorium, 2 of which were for peaceful purposes). These are the statistics. That is why those who claim that an end to nuclear tests would buttress the USSR's one-sided advantage in the military sphere in reality want to keep alive for the United States the possibility of perfecting and developing new types of nuclear weapons and, hence, of continuing the arms race.

[Morozov] So far the United States has been refusing to discontinue nuclear tests, using all kinds of pretexts. What is, in your opinion, the real aim behind this refusal?

[Chervov] This is a justified question. At the last UN General Assembly session 120 states 4 times voted in favor of a resolution demanding an end to nuclear arms tests. Even the House of Representatives of the U.S. Congress has expressed itself in principle in favor of an end to nuclear tests. Yet the U.S. Administration feels no remorse in the face of such an unequivocal condemnation of its position. In a letter to the Senate of 12 March the U.S. President reaffirmed the previous position of the administration with regard to the issue of the complete and general ban on nuclear tests -- neither the introduction of a moratorium on nuclear explosions nor the ratification of the agreements of 1974 and 1976 on the limitation of nuclear explosions "correspond to the interests of the United States and its allies." Washington wants to carry on nuclear explosions.

[Morozov] What is the reason for unwillingness of the White House to respond to the Soviet moratorium by the same token?

[Chervov] The main reason is that the U.S. Administration has not given up its attempts to break the existing parity and change it in its favor. This is the aim of the programs for new types of weapons (MX intercontinental missiles, Trident-2, Midgetman, nuclear missiles for offensive space devices according to the "star wars" plan). In an interview for the HINDUSTAN TIMES of 16 December 1985, Mr Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, declared: "The United States will continue nuclear testing because it helps to develop newer and more reliable types of nuclear weapons." It is really impossible to express this in clearer terms.

C. Weinberger, representative of the Pentagon, flatly declared: "As long as nuclear weapons exist, which will be the case in the near future, these weapons will have to be tested." In other words, the White House policy is the development of ever newer weapons systems and an endless arms race.

The end to nuclear explosions is a key that opens the door to a nuclear-free world. That is why the world public relies on the great responsibility that the United States bears for international security and on the common sense and goodwill of the American people and expects that they will give a constructive reply to the appeal for an end to nuclear tests and their support to the unilateral Soviet moratorium.

'Verbal Subterfuge' Noted

PM041035 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 4 Apr Morning Edition p 5

[Text] Geneva, 3 Apr -- A.M. Petrosyants, chairman of the USSR State Committee for Utilization of Atomic Energy, today spoke to participants in the Geneva Disarmament Conference. Dwelling on the question of banning all nuclear explosions, the eminent Soviet scientist once again emphasized that the Soviet Union is prepared to extend the moratorium that it imposed 8 months ago, even beyond 31 March, if the United States will also refrain from carrying out nuclear tests. However, Washington, without taking regard of world public opinion, carried out an explosion on 22 March, and according to existing information is preparing for a subsequent explosion in April. "This means that the extremely favorable situation that has arisen as a result of the unilateral Soviet moratorium will not be taken advantage of, the arms race will proceed at an ever increasing rate, and the threat of a nuclear catastrophe will grow even stronger. It is the position of the United States, which places its stakes on force and increasing its nuclear might, which is forcing us on this path," A. Petrosyants said, noting that the Soviet Union, as he had already said, cannot proceed forever along a path of unilateral measures while disregarding the interests of its own security and that of its allies.

Washington, as far as the verbal subterfuge and false proposals of the U.S. side on this question are concerned, is merely trying to create a semblance of activity while shying away from specific commitments. Such actions clearly demonstrate the unwillingness of the United States to use this convenient opportunity to stop the nuclear arms race, and its stubborn desire to prevent a positive change in Soviet-U.S. relations.

The Soviet representative authoritatively stated that proper [polnotsennyy] monitoring of ending nuclear tests is no problem at the present time. The one thing that must be done is to sit down at the conference table and reach an agreement on the technical details. The Soviet Union is ready for such talks, including talks within the framework of the disarmament conference.

TASS' Ponomarev Comments

LD091636 Moscow TASS in English 1608 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 9 TASS -- TASS commentator Leonid Ponomarev, writes: A protest demonstration took place in the area of the testing site in Nevada Tuesday against continued nuclear testing there. It was held under the motto: "The Soviet Union has stopped nuclear blasts. Why doesn't the U.S.?"

The Washington administration's reaction was to send police to disperse the protesters. According to UPI, more than 80 demonstrators were arrested. But is it possible to arrest all those opposed to the policy of nuclear madness fraught with the threat of a catastrophe?

Public protests against nuclear testing have swept U.S. cities. The municipalities of Boston, Atlanta, Newark, Sacramento, Detroit, Honolulu, Providence and many other cities as well as the legislatures of the states of New York, Washington, and Hawaii have passed special resolutions urging a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty. Most Americans see it as a real possiblity to fend off the threat of a nuclear catastrophe. Twenty-five U.S. Nobel Prize holders have called on President Reagan not to miss the historic opportunity available now to end nuclear testing for all time.

The historic opportunity has not emerged by itself. It is not only a result of an indepth and all-round analysis of the world situation but also a consequence of the Soviet Union's practical measures towards removing the nuclear threat, which have been adopted on the basis of this analysis.

Today it is needed to make a first step or, as wise men used to say in the past, "at first to catch even the smallest imp and the latter will show where the chief devil is hiding". Such a step, as the Soviet Union suggests, should be the termination of nuclear tests by all, starting with the USSR and the United States.

Significantly, the Soviet Union is prepared to discuss not only its own proposal for an end to nuclear explosions but also the U.S. proposal for verifying it. Both sides have set forth their attitudes to the problem. It is now needed to work out an agreement rather than carry on nuclear weapons tests.

From Washington, however, signals are coming that another nuclear blast in Nevada is inevitable and should be expected almost as early as within the next few hours. This blast, according to THE WASHINGTON POST, is to be followed by others.

Why the hurry? There are no sensible reasons for it. Nor can there be. It is just that a feverish effort is under way to develop new kinds of nuclear weapons.

The Soviet-U.S. summit meeting in Geneva has kindled hope, although there have been "prophets" claiming it has not meant more than "a change of boxing gloves". Such a "sport", however, is alien to Soviet policy since a 'nuclear boxing bout' will mean the destruction of mankind.

The Soviet leadership believes that it is not yet too late to stop the nuclear arms race. But it is imperative without delay to take a first significant step towards this aim. The USSR has made it and observed a unilateral moratorium on all nuclear explosions for more than eight months now.

KRASNAYA ZVEZDA REPORTS NEVADA TEST POSTPONEMENT

PM101251 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 10 Apr 86 Second Edition p 1

[TASS dispatch: "An Extensive Program"]

[Text] Washington, 9 Apr — The new nuclear explosion scheduled by the Reagan administration to be carried out at the Nevada test site on 8 April was postponed for "technical reasons," the UPI news agency was told by Department of Energy spokesmen.

They explained that the postponement was caused by "high winds that would have carried the dust cloud raised by the explosion toward populated areas," and they emphasized that the test will be carried out "as soon as the weather permits." According to official circles, THE WASHINGTON POST writes, two more U.S. underground nuclear explosions are to be carried out this month with the aim of emphasizing the administration's determination to proceed with the planned program of nuclear tests. One of these tests, code-named "Jefferson," is scheduled for 23-24 April. According to ABC, the administration plans to carry out a total of 14 nuclear tests this year, not counting the one that has already been carried out.

EUROPEAN NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE ISSUE VIEWED

Professor Interviewed

PM091130 Copenhagen AKTUELT in Danish 29 Mar 86 p 12

[Interview with Yuriy Andreyev, director of the Moscow Institute for World Economy and International Relations, Center for West European Studies, by Michael Kjaergard: "A Nuclear-Free Zone Is a Step on the Road Toward a Nuclear-Free World" -- date and place not given]

[Text] "All nuclear-free zones are part of a nuclear-free world. And a nuclear-free world is our policy. Nuclear-free zones are a means of achieving this."

This was the simple description given by Soviet Prof Yuriy Andreyev of the philosophy behind the Soviet Union's interest in working together with others to have the Nordic area, for example, declared a nuclear -free zone.

Yuriy Andreyev is not just any Soviet academic, but a person with not insignificant influence on the Soviet view of the world outside the Soviet Union. Yuriy Andreyev has, for example, held talks with several Danish politicians. He is chief of the Center for West European Studies at the Institute for World Economy and International Relations in Moscow. Yuriy Andreyev summed up the Soviet approach to world peace as follows:

"There is no rational alternative to detente. Real detente -- not only peaceful coexistence, but cooperation. Detente is after all not the ultimate goal. The ultimate goal is collective security.

"The Soviet Union is interested in increased economic security and cooperation as a basis for disarmament. Security is not only military, but also economic and political. The more economic cooperation there is, the less thoughts move in the direction of confrontation," Yuriy Andreyev said, reminding me of the three-phase proposal for the abolition of all nuclear arms put forward by CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in January.

"It is in this light that Gorbachev's proposal should be seen. We want to create a changed way of thinking. Everyone must think nonaggressively. We must survive together or meet destruction together."

He is supported by Prof Konstantin Voronov of the Institute's department for Scandinavian affairs. "The Soviet Union sees nuclear-free zones as stabilizing elements. In the current arms race something paradoxical is happening -- the military element is being played down, while the political element is growing."

"Seen in this light a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area would strengthen the political opportunities in security policy. For if we take a realistic view, the Nordic countries would have no chance of defending themselves against any major power."

Another semi-official Soviet source, PRAVDA foreign editor Tomas Kolesnichenko, supported this view:

"Arming the Nordic countries with nuclear arms would not be a real threat to the Soviet Union. But it would be a symbolic threat." In the same breath Tomas Kolesnichenko added that "it goes without saying" that the Soviet Union will not launch nuclear attacks on countries that do not themselves possess nuclear arms.

"One of the eternal objections to the idea of making the Nordia area a nuclear-free zone is that the Nordic area is already and actual nuclear-free zone. Why then enshrine this status in a treaty?" Yuriy Andreyev asked, and provided the answer himself.

"Because de facto zones are in danger of not being respected. We saw this during the USS Iowa's visit to Copenhagen, for example. Such incidents are not good for de facto status. And therefore there is a need for the legalization of the de facto status."

"There are of course many details attaching to the question of a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area. Should Iceland belong to such a zone? Should the Baltic be part of it? These are important details, but nevertheless only details which can and should be discussed by military and economic experts. These discussions simply need to be set in motion. This is important. The debate could very well include certain steps from the Soviet side and on Soviet territory. But such things must be discussed formally, that is, in a legalized manner. Not only unofficially," Yuriy Andreyev stressed.

The question of whether the Baltic should be included in a nuclear-free zone will have significance for the six nuclear-armed submarines the Soviet Union has stationed in the Baltic. However, another Soviet source hinted that this problem will not be as easy to solve as Yuriy Andreyev indicated. The source said that "the Soviet Union is not simply a Nordic country."

AKTUELD: What opportunities will the Nordic countries be given to check that the Soviet Union is complying with its commitments with regard to a Nordic nuclear-free zone?

Yuriy Andreyev: "There are no problems with checks on Soviet territory, if the aim -- note this well -- is disarmament. Actually we are more interested in verification arrangements than the United States is. For we are actually afraid of being cheated."

AKTUELT: It is no secret that a question mark has been put alongside Denmark's chance of remaining in NATO if Denmark joins a Nordic nuclear-free zone.

Yuriy Andreyev: "A nuclear-free zone and the question of whether Denmark and/or Norway should leave NATO or remain in NATO are two different things. We must take as our point of departure the consideration that Denmark is a member of NATO in order to strengthen its security. A nuclear-free zone would also strengthen Denmark's security, so there is no conflict here.

"I know very well that according to the Dyvig report a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area would conflict with Denmark's NATO membership, but on the other hand the Folketing's 1 May 1984 resolution states that Denmark must do everything to contribute to the creation of a nuclear-free zone," Yuriy Andreyev pointed out.

Levin Commentary

LD092338 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1500 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Viktor Levin commentary]

[Text] The foreign press is paying great attention to the message from the Warsaw Pact member-states to the European states, to the United States and Canada on the question of setting up nuclear-free zones in Europe. A latest news commentary. At the microphone is Viktor Levin.

The question of setting up nuclear-free zones in various regions of the European Continent has long been on the agenda. At the initiative of Finland discussion of setting up such a zone in northern Europe has begun. The socialist countries and Greece are in favor of a nuclear-free Balkans. Sweden put forward an interesting idea of setting up in Europe along the line of contiguity of the states of the Warsaw Pact and NATO a corridor free from battlefield nuclear weapons.

I repeat that these ideas are not new. However, this does not at all mean that they are not topical. Now, when the question of averting the threat of nuclear catastrophe is being posed in such an acute manner, the implementation of these ideas could not only considerably improve the European political atmosphere but also become an important step toward the total elimination of nuclear weapons that the USSR is calling for so resolutely.

The Warsaw Pact member-states are firmly convinced that the nuclear danger must and can be removed. This conviction also permeates the USSR's striving for the total cessation of the testing of nuclear weapons and the new initiatives put forward by the states of the socialist community aimed at the implementation of the proposals to set up nuclear-free zones in Europe.

At the same time, it must be particularly noted that we not only support a solution to the above-mentioned problems but also propose specific measures to implement them. Thus, in order to reach agreement on an end to nuclear explosions, the USSR unilaterally introduced a moratorium that has been in operation for over 8 months now. In order for nuclear-free zones in Europe to become a reality, the Warsaw Pact member-states call on all countries that participated in the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe to take energetic actions and to support the efforts of the initiators of setting up such zones; they express readiness to participate in holding an in-depth and concrete exchange of opinions between interested states and speak out in favor of starting talks on the question of creating a corridor free of battlefield nuclear weapons in central Europe.

We see clearly the difficulties that stand in the way of strengthening peace, the attempts of the imperialist forces not only to maintain but also to deepen confrontation. But this does not discourage us and does not stop us. In the struggle against the nuclear threat we shall act consistently and persistently.

FURTHER ON PEACE GROUPS' VISITS TO U.S. EMBASSY

Television Report

OW100755 Moscow Television Service in Russian 0615 GMT 9 Apr 86

[From an unscheduled Novosti newscast; B. Parkhomenko report; officials identified by screen captions]

[Text] A delegation of the Soviet Committee for the Defense of Peace [SCDP] has visited the U.S. Embassy in Moscow to convey a letter addressed to Ronald Reagan. The letter contains an appeal from our country's public to the U.S. Administration on ending nuclear tests.

[Begin recording] [Parkhomenko] Our delegation -- cosmonaut Georgiy Grechko, poet Rime Kazakova, writer Genrikh Borovik, USSR people's artist Yevgeniy Matveyev, Prof Alla Mosevich, and journalist Vikentiy Matveyev -- was obviously not expected at the U.S. Embassy. [video shows the named individuals entering a building with the Embassy crest over the door]

For over 30 minutes they were kept in a cramped lobby under the care of a Marine. They were not offered a place to sit and were meticulously questioned about the aim of the visit. At first the confused security officer maintained that, other than junior personnel, there was nobody in the embassy: The ambassador, the press attache, the counselors were all absent. [video shows bearded man with bow tie and identity tag talking to Soviet visitors] Eventually one was found -- the counselor for economic affairs, Robert Fairchild Ober Jr. He also hesitated over inviting the Soviet people into the embassy and very reluctantly agreed to convey the petition and letters to the ambassador. [video shows the counselor receiving a folder, cuts to show the delegation leaving the building, then zooms in to show Grechko]

[Grechko] We came today, especially, because there is information that the Americans are about to explode a bomb. But in fact, it is not a bomb that they are exploding, they will explode an entire process of talks, they will explode a real path to peace that had become delineated, a path to disarmament and liberation of the world from nuclear arms.

And now the reception that we have received here once again reiterates that the U.S. Administration and its mission here do not want to heed the voice of the public, and in fact the voice of the entire world, the voice of reason.

[Borovik] I would like to add to what Georgiy Mikhaylovich [Grechko] has said. We asked them: Should we consider then that we are being received only in the dressing room, that we cannot be admitted to the embassy? To this, Mr Ober, this gentleman, said they could not admit us to the embassy because they are afraid of terrorism.

[Parkhomenko, turning to Kazakova] How did you react to the fact that you were taken for an international terrorist? [Grechko laughs]

[Kazakova] No, at first Mr Ober recognized me -- apparently he has read my poems -- and generally I am a very benevolent and normal person. And I think that these iron doors are a kind of iron curtain over the heart.

[Ye. Oskolskiy, SCDP secretary] These days thousands of letters and telegrams from all corners of the country are arriving for our committee. Here are just a few of them -- from the clergy, schoolchildren, workers, kolkhoz workers -- and we wanted to convey, and did convey, some of these letters to the embassy. But the message we handed them addressed to President Reagan expresses the aspirations of all the people who write to us, all the Soviet people.

[Borovik] Of course we would like to see this message handed to the ambassador and would like to have the ambassador convey it to President Reagan. Well...

[Parkhomenko, interrupting] Did you receive any guarantees that it will be delivered to the addressee?

[Borovik] We did not receive any guarantees in this matter. We were told that they will look into this question and will adopt a decision, and we ought to telephone to find out the decision.

[Grechko] For the first time in our lives we saw the real iron curtain [laughter] with the manufacturers' label: Made in America.

[Parkhomenko] Well, I think that negative information is also information, and in any case, one can draw quite a definite conclusion from today's event.

[Borovik] In this regard, today we received very important information. [end recording]

Matveyev Views Reception

PM091524 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 9 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[Report by V. Matveyev, deputy chairman of the Soviet Committee for the Defense of Peace, entitled "Confusion..."]

[Text] U.S. Embassy in Moscow, Tchaikovsky Street; 1030 in the morning, 8 April. Representatives of our public, members of the Soviet Committee for the Defense of Peace R. Kazakova, A. Masevich, G. Borovik, G. Grechko, Ye. Matveyev, and the author of this report arrive at the embassy to hand over an appeal from the committee addressed to President R. Reagan calling on him to end U.S. nuclear tests and join the Soviet moratorium on such tests. In addition to the appeal there are letters from Soviet people addressed to the White House with similar insistent appeals expressing both our and other people's feelings and urging the White House to heed the voice of reason!

We are at the entrance to the embassy. After several minutes an embassy security guard appears. We explain the purpose of our visit and mention that we would like to see the U.S. ambassador or one of the embassy's senior officials. We are asked to wait. We wait. The security guard comes back. He regrets, but the ambassador is not in the building. Nor his deputy. They cannot receive us at the embassy. But the security guard is prepared to accept the appeal and the letters and to pass them on.

Is there no senior official in the embassy to whom we could hand these documents?

The reaction to our question is a request to wait again. So we wait again. The same American comes back. Mr R. Ober, counsellor for economic affairs, comes to meet us.

The conversation begins with Mr Ober telling us that rigorous antiterrorist measures are being applied at his embassy. We do not know how to understand this. Is this the "reason" why they do not want to receive us at the embassy? Mr Ober nods as the Soviet people who have come to see him are introduced. He knows most of them. Genrikh Borovik explains why we have come. He wonders why we could not have been received in a more-- how can he put it -- civilized manner...

Mr Ober says that in his view meetings of this kind are useless because the Soviet press will nonetheless not write anything about the reason why nuclear tests are being continued in the United States.

We leave this claim to the conscience of its author. However, a few days ago IZVESTIYA, for instance, reproduced statements of U.S. officials to the effect that U.S. nuclear weapon tests must continue so that new types of these weapons can be developed.

We hand the committee's appeal and the Soviet people's letters to the U.S. diplomat and take our leave. We will wait for a reply. If there is one, that is.

Youth Delegation Refused Entry

LD091654 Moscow TASS in English 1627 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 9 TASS -- TASS correspondent reports: A Soviet youth delegation was unable to present to the U.S. ambassador in the USSR an appeal of the youth organisations of the USSR to President Reagan. The appeal firmly denounces the stand of the U.S. Administration in the question of nuclear tests. The delegation made of 12 Soviet youth representatives were not received at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

The appeal says that the U.S. Administration pointedly ignores the demands of the peace public to end all nuclear tests and to display a constructive approach to the proposal of the Soviet Union which twice announced extension of the unilateral moratorium on any nuclear tests.

The delegation went to the American Embassy, not far from Moscow's centre, this morning. But they were unable to enter the embassy. After 20 minute-long expectation [as received] near the entrance to the building, first secretary of the U.S. Embassy in the USSR John Ordway came out and said that the American side was ready to let in only five Soviet representatives. In reply, the head of the delegation, secretary of the Leninist Young Communist League's Central Committee Vladimir Shaplyko said that the Soviet delegation included 12 representatives of the youth of the country -- workers, peasants, young scientists, students, workers in culture, and they believe that the whole delegation should participate in the talk.

John Ordway repeated that only five persons could enter the building. He added that the room where Soviet representatives were to be received could not take in a bigger number of people (the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is housed in one of the biggest buildings as compared with other diplomatic representations). John Ordway returned to the building three times and came back with the same reply. Vladimir Shaplyko was compelled therefore to present him in the street, near the entrance to the embassy, the appeal of the Soviet youth organisations to the U.S. President.

The matter is certainly not the number of "seats" at the American Embassy, the TASS correspondent has been told by Vladimir Shaplyko, but the American side's unwillingness to heed the voice of the Soviet public, the voice of the people of the whole world, including the American people.

PRAVDA REVIEW OF WEEK'S INTERNATIONAL EVENTS

PM081112 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 6 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[Igor Melnikov "International Review"]

[Text] The congresses of the ruling Marxist-Leninist parties in a number of socialist countries have been an important feature of this spring. The 17th CPCZ Congress was held in a businesslike, working atmosphere toward the end of March. The Bulgarian Communists' 13th Congress was held in Sofia last week. It defined further tasks for socialist building in the fraternal country and revealed the party's ability to set and achieve increasingly large-scale goals of creation.

The CPSU program states that it is an object of special concern to strengthen in every possible way the Soviet Union's friendship with the socialist community countries and to develop and improve ties with these countries. The ruling Communist and workers parties are the driving force behind this all-around cooperation. Every day we live through now confirms their dynamism and strength and their ability to constantly learn from and rely on mutual experience.

The coordinated policy of the USSR and the other socialist community countries is an obstacle in the way of imperialism's intrigues and a guarantee of success in the struggle to preserve peace and remove the nuclear threat hanging over mankind.

Sense of Responsibility

I recall the question that Churchill in January 1953 put to Truman, who was then master of the White House: "Mr President, have you an answer ready for the time when you and I present ourselves before Saint Peter, and he says: 'You are both responsible for dropping the atomic bombs. What can you say in your defense?'"

Atomic bombs are not being dropped on peaceful people on our planet in the mid-eighties. But this does not mean that mankind is not threatened with nuclear catastrophe. The world's peoples heard its echo just 2 weeks ago -- in the explosion at the Nevada test site where the Pentagon tries out new nuclear weapons.

For 8 months now, the Soviet Union has been strictly fulfilling its unilateral moratorium on all nuclear explosions. During these same 8 months, the United States has not moved a single step closer to solving a problem that is as clear as it is important. On the other hand, it has made considerable efforts to bring its closest allies "into line" ["podravnyat" po svoyemu ranzhiru].

As long as the necessary movement in the direction of responsibility and realism is not to be observed among the heads of the leading NATO states, the planet's peace-loving forces must tell the U.S. Administration that its continuation of nuclear tests, despite the truly universal protest, is a demonstrative challenge not only to the Soviet Union but to the whole world and all people, including the American people.

Why, you might wonder, has the USSR now concentrated its efforts on ending nuclear tests? In his Soviet television address, M.S. Gorbachev revealed the tremendous significance of this task. First, ending tests is the most realistic way to end the arms race in general. Without such tests it is impossible either to improve nuclear weapons or to create new types. Second, continuing tests does tremendous harm to nature and the home in which mankind lives.

Finally, we do not have to start from scratch, as it were, in this difficult matter: Test have not been conducted in the atmosphere, under water, or on land for many years now. Nor have there been nuclear explosions in space.

The Soviet leader recalled that, having carefully weighed all the "pros" and "cons," on the 40th anniversary of the tragic bombing of Hiroshima, the USSR advanced in initiative of extraordinary importance -- to end all nuclear explosions for both military and peaceful purposes. Our country urged the United States and other nuclear states to follow its example so as to make the moratorium permanent and eternal.

We all know how events developed subsequently. The original deadline for ending the unilateral Soviet moratorium -- 1 January 1986 -- was later extended by 3 months. U.S. nuclear explosions were the response -- Washington was clearly testing our patience. Nonetheless, toward the end of March, the Soviet side took a constructive new step. The Soviet Union declared that it would not conduct nuclear explosions even after 31 March if the United States did likewise. Our country gave the Washington administration one more chance to adopt a responsible decision to end nuclear explosions.

Otherwise we will have to resume nuclear tests. The USSR cannot waive its own security or that of its allies.

Evil Logic of Militarism

It would not be our choice to resume tests -- all our efforts are being undertaken in a different direction. With this aim, the CPSU Central Committee general secretary is prepared to meet with the U.S. President in the near future in a European capital in order to reach an accord on ending nuclear explosions.

And what has happened? This time, the U.S. Administration only needed a few hours to reply to the Soviet proposal. From the Californian ranch where the President was resting came a hasty "no" accompanied by references to the fact that, as long as the arsenal of nuclear weapons exists, it is necessary to conduct tests in order to guarantee their efficacy. (Incidentally, THE WASHINGTON POST immediately remarked sarcastically that, of the 16 tests planned for this year, many are connected with the development of new types of weapons. New ones!)

There is no denying that Washington's secrets are transparent. It is forcing the pace of testing, as West Germany's WESTDEUTSCHE ALLGEMEINE points out, above all with a view to creating [sozdaniye] space weapons. It has just become known that the Pentagon's nuclear planners are reckoning on conducting another explosion on the same Nevada test site on 8 April. Conclusions will have to drawn from this by our country and its allies, by all other peace-loving states, and by the international public. "When the White House rejected the latest Soviet proposal," an NBC-TV commentator pointed out, "it declared, just as it has done in the past, that the ultimate goal of U.S. policy is the total elimination of nuclear weapons. Such a discrepancy between words and deeds does not work in the U.S. favor now." No beating about the bush, as you see.

Let us take from the endless stream of responses to the recent Soviet proposals concerning a nuclear test ban just one -- an article published in the Canadian newspaper GLOBE AND MAIL. It has a characteristic headline: "Persistent Quest for Peace in Moscow and Quest for War in Washington." What is going on? -- the newspaper wonders. Peace-loving proposals are advanced by a country to which the West ascribes "aggressive" aspirations.

However, the "goodwill" shown recently by R. Reagan, the newspaper states with irony, is far from impressive. Some examples are the refusal to subscribe to the moratorium, the nuclear explosion in Nevada, the violation of the USSR state border in the Black Sea, the preparations for war against Nicaragua, and the military provocation off the Libyan coast.

It is dinned into Americans throughout their life, the GLOBE AND MAIL sums up, that "bad guys" live on the other side of the ocean. However, when you are with Soviet people, you realize why they show valid concern about those who are presented to us as the "good guys."

Not only in the editorial office of the Canadian bourgeois newspaper but literally everywhere people are realizing the worth of the "good guys" from Washington. On Friday, approximately 1,000 prominent public figures and members of the parliament in Sweden published the appeal "Halt Nuclear Tests Now!" It is difficult to take in even with the mind's eye the kilometers-long columns of antiwar "spring marches" which have recently taken place in Western Europe. Whether in the FRG, the Netherlands, Belgium, France, or Switzerland, they have all shown the determination of millions of Europeans to defend their chief right — the right to life — and to demand that Washington abandon its nuclear tests and its plans to militarize space.

The peoples' wise logic is proving stronger than the evil logic of the arms race. Mankind is becoming aware that American behavior has recenlty been increasingly running counter to the "spirit of Geneva."

Africa's Friends and Enemies

The days that Samora Machel, chairman of the Mozambique Liberation Front Party and president of the People's Republic of Mozambique, spent on Soviet soil attested to the good relations linking our states, peoples, and parties. The results of his visit are fruitful and principled.

The peoples of the African Continent have already measured off a great path in the movement toward genuine freedom, independence, and progress. This is not an easy path and is sometimes attended by tragic events. Its complexities will be reflected by the UN General Assembly's special session opening in May to examine the critical economic situation in Africa. The forum is faced with drawing up a document on economic development for these countries during time when imperialism is shifting onto the developing countries, on an unprecedented scale, the consequences of the mess in its own economy.

The Soviet Union is far from indifferent to this state of affairs," M.S. Gorbachev emphasized in his replies to the Algerian magazine REVOLUTION AFRICAINE. "We for our part use our foreign trade to exert a stabilizing influence on the markets for many commodities, including those exported by developing countries. The USSR's economic and technical assistance to these countries works in the same direction, helping to form the national base of science and industry and to modernize agriculture. Our credits are repaid by developing young states' exports, and so the drama of indebtedness does not arise here."

The people of Mozambique constantly feel the comradeship of their dependable Soviet friend. The USSR is now giving the young Republic assistance in implementing 40 projects, and approximately 450 of its citizens are studying in our country's secondary and higher educational institutions. The Moxambican people are grateful to the Soviet doctors, teachers, ship repair workers, marine pilots, and mining engineers for helping them to build a new life.

At the same time, the Republic is encountering considerable difficulties created by the South African racists' aggressive intrigues. The Republic of South Africa regime is seeking to destablize the situation in Mozambique, as in a number of other countries, by training armed gangs and infiltrating them onto their territory. This aggressiveness, nurtured by Washington's direct support, has increased particularly of late. Not concealing their joy, the closest friends of the Pretoria racists in the United States have just blurted out the fact that the White House has issued secret instructions to supply the rebels fighting on Angolan soil with Stinger antiaircraft missiles with a heat-seeking head. (Incidentially, it has also been decided to equip the Afghan dushmans with these missiles, each of which costs the Pentagon $75,000). As THE WASHINGTON POST points out, bandits will obtain the best U.S. weapons for the first time in the long history of conducting secret operations outside the United States. It has thus been demonstrated once again that in its actions in the international arena, Washington is inseparable from the most reactionary, antipopular forces. And the fact that it hypocritically calls the bloody mercenaries "freedom fighters" merely confirms this fact.

Pictures At an Exhibition

Fred Sinowatz, federal chancellor of the Republic of Austria, paid a working visit to Moscow last week. The high level of the development of all-round ties -- political, social, and cultural -- between the USSR and Austria and also of their economic cooperation was confirmed during that visit. What lies behind this assessment is not some "happy circumstances" or some "phenomenon" lasting since the conclusion of the State Treaty in 1955. The fruitful relations between the USSR and Austria confirm the vital force of Lenin's idea of peaceful coexistence between states with different social systems. Coxistence augmented by an equitable and honest partnership, to which neither the different social systems nor the hardly comparable dimensions of our two countries are any obstacle. Over the past decade, commodity turnover between them has increased more than 300 percent, and in 1985, the USSR was the Alpine republic's fourth largest partner in terms of the volume of its exports.

The exhibition "Modern Austrian Industrial Technology" is now open in Moscow. On viewing its impressive exhibits, I could not stop thinking: While I was PRAVDA's correspondent in Austria, I seemed to visit all the country's major cities and familiarized myself with dozens of enterprises which cooperate with the USSR, and yet here I was struck by the logos of more and more new firms. Thus, many "blank spaces" in countries' cooperation have recently been filled in.

This cooperation, incidentally, is helping the Republic of Austria solve the tricky problem of unemployment. As F. Muhri, chairman of the Austrian Communist Party, recently pointed out in an article published in the newspaper VOLKSSTIMME, orders placed by the socialist countries "provide approximately 150,000 working people with steady work." Observing the successes of multifacted Soviet-Austrian cooperation, one may experience a natural bewilderment: This typically small European country knows how to derive considerable advantages from trade with neighbors in the East, while one of the leading Western states -- the FRG -- frequently misses good opportunities. Frequently, it is true not only through its own fault. A few days ago, according to the U.S. NEWSWEEK magazine, the United States, having exerted massive pressure, obtained with Bonn's consent the right to monitor exports from the FRG to socialist countries.

Sooner or later, as has happened repeatedly before, life upsets the calculations of opponents of cooperation and mutually advantageous trade. The very course of history and social progress, the CPSU Central Committee Political Report to the 27th party congress states, is increasingly insistently demanding the organization of CONSTRUCTIVE, CREATIVE COOPERATION AMONG STATES AND PEOPLES ON A WORLDWIDE SCALE. SHULTZ, DOBRYNIN CONTINUE DISCUSSIONS

[Text] A meeting has been held in Washington between Anatoliy Fedorovich Dobrynin and George Shultz, U.S. secretary of state. They continued their discussion of Soviet-U.S. relations.

After the meeting Shultz gave a luncheon in honor of Dobrynin, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee.

On the same day, a reception was held at the USSR Embassy on the occasion of Comrade Dobynin's departure from Washington in connection with the completion of his tour of duty as USSR ambassador to the United States. Present at the reception were U.S. Secretary of State Shultz, other members of the administration, leading figures in the Senate and House of Representatives of the U.S. Congress, and also members of the diplomatic corps and numerous representatives of the American public. Dobrynin and Shultz exchanged speeches.

[Text] Moscow April 10 TASS -- In accordance with an agreement reached, Eduard Shevardnadze, member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee, minister of foreign affairs of the USSR, and George Shultz, U.S. secretary of state, will meet in the middle of May in Washington to continue the exchange of views on questions connected with Soviet-American relations and topical international problems.

REAGAN SEEKS 'PRETEXT' FOR ANOTHER LIBYAN STRIKE

LD100605 Moscow TASS in English 0559 GMT 10 Apr 86

["Reagan Lashes Out at Libya" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Washington April 10 TASS -- U.S. President Ronald Reagan held a news conference in the White House Wednesday, which made it clear that the United States is preparing another aggressive foray against sovereign Libya.

The head of the U.S. Administration, who made coarsely insulting broadsides against Mu'ammer al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, gave the newsmen clearly to understand that the United States was now looking for a pretext for another strike at Libya which it keeps groundlessly accusing of "support for international terrorism".

The president failed to produce even the slightest proof of Libyan involvement in recent acts of terrorism he mentioned.

TASS CITES U.S. MEDIA ON PLANS TO ATTACK LIBYA

LD100618 Moscow TASS in English 0613 GMT 10 Apr 86

["USA Preparing to Strike at Libya Again" -- TASS headline]

[Text] New York April 10 TASS -- ABC television reported an opinion making rounds Washington that another blow is in the making against Libya.

Quoting U.S. military sources, it said that several days ago spy satellites had been used to make fresh photos of Libya and work was currently under way to revise the list of targets in its territory.

The contemplated options for anti-Libyan aggressive operations, the TV network said, included, besides strikes by carrier-based aircraft, runs against Libyan targets by FB-111A bombers deployed in Europe.

Another plan mooted by the Pentagon provided for using a B-52 bomber which, the ABC said, was capable, as demonstrated by exercises in Egypt, of making it nonstop from the United States to the Middle East and back after dropping bombs there.

U.S. Resumes 'Provocative Activity'

LD100824 Moscow TASS in English 0640 GMT 10 Apr 86

["U.S. Threatens Libya" -- TASS identifier]

[Text] Washington April 10 TASS -- By TASS correspondent Alexandr Lyutyy.

The United States is resuming its provocative activity off the coast of Libya. UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL quoted Pentagon officials as saying that the aircraft-carrier America, cruising in the western Mediterranean, suddenly cancelled the planned visit to the French port of Cannes.

The aircraft-carrier Coral Sea was ordered to remain in the Spanish port of Malaga rather than return to its home port in the United States.

Both carrier-led groups number about twenty vessels fitted out with modern weapons.

According to UPI, the ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet were ordered to change the sail scheduled when there emerged clear signs that the United States was planning more combat actions against Libya.

Several days ago, the United States provoked military confrontation off the Libyan shores and made several strikes at Libyan facilities.

The recent bomb explosion on board an American TWA airliner and the West Berlin nightclub bombing were chosen as a pretext for preparing new acts of aggression against the sovereign Arab country.

Although there was no proof of Libya's complicity in the terrorist acts, THE WASHINGTON POST reported, Washington hastily put the blame on Tripoli whose independent policy had long since enraged the White House.

It is indicative that the head of the American Administration himself is asiduously kindling the anti-Libyan hysteria in the United States. President Reagan, addressing newspaper editors on Wednesday, launched a barrage of threats against Libya, saying it was under suspicion and that the United States was not going to 'just sit here and hold still."

MOSCOW TELEVISION COMMENTS ON U.S. POLICY ON LIBYA

LD092247 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1900 GMT 9 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Valeriy Korzin]

[Text] Serious negotiations spring not from proof of sincerity but from resolve and energy -- and resolve is founded on a sense of confidence in U.S. might. This was said by Ronald Reagan at a meeting of Republicans in New Orleans. That the U.S. President throws out sincerity in mutual relations as an unnecessary concept is, in the final analysis, a matter for his conscinece and his sense of ethics. But the gamble on strength proclaimed by him could lead -- in fact is already leading -- to serious consequences.

Take, for instance, resolve and energy with regard to Libya. It seems there are no evil deeds left that the U.S. Administration is not prepared to ascribe to Libya's leader, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi.

Because Libya consistently defends the interests of the Libyan revolution he is declared virtually the world's chief terrorist. After the explosion in a West Berlin discotheque, U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger stated that he had no convincing evidence linking Al-Qadhdhafi with the terrorist act. President Reagan and CIA Director Casey, speaking at a press conference, declined to name those guilty of the explosion. If you name names you have to back up the accusation with facts, but there are no facts; there are only conjectures on which yet another anti-Libyan campaign is being fanned.

THE NEW YORK TIMES pointed out that Libya's firm anti-U.S. position is winning it sympathy in various parts of the world. For this reason Washington is now trying to blur the colors, saying that not only the United States but all Western countries are waging a struggle against Tripoli. After the rumpus caused by the terrorist provocations at the airports in Rome and Vienna, the United States tried to persuade its allies to expel Libyan representatives from Europe and tried to make them join the U.S. economic boycott. It did not work. The old scenario is now being played out again.

And it may be supposed that it was not without prompting from abroad that two Libyan diplomats have already been expelled from France, supposedly in order to safeguard U.S. targets in Europe from possible attacks.

In an interview with NBC television, McFarlane -- a former presidential aide -- said: The next step against Libya will be an increase in pressure, including the use of military force. And a corresponsent for the same network, accredited to the Pentagon and apparently well-informed, added that Middle East experts consider Libya an easy target for a counterstrike. So, in certain highly placed offices of the U.S. military even that possibility is not ruled out.

In this connection the weekly ECONOMIST recalls that at the end of last summer Admiral Poindexter, then President Reagan's aide, discussed with Egypt the possibility of a joint air and land attack on Libya. Incidentally, Poindexter, already the President's national security adviser, naturally has greater opportunities and no doubt his views on national security have not undergone any serious change. The ECONOMIST also reports that since the start of the year Al-Qadhdhafi has seven times taken diplomatic steps to reach agreement with the United States to discuss their relationship at a negotiating table, but in Washington they do not wish to hear about any negotiations -- only resolve and energy based on strength.

PRAVDA CRITICIZES U.S. PERSIAN GULF POLICY

[Own correspondent Yu. Glukhov report: "Who Needs the 'Umbrella'?"]

[Text] Beirut, 6 Apr -- According to news agency reports, a Saudi Arabian tanker was attacked yesterday by unidentified aircraft in the Persian Gulf northeast of the Qatar coast. As a result 29 crew members were wounded, 6 of them seriously. By 1 April of this year 125 freighters from various countries had suffered in the Iran-Iraq military conflict zone.

The danger of the widening of military operations and the involvement of new participants increases as the senseless, bloody war goes on between Iran and Iraq, a war now in its 6th year. This danger increases in connection with the neoglobalist, imperial claims of the United States, which has declared the Near East and Persian Gulf zone a sphere of its "vital interests."

By a strange coincidence, the firing by "unidentified aircraft" on the Saudi tanker took place at precisely the time that the U.S. vice presicent had arrived in Riyadh, from where he is to go to Bahrain, Oman, and the Yemen Arab Republic, while Assistant Secretary of State R. Murphy is visiting the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, and Kuwait. It is no secret that Washington has long been seeking, and is prepared to use, any pretext for open interference in the affairs of the Persian Gulf countries, offering the region's states a "protective umbrella." As an official While House spokesman stated on the eve of Bush's departure, the Iran-Iraq war and Persian Gulf security is the main topic of his diplomatic mission. Judging from press reports, Bush has again put forward the idea of using ships from the naval forces of the United State's and its NATO allies to "escort" tankers. On this pretext the Pentagon would like to establish a presence in the waters of the Persian Gulf. But the news agencies report that Riyadh has made it clear that "such a presence will only complicate the situation." The consequences which it could lead to are clear from the Pentagon's past adventures in the Tonkin Gulf, the Bay of Pigs, and the Gulf of Sidra.

MOSCOW DISCUSSES ISSUES FACING RECONVENED CONGRESS

LD092352 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1500 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Report by station correspondent Andrey Ptashnikov from the United States]

[Text] After the Easter holidays the U.S. Congress resumed work in Washington. Our correspondent in the United States, Andrey Ptashnikov reports:

Among the issues the congressmen are to discuss one can probably highlight three main ones. It is expected that it is precisely over these that the most stormy debates will unfold. I am thinking first of all of the White House request for the allocation of $100 million for military and financial aid to the Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries. I would recall that 3 weeks ago the House of Representatives turned down this request. However, several days later, under the strongest pressure from the administration, it was approved by the Senate -- the upper house of Congress. Not ceasing its fervent anti-Nicaraguan and anticommunist campaign for a day, the White House hopes that the second vote on this issue in the House of Representatives, which is planned for mid-April, will yet bring success.

The legislators will also be continuing discussion of the draft federal budget for fiscal 1987. In this respect, it should be noted that the increase in military expenditures planned by the government is giving rise to growing opposition from them.

Finally, there is the question of stopping nuclear tests, which is one of the most important on the agenda of the current session of Congress. The relevant bill was tabled for its examination by Pat Schroeder, a member of the House of Representatives. More than 60 congressmen have already officially stated their support for the call to join the Soviet moratorium on all nuclear explosions.

The recent appeal from the USSR Supreme Soviet to the U.S. Congress to do everything it can so that the position of the United States will also help to solve the problem of stopping nuclear testing in accordance with the will of the peoples, with their passionate desire to have stable peace on earth, has also made a great impression on the legislators.

The discussions being resumed in Congress will demonstrate if the American legislators are ready to respond positively to this appeal, and to take specific steps aimed at curbing the arms race.

HOWE'S VISIT TO PAKISTAN DRAWS CONCLUSION

DRA Calls Visit 'Provocative'

PM091454 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 9 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[TASS dispatch: "Protest Lodged"]

[Text] Kabul, 8 Apr -- The recent visit to Pakistan of G. Howe, British secretary of state for foreign and Commonwealth affairs, was of a clearly provocative nature, and the statements he made can only be interpreted as overt interference in the internal affairs of the DRA.

This was pointed out by a DRA Foreign Ministry spokesman in an interview to a correspondent of the BAKHTAR news agency. Proceeding from familiar anti-Afghan positions, G. Howe tried to conceal the fact that the tension in the region arose as a result of the undeclared war unleashed against the DRA by the forces of international imperialism and of the transformation of Pakistan's territory into a refuge for gangs and criminal elements.

At a meeting with ringleaders of the Afghan counterrevolution, G. Howe promised them increased British Government aid. According to his words, the injections of British money for Afghan gangs will total 5 million pounds this year. All this is yet more evidence that Britain continues to conduct a policy of crude interference in the affairs of the DRA, an independent and sovereign state and a member of the Nonaligned Movement, the Afghan Foreign Ministry spokesman noted.

G. Howe's trip to the Khyber area, he noted, also clearly exposes the fact that official London not only fully supports Islamabad's policy aimed at depriving the Pushtuns of their rights and freedoms but is furthermore encouraging the Pakistani regime to step up its undeclared war against the DRA.

It is the view of the DRA Foreign Ministry that the provocative activities of British officials and their anti-Afghan remarks represent an outright violation of the norms of international law, and it is lodging a protest in this connection.

Tries to 'Obstruct' Settlement

LD071019 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0230 GMT 7 Apr 86

[From the "International Diary" program presented by Konstantin Patsyuk]

[Text] The foreign press is reporting on the results of the 4-day official visit to Pakistan by Howe, British minister for foreign and Commonwealth affairs, which has just ended. He held talks there with President Ziaul Haq and other Pakistani leaders. Howe tried to convince Islamabad to continue to obstruct a settlement of the Afghan situation. And in order somehow to entice Islamabad he offered them 420 million pounds sterling [as heard] in the form of military aid. And probably these arguments had their effect. During talks details of a major agreement were discussed, according to which Pakistan will receive on favorable terms the latest British tank turrets and tank guns, and components for self-propelled antiaircraft guns. Such generosity on the part of London can be explained fairly simply. Great Britain, like the United States, the FRG, and some other Western countries, does not want a peaceful and just settlement of the situation in Southwest Asia.

PASHTUN TRIBES DENOUNCE PAKISTAN, U.S. AGGRESSION

[Text] Kabul April 9 TASS -- A jirga of Pashtun tribes opened here today. The main report on the situation in the zone inhabited by the tribes, on the historic traditions and rights of the Pashtuns and Baluchis, their struggle for freedom and independence was delivered by member of the jirga's presidium, representative of the Momand tribe, Haji Munshi Sahargol.

He pointed out that the imperialist and reactionary forces from the first days after the victory of the April Revolution had assumed a stand hostile to Afghanistan, unleashed an undeclared war against it in an effort to undermine the process of progressive transformations. The Pashtun tribes also became the target of an aggression. Contrary to the will of the Pakistani people, the Islamabad military regime set up 120 camps for the training of Afghan counterrevolutionaries in the zone inhabited by the tribes.

Haji Munshi Sahargol pointed out the Soviet Union's principled stand with regard to a just struggle of the Pashtun tribes against the aggression of the Pakistani military. He said the USSR is a staunch defender of international peace and security, democracy, independence, social justice. The Soviet Union has always declared against war, colonialism, imperialism and racism, against oppression and exploitation, against the policy of aggression and militarism. Traditional and unbreakable friendship links Pashtun tribes with Afghanistan, the speaker said. "This friendship has withstood the test of time and we are not going to tolerate the existence of camps for the training of Afghan counterrevolutionaries on our territory. Pashtuns will not allow foreign arms used against fraternal Afghanistan to be stored in the areas they inhabit."

The message of the Revolutionary Council of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan to the participants in the jirga was read out by Haji Mohammad Tsamkani, vice president of the Revolutionary Council, chairman of the Central Council of the Supreme Jirga of Tribes. "We take pride in the fact," the message said, "that the Pashtun tribes support the April Revolution and are prepared to uphold it. We shall make our frontiers impenetrable to traitors of the Afghan people, to agents of imperialism. But this frontier will always be open to you, our Pashtun brothers".

Speaking at the jirga, representatives of tribes noted that the Pakistani military and forces of international imperialism headed by the USA seek to bring the tribes to their knees by employing outright aggression, bribery and intimidation. The bloody aggression in Khyber, intensive military preparations in other areas show that Pakistan is being used by U.S. imperialism and international reaction to destabilise the situation in the region.

WEINBERGER DISCUSSES ANZUS DURING AUSTRALIA VISIT

LD092310 Moscow TASS in English 2220 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Canberra April 10 TASS -- Caspar Weinberger, U.S. secretary of defence, who is currently on a tour of a number of Asian and Pacific nations, has arrived on a three-day visit in Australia. According to reports of a foreign news agencies, the talks to be held in Canberra will focus on the crisis on the ANZUS bloc, including, apart from the USA and Australia, also New Zealand. The military alliance, acting under the U.S. aegis, has been balancing on the verge of a disintegration as New Zealand has categorically prohibited calls of U.S. naval vessels with nuclear weapons on board at its ports. Washington is seriously concerned about the movement gaining momentum in Australia for dismantling the U.S. military bases and declaring that country to be a nuclear-free zone. Against the background of these events the Pentagon chief intends to seek a broadening of U.S. military cooperation with Australia. He will also try to gear Canberra to the U.S. campaign of pressuring New Zealand.

TASS REPORTS AUSTRALIA WITHHOLDS SUPPORT OF SDI

[Text] Canberra April 9 TASS -- Australian Defence Minister Kim Beazley stated in parliament on Tuesday that Australia would not officially participate in the "star wars" programme or in SDI-related research. He emphasized that the government did not intend to enter into any negotiations with the USA on the conclusion of agreements the kind of those which had already been signed or were being worked out between the United States, Britain, the FRG or Japan. Mr. Beazely pointed out that the Australian Government did not support the "Strategic Defence Initiative" (SDI) concept and that it would not conduct any negotiations on a broad agreement of that kind.

The Australian defence minister said this in parliament in answer to a question about the Australian Government's stand in connection with local press reports that the country's government was ostensibly prepared to make a compromise under the pressure of the ally across the ocean: not to prevent private companies and research organisations from participating in the SDI programme provided their activities are not directly connected with the development of space weapons. The reports sparked off an outburst of indignation among the public and wrathful statements by representatives of the scientific circles and mass media of the country that the entire "star wars" programme is aimed at creating space weapons and that, therefore, it is impossible to engage in peaceful research within the SDI framework.

"THE AUSTRALIAN" newspaper reports that at the same time no firm promises to prevent the participation of Australian business in the implementation of the SDI were voiced at the meeting of the parliamentary group of the ruling Labour Party.

RECEPTION SPEECHES CONCLUDE BCP CONGRESS IN SOFIA

PM080853 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 7 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[TASS report: "In Honor of the Foreign Guests"]

[Text] Sofia, 6 Apr -- The BCP Central Committee held a reception on 5 April in honor of the foreign delegations that took part in the 13th BCP Congress.

The reception was attended by T. Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee and chairman of the Bulgarian State Council; G. Atanasov, member of the BCP Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the Bulgarian Council of Ministers; members and candidate members of the BCP Central Committee Politburo, secretaries of the BCP Central Committee, and members of the party Central Committee.

Present at the reception were the CPSU delegation headed by N.I. Ryzhkov, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, and other foreign delegations.

T. Zhivkov delivered a speech to those taking part in the reception. He expressed confidence that the great and responsible tasks the 13th BCP Congress has set for the party and people will be resolved. As was stressed at the congress, he said, our confidence in success arises from our own experience, from the country's increased economic, scientific, technical, and cadre potential, and from the people's unity. The basis of our confidence is the great Marxist-Leninist teaching. This confidence arises from our membership in the socialist community, from cooperation and integration with the fraternal socialist countries, above all the Soviet Union, and from the support which progressive forces give us.

The BCP and Bulgaria, for their part, will continue to march shoulder to shoulder with the socialist countries, to strengthen their fraternal solidarity with the struggle of the international communist and workers movement and all working people against the oppression of capital, and to give support to the peoples fighting against imperialism, neocolonialism, racism, and reaction and for national liberation, democratic transformations, social progress, and peace.

The chief problem is that of preserving and strengthening peace on the planet, that of the salvation of civilization. This task is a common task for us, for people with differing convictions, a common task for all who value life and the prosperity of present and future generations. Bulgaria will continue to act with unvarying indefatigability for the sake of peace and security in the Balkans, in Europe, and throughout the rest of the world, for the sake of detente, disarmament and dialogue, mutual understanding, and cooperation between countries with different social systems.

For the sake of this, T. Zhivkov stated, the Bulgarian Communists, at their congress, once again expressed warm support for the peace initiatives put forward at the 27th CPSU Congress.

N.I. Ryzhkov delivered a reply speech. He said: Permit me on behalf of all the foreign delegations who were present at the 13th BCP Congress to warmly congratulate the comrades elected by the congress to the party's leading organs and to congratulate Comrade Todor Zhivkov on his reelection as general secretary of the BCP Central Committee. M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, sends cordial congratulations to Comrade T. Zhivkov.

To merit the confidence of a party which through all the vicissitudes of history has preserved the organized nature of its ranks, its ideological staunchness, and its loyalty to Marxism-Leninism is a great honor and a tremendous responsibility. We wish you continuing success in bearing aloft the internationalist banner of Dimitur Blagoev and Georgi Dimitrov.

We were not merely guests of the congress. We had a profound, direct sense of involvement in the content of its work. Your congress defined new tasks and inspiring prospects for Bulgaria's socialist development and took place in an atmosphere of party unity and close cohesion of the Bulgarian people around the party.

From the congress platform there rang out with new force the BCP's determination firmly and steadily to pursue the course of developing all-around cooperation and friendship with the Soviet Union and the other fraternal countries and strengthening the socialist community and its collective organizations -- the Warsaw Pact and CEMA. The BCP actively calls for the deepening of ties with the international communist and workers movement, of which it is itself a part, for comradely solidarity among communists, and for unity of actions by all fighters for peace, national independence, and social progress.

Envoys from the peoples of more than 100 countries are present in this hall. There is no more important, more responsible task for the people than to stop the arms race, eliminate nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction, and preserve peace and human civilization. That is the prime cause of every party, every politician, and all people of goodwill.

The CPSU delegation is grateful to the Bulgarian comrades for your party's high assessment of the historical significance and results of the 27th CPSU Congress and of its creative, innovative contribution to the theory and practice of socialist building. Soviet Communists and all Soviet people value your solidarity and your understanding and support for the CPSU's course of accelerating the country's socio-economic development and strengthening world peace.

In conclusion, N.I. Ryzhkov wished the Bulgarian comrades fruitful, successful work in implementing the large-scale, noble ideas and plans embodied in the 13th congress decisions. In this work, he stressed, the BCP can count firmly on the solidarity and support of its many friends and like-minded people.

RYZHKOV STRESSES SDI IN TALKS WITH FRG'S BANGEMANN

PM091340 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 9 Apr 86 First Edition p 3

[Text] Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, received in the Kremlin on 8 April West German Minister for Economics Martin Bangemann, a co-chairman of the Soviet-West German Commission for Economic, Scientific, and Technological Cooperation who is staying in the Soviet Union in conjunction with the 14th session of this commission. During the conversation they discussed bilateral relations and pressing international problems.

In view of the highly important foreign policy initiatives set forth in Mikhail Gorbachev's 15 January 1986 statement and at the 27th CPSU Congress, the Soviet side stressed the urgent need for all states to exert efforts to prevent an arms race in space and terminate it on earth, refraining from everything that could contradict these aims.

In this connection, it was pointed out that by signing secret agreements on the involvement of West German firms and organizations in the U.S. SDI program, the West German Government has in fact embarked on the path of harnessing the country's industrial, scientific, and technological potential to implement the dangerous U.S. plans to militarize space.

The West German Government thus is assuming grave responsibility for the escalation of the nuclear arms race and the continued heightening of world tension. It was said that this line taken by the FRG, as well as its participation in the disorganizing activities of NATO agencies in the field of trade with the East, cannot but burden the FRG's relations with the Soviet Union.

Setting forth the position of the West German Government on SDI, Martin Bangemann claimed that the agreements signed in Washington are not of a military nature.

During the meeting, opinions were exchanged on economic, scientific, and technological relations between the USSR and the FRG. Martin Bangemann showed interest in prospects for the economic and social development of the USSR in the new 5-year plan and in the period ending in the year 2000 as well as in the possibilities opening up in this connection for West German business circles.

The sides spoke positively of the work done by the USSR-FRG Commission for Economic, Scientific, and Technological Cooperation. An opinion was expressed that the results of the latest commission session can serve a stimulus to increasing the effectiveness of Soviet-West German business relations, upgrading their forms and making them more diverse and dynamic. This is only possible, however, on condition of respect for the principles of equality and mutual benefit and the inadmissibility of any discrimination and restrictions in trade.

In conclusion, Nikolay Ryzhkov pointed out a readiness for cooperation with the FRG in various fields. It was emphasized that achieving mutual understanding on security issues, which have been and remain decisive for the situation in the world and in Europe, is of key significance to the future of prospects for the development of relations between the USSR and the FRG.

Taking part in the conversation, which passed in a businesslike atmosphere, were the following: On the Soviet side -- A.K. Antonov, deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers; Minister of Foreign Trade B.I. Aristov; and A.P. Bondarenko, chief of the USSR Foreign Ministry's third European section; on the West German side -- FRG Ambassador to the USSR J. Kastl and D. Vogel, press secretary at the FRG Ministry for Economics.

USSR AMBASSADOR CRITICIZES FRG SDI PARTICIPATION

LD091938 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1500 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Excerpts] The Soviet ambassador to Helsinki, V.M. Sobolev, explained the recent Soviet arms limitation proposals at a press conference today. Sobolev criticized the U.S. SDI plans saying that they could endanger the nuclear weapons balance and transfer the arms race into space, in which case it would be almost impossible to control.

Sobolev was asked, among other things, about his view of the West German Government's decision to permit FRG enterprises to participate in the U.S. SDI research.

Ambassador Sobolev said the decision of the FRG Government conflicts with the earlier statements by the country's leadership according to which never again will a threat to world peace and security originate from German soil.

FRG Minister for Economics Martin Bangemann recently signed an agreement in the United States on the participation of FRG enterprises in the star wars plans.

REPORTAGE ON CPSU DELEGATION ATTENDING PCI CONGRESS

LD081547 Moscow TASS in English 1614 GMT 8 Apr 86

[Text] Rome April 8 TASS -- Member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, member of the Presidium of the USSR Supreme Soviet Lev Zaykov today met with chairman of Italy's Council of Ministers Bettino Crazi. Lev Zaykov arrived in Italy to take part in the work of the 17th Congress of the Italian Communist Party.

The conversation passed in a businesslike and open atmosphere. A thorough exchange of opinions on questions of interests to both sides was held. Member of the CPSU Central Committee Vadim Zagladin and USSR Ambassador to Italy Nikolay Lunkov took part in the converstation.

CPSU Issues Statement

PM091342 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 9 Apr 86 First Edition p 3

[Text] Moscow, 9 Apr (TASS) -- The following is the text of a message of greetings from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU) to the delegations to the 17th Congress of the Italian Communist Party (PCI).

Dear Comrades:

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union ardently greets the delegates to the 17th Congress of the Italian Communist Party and all Italian Communists.

Your congress has begun its work in the conditions of a complex situation in the world. The beginning of an improvement in international relations is with difficulty winning its way in the fight against militarism and reaction. One has to struggle for peace persistently, daily, and with the application of all one's energies. The advocates of war, the cult of violence, and state terrorism do not intend to give up the plans aimed at achieving superiority and social revanche. They are preparing to make a new, irretrievable step: to militarize space.

The CPSU at its 27th Congress outlined an extensive program for the creation of an all-embracing system of international security.

The aim of the program is to eliminate weapons of mass destruction, to prevent a new world war, to elaborate a package of measures with a view to building trust between nations, and to maintain cooperation in the dissemination of the ideas of peace, disarmament, and international security. The CPSU is for peaceful coexistence to become the supreme universal principle of international relations. To enter the 21st century without nuclear and chemical weapons is a lofty goal that can be attained only through the joint efforts of all nations.

The CPSU firmly supports widening contacts with all those struggling against war and for international security. The party's general course is directed towards large-scale all-round cooperation for the sake of achieving success in the battle against nuclear war, success which if attained will be inscribed in golden letters in mankind's book of life.

The Soviet people are now tackling great tasks. The 27th CPSU Congress and the new edition of the program of the CPSU will enlist the efforts of Soviet Communists and all Soviet people for further all-round refinement of socialism and for an advance to communism.

The wish of the Italian Communists to strengthen friendly ties which have long existed between the CPSU -- the party of Lenin -- and the Italian Communist Party -- the party of Gramsci and Togliatti -- is highly appreciated in the Soviet Union. The striving expressed by the leaders of the CPSU and the PCI in January 1986 to develop constructive relatons between the two parties with full respect for the independence of each of them is of great importance.

The CPSU believes that the unity of communists has nothing in common with uniformity and hierarchy, with interference by some parties in the affairs of other ones, or with a desire of some party for monopoly on truth. The communists' real unity is in their struggle for common goals: peace and socialism.

The Communists in the Land of the Soviets greet the PCI activities which will benefit peace and oppose the threat of nuclear war. The PCI's stand on matters aimed at upholding peace is an important component of the development and strengthening of friendship and cooperation between the Soviet and Italian peoples.

We wish the Italian Communists further successes in the struggle for peace, for the vital interests of the working people of Italy, and for the country's development along the lines of democracy and social progress.

[Signed] The CPSU Central Committee

Zaykov Attends Opening

LD091650 Moscow TASS in English 1000 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Florence April 9 TASS -- The 17th Congress of the Italian Communist Party today opened in the Sports Palace in Florence. It is a significant event in the political life of the country. About one-third of the Italian voters cast their ballots for the Communists in elections. The Italian Communist Party stands for the vital interests of the mass of the working people and energetically protects them in Parliament. Communists control local bodies of government in many provinces of Italy. More than 1,000 delegates, representing over 1.5 million party members, have come for the congress. More than 100 delegations of different political parties from other countries and of national libaration movements have arrived for the congress. The delegation of the CPSU led by Lev Zaykov, a member of the Politbureau and secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, is in the grandstands for guests of honour along with other delegations. The congress, which will close on April 13, is taking place under the motto: "For a modern party of reform, for a program, for an alternative for Italy and for Europe."

COMMENTARY ON ITALIAN SDI INVOLVEMENT

PM081037 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 7 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Gennadiy Zafesov commentary: "In The Role of Underlings"]

[Text] Rome -- The Italian Government has now officially announced its intentions of joining in the U.S. "Strategic Defense Initiative" (SDI).

At a joint session of the Senate Foreign Affairs and Defense Committees, Minister of Foreign Affairs G. Andreotti, stated that "the moment has come to define, together with the United States, the framework within which Italian companies could take part in the research phase of SDI." Defense Minister G. Spadolini added that future cooperation "requires agreement at government level."

As though forseeing a negative reaction from the public, both ministers hurried to conceal the dangerous nature of the matter behind a screen of various stipulations. They tried to lull the Italians' concern with empty assertions, such as that "the research section of the ('star wars' -- G.Z.) program will not have a negative effect on the stability of the strategic equilibrium on a global scale."

A strange statement, it must be admitted. The leading Italian ministers, if anyone, should realize that the main aim of Washington's SDI is precisely to change in their favor the established approximate equilibrium of forces. And this, in turn, threatens to push the world toward a new spiral of the arms race, with unpredictable consequences.

Nor can the claims that Italy supposedly cannot miss the opportunity for "its industry to take part in scientific and technical cooperation" stand up to criticism.

First, the United States has so far displayed interest only in a few Italian projects. Second, as Carlos Rubia, the well-known Italian physicist and Nobel prizewinner, points out, the very idea that "progress in technology requires the development of new methods of destroying people" is absurd.

The government statement gave rise to sharp criticism. On behalf of the Italian Communist Party, Senator G. Procacci came out against space militarization plans.

Left-wing independent Senator E. Milani assessed the ministers' position as a de facto involvement in SDI, for which they are now trying to create a political basis.

Despite wide demands for the problem of participation in SDI to be taken beyond the bounds of the two Senate committees, the government is trying to prevent general parliamentary debates. It is clearly under pressure from its ally across the ocean and its own military monopolies.

Meanwhile the opposition to U.S. "star wars" plans is growing and not only in Italian parliamentary and political circles. The Italians, who not long ago were made to accept U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles on their territory, evidently do not want to become Washington's underlings in its new militarist venture.

U.S. ENCOURAGING DEVELOPMENT OF EUROPEAN 'STAR WARS'

LD072048 Moscow TASS in English 1632 GMT 7 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 7 TASS -- TASS political observer Alexy Grigoryev writes:

The ailment which can be described as a "military-political insanity" is growing progressively worse in certain political circles of the West. In addition to the plans for the sinister SDI programme whose implementation threatens the world with a catastrophe from space, a programme of "star wars" of a lesser scale, the so-called European Defence Initiative (EDI) is now started being developed on the banks of the Rhine and Thames, the Seine and Tibris, with the encouragement from Washington.

The EDI programme is publicised the loudest in the FRG. The West German Defence Minister Manfred Woerner is making the use for the purpose not only of the mass media in his own country but also of those abroad. Writing recently in the U.S. "STRATEGIC REVIEW" he called for the creation of anti-missile defence for Europe based on the use of more up-to-date equipment. According to him, the construction of units of anti-missile defence in Europe is necessitated by the "Soviet menace" and is required for the consolidation of the NATO alliance.

These arguments are nothing new, but then the reason for Bonn's particular activity in the matter is not new either. In the fifties, the FRG ruling circles were explaining their attempt to equip the Bundeswehr with nuclear weapons by the striving for "military-strategic equality" with partners in NATO. Nowadays they try to get hold of nuclear weapons via the "space bridge", through involving West German firms in the implementation of SDI.

The secret agreements to this effect between the Governments of the USA and the FRG apparently far from satisfied the hopes of the Bavarian and Rhine war industry concerns for a sizeable slice of the space pie since the White House and the Pentagon clearly view the SDI as a street with one-way traffic, for the brain drain and the pumping of the latest technology from Western Europe.

This is why they in Bonn, Paris, London, and Rome clutch at the West European space programme. And they laud it in the same words as the U.S. SDI. They hammer away that the programme has exclusively "defensive" nature, that it is called upon to prevent the turning of Europe into a zone of decreased security after the "SDI covers the USA by an impenetrable shield".

But the replacement of the title "SDI" with "EDI" will not help to prove what is impossible to prove. While they in Washington make assurances that the creation of space arms will make nuclear arms "impotent", Moscow believes that it is reasonable and safe simply to destroy the existing armaments and not to create new ones. While they in Bonn think that the implementation of EDI will protect U.S. first-strike nulcear weapons ("Pershing-2" and cruise missiles) deployed in the FRG territory, it is asked in Moscow: Is it not simpler to accept the Soviet proposal and rid entire Europe of nuclear arms and chemical weapons?

Emergence of new generations of anti-missile weapons in Western Europe will become a serious destabilising factor in the military-strategic balance of forces, will lead to the erosion of international agreements arresting the arms race. The U.S. "WALL STREET JOURNAL" makes this admission and a TASS observer cannot but get along with such a conclusion.

Bogachev Comments

[Text] Moscow April 5 TASS -- TASS military news analyst Vladimir Bogachev writes: In the NATO capitals they are increasingly claiming what they call the "inevitable" need for Europe to have a large-scale ground- and space-based antimissile defense of its own.

Industrial monopolies in a number of West European countries, mostly those which have already agreed to join efforts with the United States in the "star wars" project, are developing air-borne ABM systems with electronic-optic and other guidance aids for antimissile missiles and doing research into rail ground and ground-based lasers as a defense against missiles.

The name for the plan to militarize outer space above Western Europe has already been invented. It is "the European Defense Initiative" (EDI). The advocates of various plans for an ABM defense for West Germany, France and Britain are trying to "justify" them by arguing that the United States has finally set course to outer space militarization and Western Europe should not stay outside the process. Public discussions are under way on the advantages of building a "purely European" antimissiles defense which would allegedly make it possible to preserve the West European countries' independence from Washington.

But there can be no question of independence for the West European NATO countries in the event of their building an ABM system of their own. The EDI fits in fully with the U.S. "star wars" plans and will only make it possible to tie Western Europe even more securely to the U.S. plans to militarize outer space at the expense of West Europeans themselves.

The EDI will be another illusory but dangerous attempt to protect the U.S. Pershings and cruise missiles in the European theater of operations against retaliation in case the United States launches a "limited" nuclear war.

The argument of ensuring West European independence through the EDI is all bluff serving U.S. selfish ends in the continent.

It is only recently that the leaders of the two West European nuclear powers, Britain and France, were arguing with ardor that the construction of large-scale ABM defenses first in the United States and then in the USSR would reduce the significance of their own "limited strategic offensive forces" to nil.

In Paris and London alike they were declaring that this contradicted the national interests of their countries and they would press strongly for the United States to comply with the Soviet-U.S. ABM Treaty of 1972.

Now the NATO countries' governments have, obviously under, U.S. pressure, "forgotten" those arguments. The EDI supporters are contending that after the realization of the U.S. "star wars" program and the reply measures by the Soviet Union Western Europe "will be left defenseless" and "become a zone of diminished security" and that for this reason insted of limiting the ABM defenses of the USSR and the United States it is necessary to deploy them on a large scale, including in Western Europe. If the leaders of the European NATO countries are really concerned about security problems, wouldn't it be more logical for them to join efforts for keeping outer space peaceful, for eliminating medium-range nuclear weapons in the European zone and excluding nuclear weapons from the life of mankind?

SWEDEN, FINLAND FAVOR NUCLEAR WEAPONS-FREE NORTH

[Text] Helsinki April 9 TASS -- Sweden and Finland actively come out in favour of disarmament and consider it the main and urgent task now to achieve a total ban on nuclear tests. This was emphasised during the official visit to Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson to Finland.

The two sides pointed out the coincidence of views in the field of international politics, and, in particular, on the importance of establishing a nuclear-free zone in the north of Europe. The pooling of the two countries' resources meets their interests and the interests of all Nordic countries, points out "SUOMEN SOSIALIDEMOKRAATTI".

At a press conference here, Ingvar Carlsson pointed out the betterment of relations between Sweden and the Soviet Union and expressed hope that his forthcoming visit to the USSR would serve to further broaden the contacts.

PCF STATEMENT SCORES GOVERNMENT ECONOMIC MEASURES

LD091817 Moscow TASS in English 1147 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Paris April 9 TASS -- The economic measures announced by the new right-wing majority government were dealing a blow at France's working people and further worsening their position, the Political Bureau of the French Communist Party [PCF] stressed in its statement, published here today. The French economy would be further deteriorated by the conducted devalutation of the franc, while ensuring economic measures would pave the way for another powerful offensive on the rights, interests and social gains of the working class, the statement said.

The new government's course was playing into the hands of the employers. It was directed at laying the burden of the current economic crisis on the shoulders of the working people, the statement pointed out. It was threatening new mass layouts, curtailed production and reduced employment. At the same time, controls over the exports of capital were lifted, enabling financial barons to reap enormous profits, the statement emphasised. The plans to privatise the state economic sector were of immense danger to the country.

In the current conditions, with the right-wing majority government in power and the threat of worsening of the country's economic situation enhanced, the French Communist Party called for closer unity among all communists, all working people, and for more vigorous struggle in defence of their inalienable rights and interests.

KATUSHEV GIVES GORBACHEV MESSAGE TO AL-QADHDHAFI

LD090516 Moscow TASS in English 0510 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 9 TASS -- The leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi received the government delegation of the U.S.S.R. led by Konstantin Katushev, chairman of the U.S.S.R. State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations and members of the CPSU Central Committee, now staying here on a visit. At the meeting, which passed in a friendly atmosphere, the sides discussed questions pertaining to a further development of bilateral ties in the light of the long-term programme for the economic, scientific, technological and trade cooperation between the U.S.S. R. and the Libyan Jamahiriyah, signed by the General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev and the leader of the Libyan Revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. The head of the Soviet delegation handed over to Mu'ammar al-Gadhdhafi a message from the General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev.

AL-QADHDHAFI: U.S. SEEKS PRETEXT FOR AGGRESSION

[Text] Tripoli April 10 TASS -- The leader of the Libyan revolution, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, has strongly rebuffed U.S. attempts to accuse his country of recent acts of terrorism in West European countries.

Speaking at a news conference here, he said those charges represent a bid to find an excuse for aggression against a sovereign nation. Washington is out to force an Arab nation to its knees with the help of the Israeli military, Al-Qadhdhafi said, adding that Libya is determined to uphold its independence. The (?Libyan) leader said talks with Washington are possible only if the United States abandons its policy of state-sponsored terrorism.

Speaking of U.S. attempts at pressure on West European countries to join its economic sanctions against Libya, he said the U.S. Administration is doing this to sacrifice the interests of these countries to its own selfish ends.

JANA news agency reported that Al-Qadhdhafi held a conference with the commanders of Libyan ground, naval, air and air defense forces to work out plans for countering U.S. threats. The conference was also attended by members of Libya's revolutionary leadership.

Al-Qadhdhafi Supports USSR Proposals

[Text] Tripoli April 9 TASS -- Libya wholly supports the initiative of General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev which envisages simultaneous withdrawal of the Soviet and U.S. fleets from the Mediterranean, leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi said at a press conference here answering a question from a TASS correspondent. This proposal attests convincingly to the Soviet Union's peaceful intentions, its sincere striving to avert the danger of outbreak of wars on earth, he said. Together with all peoples of the region we support this initiative and we shall be striving for its implementation, he said.

Unlike the Soviet Union, the U.S. Administration has assumed a clearly irresponsible stand with regard to destinies of peace, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi said. The refusal to support the Soviet initiative shows again that Washington's imperialist aims contradict the cause of establishing world peace. The United States' unwillingness to withdraw its fleet from the Mediterranean is explained also by its striving to threaten Arab countries constantly and ensure by military force the protection of its ally, Israel.

LIBYA SUPPORTS GORBACHEV PEACE PROPOSALS

LD091049 Moscow TASS in English 0725 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 9 TASS -- TASS correspondent Georgiy Shelenkov reporting.

The Libyan public welcomes the new Soviet initiative set forth by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, the initiative that provides for a Soviet-American summit meeting in order to duscuss the issue of ending nuclear tests, said a statement circulated here by Libya's National Committee for Solidarity and Peace.

People in the Libyan Jamahiriyah, the statement said further, also received with satisfaction another proposal put forward by the Soviet leader who expressed the Soviet Union's readiness to withdraw its naval ships from the Mediterranean if the United States pulled out its Navy from there.

The new Soviet peace proposals, the statement said, accord with the hopes and aspirations of all freedom loving nations of the world, including the nations in our region that are striving to turn the Mediterranean into a zone of peace, security and international cooperation, a zone free from foreign bases and naval fleets.

As to Washingotn, its negative reaction to these initiatives as well as to other Soviet proposals called upon to strengthen peace the world over and curb the arms race, again demonstrated to the international public the aggressive and terrorist nature of U.S. imperialism. It is the White House that is responsible for the sharp aggravation of tensions in the world of late.

The Libyan committee for solidarity and peace urged all other solidarity committees, all peaceloving people on earth support the new Soviet peace proposals and to take urgent measures for their realization.

POLYAKOV, EGYPT'S AL-BAZ HOLD TALKS IN CAIRO

LD091405 Moscow TASS in English 1350 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Cairo April 9 TASS -- Representatives of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R. and the Arab Republic of Egypt held consultations here April 6 and 7 on the situation in the Middle East and on questions pertaining to Mid-Eastern settlement.

Taking part in the consultations from the Soviet side were V.P. Polyakov, a member of the Collegium of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R., head of the Department of Middle East Countries of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R., and A.M. Belonogov, ambassador of the U.S.S.R. to Egypt, and from the Egyptian side -- Usamah al-Baz, head of the Political Office of the president, first deputy minister of foreign affairs of Egypt and Hasan Qandil, head of a department of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Egypt.

Soviet representatives also had meetings with Ahmad 'Ismat 'Abd al-Majid, minister of foreign affairs of Egypt, and Butrus Butrus Ghali, Egypt's minister of state for foreign affairs.

EGYPT NEGOTIATES TWO TRADE ACCORDS IN MOSCOW

PM030947 Cairo AL-AHRAM International Edition in Arabic 2 Apr 86 p 1

['Abd al-Malik Khalil report: "Two Trade Agreements With Moscow"]

[Text] Moscow -- The second round of talks held by the Egyptian delegation in Moscow have led to two trade agreements. The first is to be signed in May and will cover the period up to 1900 and the second concerns the current year [as published]. This is in addition to laying down the basis for economic cooperation between Egypt and the Soviet Union.

It was decided to hold a third round of talks between the two countries in Cairo in order to settle some pending matters. The talks were attended by Egyptian Ambassador in Moscow Salah al-din Basyuni.

The Egyptian delegation, headed by Minister of Economy and Foreign Trade Dr Sultan Abu 'Ali and the Soviet delegation, headed by First Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers Ivan Arkhipov, issued a joint statement asserting the need to develop relations between the two countries within the framework of the traditional friendship between them.

Dr Sultan Abu 'Ali last Wednesday began talks with the chairman of the Soviet Coucil of State [as published], the Director of Gosbank, and senior officials at the Ministry of Trade.

TASS NOTES ANNIVERSARY OF USSR-IRAQI TREATY

LD081642 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1010 GMT 8 Apr 86

[By TASS correspondent Andrey Ostalskiy]

[Text] Baghdad, 8 Apr (TASS) -- On 9 April the peoples of the USSR and Iraq mark the 14th anniversary of the signing of their friendship and cooperation treaty. This document formed a firm basis and guarantee for the unswerving development of friendly relations between the USSR and Iraq. The years since then have shown that Soviet-Iraqi cooperation in various spheres is in the fundamental interests of the Soviet and Iraqi peoples, and makes a positive contribution to the struggle of the progressive forces to strengthen international peace and security.

Economic, scientific-technical, and cultural cooperation between the two countries is developing rapidly, and mutually beneficial trade ties are growing stronger. The visit to the USSR by Saddam Husayn, chairman of the Revolution Command Council and president of the Republic of Iraq, in December last year made a considerable contribution to strengthening Soviet-Iraqi relations.

The friendship and cooperation treaty laid a firm foundation for friendly relations over many years, built on mutual respect, equal rights, and noninterference in each other's internal affairs, 'Abd al-Fattah Amin, chairman of the Iraqi Union of Societies for Friendship with Peoples said to a TASS correspondent. He said that Iraq, like other Arab countries, thinks highly of the USSR's friendly position with respect to the just cause of the Arab peoples and of its support for the Palestinians' struggle for the restoration of their legitimate rights.

Supreme Soviet Cables Saddam

PM081336 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 8 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 1

[TASS report: "Exchange of Telegrams"]

[Text] The USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium and the USSR Council of Ministers sent a telegram to S. Husayn, chairman of the Revolution Command Council and president of the Republic of Iraq, conveying to him and to the friendly Iraqi people greetings and best wishes on the 14th anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation between the Soviet Union and the Republic of Iraq.

The telegram expresses confidence that the fruitful cooperation between the Soviet Union and Iraq will continue to develop further for the benefit of both peoples in the interests of peace and the just political settlement of regional conflicts.

A telegram sent by S. Husayn to the Soviet leadership on the same occasion conveys warmest greetings and best wishes to the friendly Soviet people.

We take this opportunity, the telegram says, to affirm our determination to strengthen and develop the relations of friendship and cooperation between our countries.

We are firmly convinced that these relations, based on mutual respect and our peoples' common interests, will help affirm the principles of peace and friendship in our region and throughout the world.

SOVIET ENVOY IN BEIRUT ON LEBANON, MIDEAST ISSUES

NC091246 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 1130 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Prime Minister Rashid Karami met with Soviet Ambassador Aleksandr Soldatov this morning. The ambassador has returned to Lebanon after a 6-month absence. Soviet Charge d'Affaires Yuriy Suslikov was also present, and the conferees reviewed current developments in Lebanon and the region.

Following the meeting, Soldatov declined to answer a question on the USSR's agreement to fund UN forces in the south. He said: We have made our position known regarding an independent and united Lebanon. The Lebanese should decide their own future. He added that the talks touched on conditions in the region.

Responding to a question on Soviet moves in relation to the situation in Lebanon and the region in light of the current U.S. activity, Soldatov said: We have a permanent initiative. We presented our opinion on the Middle East issue in September 1982. We also support the initiative launched by the nonaligned countries in Malta this year.

Continuing, the Soviet ambassador noted: We reject the policy of aggression in the Middle East and Israel's acts of aggression against Lebanon. We back the efforts made by the Arab states to strengthen their defenses against those countries that are attacking them. We hope that the PLO will reach its objectives in the near future and establish an independent Palestinian state. We are working for the PLO's unity. Soldatov denied reports that the Soviet Embassy would be moving from its present location.

On the papal initative, the Soviet envoy stated: I can describe it as humanitarian and ethical.

FLN POLITBURO APPROVES BENDJEDID USSR VISIT

PM081318 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 8 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[TASS report: "High Appraisal"]

[Text] Algiers, 7 Apr -- The National Liberation Front [FLN] Party Politburo has approved the results of the official friendly visit to the USSR by C. Bendjedid, president of the Democratic and Popular Republic of Algeria and general secretary of the FLN Party.

The session emphasized the particular importance of this visit and highly appraised the political talks held during the visit and the USSR-Algerian documents that were signed. The Politburo, the communique carried by APS says, points out that the results of the visit are yet further confirmation of the development of friendly Algerian-Soviet relations.

The Politburo examined the measures taken by Algeria's leadership to combat the negative consequences of the world economic crisis. It expressed confidence that the Algerian people, as they ahve repeatedly proved in the past, will ensure the defense of socioeconomic gains and the country's advance along the path of progress.

The participants in the session also examined a number of other questions of Algeria's domestic and foreign policy.

PRAVDA SEES IMPROVED SITUATION IN PDRY

[Text] Aden, 8 Apr -- Social and economic life is noticeably livelier in Democratic Yemen. Industrial enterprises destroyed during the January events are again becoming operational.

The working people are expressing support for the policy of the Yemeni Socialist Party and are striving to make their contribution to the speediest commissioning of national economic projects.

The further stabilization of the situation in the country is also promoted by the general amnesty announced by the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen Supreme People's Council Presidium.

FURTHER ANALYSIS OF SHIM'ON PERES' U.S. VISIT

PM080826 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 5 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Article by Vladimir Peresada: "Behind the Scenes Intrigue"]

[Text] Israeli Prime Minister S. Peres has made a trip to the United States. He held talks with high-ranking representatives of the American Administration, including Vice President G. Bush, who has himself now set off on a tour of the Near East.

In the course of the talks, as was to be expected, total unanimity between Washington and its "strategic ally" in the Near East was once again apparent. Thus, during a discussion of "regional security" problems Peres unreservedly supported the piratical actions of the U.S. 6th Fleet against sovereign Libya, terming these actions "timely and necessary."

Not only verbal "approval" of American aggression lies behind this stance. As Tripoli radio reported, there is information that the question of practical assistance which Israel could give the United States in subsequent aggressive attacks on Libya was also discussed in secret. In his turn Peres put forward a plan for the financial enslavement of the Near East by Western monopolist capital. Referring to the economic difficulties suffered by a number of states in the region, he proposed setting up a multibillion dollar "aid" fund for these countries, in which the United States, its closest allies, and also international financial organizations under U.S. control would participate.

The point of this idea is to try to tempt with financial handouts certain Arab states in addition to Israel, which is so generously subsidized by Washington. New guarantees for the "peace process" in the Near East would thereby be ensured, Peres said. In other words, it is designed to incline Arab countries toward versions of a Near East settlement that suit Washington and Tel Aviv. It is no accident, as the Israeli press reports, that those across the ocean adopted an understanding attitude toward the expensive but tempting venture of a "Near East Marshall Plan."

On the eve of Peres' trip, Western, including American, newspapers wrote that the question of Israeli participation in the American "star wars" program would be discussed during the talks in Washington. However, not a word has been said about this since the conclusion of the visit. The deathly silence maintained by both sides in connection with Tel Aviv's possilbe involvement in Reagan's "Strategic Defense Initiative," as the press notes, merely confirms the worst suspicions that accords in principle reached earlier have now simply been made secret.

Peres' visit has thereby confirmed the now immutable rule that trips across the ocean by Israel's leaders are invariably connected with behind the scenes machinations directed against the peoples of the Near East and with strengthening the U.S.-Israel military and political axis.

U.S., ISRAEL HOLD TALKS ON SETTING UP NAVAL STRIKE FORCE

[Text] The United States and Israel are holding intensive talks on setting up an Israeli naval strike force in the next few years. Our correspondent in Damascus, Kazbek Basiyev, reports:

This report has given rise to serious alarm in the Arab countries, particularly after the latest events off the shores of Libya, where the United States essentially unleashed armed aggression against this independent, sovereign Arab state. As the Syrain newspapers write, if the Israeli naval forces are given additional submarines and modern missile carriers, as provided for by the future U.S.-Israeli agreement, it may lead to a sharp exacerbation of the situation in the region. Such a viewpoint, observers in Damascus point out, has a very serious foundation in view of the fact that the U.S.-Israeli agreement also provides for close coordination of action between the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean and the future Israeli naval strike force. The Arab peoples know all too well what that coordination might be.

["Comrade M.S. Gorbachev's Speech at a Meeting With Working People of Tolyatti City" — PRAVDA headline]

[Text] Dear comrades!

I am sincerely glad to meet with you. On behalf of the party Central Committee I cordially greet the workers of the Volga Automobile Plant [VAZ] and representatives of Tolyatti's other labor collectives and all inhabitants of this major industrial center of the country.

Yesterday in Kuybyshev and here in Tolyatti I have had many brief but interesting and very useful meetings with workers, specialists, and leading workers. The main theme of the conversations, as you can understand, was the results of the 27th CPSU Congress. There was a thorough discussion of the importance for the life of the country of the decisions taken at the Communists' forum and their importance not only for our country but also for the development of the world situation. At my meeting with you I would like to continue to talk about the party congress. It took place at a cordial stage in the history of the development of the country and the socialist community, and indeed of the world as a whole. The party was faced with a difficult task — giving answers to the most burning problems which worry Soviet people and the entire world community.

Now that a month has elapsed I think we have every grounds for saying once again that the 27th congress took place successfully and fulfilled its mission. All its work and its open discussion — permeated with a sense of responsibility — of topical problems of the present day and the documents it adopted have generated enormous interest within our party, the country, and abroad.

The CPSU and the entire people are now faced with a task of historic importance — implementing the party congress' designs. We will act all the more successfully the better we assimilate, consider, and, as they say, process through our minds and hearts everything said at the congress and embodied in its decisions.

But first of all I would like to say:

Why Was Such a Congress Precisely What We Needed?

The answer to this question is linked to a considerable extent with the assessment both of our achievements and of the problems which have faced society in recent years. I think, Comrades, there is no need to go into a detailed description of the enormous transformations which have been effected over the years of Soviet power. They are of a truly revolutionary nature. The Soviet people's achievements are an undisputed fact of world history.

The country's tremendous economic and scientific-technical potential, great social gains, and impressive achievements in the spiritual sphere and its socialist way of life — all this is our present-day reality and belongs to the entire people. This is what has taken our country to leading positions in world development and conditioned the Soviet state's important role in the destiny of the development of today's civilization. Soviet people can deservedly take pride in this, because this is the greatest monument to the revolutionary creation, inspired labor, staunchness, and devotion to socialism of all generations of our country.

At the congress we summed up the results of the past 25 years. In this time qualitative changes have taken place in productive forces and in the social and spiritual spheres of society's development. The Soviet Union has achieved military-strategic parity, which has substantially restricted imperialism's aggressive plans and opportunities for unleashing nuclear war.

All this, comrades, was assessed at its worth at the congress. I shall say more: Without this it would have been impossible to put forward the majestic but realistic plans for the acceleration of the country's socioeconomic development or to set the tasks which in terms of their scale surpass everything we have had to accomplish in the past. And the need to accelerate socioeconomic development is an urgent and immediate task which has now confronted the country, party, and entire people in all its magnitude.

Why did the question have to be put in precisely this way? This has already been mentioned at the congress, but it is worth repeating today. The point is, comrades, that alongside our enormous achievements, a noticeable laggardness in the development of the economy has manifested itself in recent years. I have in mind [development] rates, labor productivity, efficiency indicators, and the slow assimilation of the achievements of scientific and technical progress. We have begun to lose the dynamism which has been characteristic of the Soviet economy throughout its development and which is the basis of our society's enormous achievements in a brief historical period.

M.S. Gorbachev stressed that the situation in the economy has also affected the social sphere. For us it is ultimately the main thing, he said, because it is here that the supreme goals and values of socialism as a social system are realized and the humanism and democracy of the socialist way of life are manifested most broadly.

The negative processes which revealed themselves in the distribution sphere generated great concern in the party and among the people. This was manifested in the leveling-out tendencies in the remuneration of labor, which did not comply with the demands of the basic principle of socialism: From each according to his abilities, to each according to his labor. The incomes of some people considerably exceeded their labor contribution. And that is intolerable in a socialist society not only for economic but also for moral reasons.

The congress stated, and I want to repeat it today, that in recent years we have lacked purposefulness in our practical actions.

All these processes remained without due consideration because of grave shortcomings in the activity of party and state organs and many cadres. There was a slackening in the management of the economy and the social sphere. Attitudes of indifference, complacency, and lack of exactingness spread. The lack of broad publicity, criticism and self-criticism, and effective control made it impossible to reveal negative phenomena promptly, to raise painful problems in a pointed manner, and to struggle resolutely against everything impeding our headway and barring the way to everything new and progressive.

All this, comrades, we have seen and experienced. The understanding ripened among the party and people of the need for a sharp turn, for improvements and vigorous practical actions. It is this understanding of the situation which led us to the conclusions stated out loud a year ago at the CPSU Central Committee April Plenum. It was then that the first major step was taken in the critical analysis of the state of affairs, that a party assessment of the situation was given, and the foundations were formulated for a long-term political strategy whose linchpin was the course toward the acceleration of the country's socioeconomic development.

The decisions of the Central Committee April Plenum opened up new horizons before society. They created conditions for a bold quest, correct conclusions, the overcoming of formalism and bureaucracy, and the development of working people's initiative in implementing the tasks posed by life.

The atmosphere of exactingness and demandingness, criticism and self-criticism, and open discussion of all urgent problems in society prepared the ground for the further in-depth analysis and serious theoretical generalizations and principled decisions which were characteristic of the precongress report-and-election campaign and the entire work of the congress.

The 27th CPSU Congress Was a Congress of Strategic Decisions

I think that the party and people were right to call it a congress of strategic decisions. It confirmed and further developed the party's general line — the line toward the acceleration of the country's socioeconomic development and the safeguarding of peace on earth. It approved the new edition of the CPSU Program and gave theoretical substantiation for the paths of Soviet society's development for the historical long term.

The Basic Guidelines for the country's economic and social development for the 12th 5-Year Plan and through the year 2000, M.S. Gorbachev continued, concretized the party's social and economic strategy and defined the main tasks of the present stage of socialist building and the struggle for communism. The 27th congress gave a profound scientific analysis of the contemporary picture of the world and put forward an extensive and constructive program of struggle for peace and for the creation of an all-encompassing system of international security.

In general, comrades, we will not be wrong if we say that the congress answered the most fundamental questions of the times. Decisions were taken which will determine the nature of our work for many years. The implementation of the party congress decisions will ensure the implementation of the urgent economic, social, and cultural tasks of Soviet society and will take the country to qualitatively new heights.

To emphasize the magnitude of the changes connected with the fulfillment of the congress decisions, I want to say once again that over the next 15 years we must do as much as has been done in nearly 70 years of Soviet power. Via the path of scientific-technical progress we must double the production potential and increase labor productivity 130-150 percent in order on this basis to raise the people's well-being to a new level by channeling into it twice the resources we are allocating now.

We must impart greater development dynamism to all spheres of Soviet society's life. I have in mind our economy, the social and spiritual sphere, and the political system. These enormous tasks presuppose the maximum use of the socialist system's potential and the people's social activeness.

The Main Thing Today Is To Persistently Implement the Congress Decisions

We can be well satisfied, comrades, with the results of the congress, for the party was able to express life's immediate preoccupations and what the people feel. There was tremendous interest in and ardent support for the results in the party and in Soviet society generally. The main task now is to convert the energy of our designs into the energy of practical action. This is the crux of the matter.

It is very important here to understand a simple and very important relationship. All the decisions are geared to the satisfaction of Soviet people's fundamental interests. But a vast amount of work and a persistent struggle by every collective and every Soviet person to implement the party congress decisions are needed in order to ensure that they bear fruit for the whole of society.

Creative labor, a high degree of organization and discipline, and maximum effort in every area of the national economy by everyone — worker and peasant, engineer, scientist, management personnel, workers in party, soviet, and economic bodies, everyone without exception — these are the chief condition of the implementation of the party's plans and congress decisions. I believe the majority of Soviet people are well aware of this.

What should be placed at the top of the list?

We must begin by restructuring thinking and attitudes, organization, and work style and methods. Frankly, if we do not reorganize ourselves, I am firmly convinced that we will not reorganize the economy or our social life in the spirit of the congress decisions. Then we would not be able to cope with tasks whose scale and novelty are unprecedented.

Restructuring must take place in every workplace, in every labor collective, in management bodies, in party and state bodies, including the Politburo and the government. And in every case it presupposes that everyone will do his job honestly and conscientiously, with the utmost effort, and utilizing all his knowledge.

As for the production worker, he must ensure discipline and organization in work, high productivity, and quality products, take care of whatever has been placed in his charge, and make economical use of resources. If we are talking about an engineer or scientist, he must make the maximum contribution to the development of scientific and technical progress and to the revamping of the national economy on the basis of scientific and technical achievements. As for management personnel, their obligation and immediate duty is to ensure widespread utilization of the new management methods and prompt solution of all questions on which end results and economic efficiency depend.

It must be said that party and soviet bodies now face new conditions. They must make sure that they use their authority and influence to effect the transition to progressive work methods everywhere.

To bring to a conclusion this part of the discussion on the need for a thorough, comprehensive restructuring, I wanted to stress the main point: We will definitely manage it if we cease to cling to the old, outdated ways, to what we have become accustomed to and feel comfortable with. It must be an axiom for everyone that new tasks cannot be solved by old methods and approaches. And it is equally important to begin our restructuring by restructuring the individual himself. It is necessary to identify and distinguish very clearly those who really have started to reorganize themselves, who maybe occasionally slip up or make mistakes, but who are searching and backing the cause, and those who are merely following the new trend without actually changing anything.

Incidentally, disagreement with our path of fundamentally restructuring all spheres of society's life is now seldom heard. I will go further than that: The vast majority of people sincerely believe that the time for change really has come. But declarations of support for the party's plans are no longer enough. Action is needed to implement them. We must work in the new way.

Perhaps some people are thinking: The congress is over, the decisions have been made, and now everything will go back into the old routine. But where does the old routine lead, Comrades? Certainly not where the congress decisions want to go. It is necessary to reorganize as quickly as possible and assimilate new methods and new approaches in work. If we were to follow the old routine, we would not be able to expect successful fulfillment of the tasks outlined by the party.

I have deliberately dwelt in detail on questions pertaining to the restructuring of our thinking and of our attitude toward the job at the initial stage of the struggle to implement the congress decisions. And this is why: I am confident that if we reorganize and start to operate in the new way, then even with the present scientific and technical potential we will accelerate economic development and, consequently, we will be able to successfully solve social questions as well.

Of course, comrades, what I have said by no means signifies that we are doing everything in the old way. No, restructuring is under way. We can see a change in people's attitudes to things. But I want to stress that the main work lies ahead.

People have understood the congress well and are responding to its decisions through their labor. Fulfillment of the 1986 plan will be the first serious test and labor collectives' concrete response to the congress decisions. At the moment we can say that by and large the year has started well in the national economy. There have been marked advances in the key industrial sectors, above all in machine building, metallurgy, and the gas industry. Coal industry workers finished the first quarter with good results. I want to make a special mention of this because in recent years this sector has lagged noticeably behind. Overall, the increase in industrial output was 6.7 percent in the first 3 months. In agriculture purchases of livestock and poultry have increased by 7.6 percent and purchases of milk and eggs have increased by 6 percent compared with last year.

But I will say right away that we must not get carried away by the first quarter's results. If we take industry, the high indicators for the rate of growth can be explained to some extent by the low base of the first quarter of last year. It is the most difficult stage in agriculture at the moment — completion of the livestock wintering period, with sowing operations getting under way. The results not only of the half-year but of the whole year will depend to a considerable extent on how these are completed. Such problems as deliveries in accordance with contracts, output quality, and smooth operation of enterprises remain acute. Broadly speaking, the correct procedure is that we must increase our efforts month by month and quarter by quarter in order to fulfill and surpass the set targets for the first year of the 12th 5-Year Plan.

We are talking to working people in industry and agriculture, construction and transport, the services sphere and science, to all working people in the country: Everyone, in his work, must fulfill the targets conscientiously, to a high standard, and with full appreciation of his responsibility for the common cause. It is a vital necessity and patriotic duty for working people in all sectors and regions to achieve the highest possible targets this year.

I want to highlight the question of the significance of the 12th 5-Year Plan in the struggle to implement the economic strategy. The current 5-year plan is the most complex and in many respects the most crucial of the three 5-year plans between now and the end of the century. It must lay a solid foundation for production intensification on the basis of scientific and technical progress and establish a springboard for subsequent, swifter progress in all areas of economic and social development.

As you well appreciate, we do not have a magic wand which can make the requisite machinery, equipment, and instruments appear in an instant. A great deal still has to be designed and manufactured. The country has only just embarked on the reconstruction of very important national economic sectors. It will undoubtedly be done, but it will take time.

What will ensure real acceleration in these conditions? Above all, the available reserves must be exploited. I am referring to the country's existing production and scientific potential. This is the main thing now.

With present resources it is possible to produce considerably more better-quality products on the established production base in industry and in capital construction, on kolkhozes and sovkhozes, and in the services sphere. These are not just words consisting of nothing other than a wish to do more and better. No, comrades. Thousands of labor collectives in all economic spheres are now tackling their tasks in this very way.

In this connection I want to note the tremendous importance of the VAZ labor collective's initiative. Your pledges to build up production volumes while reducing the number of workers and cutting back on metal and energy expenditure are intensification and efficiency in practice. We are counting on every collective to display such an approach, comrades!

I must say that your initiative promises good results at the very first stage of its implementation. In machine building as a whole, for instance, there are opportunities for additionally increasing production output by R1.5 billion over the 5-year period, mostly on the same capacities and basically by using saved materials.

It is well known that the country's light industry is experiencing a shortage of raw material resources. The Kursk leather production association has by its own efforts manufactured production equipment which has made it possible to organize the comprehensive processing of waste and make full use of all raw material. The introduction of this method at the country's leather enterprises promises an annual saving of 4,000 metric tons of leather raw material, which will make it possible to produce about 2.5 million more pairs of shoes. This technology has generated great interest and has been patented in a number of countries.

Great reserves are concealed in the acceleration of the commissioning of production capacities. This is borne out by the experience of the Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry's "Vatra" association named for the 60th anniversary of the Soviet Ukraine. Major capacities for the production of illumination engineering items worth R7 million a year were started up here in 2 months instead of the standard 18 months.

The quest for reserves is now under way everywhere in cities and villages. It is being persistently pursued by the workers of the agro-industrial complex. Here, too, considerable experience of the efficient use of production resources has been accumulated. For instance, take Estonia's kolkhozes and sovkhozes. Here specific expenditure norms for gasoline are 22 percent lower and for diesel fuel 29 percent lower than in the country as a whole.

How is this achieved? By the efficient use of agricultural equipment and the maintenance of good order in the storage and consumption of petroleum products. But what importance does this have on the scale of the whole country? If all kolkhozes and sovkhozes were to attain these indicators it would produce an annual saving of about 9 million metric tons of liquid fuel.

That is the direction in which work must be continued, comrades.

Again I want to return to the idea that the traditional approach to matters does not produce the necessary effect, that we must reorganize. Of course, people's initiative and creative quest from below must be backed up by the necessary decisions and support from above. Merging these two movements means sharply enhancing the efficiency of our work. That is well understood within the party's Central Committee and the government. And major measures are being taken to solve the questions which have arisen.

Inasmuch as the acceleration of socioeconomic development is very closely linked with scientific and technical progress, the CPSU Central Committee and the government have outlined a program for the new reconstruction of the national economy. To this end the preferential development of the sectors which determine scientific and technical progress is being ensured. This applies primarily to machine building, metallurgy, the chemical industry, and computer and microprocessor hardware.

To achieve rapid success we must raise the efficiency of capital construction and put an end to protracted construction work. What is being done for this purpose? The approach to planning is being changed. The plans will include as many projects as the construction base allows with a view to ensuring their commissioning within the normative periods. All planning matters are being resolutely reviewed from the viewpoint of the efficiency and quality of construction and in accordance with the tasks of scientific and technical progress. A resolution has been adopted on modernizing the construction base in order to switch the entire construction complex to industrial methods.

We have an enormous scientific potential. And our task is to make effective use of it. To this end the process of forming science and production associations, intersectorial scientific and technical complexes, and engineering centers and of integrating VUZ and sectorial science with production is now under way.

Fundamental changes are being effected in machine building. All its sectors must not only reconstruct production capacities but also move on in the current 5-year plan and in subsequent years to the production of the very latest machinery, machine tools, and equipment. For instance, in the automotive industry it is planned to replace virtually all automobile models as a result of the consideration of modern requirements. In agricultural and food machine building, capacities are being formed for the production of new systems of efficient machines for introducing intensive crop-cultivation technologies and the waste-free processing of agricultural raw material.

A major decision was taken recently on the widespread introduction of microprocessors in the national economy, which will make it possible to accelerate considerably the rate of production mechanization and automation and resolutely reduce manual labor. Serious measures have been projected and are being implemented for the further development of the agro-industrial complex, which should rapidly make a real improvement in the food situation.

Opportunities have been found for implementing right now, without delay, a number of important measures in the sphere of social policy. I refer to the further development of health care and public education, the cultural and spiritual sphere, and the improvement of labor payment and pension provisions.

The Central Committee attaches exceptionally great importance to the solution of questions connected with implementing a fundamental reform of management and the methods of economic administration. In general, comrades, work is proceeding on all salients. Of course, this is not coming easily. But I want to emphasize that we will unfailingly see through the matter we have begun, whatever obstacles and difficulties may arise for us. You may be sure of that. Of course, the results will be achieved more rapidly if our entire people join in the work.

But you sometimes hear it said: "The congress made good decisions; but locally everything is going along in the old way. Help us to put things in order." Of course we will help, we will make demands and demand answers. But frankly, do all these questions have to be resolved from the center? Strengthening discipline and improving the organization of production and labor at the enterprise or in the ship and making correct use of equipment and resources must be done within the collectives themselves.

Or take questions of social development. In this sphere too by no means everything should be resolved in Moscow. A great deal, a very great deal, must be resolved locally and resolved vigorously and persistently. And we will make people answerable for this.

And another thing, comrades! We are living and working in difficult but interesting times. Now more than ever enterprising work is needed. That is precisely what many people still lack. Often, talking with production workers and leaders of enterprises and sectors about the reasons for laggardness and the nonfulfillment of the plan, you hear all kinds of references to other people. We must once and for all stop pointing the finger at each other, and each person must do his duty conscientiously. Moreover, we must pay due attention to our production partners, meet them halfway, and collaborate with them. We must develop and strengthen the good socialist tradition of cooperation between labor collectives.

In this connection I would like to say some kind words about the "Uralmash" collective. You know how pointedly we have been criticizing metallurgical workers recently and what crucial tasks they are faced with to improve output. They are now working hard on the sector's reconstruction. They have already succeeded in taking the first step to overcome their laggardness. But difficulties remain. The modernization of the sector requires new technology. To the credit of the "Uralmash" collective it has displayed real worker's solidarity and has enterprisingly reviewed its plans and undertaken to create rapidly highly efficient equipment for Magnitka's reconstruction. As early as this year the working plans of new machinery for the continuous casting of steel, which will make it possible to obtain 200,000 metric tons more rolled metal from each million metric tons of molten metal, will be completed ahead of schedule. This is a remarkable example of cooperation between two industrial giants and two outstanding collectives of our working class.

I think this question is also of great importance for you, comrades. What do I have in mind? The VAZ produces fine automobiles which are widely known in our country and a number of other countries. But today that is not enough. Your automobiles are inferior to the best foreign counterparts. In addition, when creating new models of cars you must have a clearer view of the longer term. Whenever the plant presents a new model we hear it said that the new automobile will be on a par with the best world models. But I want to ask you: Why is the VAZ content with its new vehicles merely being on a par with the best world models? Why do you not set yourself a broader task — being a kind of legislator of world automobile fashion? Such a skilled collective is capable of that.

We would support you. I realize that you may say: Not everything depends on us. You may say that much is connected with production partners and those who supply the metal, electrical and rubber equipment, and other subassemblies. The question here is: But why don't you display initiative in setting up effective collaboration with all your partners? I am sure that that will unfailingly find an animated response among those who cooperate with the VAZ particularly if you invite them to help create the best automobiles in the world. Think about all this, comrades.

Incidentally, what I am saying to you today also applies to other enterprises, scientific organizations, and design bureaus in the country. The reasons for many negative trends in our machine building and other sectors lie with our orientation not toward the creation of fundamentally new equipment, the best in the world, but frequently toward the petty improvement of machines already in use. We must abandon the philosophy of imitation. We should not follow in other people's footsteps and along well-trodden paths in everything. We have been educated in different traditions and must open up promising new avenues in technical development.

The orientation toward surpassing world achievements must, as they say, enter the flesh and blood of all labor collectives and all economic organs. this should be the principle of our work, one of the most important aims of socialist competition. The advantages of socialism must be asserted not only by the political system and social benefits but also by economic results, progressive technology, and high-quality goods. I believe the country's machine builders will be the first to set an example in this important matter.

Speaking of our immediate reserves which must be used to fulfill the plans of the current 5-year plan, M.S. Gorbachev said: I would give priority to questions of improving output quality. The congress said frankly and exactingly of this matter: Without improving quality we cannot resolve questions of the quantity of output or fundamentally accelerate scientific and technical progress and our forward movement.

Compare two of the country's plants — the Azerbaijan pipe plant and the Severskiy plant in Sverdlovsk Oblast. Both have virtually identical equipment and technology and both produce almost equal volumes of the same output. But while the Sverdlovsk workers have never once had claims for replacements for their pipes from petroleum industry workers, in the case of the Azerbaijan workers every 10th pipe delivered with such difficulty to West Siberia proves to be defective. That, comrades, is the price of quality. Enormous manpower and material expenditure can be to no avail if articles and goods fail to meet modern requirements. After all, quality means reliability and economy. Finally, the moral aspect is very important here too.

In sharply criticizing these shortcomings, we by no means want to present everything in a gloomy light, as it were dismissing at a stroke the enormous achievements to the credit of our machine building, light industry, electronics, and so forth. I believe you are well aware that we are discussing something else right now: everything produced in the country must be of high quality.

But so far that is not what we are doing. Take our household equipment. Here very great achievements and backwardness coexist peacefully. We have fine refrigerators, washing machines, and television and radio apparatus which is in great demand in the country and beyond. At the same time many types of this equipment are not always reliable in operation, are uneconomical in terms of electricity consumption, require an excessive quantity of materials, and are of unesthetic appearance.

Where does this lead? Here is just one example: Specialists have calculated that bringing our household equipment up to the modern standard in terms of electricity consumption indicators would make it possible to save over 20 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity a year. That is almost double the annual output of the Volga GES named for Lenin. That is why we say that poor quality is the most dangerous form of extravagance.

You have obviously heeded the ideas voiced in the Political Report to the effect that we cannot tolerate a situation whereby the workers producing good and bad output receive virtually identical wages and enjoy the same benefits. I would like to continue this theme at today's meeting and ask you: Does this not violate social justice? I think you will agree it does. If that is so, if we are all agreed on this — and the congress delegates were also agreed — then the time has come to act, to act resolutely to erect a barrier to poor quality and defective output both in the collectives themselves and through state channels.

The Central Committee has expressed itself on these matters in the letter to the country's working people, with which you are familiar. Measures are now being formulated which will very soon make it possible to establish a closer relationship between the labor payment and work quality. Evidently, a special law on quality should be adopted. Enterprises which continue to produce poor-quality output must feel the consequences administratively and economically. If output is unacceptable and unmarketable then this must affect the material position of the collective and the level of labor payment.

The question of restructuring the technical control system at enterprises is also urgent. It is no secret that, even with good raw materials and modern equipment, poor-quality output frequently passes out of the gates of some plants and factories. It is difficult to calculate how much of it is returned and how much has to be brought up to scratch by the consumer himself on the spot, incurring enormous expenses in the process.

The CPSU Central Committee recently received a letter from Perm, from Comrade Mashina. She reported that she had bought a "Kaskad" television set, which, incidentally, was produced by the Kuybyshev "Ekran" production association. It worked for 15 minutes. The repairman summoned to mend it said that it was a rash purchase because the entire batch of television sets which had gone on sale was being repaired at the television workshop. A check showed that 49,000 television sets from this association had proved faulty and had been repaired within the guarantee period. Of course, this situation can satisfy no one. And the justified question arises: How can poor-quality output leave an enterprise which operates a technical control system?

Evidently, not everything is in order here. The technical control section service is obviously under strong moral and material pressure from those who produce the poor-quality articles and those who lead the enterprise. That is why the question of transferring to extradepartmental control has been persistently put forward recently. The system of state acceptance of output is now being verified at 42 of the country's enterprises. The effectiveness of this system can be judged just from Moscow's "Frezer" cutting tool plant. This is a well-known enterprise with a reputation for producing high-quality articles and is successful in all respects. The 223 plant controllers of the technical control section have conscientiously maintained the plant's high reputation.

Under these conditions what, it might seem, could four representatives of the State Committee for Standards change? But the new service looked at the plant's output with not simply fresh but really sharp eyes. It transpired that the technological documentation in use was very outdated, that the measuring instruments were failing to provide the necessary grading [klass], and the plan sometimes obliged the technical control section to close its eyes to small deviations from the standard. In brief, even at this strong enterprise not a single consignment of output initially stood up to examination. But within 6 months 99 percent of output was defect-free. The new service "shook up" the plant collective and obliged it to shape an atmosphere in which it was clear to everyone that defective goods woult not get through.

Approximately the same effect has been acheived at other enterprises. The handover of defect-free output from the technical control section to representatives of the State Committee for Standards increased from 10-30 percent in May through June 1985 to 80-95 percent in the first quarter of 1986. The level of violations of standard requirements and technical specifications at enterprises used to be 65-70 percent, but now these requirements are observed in full.

The quality of the consumer goods produced by subordinate enterprises has improved — which has brought about a growing demand for them. Thus, at a wholesale fair in 1984 the trading organizations refused to purchase 67 percent of the color television sets included in the production plan of Gorkiy's Lenin Television Plant. But at the end of last year, after organizing acceptance by the State Standards Committee, the same organizations requested an increase in deliveries of color television sets from that plant.

Of course, the new procedure has hit some people in the pocket. But people realized that the demands were objective and the approach a state approach. And they are working the way the party urges them. We believe that both the people of Tolyatti and the working people of all enterprises in Kuybyshev Oblast and also throughout the country will support this good initiative.

During my talks with workers, specialists, and leaders of enterprises in Kuybyshev and Tolyatti, I have once again seen for myself the tremendous significance of applying efficient management methods. Recently we have been devoting a lot of attention to these vitally important questions, on whose solution the successful implementation of our general line of accelerating the country's socioeconomic development depends to a considerable degree. Yes, comrades, the success of our progress depends to a considerable degree on how quickly we master the new management methods.

The 27th party congress outlined the main directions of this tremendous and exceptionally important work. The starting point for the decisions adopted was the experience accumulated in the national economy. Here I would also like to pay tribute to the VAZ collective, to you, dear comrades.

Motor vehicle builders have been working for almost a year with the new principles of planning and economic incentive. The first results of this profound and large-scale experiment are gratifying. The initiative of workers, engineering and technical personnel, and the entire collective has been enhanced. New potential has been opened up for introducing scientific and technical achievements and improving product quality. The collective has developed great work to reorganize production to produce new models of machines and has planed emphasis on making more efficient use of existing capacities and modernizing production. And this is the right road, the most reliable one for enhancing the efficiency of the collective's production activity.

Comrades, we have a very great interest in your success in mastering the new management methods. The same path has been taken by the collective of the Sumy machine-building association. The self-financing system has imparted greater dynamism to its work, untied initiative, and enhanced labor efficiency.

This question naturally arises here: What does this give in reality? In 1985 the Sumy machine building association succeeded in raising labor productivity more than 13 percent and increasing profits 32 percent. People's interest and activeness in achieving high indicators increased. They now understand well that the greater the profit, the more is allocated to solving the collective's social problems. Previously the labor collective was not so interested in making full use of all production reserves. The current economic mechanism requires people to work with full effort.

You know your indicators, and I will not speak about them here. All enterprises of the Ministry of Chemical and Petroleum Machine Building and also 30 enterprises of other sectors are now preparing to go over to the new management methods, taking your experience into account. Your experience and that of the Sumy machine builders has shown once again that the self-financing system is an effective means of combating the notorious gross output. It acts as a cost-cutting [protivozatratnyy] mechanism. And this is one of the most important tasks for us today.

At the same time, life shows that it is impossible to achieve the fundamental reorganization of administration and management methods without reorganizing the work of the central organs of administration: ministries, departments, and statewide economic organs. Here, too, we will have to do some thorough work. This is what it is important to bear in mind here: The tremendous advantages of the planned economy are realized through the activity of the central organs of administration. Therefore, we must not forget this when we carry out the reorganization now.

We are faced, comrades, with even strengthening the centralized principle where necessary. However, the role of central organs of administration must be strengthened only as regards ensuring the proportions and the balanced nature of the national economy and optimally combining statewide, sectorial, and regional interests. All this must be done. All the more so because, owing to shortcomings in planning, we very frequently encounter various kinds of lack of coordination in the national economy. This was an adverse effect on its end results.

In agricultural machine building, for example, a kind of "tractor bias" has come about for this reason. Tractor production was being stepped up for many years, but it was not backed up by corresponding work on increasing production of agricultural machines and tools. And this has led to the result that kolkhozes and sovkhozes possess a huge tractor pool but are unable to use it efficiently. And, most importantly, this has affected the timeliness and quality of agricultural work and, thus, the harvest of agricultural crops.

Or take the chemical industry. A situation has now taken shape here whereby, because of the nonintegration [nesopryazhennost] of capacities, it is not possible to obtain the proper effect in the production of output. Something similar is also happening in other sectors of the national economy. All these are excesses [izderzhki] in the activity of our central organs of planning and administration, and we must rectify the state of affairs.

At the same time, we must firmly pursue a policy of ridding all central departments of petty tutelage of enterprises and of what the enterprises, association, and labor collectives must resolve themselves. Indeed, is it normal when not only ministries and other organs of sectorial administration but even the Gosplan and the Ministry of Finance undertake to solve a huge number of petty economic questions which — let us state it bluntly — are not their concern? This dissipates resources and does not allow central economic departments to concentrate on long-term questions or on ensuring the working conditions of enterprises and associations. Of course, such a practice must be decisively abandoned. In this connection I must speak once again of the need for the speediest implementation of the congress guidelines on extending the economic independence, developing the initiative, and enhancing the responsibility of labor collectives of enterprises and associations, kolkhozes and sovkhozes, planning and design bureaus, and scientific research institutes.

We must unfetter the working people's initiative in practice. Surely you and I can see that today the leader of an enterprise finds himself in a somewhat dual position. On the one hand, we demand of him independence, efficiency in his work, and socialist enterprise; on the other, we bind him hand and foot with numerous instructions and groundless restrictions. It is not right, as sometimes happens, that enterprising workers who display a creative attitude to their work end up among the violators for just one reason: Their actions are not in accordance with obsolete rules and instructions.

I wish to confirm this with an example. In the past the movement of integral process teams for the production of excellent-quality output came into being on the Komsomol's initiative. In various parts of the country, light industry and trade enterprises workers concluded cooperation contracts. In Chelyabinsk at that time they decided to go further. There they created an intersectorial integral process team of young footwear industry workers and salespeople of the trade center. They pooled people's efforts and the wage and material incentive funds. A living link, a direct dependence between labor remuneration and the demand for products arose.

And the system began operating. Defective goods were practically ruled out and the quality of the women's footwear being produced was no worse than that produced by the most famous foreign firms. And, naturally, there was a sharp increase in the demand for footwear. But how did the RSFSR Ministries of Light Industry and Trade react to this? You might have thought that they would roll up their sleeves and set about disseminating the splendid experience. But nothing of the kind happened.

The ministries' workers saw just one thing in the Chelyabinsk Komsomol members' experience: the fact that it did not accord with the instructions of the Gosplan, the Ministry of Finance, and the State Committee for Labor and Social Problems. Their conclusion was as follows: Of course, it is not a bad initiative; but if it were introduced, it would cause a very great deal of disturbance and they would have to reorganize themselves. And, as the saying goes, they concealed the young people's initiative, and that was the end of a good thing. And, comrades, this was quite recently. But this must not happen again. In short, there is now no more urgent and pressing task than that of improving management of the economy and developing an economic mechanism which will open up scope for the initiative, independence, and responsibility of enterprise and association collectives.

The Central Committee and the government are carrying out persistent work in this respect. Just recently organs have been formed to manage groups of interrelated or similar sectors of the national economy — the USSR State Agro-Industrial Committee and the USSR Council of Ministers Bureaus for Machine Building and for the Fuel and Energy Complex. Work is being carried out to transfer industrial sectors chiefly to a two-tier management system. At the same time, measures are being taken to introduce economic methods of management.

The Central Committee Politburo recently approved a new economic mechanism in the agro-industrial complex. A document of tremendous significance was adopted and published. What would I like to single out from the system of measures which it contains? Firm plans, not subject to change, are being introduced for the 5-year period for sales of products to the state, with the right of farms freely to dispose of everything produced over and above the plan. This approach opens up broad scope for rural workers' initiative and increases their interest in increasing production.

The independence of kolkhozes and sovkhozes is being broadened, and their responsibility for the work results increased. Local organs, too, are interested in applying this principle. The resources of meat, milk, and other products will remain at their disposal after the farms have fulfilled their deliveries to the centralized funds. Thus, real ways to improve supply by means of local potential are opened up. Republic and oblast organs will have to help rural workers more actively and not rely on funds allocated from the center. It is important to introduce the new management methods in the agro-industrial complex everywhere without delay. Then we will be able more quickly to remove the acuteness in the supply of a number of high-quality products to the population.

The elaboration of the economic mechanism of management is now being completed in light industry. The idea here, too, is to put an end to the gross-output approach to things and to give the workers in this sector and also in trade the greatest possible interest in increasing production and sales of high-quality goods. Thus, not only the production life of enterprises but also labor remuneration will be made directly dependent on the quality and range of the output being produced and the ability to respond to market needs.

In general, comrades, the party has serious intentions to bring the business of improving management and the economic mechanism to a logical conclusion. And we will not stop half way. We will do everything to ensure that the people's tremendous creative potential is revealed in full and enables our country to scale new heights of social progress.

Hitherto I have spoken of our tasks in the economic sphere. But the upsurge of the economy is not an end in itself. We need this in order, above all, to enhance the people's well-being and improve the Soviet people's working and living conditions. We have firmly adopted a policy of accelerating the development of the social sphere. Earnest measures have already been taken in this direction, and the necessary amendments have been made to the principles of planning. Capital investments have been redistributed in favor of the social program. The needs and the specific natures of the regions have begun to be taken more fully into account.

I would like particularly to speak about housing construction. You know that we are making a tremendous effort here. And millions of people have obtained new housing in recent years. But this question still remains an acute one. This is why the Central Committee is now taking additional measures to expand housing construction. Everything must be done to ensure that people, particularly those who have long been standing in line, are able to improve their housing conditions more quickly. I wish to say that the party and the government will not relax their attention to this extremely important aspect of our life. But, we believe, the potential of enterprises themselves in this respect must be utilized more actively and fully.

I must say that many social questions are being solved in labor collectives thanks to the initiative of party committees. Take the catering system at Riga's VEF [State Electrical Equipment Plant] or labor safety and health protection for Belorussian chemical workers and Lipetsk metallurgists, the construction of youth housing complexes in Kaliningrad near Moscow and in Sverdlovsk, the organization of trade in Klaypeda, the development of consumer cooperatives in Volgograd, and so forth. People feel this and see the concern of leaders of enterprises and local organs. One has only to enhance responsibility in this important matter and set about solving problems with initiatives, and much can be improved and rectified.

Particularly favorable conditions are being opened up on this path with the introduction of full financial autonomy. The VAZ is an example of this. Previously it was possible to spend only as much as was allocated from the budget on developing the social and consumer sphere at the VAZ. Things are changing now: These funds will depend increasingly on your work, on the enterprise's increased profits.

Today I took a look at your new city, which produces a good impression. You feel that people put a lot of soul into its construction and saw to it that you can live comfortably here and rest well. I know that 43 kindergartens and 20 schools have been constructed in the city over the past 5 years, and 34,000 families have obtained new apartments. And your plans for the next 5-year period are also impressive There will be a substantial increase in the supply of housing and preschool and school establishments.

I also know about the difficulties which you still have. There are complaints about the water supply, heating, and the quality of housing construction. Soviet organs and construction workers must do some work in this regard, and plant collectives must help them. Deputies must work more actively. For the majority of deputy groups are made up of your own emissaries. Thus, their militancy too must be a worker, VAZ militancy. The social sphere embraces the vital interests of millions of people and concerns the needs of every person.

VAZ team leader Viktor Fedorovich Chvanov and Sergey Ivanovich Agapov have spoken here and, on behalf of their comrades, proposed working at least 4 free days this year on constructing hospitals, schools, and houses of culture. I realize that you all approve this. On behalf of the party's Central Committee, the Central Committee general secretary supported this useful initiative.

To Develop Initiative and Enhance Responsibility and Exactingness

Comrades! Our entire country is now living through an unusually crucial period. And this demands very serious and strenuous work from us all. There is, however, no doubt, that particular responsibility lies with the party and its committees and organizations. You know that, in the spirit of Leninist traditions, Communists have always marched in the vanguard at the most difficult and most complex periods in the country's life.

The party's strength has always lain in initiative and example. After all, it has been at the party's initiative that burning problems of our society's development have been raised and are being solved today. It was at the party's initiative that we embarked on the strengthening of order and discipline, on the enhancement of exactingness and the sense of responsibility for the work at hand. It was at the party's initiative that we have started implementing within the party itself the pressing changes which are demanding their immediate solution. There is no doubt that now too the party organizations will head the work to implement the congress decisions and that every Communist will set an example of selfless labor.

The economy is a particular field of action in the gigantic work which has to be done by the party and its organizations. I have already spoken about what is being done to improve the system of management and the economic machinery. They are beginning to be, or soon will be, operational. Now that the new methods of management and incentive are being tuned up, it is particularly important to make full use of the party's political and organizational strength, tested at all historical stages of socialist building, and to channel it into the solution of the tasks set by the 27th CPSU Congress.

First and foremost we must maintain and further develop the political and labor activeness of the masses and involve them in the implementation of the projected plans. The party, as the main guarantor of the implementation of the course elaborated, perceives it as its task to create an atmosphere of quest, initiative, and creative labor by tens of millions of Soviet people.

During the congress and in the period since then the Central Committee received many letters and telegrams from literally all parts of the country. Workers and peasants, young people and veterans, men and women wholeheartedly support the congress decisions and acclaim the planned measures. They unanimously demand the continuation of the elaborated course and the further strengthening of discipline and order in society. Soviet people are unsparing of heartfelt words and declared that they will follow the party for as long as the party sticks to its chosen path. It is the duty of the CPSU, its Central Committee, and all organizations to follow this instruction. We will continue constantly to consult the working people and to maintain in Soviet society an atmosphere of exactingness and sincerity, trust and creativity, and everything that will help the acceleration of our development.

M.S. Gorbachev dwelt in particular on questions concerning publicity, criticism, and self-criticism. If anyone believes that the congress is over, there was some criticism, and that that is that, let me tell him bluntly: This is not to be. As far as we are concerned, criticism and self-criticism are not a short-lived campaign, and even less of an idle pastime. They must occupy a permanent position in society's life as a correct method for the improvement of our activity. Everything that obstructs advance and the acceleration of development must be criticized. You will, I think, agree that we cannot be lenient toward omissions and shortcomings. But we must not allow criticism and self-criticism to turn into a farce, into some new fad which has appeared in place of the tendency to eulogize the status quo. It has already happened here and there that people engage in self-flagellation, repent their sins, and yet carry on as before. No one can be deceived by such methods. Criticism and self-criticism demand actions. If the admission of mistakes is not followed up by their correction, this is the first sign of insincerity, of substitution of words for deeds. And there can be only one evaluation of this — a severe, principled party evaluation.

To implement the congress decisions means to improve and, wherever necessary, to fundamentally change any obsolete style or methods of work, to teach cadres to resolve issues faster and more efficiently, to shoulder responsibility. There must be no fear of resolute, bold, and innovative actions. There is no need to be afraid that someone may make a mistake, comrades. Our party is so authoritative, Soviet power is so strong, and the people's trust in them is so vast that we will be able to correct any mistake and learn from it lessons for the future.

The style of our work must be energetic and businesslike, aimed not at the generation of paperwork and protocols but at the organization of enterprising activity by the masses. This primarily applies to the organs of national economic management. They must abandon bureaucratic methods more quickly. Why should we speak of this today? Simply because formalism is an obstruction even after the congress: too much talk about the need for improvement and not enough action. What is needed is lively on-the-spot work with people. Don't drag everyone into raykoms and offices, but go out, go where people work, where the problems, successes, and omissions are more clearly visible.

The restructuring and the change of work style and methods must take place not just at the top levels of management, in party and soviet organs. It would be a mistake to believe that all calamities are caused by shortcomings in their activity. All that has been said applies equally to every worker, kolkhoz member, or specialist, to everyone in this hall. Yes, comrades, to you too.

A worker standing at his machine tool or on the assembly line also has his own style of work. To improve this style means improving the attitude toward the job in hand, and eliminating hack-work and the pretense of work and misrepresentation. It means fewer cigarette breaks, less chitchat, more conscientiousness, tighter self-discipline, and greater attention to the job in hand. And this is needed not for anybody else's sake but for our own sake, for the sake of the common goal, for the sake of ensuring that Soviet people can lead a better life.

Generally speaking, what we are faced with first and foremost today are the questions of changing the style and methods of work in the broadest sense of the words — from the organization of labor to management. If we solve this task — and it is incumbent upon us to solve it — it means that we will also solve others, no matter how complex they may be.

A Line of Peace Against the Line Leading to War

Comrades, now to international affairs — the last part of my speech.

The other day I had a meeting with U.S. congressmen and promised them I would also tell you what I told them: We do not have two policies; we have one policy that expresses the interests of the Soviet people and takes account of the interests of all other peoples.

The 27th CPSU Congress produced a comprehensive analysis of all the contradictoriness [protivorechivost] and interconnectedness [vzaimosvyazannost] in today's world. What is needed to resolve its problems is an entirely new way of thinking, an innovative approach, and an awareness of the fact that the arms race and the development of military technology have reached a critical point. This is what we proceed from. In so doing, we understand that we exist side by side in world politics with an opposite system in class terms and are confronted by just as serious a reality from the point of view of safeguarding peace as the United States. Meanwhile, the leadership of that country cannot drop past habits and, to all appearances, does not want to reckon with the reality of the USSR. This fact, however, does not stop us from seeking a way out of confrontation. For there is simply no alternative. The other alternative is a race toward nuclear catastrophe. Our conduct and our policy are prompted not only by our principles and morality but also by the fact that we understand that any other approach is unrealistic. That is why I went to Paris and Geneva. That is why the Soviet Union has put forward an entire series of major initiatives. That is why we set out, immediately after Geneva, to translate the accords and the joint statement achieved there into practical actions.

Twice, we extended our unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions and offered to immediately begin talks on ending nuclear tests altogether. We put forward compromise proposals, meeting the West halfway at the Vienna and Stockholm conferences. Another major initiative was our statement of 15 January that contained a concrete and clear plan for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction and for reductions in other weapons to limits necessary for defence. We have taken account of the Europeans' worry about medium-range missiles and operational tactical nuclear weapons and came up with a compromise option for the European zone. We suggested the mutual withdrawal of the Soviet and U.S. navies from the Mediterranean. The 27th CPSU Congress not only approved all those measures but also formulated basic principles for the establishment of a comprehensive international security system.

But what about the West, on whom an end to the arms race and an improvment in the international climate also directly depends? How have they been behaving since Geneva? What is their policy? To begin with, we have not received a satisfactory reply to the statement of 15 January; what they have sent us evades the heart of the matter and attempts to make do with half-measures and to mislead the world public with vague promises.

As for a reply on substance, it is being supplied by the actions of the United States and by the actual policy of NATO. In Geneva, both sides agreed that there would be no winners in a nuclear war, just as in the nuclear arms race. However, when we put forward a simple and clear stage-by-stage plan for the reduction and elimination of the nuclear arms arsenals, we were told "No."

Or else, they have kept harping over the years that the Russians cannot be trusted because they do not permit on-site inspection. We have agreed to it. In response, President Reagan offers to verify not a ban on nuclear explosions but the procedure of improving nuclear weapons. As a U.S. newspaper aptly remarked the other day, it is the same as asking a man advocating the abolition of capital punishment to witness an execution.

We, naturally, have not accepted and will not accept it. We put the matter differently: Let us discuss both our proposal on ending explosions and the U.S. proposal of verification. The only thing the U.S. Administration seems to have left from Geneva is talk about a new meeting between the U.S. President and the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. To make the matter absolutely clear, I will repeat again: I stand for holding such a meeting. We make no preconditions for it. However, we want it to pass in accordance with what the President and I agreed on; namely, it should mark a step forward, that is, produce practical results toward ending the arms race.

One more thing. It can take place if the atmosphere of Geneva is preserved or, it would be more correct to say, revived. Just look at what is taking place. Shortly, after Geneva, an anti-Soviet campaign was relaunched with new force in the United States, full of every type of fabrication and insult to our state.

Then, more serious matters arose: namely, the demand that the Soviet Union reduce the number of its diplomats in New York by 40 percent. A U.S. naval squadron appeared off the shores of the Crimea; they made it plain the action was sanctioned by the top authorities. An attack was carried out against Libya to show U.S. might and to demonstrate that it is, allegedly, at liberty to do whatever it wishes. A high-yield nuclear explosion is being carried out in Nevada with an obviously provocative purpose on the eve of the expiration of our moratorium. And when we proposed a meeting without delay on just one truly urgent question, that of nuclear explosions, it took less than 24 hours to answer "No."

Do they in Washington think that they are dealing with faint hearts? Do they believe that today it is possible to behave like compulsive gamblers? Is this how they in the United States understand the spirit of Geneva? Do they think that we do not see how the just started Soviet-U.S. dialogue is being misused to cover the implementation of military aims? All this makes one wonder, involuntarily, what content and what meaning Washington is imparting to a new Soviet-U.S. meeting.

And what about Western Europe? In reply to our proposals, which are also meeting the wishes of the European public and many governments, they are now saying to us: The U.S. missiles cannot be removed from Europe because the Soviet Union, supposedly, has more conventional weapons. But our January statement unambiguously also offers reductions in conventional weapons and armed forces.

They also say another thing: The United States, they say, will have to take the missiles across the ocean while Moscow will merely ship them to Siberia, from which they can be easily and promptly carried back. In so doing, they pretend not to know that the USSR offers the elimination of the missiles rather than their transfer anywhere. In sum, they stand for peace in words, but for missiles in fact. No, evidently neither Britain nor France is displaying a serious approach here.

Take the attitude toward the Strategic Defense Initiative. The West European governments and big business are using all sorts of pretexts for becoming increasingly involved in that disastrous plan and are thus becoming accomplices in a new, even more dangerous round of the arms race.

Finally, perhaps, the most essential point. The United States is putting its "star wars" program into full gear. The President claims this is a defensive and non-nuclear program. But the general in charge of that project publicly describes how the space weapon will hit the enemy on earth, while the U.S. defense secretary says it also includes nuclear components.

I say, frankly, that if the United States persists in that course, contrary to common sense, we will find a convincing response and not necessarily in space. We know well the potential of contemporary science and our own potential. There is nothing that the United States can do that we cannot. We can do everything. But we are against such a choice. We are against the absurd U.S. weapons logic. To us a ban on space strike weapons is not a problem of fearing a lag behind but a problem of responsibility.

I wish to say the following in that connection: It is time to give up building relations with the USSR on erroneous concepts, on illusions. One of the most dangerous such illusions is that the Soviet Union's peaceful intentions and calls are evaluated as a sign of weakness. Well then, the arms race will not wear us out, we will not be removed from outer space and will not be overtaken in technology. Nothing good will come of these attempts.

As is evident from numerous letters coming in to the Central Committee, quite a few of our people are concerned about whether it will happen that, under cover of conversations about peace and fruitless talks, the West will make a spurt forward in arms that we will not manage to react to. I can assure you, comrades, this will not happen. We can clearly see the difference between words and deeds. So the policy of the Soviet Union takes into account the entire sum total of real factors. We will not be taken unawares. The Soviet state has repeatedly proven that it will be able to meet any challenge. If need be, it will also respond in due manner this time.. We do not claim greater security, as the 27th congress placed on record. However, we will not agree to less security either.

Nobody, certainly, expected that the implementation of our program of advancement toward peace without wars and weapons would proceed smoothly, like a Zhiguli car running on a good asphalt road. We are in for a long, tough struggle. Not only detente, but even a warming in Soviet-U.S. relations does not suit certain circles. They are trying to find any pretext to wreck the improvement in the international situation that began to manifest itself after Geneva. The whole world knows who they are. They are the circles associated with the military business, those who personify the military-industrial complex, sending its representatives to the upper echelons of power and taking them back after they loyally serve it there. They are those who earn billions on the arms race and confrontation.

At the congress we outlined the main directions in the struggle against nuclear war, and we will act consistently and perseveringly. We have great opportunities.

Our true friends, the socialist countries, are with us in this great effort. We have a special responsibility to them. This is the common responsibility for the destiny of socialism. It is very important that we pursue the policy of peace jointly, coordinating our strategy for the long term and each important step toward peace.

A majority of the world community is for preserving peace, including the states and peoples of the nonaligned countries and the "Third World" and the working people of the capitalist countries.

We are for preserving the impetus of Paris and Geneva. We will not let ourselves be provoked, neither will we pour fuel onto the cold war bonfire being kindled now. One should not play politics in this nuclear age.

We will count on the common sense of the working people of all countries, the common sense of ordinary people, the growing sense of self-preservation, and the awareness of new realities by political figures and parties, including NATO member-countries.

We ourselves must continually remember: The main issue in ensuring success in the struggle for peace is solving the tasks of perfecting socialist society. The state of our national economy and the development of science and technology; the qualitative restructuring of the economy; and the building up of the spiritual, intellectual, and moral potential of the Soviet power are determining factors. In the final analysis, the matter lies in the labor of each of us. In short, a strong, healthy economy also ensures success for the policy of peace and this is called linkage between foreign and domestic policy.

Comrades! Life has confronted us in full measure with the most urgent problems and we are called upon to give an answer to the challenge of the time. It must not be evaded. The congress decisions must be realized, no matter what efforts may be required of the Central Committee, of the government, or of the whole people. The program of our actions is concrete, purposeful, and realistic, but, if we are to fulfill it, we must begin, as Lenin taught, at once both from the top and from the bottom. Success in practical work will only be achieved if we all begin together and at once, from the party Central Committee to the primary party organizations; from the government to the production brigade; from the minister to the worker, kolkhoznik, and employee. Each person must do what is to be done, do it conscientiously and to the limit of his strength. That obligation is laid on us by the acuteness of the time we are living through, by the feeling of patriotism and civil duty, and by our responsibility for the present and future of our homeland, for the cause of socialism and peace.

I want to assure you, comrades, that the Central Committee and the government are aware of the responsibility placed on them by the party cogress and will build their work in accordance with its demands.

In conclusion M.S. Gorbachev said: The enormous tasks which have been our lot have always been resolved in an atmosphere of great public enthusiasm. That is how it has been at all major turning points in our history. And today, too, the party addresses you above all, comrades — the heroic working class and its high awareness, discipline, and responsibility; its political and professional experience, its ability to organize — and really all working people to attain the set goals, however complex. And there is no doubt that this appeal will be taken up. The country's working people will do everything to ensure that our motherland becomes increasingly rich and powerful.

I wish you success in that great work; glorious new feats of labor, good health, and happiness to your families; and all the very best in life.

(Comrade M.S. Gorbachev's speech was listened to with great attention and frequently was accompanied by prolonged applause.)

Politburo Discusses Gorbachev Tour, Other Issues

1700 GMT 10 Apr 86

[Text] In the Politburo of the CPSU Central Committee: A routine meeting of the Politburo of the CPSU Central Committee took place on 10 April. Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, who spoke at the meeting, shared his impressions of his visit to the towns of Kuybyshev and Tolyatti and his meetings with the working people and the party economic aktiv. The Politburo noted the importance of the questions raised during these meetings of accelerating the social and economic development of society, implementing the reconstruction of production on the basis of the latest achievements of science and technology, improving quality and raising the rate of capital construction, urgently tackling social problems, and particularly providing the working people with housing and medical and childrens establishments. The need was pointed out for stepping up practical work on implementing the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress, for not permitting, in this matter, actions just for show — the making of a noisy fuss and holding unnecessary meetings. Organization and discipline, wholehearted work, initiative, and a high level of responsibility among all workers is the main condition for the implementation of the party's plans and the congress decisions.

The Politburo discussed the question of the basic directions which stem from the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress for improving higher and specialized secondary education in the country. While noting the great work of Soviet higher and specialized secondary schools in preparing qualified cadres for all sectors of the national economy, science and culture, at the same time the Politburo pointed out that recently a lagging behind had been noted in this work. The level of instruction and education is not fully in accord with the tasks of accelerating the social and economic development of the country or of rapidly assimilating the achievements of science and technology. This requires a raising of the role of higher and secondary specialized education as a very important factor of long-term influence on the economy and the ongoing development of the whole of society. With this aim, it is intended to improve radically the training, education, and use of specialists; to intensify the integration of education with production and science; to improve the qualitative make-up of scientific and scientific-teaching cadres; and to raise the level of the technical equipment in educational establishments. It is intended to raise considerably the scale of scientific research and development carried out by higher educational establishments, to raise the role of the USSR Ministry of Higher and Secondary Specialized Education in managing the country's higher and secondary education, and to extend the rights and responsibility of educational establishments.

A decision of the CPSU Central Committee and of the USSR Council of Ministers was adopted on the further improvement of concert activity in the country. It aims at raising the conceptual and artistic level and the quality of the performance of the concert repertoire, improving the professional training of performers in higher and tertiary special educational establishments, strengthening the material and technical base of concert organizations, and resolving of other issues of their activity in strengthening the role of the musical arts in the aesthetic education of working people.

The Politburo approved the results of the meeting of Comrade Gorbachev with Machel, the chairman of Frelimo [Mozambique Liberation Front] and president of the People's Republic of Mozambique, and of the Soviet-Mozambiquan talks. Solidarity with the just struggle of the Mozambiquan people against imperialism and neocolonialism was stressed, as were efforts to deepen further of the relationship of friendship and cooperation between the CPSU and Frelimo and between the Soviet Union and People's Mozambique.

The results of the conversation between the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and Sinowatz, the federal chancellor of the Austrian Republic, were considered. Satisfaction was expressed over the development of Soviet-Austrian relations and the willingness to extend them in the interest of both countries, and the development of peaceful cooperation among European states and throughout the world.

Comrade Ryzhkov reported on the participation of a CPSU delegation in the work of the 13th BCP [Bulgarian Communist Party] Congress and on the conversations of the delegation with Comrade Zhivkov and other Bulgarian leaders. Having approved the activity of the delegation, the Politburo affirmed the determination to continue strengthening the friendship and the all-round fraternal cooperation between the CPSU and the BCP and between the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of Bulgaria. It also affirmed their political and ideological unity on the basis of the principles of Marxism-Leninism and of socialist internationalism.

Having reviewed the results of the first session of the Soviet-Chinese Commission on Economic, Commercial, Scientific, and technological cooperation, the Politburo remarked that the growth of commercial and economic relations between the USSR and the PRC facilitate the improvement of their relations in other spheres also, which corresponds to the interests of the peoples of both countries.

The Politburo of the CPSU Central Committee also discussed a number of other issues relating to the practical resolution of the task of accelerating the social and economic development of the country and of implementing the foreign policy course of the party and of the state, which is directed at the creation of the necessary conditions for the creative work of the Soviet people and for ensuring a peaceful future for the whole of humanity.

Gromyko Visits Sverdlovsk Plant, Sovkhoz 10 Apr

[Text] Sverdlovsk April 10 TASS — Andrey Gromyko, member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee, president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR, now staying here, today visited the "Uralmash" production amalgamation.

Addressing a meeting at the plant Andrey Gromyko said that the main thing now was to master new management methods, to show an innovative approach to work, to display initiative, imagination, excellent organisation and discipline. Turning to questions of the production of consumer goods at the enterprise and raising their quality, Andrey Gromyko drew special attention to the need of the accelerated development of the social sphere — providing people to a fuller extent with adequate housing, satisfying the needs of people in childcare centres, improving the standard of medical and everyday services. He stressed the big social importance of organising meaningful leisure time activities of people, especially young people, and promoting a healthy way of life.

Andrey Gromyko travelled to the "Verkhnepyshminsky" state farm where much work is being done to raise the efficiency of production, modernise rural life and induce young people to stay on the farm. When Andrey Gromyko visited the dairy complex he spoke of the need to increase the output of livestock produce, the importance to further develop private holdings and for the local soviets to give them more help. It was noted that the measures taken by the party and government to achieve a radical restructuring of the agrarian sector of the economy open up broad vistas for the initiative of workers in agriculture, increase their interest in the results of their work.

Attention was drawn to the importance of creating modern amenities not only at the main settleents of collective and state farms but also in other rural settlements, of building local roads at farms and improving the standard of medical servides. The local soviets and their deputies should play a greater role in solving these questions.

Other Activities

[Text] Andrey Andreyevich Gromyko, member of the Politburo of the CPSU Central Committee, chairman of the Presidium of the USSR Supreme Soviet, who is in Sverdlovsk, today laid flowers at the monument to Vladimir Ilich Lenin.

At the permanent exhibition on the building of Sverdlovsk, he was briefed on the general plan for the development of the city up to the year 2000. He was shown rayons in which large-scale industrial and housing construction is currently being carried out, and also a memorial zone where over 260 years ago the town factory was founded.

Comrade Gromyko then visited the Uralmash production association. In the managerial offices he had a meeting with factory's aktiv, during which specialists spoke about how, in accordance with the course of the 27th CPSU Congress, the collective is reorganizing its work. In this 5-year period the Urals machine builders are to master the production of high-efficiency technology for the oilmen and gasmen of Western Siberia, and to take part in the reconstruction of the Magnitka and other heavy industry enterprises. The participants in the meeting spoke about ways to more fully use internal reserves. They told how the plans and socialist pledges are being fulfilled, spoke about the growth in labor productivity and the use and renewal of equipment, about the mode of economizing on all kinds of resources, about the reduction of the amount of metal and energy used in production, about the introduction of the team contract, and about the training and strengthening of personnel.

Speaking at the meeting Andrey Andreyevich Gromyko noted that the main thing now was the assimilation of new management methods, an innovative approach to things, creative and enterprising work, and a high level of organization and discipline. Examining the questions of raising output and improving the quality of consumer goods manufactured at the enterprise, he indicated in particular the need for accelerated development of the social sphere, fuller provision of well-appointed housing for the people, satisfaction of citizens' needs for childrens' pre-school institutions, and the improvement of medical care and everyday services. He stressed the great social importance of organizing meaningful leisure for people, especially young people, and for affirming the healthy way of life.

During a visit to the workshops there were meetings and conversations with manual, engineering, and technical workers. They spoke about their conditions of work and expressed complete support for the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress.

Comrade Gromyko visited the Verkhne Pyshminskiy sovkhoz where purposeful work is being carried out to raise the efficiency of agricultural production, to effect the social reorganization of the village, and to retain young people. At the dairy farm the conversation touched upon the need to increase the production of livestock produce, the importance of work on further developing personal plots, and the rendering of more effective help to them by the local soviets. It was noted that the measures being taken by the party and government to bring about a significant restructuring of the agrarian sector of the economy open up broad scope for the initiative of rural workers and raise their interest in the results of their labor.

The deputies of the Baltym village soviet, where the conversation took place and on whose territory the sovkhoz is situated, spoke about their work on the social and economic transformation of the village and about the activities of the deputies groups and standing commissions. Attention was drawn to the importance of providing social, cultural, and everyday facilities not only in the central villages of sovkhozes and kolkhozes but also in the other rural populated points, and of building internal farm roads and improving medical care for the population. The role of the local soviets and people's deputies ought be increased in solving these questions.

In a village designed by Sverdlovsk architects a rural cultural and sports complex has been built, in which a concert hall, sports areas, childrens' play areas and a swimming pool are accommodated under one roof. Having looked around this building, Andrey Andreyevich Gromyko noted that it is essential everywhere to build such centers, which play an important part in carrying out cultural and health work in the village and in the organization of family leisure.

Comrade Gromyko laid flowers at the memorial to villagers who fell at the fronts of the Civil and Great Patriotic Wars.

Yeltsin Addresses Moscow Gorkom Plenum

PM090900 Moscow MOSKOVSKAYA PRAVDA in Russian 30 Mar 86 p 2

[Unattributed report on report delivered by B.N. Yeltsin, candidate member of the CPSU Central Politburo and first secretary of the Moscow CPSU Gorkom, at 29 March Moscow Gorkom Plenum: "Specific Deeds Are the Measure of Restructuring; From Comrade B.N. Yeltsin's Report"]

[Text] Comrades!

It is commonly acknowledged that the 27th party congress was an outstanding event. It was awaited, people prepared for it painstakingly. It fully justified the hopes of all Communists and the entire people and all progressive people of the world.

Sober realism, boldness reinforced with strict calculation, the most profound confidence in success — that is what determined the spirit of the party Central Committee report, the speeches of the congress delegates, and the documents and decisions adopted.

They include innovatory approaches to the renewal of the style, forms, and methods of party leadership and to the restructuring of the economic mechanism and organizational and ideological-educational work under the conditions of the improvement of socialism.

Having given clear, politically precise answers to fundamental questions of the further development of our society, the congress displayed with particular force a remarkable quality inherent in Lenin's party — the ability to find the only correct path at complex historical turning points. Right now this path is the acceleration of the country's socioeconomic development.

The party openly and boldly assessed the processes taking place, including negative ones, defined in a Leninist, precise way the need for a breakthrough, for restructuring, and drew up its approach toward the country's further development and the development of socialism and domestic and foreign policy. Today it may frankly be said that it has resurrected Soviet people's hopes and aspirations.

Comrades! Any restructuring begins with the restructuring of consciousness and with a clear and precise understanding of the new problems and the rejection of existing stereotyped forms of thinking. Hence the prime task of the city's party organizations — helping the Communists and all working people to make the congress ideas their conviction and each person's guideline to action.

The first propagandists of the congress were its delegates. Comrade Afonin, a blacksmith at the No 1 state ballbearing plant; Comrade Knyazeva, spinner at the imeni Alekseyeva factory; Comrade Lunev, team leader at the "Kompressor" plant; Comrade Belova, assistant foreman at the Tushino hosiery factory; school director Comrade Chistyakova; Comrade Budayeva, general director of the "Kosmos" sewn goods association; Comrade Ryabkova, secretary of the No 2 clocks and watches plant party committee; and many others are now working to ensure that the congress decisions become reality more rapidly. Their work, based on unity of word and deed, is the best propaganda.

It should be noted that all the delgates have visited the collectives and talked with people. Numerous talks with the capital's Communists and working people during the congress and in the postcongress period and the letters arriving at the party gorkom convince us that Muscovites warmly support the congress itself and its decisions.

The main task now is to strengthen this businesslike mood, this high moral tone and atmosphere of frankness and strict exactingness, Bolshevik truth, and resolute elimination of shortcomings. And we must not allow even a small proportion of leaders to form the opinion that now that they have held the congress and the conference they can have a rest.

The party gorkom bureau approved the plan for priority measures to discuss the results of the congress and propagandize and implement its decisions.

Yes, all the congress materials have be published and work is under way on their propaganda and explanation. But it would be naive to believe that every Muscovite — and that is precisely how the task is being set — has already familiarized himself with these materials. The proportion of those who have only a general idea of the congress documents (according to a special poll) is very high. That means that so far we have been unable to reach everyone.

It is particularly important to avoid turning the party's instructions into standardized appeals. We must not allow loud words about the correctness of the line elaborated by the congress to draw real practical deeds. We must shut tight the road to any "general" talk, to empty expatiations on these tasks. Every speech must be specific and contain a profound elaboration, proceeding from life, of real problems, bring interesting, considered information about practical experience in resolving socioeconomic tasks and about the definition of ways and means of acceleration in the work of each person, collective, and party raykom and gorkom.

A crucial long-term task is the organization of the study of the materials of the 27th congress in the systems of party study and economic education.

Comrades! The Political Report correctly noted: "A sensible, correct word has tremendous power to influence. But its importance is increased a hundredfold if it is united with political, economic, and social steps."

We took the first "little step" at the city report and election conference, laying bare problems and accumulated shortcomings, and have drawn the first but principled conclusions from the "lessons of truth."

Yes, the Muscovites' successes, as M.S. Gorbachev noted, could be considerably more substantial if the city party organization had not started some time ago to lose its spirit of self-criticism and healthy dissatisfaction with what has been achieved and had not displayed complacency, and deviation from the solution of complex city problems.

The task of today's plenum is to assess the first practical steps and to outline a program of immediate and long-term matters.

The strategy has been defined by the congress — ensuring purposefulness and resolve in actions, not restricting ourselves to half-hearted measures, enlisting the masses, and restructuring the cadres' mentality.

What has been done in this brief period?

We have begun with ourselves, with the work of the party grokom and the bureaus and departments. The procedure for the work of all public organizations has been approved. The number of meetings, conferences, and summons to the gorkom for the party aktiv and other leaders has been reduced. Some 50 percent fewer bureau resolutions are being adopted and the number of documents sent to the party raykoms and primary organizations has been reduced. The collective examination of questions involving visits to the localities for various problems of the development of a particular rayon or the city as a whole has entered the practice of the bureau's work.

A line is being steered toward limiting the functions of party, soviet, and economic organs. Fewer joint gorkom bureau and Moscow Gorispolkom decisions are taken.

The activity of the Moscow CPSU Gorkom has begun to contain more collegiality in elaborating and adopting decisions and personal responsibility for their fulfillment is being enhanced. Emphasis is being placed on rendering practical aid to party organizations in resolving the tasks facing them. For this people have begun to spend less time sitting in offices and more in the localities. They have correspondingly started to have a better knowledge of the situation.

It must be admitted that so far little has been "turned out" and what has is geared mainly to the long term, while much is exists still only on paper. But the decisions and developments accumulate organizational work which we are sure will have a practical outlet, in part in the immediate future and in part later.

The congress resolution notes that the economy has been and remains the main sphere of the party's activity.

You know that on the basis of the results of the city report and election campaign a CPSU Central Committee Politburo resolution was adopted. The Politburo approved the party gorkom's proposals on fundamental problems of the city.

A very important question is the elaboration of a Comprehensive Plan for Moscow's Social and Economic Development for the Period Through the Year 2000. Special attention here must be paid to the elimination of distortions in the city's development, beginning with the 12th 5-year plan, which in terms of the nature of its tasks is the most difficult and unsettled.

Average annual growth rates in industry must increase 60 percent. Labor productivity growth rates will be over 120 percent. Here the expenditure of resources will increase by only one-third. Machine building will receive preferential development, the volume of its output showing a 34 percent increase. The proportion of output with the seal of quality is to increase to 70 percent. Investments in the social sphere will increase 50 percent. Some 75 percent of fund will be channeled into modernization.

The active coordination of the draft plan for the main technical and economic indicators is now under way in the central organs, which must help above all in accelerating the retooling of Moscow's plants and factories.

The party gorkom has sent letters and demanded that each ministry ensure for Moscow's enterprise production volume growth rates of at least 125-127 percent in the 5-year plan and a 15 percent annual renewal of the active part of fixed capital, the introduction of robots, flexible automated production facilities, and rotary and rotary conveyor lines, a 20-percent reduction in the proportion of manual labor by 1990, and an imrovement in the general standard of production.

It is planned to increase the growth rate of the production of consumer goods by 50-100 percent. A list has been indicated of the enterprises and organizations to be moved from the capital within the corresponding period. It is important that the gorkom sections, raykoms, and enterprise and organization leaders have businesslike, rapid contact with all those who must work in this area and must themselves work vigorously and persistently with the ministries. This is particularly topical.

Letters have been sent to 42 ministries. Replies have so far been received from 30. The majority suit us.

At the same time the Ministry of Power Machine Building and the Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry are planning slower rates for the reduction of the proportion of manual labor. The Ministry of the Machine Tool and Tool Building Industry, the Ministry of Heavy and Transport Machine Building, and the Ministry of the Automotive Industry are not providing for the necessary tempo of renewal of the active part of fixed capital.

Instead of reducing the number of workers over the 5-year plan, the Ministry of Construction, Road, and Municipal Machine Building is proposing to increase that number.

The ministry of Civil Aviation, the Ministry of Ferrous Metallurgy, and the Ministry of the Petroleum Refining and Petrochemical Industry have failed to cite specific deadlines for moving production facilities injurious to health out of Moscow,

The Ministry of the Machine Tool and Tool Building Industry has set less stepped up plans for the production of consumer goods at the sector's enterprises.

We cannot agree with this. That means working again to reduced, minimal plans at an intolerably low level of production technology and organization, that is making the 5-year plan an "ordinary" one and therefore failing to fulfill the congress decisions.

I think we must now make demands on these ministries on behalf of the party gorkom plenum. We must simply fight for the fulfillment of every line of the party congress decision.

The most important task for us is rigorous daily party monitoring of the fulfillment of plan targets and socialist pledges.

The organizational and mass political work of the party organizations and public organizations for the 27th CPSU Congress has treatly prompted the successful fulfillment of plan targets for the first quarter.

The results in general are not bad. But, comrades, we must in no circumstances flatter ourselves. January through March last year were simply low in terms of indicators. And the first quarter of this year had 2 more days, including a subbotnik, than last year.

Far from all economic leaders, party organizations, and party raykoms have restructured their work. There are 2 days left to the end of the quarter but even now we cannot say with confidence whether the plan for the sale of output will be fulfilled by the "Norplast" association (the general director is Comrade Kovrigo, the party committee secretary Comrade Pluzhnov), by the "Trekhgornaya Manufaktura" combine (the director is Comrade Krutov, the party committee secretary is Comrade Andriyanova), the No 14 woor working combine (the director is Comrade Khomenko, the party bureau secretary is Comrade Konovalenkov); the "Krugozor" plant (the director is Comrade Guskov, the party committee secretary is Comrade Khudyakov), the "Bytovaya Khimiya" plant (the director is Comrade Medvedev, the party bureau secretary is Comrade Kochelchuk), and the children's knitwear factory (the director is Comrade Zhigareva, the party bureau secretary is Comrade Tsareva).

On the basis of the results of work for the first quarter, many associations, plants, and factories are unstable financially, are failing to fulfill the plan for profit, and are in arrears on payments. As a rule this is connected with the inefficient use of working capital.

Rapid growth rates are largely the result of stepped up plan targets and the correction of the plans for the first quarter of last year. In a number of cases the plan has been fulfilled only thanks to the subbotnik. In the quarter in which the 27th party congress was working 30 enterprises did not even cope with the plan. Our information media must tell Muscovites the names of all 30 directors of these enterprises.

What restructuring can there be if to this day the pernicious practice exists of downgrading plan targets? In my opinion this is simply an affront: The leaders who are Communists are not fulfilling the congress decisions.

Some enterprises are providing for growth rates in 1986 that are lower than last year and for growth rates in the 12th 5-Year Plan lower than in the 11th.

What acceleration is there here? The raykoms must immediately give a party assessment of the leaders of those enterprises and party committees and oblige them to revise their plan indicators.

It is essential to consider that as yet for the city as a whole as well the total of plan targets brought to the enterprises ensures an annual increase in the volume of production of just 2.8 percent and an increase of 4 percent for socialist pledges.

The 1986 targets must be regarded by every rayon, enterprise, shop, sector, and team as the minimum. Their overfulfillment will be real contribution to the acceleration of socioeconomic development.

I want to stress once again that, while ensuring quantitative growth, we must shift the focus of attention from quantitative indicators to quality and efficiency, from intermediate results to end national economic results, from the expansion of fixed capital to its renewal, from the buildup of material and energy resources to their rational use, to the accelerated development of science-intensive sectors.

The concept of the comprehensive socioeconomic development of Moscow over 15 years contains a program for intensifying capital construction. It is planned to ensure an increase of 70-80 percent in work volumes. This is the minimum necessary to build up production capacities and resolve social urban problems.

And these problems are great. But we are embarking on their solution intolerably slowly. Among the construction main administrations only the Main Administration of Industrial Construction of the Moscow Gorispolkom has completed the drafting of the program to build up construction volumes. But at the Main Administration for Housing and Civil Construction in Moscow city and the Main Administration for the Construction of Engineering Installations in Moscow city (the chief is Comrade Resin), and the Main Administration for Specialized Construction and Installation Work in Moscow city (the chief is Comrade Kovalev) the drafting of these very important documents is drowning in bureaucratic red tape, disputes, and attempts to take on a smaller load.

In the current 5-year plan it is essential to ensure the buildup of capacities and volumes of work performed at least 25 percent (by 5-6 percent in 1986) and to concentrate efforts and funds on commissioning projects making it possible in the very near future to obtain a return and to sharply reduce the number of projects under construction simultaneously.

This is all the more essential in view of the unsatisfactory work of a number of construction organizations and the sector as a whole in the first quarter.

Voroshilovskiy, Dzerzhinskiy, Zhdanovskiy, Krasnogvardeyskiy, and Sovetskiy Rayons began the 5-year plan with an underfulfillment of the plan for the volume of capital investments; while Kalininskiy, Oktyabrskiy, Sevastopolskiy, and Timiryazevskiy Rayons began it with the nonfulfillment of the plans for the volume of contract work.

The implementation of the programs which have been elaborated requires the most active involvement of the construction organizations of nonconstruction ministries and departments in their implementation. Their modest participation in instaling the projects essential to the city dwellers cannot satisfy us.

The Moscow Gorispolkom, the party raykoms, and the party committees of ministries and departments with construction organizations in Moscow must immediately elaborate measures to ensure that at least 50 percent of the construction and installation work they fulfill is carried out in construction, socioconsumer, and cultural establishments. To construct in Moscow and to fail to construct the establishments which Muscovites need acutely is a nonparty approach on the part of leaders working in the city.

An important task — not only an urban planning but also a social one — is the creation of housing complexes for young people, of which it is planned to erect 50.

Right now urban planning councils with the participation of Moscow CPSU Gorkom secretaries and bureau members and leaders of the Moscow Gorispolkom and main administrations are examining in detail questions of the development of the city and its architecture. It was recently planned to examine measures for the comprehensive modernization and provision of amenities for the city center, the completion of the formation of protected zones, and the conservation and restoration of monuments of history, architecture, and culture. It has been decided to do this with a special section of the general plan.

One of the city's most acute problems is transport services for the national economy and the population. We have had to deal with this question first of all. This year the introduction at the railroad of comprehensive technology for shipment activity on the basis of its intensification has provided a marked improvement in indicators.

We must double the volumes of subway line construction. In the current 5-year plan 45 km instead of the planned 28 km are to be commissioned. We must increase the length of trolley bus and streetcar lines; the bus transport route network must be put in order and we must introduce automation for the control of bus transport and construct yards and terminals. In general this is a very complex collection of problems and we must seek out and think about ways of resolving them.

The next very important question is trade.

A program has been elaborated and has begun to be implemented for improving Muscovites' provision with the main types of foodstuffs.

By the end of the 5-year plan we must double capacities for the production of sausages and thus abandon their import. To this end we must complete the construction and modernization of a number of meat processing enterprises and construct two new plants. We must maintain a course toward a sharp increase in the production of packed food output.

Nevertheless, the cadres question is the central one in trade. The majority of workers in the sector work honestly and conscientiously. But there are also negative phenomena. Their investigation and the bringing of criminal charges against the culprits shows that there is a whole "system" of extortion and bribery. However hard it is to combat this evil, we must definitively root it out.

The consolidation of the health care base and a substantial improvement in medical services for the population are a very urgent matter for the city.

In previous 5-year plans attention was focused on constructing specialized fixed institutions, which led to a considerable disproportion between the potential of the number of available beds and auxiliary treatment and diagnostic services, whose development lagged behind.

In the 12th 5-Year Plan it is essential to complete the construction of carry-over health projects and, the main thing to increase the volume of construction of treatment and diagnostic blocks, which should considerably improve the quality of patients' treatment. In addition it is essential to continue the modernization and capital repair of the existing hospital stock.

A substantial shortage of medical personnel is to be noted in medical institutions and there is often a poor standard of behavior and simple disregard for a sick person. Measures have now been taken to increase the dispatch of medical VUZ graduates to the city network and the intake into medical schools. The shortage of junior medical personnel will be partially compensated for by the greater involvement of small-scale mechanization aids in work and the improvement of the existing system of organizing and encouraging the labor of medical workers. Work in this direction has begun.

The comprehensive urban "Health" program which is now being elaborated will be a specific manifestation of concern for improving medical services for Muscovites. Similar programs should be created in rayons and at all enterprises and organizations with a consideration for their specific features.

Comrade Mudrak, the new chief of the Main Health Administration, must think up and introduce proposals on the actual structure of medical services, with a view to boosting the weakened rayon echelon.

It must be frankly said that virtually nothing has changed since the June conference at the Central Committee last year, since the city conference, or since the congress in the matter of the essential enhancement of the role of science and the acceleration of the introduction of developments into production. Acquaintance with a number of institutes has shown that sectorial science is dissertation science and recertification (although there has been a resolution) is not carried out at all or is only carried out for show. Here there is as a rule just one reply: We are afraid of cutting back, there will be complaints. But we are not afraid of swallowing up state money (in 10 years the number of people employed in science has risen be nearly 100,000). Systems of automated planning are being poorly introduced.

Analysis has shown that today 500 scientific development, suitable and necessary, have not been introduced and are lying on the shelf. It is planned to elaborate for Moscow an integrated "efficiency and quality" scientific-technical program understandable to every worker, subject to the collectives' organizational work, and party influence.

For larger targeted subjects we must create provisional intersectorial groups of various institutes and approve them and the deadlines for developments and their intruduction.

For the operation of scientific research institutes and design bureaus: We must seek to ensure that in them 70 percent of resources are as a rule connected with the elaboration of specific projects. The project from science to introduction should be the main indicator of the collective's work. No theoretical indicators should be considered. The global assessment of the activity of scientific research institutes and design bureaus should be carried out on a sliding scale over 5 years in terms for the number of these projects and the economic effect really obtained from their implementation.

It was agreed as follows: If in the 5-year period no major yield is obtained, then on the basis of a state check such scientific research institutes and design bureaus are abolished either completely or partially (by department) and, most important, with a cutback in numerical strength and a confiscation of financing.

State checking and the abolition of some institutes must be carried out now. I think that the first 10-15 closed institutes, with the fact being announced in the news media, will have a powerful effect on galvanizing the others.

There is a persistent struggle to be waged here, of course. But for the sake of state interests and in the spirit of the congress decisions, the party raykoms and gorkoms must not yield, must not succumb to requests or attempts at persuasion but display principledness.

The powerful scientific potential of the capital's VUZes is also used with insufficient efficiency. The transition to an intensive path of development has aggravated the problem of replacing engineering and scientific cadres.

The benefits for Muscovites on admission to VUZes have led to the blatant overproduction of specialists with higher education and a lower standard. From the viewpoint of the economy and of social justice this is wrong. We have discussed these questions with Minister Comrade Yagodin and outlined a number of measures making it possible to improve the training and use of specialists with higher education.

Ensuring the comprehensive development of Moscow's economy requires the activation of the work of the Communists of the Moscow Gorispolkom and the city's economic services to restructure the economic mechanism and improve management.

Success will depend largely on the restructuring of the Moscow City Planning Commission (Comrade Stepanov) whose standard of economic work is simply feeble. Often it is replaced by the peremptoriness of the decisions taken without the corresponding technical and economic substantiation and calculations and without preliminary discussion in the rayons. The balance of individual indicators in plans is not adequately ensured. As a rule plans are not linked to manpower resources.

The Moscow Gorispolkom, the Moscow City Planning Commission, the banking, financial, and statistical organs, and labor and material and technical supply organs must draw specific conclusions from the tasks set by the congress to improve planning and management and introduce autonomous financing. They must become the city's economic headquarters in the full sense and boldly assume the solution of topical tasks.

We must concern ourselves closely with a "sore" subject for Moscow — the rational use of manpower resources. The decision taken by the Moscow Gorispolkom provides for a reduction of at least 27,000 in the numbers of industrial production personnel and of 30,000 in the number of people employed in science and the management sphere. That is over the course of the 5-year plan.

A resolution has been adopted on halting the introduction of manpower from other cities into Moscow in 1987. The economic leaders geared to a quota and the party organizations of such enterprises and institutions have been given time to take the necessary steps and fulfill the plan without "quota workers" by means of more strenuous mental work aimed at elaborating and implementing proposals for the accelerated improvement of labor productivity at their production facility.

It is also time to work out measures to reduce the management apparatus.

Comrades! The ideological work section in the report at the congress was very large and it must be taken on. The main thing is the ability to apply these principles specifically and to obtain a real return. And, of course, special emphasis must be placed on individual work with people. This is tremendous, specific work and a considerable proportion of it is the struggle against the carriers of antisocialist morality: idlers, slipshod workers, drunkards, petty thieves, and bureaucrats.

The report from the Sovetskiy CPSU Raykom (Comrade Vinogradov) at the party gorkom bureau showed that so far all work is being performed around the thesis that drunkenness is bad. But we must move to a new stage in resolving this problem: Drunkenness is incompatible with our morality, our way life, and the interests of the matter. Work in all labor collectives must be raised to this level and we must seek to ensure that it is this approach which is put into socialist pledges.

The mass media have a large part to play in drastically breaking down the obsolete. The press' lofty social function obliges the newspaper, radio, and television editorial offices to define measures for enhancing the effectiveness of publications and broadcasts.

A meeting with MOSKOVSKAYA PRAVDA journalists took place recently. The talk showed that the editorial office collective was efficient enough and understood the function of the newspaper, which V.I. Lenin formulated: "The newspaper must march ahead of everyone."

But the work of the newspaper also has serious shortcomings. It publishes few big analytical items on key problems of the city; and the activity of the party organizations and their leaders sometimes fails to reflect the real state of affairs. Here is an example. On 12 March the gorkom bureau examined the question of the work of the Kuznetskiy CPSU Raykom on consolidating law and order and stepping up the struggle against crime and deemed it to be unsatisfactory. The raykom tolerated major shortcomings in the activity of the ispolkom and law enforcement organs in preventing and eradicating law violations. Raykom First Secretary Comrade Golovkov assessed in an unself-critical way the situation prevailing in the rayon with regard to crime, which had risen in the rayon. Yet on the day of the bureau session, MOSKOVSKAYA PRAVDA published a positive feature on the state of affairs in the rayon.

Let us say frankly that the programs of the Moscow television and radio editorial offices arouse no interest among Muscovites. You form the impression that no one watches or listens to many of their programs at all apart from the journalists themselves and the children who watch the "Sleep Well, Little Children!" program.

An attempt was recently made on the Moscow television channel to show Moscow problems. A broadcast from the "Dialogue" series devoted to the capital's transport problems was shown. And although the broadcast was a failure in many ways — there was a "Dialogue" without dialogue — the actual idea of the series, to judge by Muscovites' reaction, fills a need.

The constructive, creative activity of the artistic intelligentsia is more important than ever in activating the human factor and in restructuring people mentally and in the consolidation of the positive processes under way in the country.

The party has always assessed at its worth the artistic intelligentsia's contribution and merits in the working people's communist education and has a solicitous, respectful attitude toward talent and artistic quest. But, in assessing the present state of the capital's cultural sphere from the positions of the congress' demands, it must be admitted that we are not fully satisfied. The spirit of well-intentioned, comradely, profound, consistent criticism has been lost. Acute questions of ideological and creative work are often smoothed over with compliments and effusive praise. Blunders and shortcomings often fail to receive a due assessment from literary and artistic criticism. There are few phenomena now in our culture which have immediately become notable events — phenomena like the shows "Ivan," "The Silver Wedding," and others.

The report from the Moscow Gorispolkom Main Cultural Administration recently heard at the Moscow CPSU Gorkom Bureau convincingly showed that omissions in artistic creation and errors of an ideological nature are the result of unsatisfactory work with cadres.

In resolving the ideological and artistic tasks facing figures of culture, a vanguard role belongs to the Communists of the creative unions and organizations. The primary party organizations are called on to enhance creative cadres' responsibility for the matter and to create among the sphere of the artistic intelligentsia a truly creative atmosphere to which group and personal bias, mercenary manifestations, narrow-mindedness, and time-serving are alien.

The party raykoms and the Moscow CPSU Gorkom cultural section must investigate more deeply the problems of the activity of cultural istitutions and resolutely eradicate the prevailing stereotype in forms of leadership.

In questions of organizational party work the congress' main demand was to proceed more rapidly through the breakdown of conventional views and approaches, to eradicate more resolutely everything preventing our headway, to draw conclusions from criticism, and to assume responsibility for all aspects of the matter. And it is the party cadres — gorkom and raykom secretaries, apparat workers, and the elected aktiv of the primary organizations.

Unfortunately, these demands have not become the rule everywhere. The CPSU raykom plenums held in the first quarter showed that many party raykoms have still been unable to abandon old schemes. This applies primarily to the resolutions which have been adopted, many of which are pretentious and unspecific and unmonitorable.

The CPSU Central Committee Political Report stressed that the further improvement of the entire system of control is an essential condition for enhancing efficiency.

The gorkom has adopted for execution 427 of the most important proposals and critical remarks made during the recent report and election campaign. Over 100,000 are under the control of the raykoms and primary party organizations.

But much in the work is still being done only for form's sake. The majority of party raykoms delayed the elaboration of measures to act on critical remarks. And the Voroshilovskiy, Zheleznodorzhnyy, and Kiyevskiy Raykoms (Comrades Zemskovm, Konyukhova, and Korovitsyn) restricted themselves to merely adopting lists of these critical remarks.

Examining the course of the fulfillment of critical remarks at raykom plenums and party meetings and reporting on their fulfillment to all leading party organs are not recommendations but requirements of the CPSU Statutes.

The statutes requires also that the party organizations actively pursue a cadres policy.

Here we lack proper publicity and take little account of the opinion of labor collectives. The fact that we are not doing enough work here is borne out by the letters arriving in January and February this year, including those reporting leaders' abuses and violations of moral and ethical norms. The facts set out were confirmed in nearly a third of cases.

The party gorkom bureau demands strict punishment for violators of the norms of party life of principeldness. The congress stressed the need for a closer link between the party and the masses. Talks with workers and the population at their places of residence and with enterprise and organization leaders and speeches to working people enable leaders to feel the rhythm of life, to link their work more closely with people's needs and requirements, and to make use of their opinion and recommendations.

Let us say frankly that not everyone immediately adjusted his sails to the fresh wind of changes. Here is one example. At least 100 workers at a branch of the No 2 state ballbearing plant met at the entrance to the plant and spent nearly an hour enumerating the problems of life at the plant: very hard working conditions, similar conditions in daily life, problems which remain unresolved for years, the total indifference of leaders to social questions, window-dressing (before the bureau members arrived the ventilation, which had been inoperative for several years, was turned on and kept working for 24 hours). You should have seen the indignation with which people spoke of all this. You formed the impression that until then the enterprise workers had had no opportunity to mention their troubles to the plant or ministry leaders or party raykoms. And that was indeed the case. The officials dissociated themseves from the workers' cares and problems. Two raykom first secretaries — the secretary of the Oktyabrksiy Raykom (Comrade Svetik) and the secretary of the Kirovskiy Raykom (Comrade Komarov) were unable to make out who specifically should be responsible for what and assume responsibility. The association branch was not on the books of the former or the territory of the latter. Ambition, superficiality, and irresponsibility — there is no other name for this lack of attention toward people.

Yet in Moscow we already have examples, albeit perhaps not many, of work with people and concern for them being a priority for leaders. One such example is the "Znamya Revolyutsii" plant.

It is simply essential that attention be turned toward social questions. The workers who are now resolving gigantic tasks of economic transformations will not forgive leaders their blunders in creating the necessary working, daily living, and leisure conditions.

You can discern the skepticism and dependence of some leaders in developing the services sphere directly at enterprises. But that attitude is futile. Considering that we have little potential or order in the city in this sphere. [sentence as published] This order must be introduced. At the same time working people approve the organization of plant order counters, hairdressers, hire points, repair centers, comprehensive reception centers, medical and health sections, and so forth. In addition rendering consumer services is now included in enterprises' plans.

The initiative of a number of the city's enterprises which have planned in the current 5-year plan (and are including it in their plans) to resolve all social questions at the enterprise deserves full approval. This must become the law for every enterprise in the city.

Comrades! The congress' importance is enormous. But, for all the importance of the work which has been done, the main thing lies ahead. A large amount of work has to be done; a struggle must be waged; and we must take all our accumulated potential, practical will, resolve, courage, and new thinking with us on this long, hard road.

Some replacement of cadres is inevitable. It is under way. But here, of course, a considered, objective approach will be displayed.

Someone may be overzealous and make mistakes — they can be put right. But let him operate vigorously, energetically, specifically, and boldly. And we will support people like that.

There is an obviously urgent need for intensification in the party aktiv's training. We must continue to develop and deepen criticism and self-criticism. We must not be afraid of it, must not dramatize it. On the other hand, after the city conference some people decided their biography had come to an end. No, criticism is the norm of our life and our style of work.

The main thing is that those who are criticized for their work should draw conclusions and rapidly eliminate shortcomings, that this should give them additional energy by letting them know that they are trusted.

There is a very complex period now for the party and for our organization — we must achieve acceleration (not only on the economy) in the current year and the 12th 5-Year Plan. This requires new forms of party work and we must never flatter ourselves with any successes. After the congress, at the gorkom bureau each bureau member expressed his ideas — what new forms and methods should be used, how to organize more effective work in 1986. There were many thoughts. They were discussed and the majority were adopted to be put into operation.

Numerous meetings with congress delegates and gorkom bureau members and secretaries in the labor collectives confirm people's great interest in the rapid solution of the problems mentioned at the 27th congress. A natural desire. And we, the party organs, have no right to allow a pause, which has already been noted in some places since the congress. The party gorkom bureau has now distributed amoung the bureau members assignments connected with the solution of the main urgent problems of the city and has submitted the matter for approval by the plenum.

It must be said that not everyone in the city party organization is succeeding in preserving the dynamism of the congress in their work today. Numerous talks with party raykom first secretaries and primary organization secretaries put us on our guard. References to endless current concerns, the inability to concentrate on the main thing, waiting for orders from above, inconsistency, lack of coordination, fussing, and aiming for the superficial effect — all this is dragging many party workers, including some in the party gorkom, into the quagmire of inertia and the semblance of great business. This situation is simply dangerous.

Every party organization must choose the avenues of work most urgent for its collective, and organize matters practically, focusing attention on work with people, must constantly keep track of results, check them against the heights scaled by the country and the city, immediately make up a lag which has suddenly been allowed, and struggle for the solution of the problem to the end, sparing no effort — then we can state confidently that the decisions of the 27th congress will be fulfilled.

Further on Azerbaijan Party Plenum, Bagirov Speech

PM081331 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 7 Apr 86
First Edition p 2

[Report by correspondent L. Tairov under the rubric "Implement the 27th CPSU Congress Decisions!": "Establishing a New Approach"]

[Text] Azerbaijan — Acceleration was the leitmotif of the report by K. Bagirov, first secretary of the Azerbaijan Communist Party Central Committee, and the speeches by the participants in the republican Communist Party Central Committee plenum to discuss the results of the 27th CPSU congress. It was reported that bitter organization and a marked shift toward addressing working people's needs have recently contributed to labor successes. In the republic as a whole, the plan for the first quarter was completed early and the increase in production was 5 percent compared with an annual target of 4 percent. The improvement in labor productivity was also greater than planned.

But as the plenum noted, there are no grounds for complacency. It is necessary to subject the internal management mechanism and the economy to ongoing and, at the same time, more thorough scrutiny and make effective adjustments. In this connection the plenum demanded stricter action against those who advocate more creative effort in work but who in practice display a hackneyed approach.

This must be the main reason why a considerable number of enterprises failed to achieve plan targets on production volume, sale of products, and, in particular, qualitative indicators. There has been no fundamental breakthrough in the observance of contract discipline.

In view of the fact that the complexion of the republic has long been determined by the extraction of hydrocarbon resources, the plenum participants stated with satisfaction that the oilmen had made a good start. They fulfilled the quarterly plan. There was approval of the initiative by the collective of the deep-water drilling platforms plant on the ahead-of-schedule assimilation of planned capacities, which will help to accelerate the fulfillment of the 27th CPSU Congress instructions on intensifying the exploration and operation of promising fields in the sea and to achieve a substantial increase in oil production. At the same time, the attention of the "Azneft" association leadership was drawn to the inadequate concern for strengthening the drilling and oil and gas extraction base.

The Azerbaijan oilmen's contribution is also determined by their assistance to colleagues in other oil regions of the country, above all by supplies of equipment. But assistance has obviously diminished lately. The leaders of the Main Administration for Petroleum Machine Building were criticized for failing to ensure supplies of products, especially items in great demand — pumping units, reduction gears, and units and hoists for well servicing. There are still complaints about the quality and reliability of this equipment. The Azerbaijan party organization must take responsibility for ensuring a fundamental improvement in the state of affairs in the republic's petroleum machine building.

Analyzing progress in the fulfillment of the Food Program, the keynote speaker and those who contribute to the debate focused attention on the problems of the republic's very important agricultural sectors.

The plenum considered the increase in procurement of milk and eggs in the first quarter to be inadequate and outlined measures to eliminate the sector's lag. Viewing the activity of the State Agro-Industrial Committee in the light of the current tasks, speakers complained that its formation had been an unduly protracted process. This is undesirable, particularly in view of the tasks facing the sector.

The plenum paid considerable attention to questions of restructuring the work style. In a number of places people are still clinging to the old ways; they have a penchant for stage-management and a passion for conferences and vague decisions. Every party organization is obliged to operate in an atmosphere of quest, of renewal of forms and methods of work — this is a party demand. The plenum drew the relevant conclusions from the criticism of the Azerbaijan party organization in connection with violations of financial discipline — criticism contained in the Central Auditing Commission report at the 27th CPSU Congress.

There was an exacting discussion of ways of improving ideological work and strengthening its connection with life. Close attention was paid to the work of the mass media. It was suggested that greater assistance be given to city and rayon newspapers. There was resolute criticism of instances that still occur of pressure on the press and protection of individuals and entire collectives from criticism in the press.

Some party organizations in trade, consumer services, public health, and urban transport have been slow to reorganize their work in the light of the new demands. There were angry words about instances of mismanagement and theft of people's property and cases of bribe-taking and product speculation that have by no means been eradicated. All party organizations, soviet and economic organs, and the public in Azerbaijan must take a firm and uncompromising line on this. The inculcation of civic-mindedness is a matter of paramount importance. There was a discussion of measures to ensure the more vigorous involvement of unemployed manpower in social production and to reorganize the siting of new facilities in the republic's small and medium-size cities.

The plenum outlined a specific program geared to the unconditional fulfillment of the 27th CPSU Congress decisions and the plans for the current year and the 5-year plan as a whole. A course was set toward accelerating socioeconomic development.

New Uzbek Minister of Local Industry Named

WA091950 [Editorial Report] Tashkent PRAVDA VOSTOKA in Russian on 22 March publishes on page 1 a 50-word Uzbek Supreme Soviet Presidium ukase announcing the appointment of Uktam Kuchkarovich Ismailov as the republic's minister of local industry. The ukase is dated 21 March 1986 and is signed by Uzbek Supreme Soviet Presidium Chairman A. Salimov and Secretary L. Bekkulbekova. Page 4 of the same issue carries an unattributed notice that Gafur Nasreddinovich Nasreddinov was released from his responsibilities as the local industry minister in connection with his retirement.

Kunayev Attends Kazakh Writers Congress

[Excerpt] The ninth congress of writers of the republic opened in Alma-Ata today, in the work of which Comrade Kunayev, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo, first secretary of the Kazakhstan Communist Party Central Committee, is participating. Comrade Suleymenov, first secretary of the Directorate of the Kazakhstan Writers' Union, read out a report to the delegates.

Ukrainian Coal Minister Cited on Production Plans

[Excerpts] As was noted at Comrade Gorbachev's meeting with the working people of Kuybyshev Oblast, the coal industry workers completed the first quarter with good results. As you know, this industry was lagging behind for a long time. Even now, many mines are working below their potentials. What is being done in the industry to achieve a sharp rise in the efficiency of all enterprises? Our Donetsk correspondent Gennadiy Kondaurov spoke with Nikolay Sofonovich Surgay, minister of the coal industry of the Ukrainian SSR, who was a delegate at the 27th CPSU Congress.

[Begin recording] [Surgay] There is an acute need to begin construction of new mines at rich deposits — at least six such mines — and to build them without taking 20 years, as the case has been up to now, but to complete them in the normal period. The main thing is reconstruction, technical retooling and renewal of the existing mines which will give us extra coal. In the current 5-year plan we will create new working horizons at 120 existing mines. At many mines, outdated equipment will be replaced with modern equipment from the coal-face to the loading of coal into the railway wagon.

Take for example, Butovka-Donetskaya mine, where reconstruction of the mine is under way. In essence, within the old mine a new powerful contemporary enterprise is being created. This requires much less time and fewer resources than would be required by a green-field state.

Of particular importance is the technical renovation of the 57 mines producing coking coal. We are directing the overwhelming proportion of capital investments into renovating mines and increasing minining capacities. And we will obtain the whole increase in fuel output in the 12th 5-Year Plan by raising labor productivity.

[Kondaurov] Nikolay Sofonovich, miners are unanimous in saying that at present the equipment being produced by coal machine-building works is of very low quality. How can this situation be changed?

[Surgay] The quality of many machines does not stand up to criticism, particularly equipment for small seams. The machine-building works allocate the wrong sorts of metal. The design and development of machines for mines and metal for them must be special. However, I must say that there is another aspect to the matter. Equipment is not looked after very well at some mines. [end recording]

Briefs

Tajikistan Coal Deposit — A new coal deposit, at an altitude of 3,000 meters above sea level, has been opened up in Ganchinskiy Rayon, Tajikistan. The new source is capable of providing all the Gorno-Badakhshanskaya Autonomous Oblast and neighboring regions of the Pamir and the Altay with cheap coal. Amphibious Craft for Siberia — Leningrad April 7 TASS — Hovercraft which have begun to be produced serially by the Svirsk shipyards near Leningrad are intended to operate in marshland and the Tundra and on sea shoals. The five-seat "Hepard" craft will be supplied primarily to little-developed areas in Siberia and in the far north and far east of the USSR. The development of new modes of transportation for those areas was stipulated in the resolutions of the 27th CPSU Congress. Within the next five years (1986-1990) both passenger and freight hovercraft will be introduced. The cosy cabin of the craft is as convenient as that of a car. In Siberian conditions these amphibious craft are far more economical than helicopters, propeller-driven sleigh and crosscountry vehicles on tracks. The craft exerts about as much pressure on the ground as a skier, which helps preserve the vulnerable topsoil of the tundra. [Text] [Moscow TASS in English 0855 GMT 7 Apr 86 LD]

Icebreaker Under Construction — The "Sergo Ordzhonikidze" Baltic Shipyard has begun construction of an as yet unnamed sister-ship to the atomic icebreaker Rossiya. The main turbine-generator has been installed; the ship's atomic engines will have a capacity of 75,000 horsepower. [Summary] [Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0500 GMT 23 Mar 86 LD]

Far East Ferry — Khabarovsk, March 7 TASS — The first phase of the ferry crossing went into operation in Vanino Port (the Soviet Far East). It links the mainland with the island of Sakhalin across the Tatar Strait. The line will be serviced by 11 high-duty diesel electric ships. A container terminal, now under construction in Vanino, is to be completed at the end of 1987. It will cater to container ships carrying cargoes to Chukotka, the Arctic regions, and remote settlements on the coast of the sea of Okhotsk. [Text][Moscow TASS in English 1354 GMT 7 Mar 86 LD]

Giant Transformer — The Zaporozhtransformator production association has completed the manufacture of this year's first giant transformer of 1.25 million kilovolt-amperes capacity. It is being dispatched to the Khmelnitskiy AES construction site. The largest power stations in our country will be equipped with similar equipment during the present 5-year period. Seed Quality Central Concern for Agriculture

[O. Pavlov "Agricultural Review": "The Basis of the Harvest"]

[Text] Field work is 7-10 days behind schedule this year in Central Asia, the Transcaucasus, the North Caucasus, and the south Ukraine — the frontline of sowing work. The end of March was rather cold. Sowing work has begun throughout those regions now. Crop farmers are at work in many parts of Central Asia and on the corn plantations. And in Odessa, Nikolayevsk, and Kherson Oblasts and in Moldavia they are sowing early spring crops.

At the beginning of April machine operators in Crimea Oblast planted the barley and oats in just a few hours while harrowing the soil and cultivating the fall-plowed land. In the Ukraine, as in other parts of the country, great attention is being paid to intensive techniques. Spring crops — corn, rice, sugar beet, and sunflowers — will be cultivated using the new methods there over an area of more than 5 million hectares.

Poltava Oblast machine operators have made a confident start to field work. The past 5-year plan here was a period of extensive introduction of the soil-protection system of cultivation and of moldboardless soil cultivation. And that, as experience has shown, helped to stabilize the crop and protect it against the adverse influences of nature. Kolkhozes and sovkhozes in the Poltava region kept their grain production up. But in neighboring areas — Dnepropetrovsk, Kiev, Kirovograd, and Kharkov Oblast — it fell. During the years of the past 5-year plan almost 2.4 million metric tons of extra gross grain production was achieved when virtually all the kolkhozes and sovkhozes in Poltava Oblast switched to plowless soil cultivation. Some 78,000 metric tons of fuel were saved. The overall economic effect was R414 million.

The grain crop yield in the Poltava region was already higher than the republic's average even during the 10th 5-Year Plan, when plowless cultivation was still being assimilated, in the 11th 5-Year Plan it was 2.2 quintals per hectare higher, and in 1985 3.7 quintals higher. Last year's grain harvest was 29 quintals per hectare and the corn harvest was 40 quintals per hectare on average. The area of land subject to erosion was reduced considerably.

At the same time it must be noted that Poltava's experience (highly rated by our eminent field-crop grower T.S. Maltsev) has still not been disseminated on a wide scale in a number of oblasts in the Ukraine and the RSFSR.

In the past people cited inadequate supplies of subsurface cultivating equipment. In recent years, however, those complaints have been unjustified. Furthermore, in a number of places requests for soil-protection equipment declined. And this was not because farms had enough but because of the reluctance of many leaders and specialists to burden themselves with new problems. Some zonal systems of crop cultivation developed in the early seventies had also become considerably outmoded.

During that period new methods of soil cultivation, intensive techniques, and new strains of grain and other crops had established themselves. Nevertheless on my bookshelf there are substantial works — 200-300 pages long — instructing crop farmers how to proceed to the end of this century. For example, there is the 294-page "System of crop farming on sovkhozes and kolkhozes in Smolensk Oblast." I cannot be sure that such a voluminous work has been mastered by all local specialists, but what I do know is that despite increased supplies of equipment and mineral fertilizers, the staple crop yield did not increase during the past two 5-year plans. I am not predicting how this year will turn out for farms there but I can note that the highest percentage of substandard spring grain and pulse crop seeds was on Smolensk Oblast farms in the Central Economic region and that the amount of flax not ready for sowing was high there, too.

With good reason seeds are called the foundation of the harvest. We have already noted in previous reviews that in the country as a whole farms have an adequate supply. But at the same time the newspaper has also written that in some places the preparation of seed for a number of crops is slow and that seed exchange between farms and republics is disorganized. Unfortunately, the quality of grain and pulse crop seed is still not high enough in Perm, Tomsk, Irkutsk, and Chita Oblasts, Krasnoyarsk and Khabarovsk Krays, and the Tuva ASSR. There is much substandard sunflower seed in Lipetsk, Belogorod, Penza, Kuybyshev, and Ulyanovsk Oblasts and in Altay Kray. Concern for seed quality must be at the center of attention for organs of the agro-industrial complex.

Baku Develops Tungsten-Free Steel Production

OW071331 [Editorial Report] Moscow Television Service in Russian at 0730 GMT on 18 March carries a 30-minute "Science and Life" program, presented by journalist B.V. Goldayev, dealing with problems in tungsten-free steel production in Baku. Opening shots show scenes of Baku and of oil pumping facilities on the Caspian Sea, with Goldayev noting that there is a vigorous scientific life in Baku even though it seems to be a calm and placid city. He notes that everyone is familiar with Baku's oil industry, but that not many are familiar with Baku's production of steel, particularly tungsten-free steel.

As video shows a heat treatment laboratory, Goldayev says: "Specialists however understand the significance of this kind of alloy. Metallurgical scientists in many countries are working on this problem. After all, tungsten reserves are running out, and within 30 years they will be almost completely depleted. The tungsten problem is particularly topical for our country. It is imported from abroad, and naturally considerable sums of money are spent for this."

Video then shows Goldayev interviewing N.M. Suleymanov, director of the "Kristall" special design and technology bureau of metal studies of the Azerbaijan Academy of Sciences, where work is being carried out on new alloys and steel-tempering methods. Suleymanov discusses the importance of this work for the tool building industry and notes that results of the bureau's work have been introduced in "several hundred enterprises." Video shows graphs and diagrams depicting the growing economic impact of the institutes' findings and examples of tools made of new steel alloys.

Suleymanov says: "These tools do not contain tungsten, an extremely scarce metal, and half as much molybdenum and it is natural that this steel costs half as much." But, he adds, "the quality is in no way inferior, this has been proven unequivocally, and in most cases this steel has a number of advantages."

As video cuts to shots of the Moscow Higher Technical School imeni N.Ye. Bauman and facilities in use there, Goldayev says the school is finding it difficult to have its discoveries applied and refers to Gorbachev's statement at the 27th CPSU Congress about delays in the introduction of discoveries and inventions.

Video then cuts to shots of Doctor of Sciences A.G. Rakhshtadt, who says that the All-Union Scientific Research Institute for the Tool Industry "showed a negative attitude toward the new type of steel, and tried to bring to its side whoever it could in order to create an atmosphere of resistance to the conduct of this exceptionally important work," adding, "the cost of tungsten-free steel, regardless of the scarcity of tungsten, is half that of ordinary tool steel." He further says that the "KAMAZ" enterprise has produced over 50,000 tools using the new steel.

Doctor of Sciences Lanskaya says that the new type of alloy steel cannot be used for machining very hard metals. Doctor of Sciences Podurayev says that the introduction of tools made of the new tungsten-free alloys is an interdepartmental problem involving the Moscow Higher Technical School imeni Bauman and the Ferrous Metallurgy SRI [Scientific Research Institute] imeni I.P. Bardin.

Rakhshtadt notes that the plan of measures signed by Minister Balmont himself is not being implemented, "and Minister Balmont himself turned out to be among those who object to the large-scale use of these steels in his own industry."

Video then cuts to shots of Suleymanov, who says, "The Ministry of Machine Tool and Tool Building Industry says frankly that it is interested in expensive steel and is thus disregarding state interests." He adds "in order to fulfill its gross production plan it would have to turn out more tools if all the other indicators were to stay at the same level."

Speaking about other important factors, Suleymanov says the ministry's leading institute "about 10 years ago ignored and failed to recognize the value of the innovation and claimed that the scientific finding was that tungsten-free steel could not be used. When tests were ordered, the test results were repeatedly falsified by the institute." He continues, "up to now they have been boycotting and not allowing the use of tungsten-free steel in the industry," and adds, "they are trying to lead into error the State Planning Committee, the State Committee for Science and Technology, and other bodies, and unfortunately at a very high level."

Speaking about bureau scientists working on the development of new tool steel that require no tempering and that will cost about one-tenth of standard tool steel, Suleymanov says "it is like being at the front, we have concentrated our efforts on the unnecessary struggle with the machine tool and tool industry ministry, and its main institute, the All-Union SRI for the Tool Industry [Vniiinstrument], and some scientists mobilized by the Vniiinstrument institute. If we did not have this problem, our scientists, our specialists, could complete the new development projects and deal with their introduction."

In conclusion, Suleymanov speaks about the development of steel for pipe production and tool steel for use in far north conditions.

USSR OFFERS TO REINTRODUCE NUCLEAR MORATORIUM

Korniyenko Cited

LD140836 Moscow TASS in English 0827 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 14 TASS -- The Soviet leadership believes that no task is more important and urgent today than that of arresting the growth of the military danger and saving mankind from the nuclear threat, Georgiy Korniyenko, first deputy foreign minister of the USSR, said at a press conference here today.

Determined to achieve a cardinal turn for the better in world developments, the Soviet Union has identified the struggle to stop the arms race and prevent it in space and to completely eliminate nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction before the end of this century as the centerpiece of its foreign policy in the years to come.

Both common sense and the findings of prominent experts indicate that complete cessation of nuclear weapon tests may be the most effective and at the same time the simplest way of initiating the process of nuclear arms elimination. The nuclear systems already in the inventories would not be upgraded, and it would become virtually impossible to develop new ones.

Today there exists every objective prerequisite for resolving, in a mutually acceptable way and without diminishing anyone's security, the issue of a total ban on nuclear explosions providing for strict verification of compliance with such a ban. What this requires is only political will.

Guided by a desire to set a good example and give the necessary impetus to nuclear disarmament, the Soviet Union took a bold step last August in declaring a unilateral moratorium on all nuclear explosions. To do so it had to suspend the implementation of a relevant programme at a certain military and economic cost to itself.

Our moratorium initially declared effective until the end of 1985 was extended twice. This was done against the background of an unceasing and, to put it bluntly, provocative nuclear cannonade at the U.S. test ranges.

Each time the Soviet Union candidly warned that the unilateral moratorium could not last indefinitely, that there was a line beyond which it could not continue. That line is determined by the interests of security of our country and that of our allies.

Unfortunately, the U.S. leadership has not passed the test of responsibility, and in Nevada on April 10 it literally blew up a unique chance to stop the nuclear arms race.

As the statement by the Soviet Government of April 11 emphasizes, the nuclear explosion carried out in the United States "has once again clearly demonstrated that behind the U.S. Administration's words about its commitment to the goal of eliminating nuclear weapons lies, in effect, the intention to continue threatening mankind with the nuclear sword and keep the world trapped by the fear of total annihilation".

In these circumstances the Soviet Government's announcement to the effect that it is henceforth free from its unilateral obligation to refrain from any nuclear explosions have not, we believe, come as a surprise to anyone.

Does this mean that the proponents of the nuclear arms race have had their way and that the door to a non-nuclear world, just beginning to open, has been slammed shut? We are categorically opposed to this kind of defeatist mentality, to forcing a fatalistic view of the future on mankind.

The Soviet Union is prepared to re-introduce the moratorium on all nuclear explosions at any time, given reciprocal willingness on the part of the United States. Once again, it is for Washington to respond.

The U.S. Government still has before it another proposal of ours concerning a prompt start of negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear test ban. The USSR is agreeable to any form of such negotiations -- bilateral, trilateral or multilateral -- as long as that leads to an agreement.

In light of the latest developments, we are strongly convinced that not only does the problem of a nuclear weapon test ban remain on the agenda, but that it takes on an even greater urgency, and the Soviet Union intends to seek its resolution perseveringly.

[Text] Moscow April 14 TASS -- The U.S. leadership, keen to justify its refusal to end nuclear testing, pleads difficulties with verification, but the verification problem can be resolved successfully, Andranik Petrosyants, chairman of the State Committee of the USSR for the Use of Nuclear Energy, told a news conference at the press center of the Soviet Foreign Ministry today.

Answering questions from attending newsmen, he said seismic stations existing in the USSR, the United States, a number of European countries and elsewhere were being continuously upgraded. International seismic data could also be used for verification purposes.

The Soviet side, Petrosyants said, has received with satisfaction a proposal for verification made in a message from the leaders of six nations. It was also prepared for on-site inspections.

"Of course," he said further, "part of the verification-related issues needs certain specifying. This requires sitting down at the negotiating table but with a clearly defined aim, which means that the United States should declare in good faith that in discussing these issues it stands for a complete prohibition of nuclear tests. Without this no discussion can take place."

Replying to a question about the Soviet Union's position as regards the U.S. military threat to Libya, Georgiy Korniyenko, first deputy foreign minister of the USSR, said:

"The main point is not to allow a U.S. aggression against Libya, or against any other nation for that matter. The Soviet Union, for its part, is doing everything in its power towards this end. The same can be said of the other Warsaw Treaty countries. Our contacts with the United States are marked by a desire to prevent an aggression against Libya.

Marshal of the Soviet Union Sergey Akhromeyev, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of the USSR and first deputy defense minister of the USSR, said, when asked if the USSR was assisting Libya, that "there are Soviet military specialists there, who are performing purely technical tasks".

In answer to a question of which kind of connection there was between the latest U.S. nuclear blast in Nevada and the U.S. military buildup in the Mediterranean, he said:

"It is the same policy which is aimed at preventing any lowering of world tension which would enable the U.S. Administration to carry on the arms race and achieve military superiority. The nuclear tests, the heightening of tension around Libya, the intrusions into Soviet territorial waters in the Black Sea and the major military exercises stages by the United States of late have all been part of this policy."

A correspondent of the London-based SUNDAY TIMES asked Marshal Akhromeyev about the measures planned by the USSR in conjunction with Washington's intention to press on with its SDI program.

"Unlike the United States," was the reply, "The Soviet Union does not have any plans for 'star wars'. We are not developing a nationwide anti-missile defense. The Soviet Union's position is one for a ban on space strike weapons at any stage of development. This is why we do not conduct nuclear tests to evolve such weapons."

Answering a question from a TASS correspondent who asked about the rationale for Washington's striving, through all manner of ploys, to evade solving the problem of banning nuclear tests, Marshal Akhromeyev said:

"From the military point of view, it is explained by the fact that the United States has not given up its aim of gaining military superiority over the USSR, a superiority of the NATO bloc over the Warsaw Treaty Organization. The evasion of the resolution of the problem of nuclear testing is connected with the U.S. Administration's intention to continue threatening mankind with a nuclear sword."

Saying that the United States was the champion for the number of nuclear blasts it had set off, he added:

"The USSR is not going to catch up with the United States in this respect. But we hope that common sense will eventually triumph. Can one really go on blasting our native planet forever?"

Korniyenko said that Washington's refusal to stop nuclear testing made it even more imperative to bring about an end to such blasts. Likewise, the current U.S. posturing added further urgency to the problem of establishing nuclear-free zones, including one in northern Europe.

The first deputy foreign minister of the USSR said the Soviet Union was prepared to return to the moratorium at any moment but this moratorium could be only mutual, undertaken jointly with the United States, rather than unilateral.

Setting forth the Soviet position on a summit meeting, he quoted a statement by Mikhail Gorbachev in Tolyatti where the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee said that the Soviet side was for another meeting and was not advancing any preconditions for it. But it was essential that this meeting be a step forward, that it bring practical results towards an end to the arms race and that there be a proper atmosphere for such a meeting.

REACTION CONTINUES TO U.S. NUCLEAR BLAST

Soviet Youth Protest

LD112308 Moscow TASS in English 1642 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 11 TASS -- According to the Soviet youth, the U.S. nuclear explosion set off in Nevada on Thursday, was a dangerous, destabilizing step.

This was today underlined at a press conference by the youth delegation who handed over their address to President Reagan, demanding an end to nuclear testing, at the American Embassy in Moscow two days ago.

The Nevada testing, and the reception, far from diplomatic, accorded the Soviet youth delegation by U.S. Embassy staff who did not let the Soviet representatives enter the building to deliver the address, showed that the Reagan administration was not going to give up testing, said a young factory worker, Nikolay Manokhin.

Disregarding the will of millions of people around the world, he said, the United States was continuing the testing with the aim to attain the unattainable -- superiority over the Soviet Union.

"Mankind can survive if it shows enough courage and unity in pressing for an end to nuclear testing," said Svetlana Skvortsova, a student.

"The Soviet Union struck to its unilateral moratorium on all nuclear blasts in its sincere striving for a nuclear-free future. The White House, however, brazenly challenged all of mankind."

The Soviet youth did not consider the question of banning nuclear testing as closed, young researcher Aleksey Goncbarenko told the press conference.

His view is shared by millions of people all over the world, including the United States. Ending nuclear explosions can and should become the first and most important step towards a peaceful future.

That is why the Soviet young people called on millions of their peers in other countries to step up the campaign for banning nuclear testing.

'Paranoic Reliance on Force'

LD111736 Moscow TASS in English 1650 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 11 TASS -- TASS news analyst Leonid Ponomarev writes:

Representatives of the Washington adminstration try in every way to justify the fresh U.S. nuclear explosion in Nevada. Deputy Press Secretary of the White House Edward Djerejian at a meeting with journalists asserted that neither a moratorium, nor a comprehensive test ban would consolidate security, stability and peace in present-day conditions, and therefore the tests would be continued. But this is a false stand. It is aimed at camouflaging Washington's actual renunciation of the spirit of Geneva, if it ever sincerely pledged allegiance to it at all.

As is known, encouraging statements to the effect that a nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought and that the sides would not seek to achieve military superiority were made on the U.S. part at the Soviet-U.S. summit in Geneva.

Moreover, in the new-year TV address to the Soviet people on January 1, 1986, the head of the White House assured the TV viewers that the USA was determined to build relations between the two countries in the coming months on the understanding achieved in Geneva.

"I see a busy year ahead in building on the foundations laid in Geneva", he said.

And what is taking place in reality? While the Soviet Union continued to observe its voluntarily assumed unilateral moratorium on all nuclear testing, they in Washington started breaking up those foundations by nuclear explosions in Nevada, by ostentatious preparations for "star wars". It should be added that the anti-Soviet campaign has been resumed in the USA with new force. That campaign abounds in all sort of falsehoods and insults directed at the Soviet Union.

The newspaper "BOSTON GLOBE" pointed out that the real reason why the U.S. Administration rejected the Soviet proposal on the moratorium is that unlike other administrations it is not satisfied with an approximately equal U.S.-Soviet strategic balance.

The present U.S. administration needs a certain degree of military superiority to bring pressure on the Soviet Union. But this is a dangerous and almost certainly an illusory aim, the newspaper warns.

It is clear that Washington's deeds differ from its words, that it is striving with all its might for military superiority.

Yesterday's nuclear explosion in Nevada that caused anger and indignation the world over attests to Washington's extreme unreliability as a political partner, reveals its perfidy and its almost paranoic reliance on force.

'Challenging, Cancerous' Blast

[Vladimir Dunayev report from Washington; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[text] The nuclear explosion in the state of Nevada, challenging, cancerous, -- as it has been called here -- has produced a resounding echo in Washington. Senators from Boeing, ministers from Lockheed, all the reactionaries, all those who are fond of using the military stick, are now rejoicing, so to speak, applauding the White House. Those legislators who are aware of what anxieties and dangers now will arise following that explosion in Nevada are trying to do something at the last moment. They want to bring in restrictions on allocations for new nuclear explosions. Incidentally, another explosion in Nevada is planned for next week and what is more, another nuclear explosion is planned for 22-23 April.

It must be said that on Tuesday and then on Wednesday when these tests were postponed, set aside, hopes arose here.

Many commentators started saying: Well you see, be it reluctantly or at the last moment, the White House is all the same ready to put off these tests in order to create, for all that, a more favorable atmosphere during talks on the forthcoming new Soviet-U.S. summit meeting. But these local commentators overestimated the ability of the present administration to think soberly and with foresight and did not sufficiently appraise its militarist instinct. Not only those fighters for peace who have converged at the Nevada testing place in order to hinder them, but also very many forces in the United States are now indignant and are protesting and organizing themselves. These are both lawyers and doctors and worried scientists. Actually, all U.S. observers agree with the view that the times of the nuclear tests were specially brought forward in order to somehow escape pressure, pressure inside the country from the American public, and pressure from U.S. allies.

Hopes 'Betrayed' by U.S.

PM111539 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 12 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Article by Vladimir Bolshakov: "Observer's Opinion"]

[Text] Until the last minute there was a hope that the underground testing of the nuclear device at the Nevada test ground would be canceled. As you watched the teleprinters at our editorial office again setting about tapping out reports of the preparation in the United States for this test, codenamed "Mighty Oak," it was hard to avoid the feeling that what you were hearing was not the tapping of the teleprinters but the sound of a metronome counting down the time to the explosion.

And when seismological stations throughout the world nonetheless registered the explosion in Nevada, it reverberated with pain and anger in millions of hearts: "No, they did not cancel it!" Man's hopes of putting an end to lethal weapons tests in the very near future and clearing the way into a nuclear-free 21st century have been betrayed by the United States.

It is clear that the present administration headed by President R. Reagan has no intention of renouncing nuclear explosions in principle. It is seeking come what may to continue them with a view to creating nuclear weapons for "star wars," to gain military superiority over the Soviet Union. This was demonstrated by the "Mighty Oak," which has grown up from poisoned roots in Nevada.

The very name is no accident, it has its own symbolism. For official Washington it is a show of strength. For the rest of the world it is a symbol of how thoroughly the military-industrial complex, with its truly oak-hard approach to world politics in general and the problem of banning and eliminating nuclear weapons in particular, has become entrenched in U.S. society. Concern for gain and profit is clouding the eyes of the owners of the military corporations and their stooges and preventing them from seeing the objective truth. And that is that the United States has again wrecked the opportunity of halting the arms race which will add to no one's security but merely bring man closer to the brink of the nuclear abyss. Hopes of pushing others there while the United States stays on the brink are truly insane.

"In the 5 years the Reagan administration has firmly opposed a ban of nuclear test explosions," THE BOSTON GLOBE writes, "not only have security problems become more complex but the United States has found itself at a disadvantage in vying with the Soviet Union for the sympathy of world public opinion." These words were written on the eve of the Nevada explosion. They are even more topical now.

The explosion in Nevada has generated everywhere an explosion of indignation and protest from people of goodwill. The sympathies of the world's peoples are with those who are struggling to prevent nuclear war. In this, in the support given to our party's policy by the Soviet people, the socialist countries, and all honest people in the world, the CPSU derives strength, consistently seeking the goals set in M.S. Gorbachev's statement of 15 January this year. The USSR's peace offensive cannot be halted by nuclear provocations! The USSR proceeds from the premise that security problems in the nuclear age are a matter not only for statesmen and politicians but also for all peoples. May there resound persistently, daily, and everywhere over our planet the words: "No to nuclear tests! Yes to nuclear disarmament!"

PRAVDA Editor Comments

[Commentary by Tomas Kolesnichenko, member of PRAVDA editorial collegium; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Hello, comrades! You have just received a new confirmation that the echo of the nulcear explosion at the U.S. testing ground in Nevada has not yet faded away [referring to previous news items condemning Nevada test]. On the contrary, it is taking in more and more countries and continents, in effect our entire planet. And it is charateristic that there is today no serious comment by the leading mass information media that fails to point out the diametrically opposed approached that the Soviet Union and the United States take to the most urgent topic of modern times, the problem of war and peace. It has become obvious, as the saying goes, who is who: Who is for seeking a solution to this problem and is taking realistic steps along this path; and who only says they are for peace, while in fact are threatening mankind with a nuclear sword -- as Washington proved by the Nevada test. For only one thing was required of Washington: that it should respond to the Soviet initiative. The opportunity to stop nuclear tests, and therefore, the opportunity to destroy nuclear weapons, would already, this very day, have become a reality. Unfortunately, this did not happen. It is Washington's fault that a historic chance has been missed.

But what now? Yesterday's statement by the Soviet Government, which is now at the center of world press attention, provides an answer to that question. The Soviet Union expresses its readiness to return at any time to the issue of a mutual moratorium on nuclear explosions; we are ready to start negotiations on a total ban on nuclear weapons; are ready for any form of negotiations and any sort of accord, as long as it works toward reaching agreement. One thing is needed for this to succeed: goodwill and a manifestation of responsibility and realism on Washington's part. So, as the Americans say, the ball is in their court.

As for the Soviet Union, as is clear from our government's statement, we will continue to fight for a halt to nuclear tests and for a world [mir] without nuclear weapons. This task remains -- it is topical and pressing.

Nevada Test 'Irresponsible'

LD131757 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1400 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Report from the "International Panorama" program presented by Boris Kalyagin]

[Excerpts] The world is indignant and alarmed at the U.S. Administration's new irresponsible step, the explosion of an underground nuclear device.

Up to the last minute, many still hoped that maybe this time Washington would listen to the voice of reason. These expectations rose when it became known that the nuclear test scheduled for Tuesday had been postponed. Some Western observers began suggesting that this delay was possibly a manifestation that the U.S. Administration had finally decided to demonstrate goodwill. Washington's actions have, however, disproved that optimistic assessment. At the last minute, members of the international organization Greenpeace made a desperate attempt to hinder the test. Six of them got through to the nuclear testing grounds in Nevada, but they were spotted by guards from a helicopter and arrested. Several dozen demonstrators who had organized a protest to the blast were also thrown behind bars. The authorities even announced that anyone attempting to get through to the testing grounds would be considered terrorists. Incidentally, this once again shows who gets to be called a terrorist in the United States.

The current action has bared to the whole world the true face of those in power in Washington. If the leader across the ocean previously succeeded sometimes in misleading public opinion and camouflaging his militaristic positions with references to the Soviet Union's intransigence over verification, they are now deprived of that maneuver. The Soviet Union advocates the strictest verification of the fulfillment of a nuclear test ban agreement, right up to on-site inspection. The United States, however, has refused to make use of the historic opportunity afforded to them to block the path of the arms race. The current administration has demonstrated that the military-industrial complex profits and the wish to try to get military-political hegemony in the world means more to it than mankind's vital interests, including those of the U.S. people. [video shows Nevada blast and demonstrators]

The USSR Government has declared that it is henceforth free of the unilateral obligation it assumed to refrain from conducting any nuclear explosions. At the same time, our country expresses its readiness to return at any time to a mutual moratorium. Thus, the solution to this problem depends, as before, on the United States.

Saber rattling is not the right way to promote agreement with our country. Yet this is precisely what the United States is up to now. The only thing the U.S. Administration retains from Geneva, it seems, is talk about a new meeting between the U.S. President and the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee.

The Soviet side, as Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev has stressed, favors such a meeting. We want it, however, to yield practical results toward halting the arms race. The meeting can take place if the atmosphere of Geneva is resurrected. We cannot fail to note that attempts are being made to make use of the bogged-down Soviet-U.S. dialogue in order to cover up the accomplishment of military goals.

COMPARISON OF GOVERNMENT ON MORATORIUM

Moscow PRAVDA in Russian on 12 April carries in its First Edition on page 1 the text of the Soviet Government Statement on the nuclear explosion moratorium. The PRAVDA report, entitled "Soviet Government Statement," has been compated to the Moscow TASS English version published in the 11 April Soviet Union DAILY REPORT, pp AA 6-8, revealing the following variation:

Paragraph one, line one in PRAVDA reads: [Text] The nuclear explosion (omitting first paragraph)

USSR REJECTS TERRORISM 'IN ANY FORM'; ACCUSES U.S.

LD111633 Moscow TASS in English 1616 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 11 TASS -- The Soviet Union has declared and will be declaring against terrorism, Valeriy Sukhin, deputy chief of the Press Department of the USSR Foreign Ministry, said at a briefing for Soviet and foreign reporters today. Rejection of terrorism in any form is the Soviet Union's principled stand, which has been confirmed again at the 27th CPSU Congress.

We believe that terrorism cannot be ended unless its causes are removed, said the spokesman for the USSR Foreign Ministry. These causes are the striving to impose alien will on sovereign peoples, the interference in the affairs of other countries and regions, attempts to perpetuate inequitable conditions of the existence of some countries at the expense of the interests of others. These are actually manifestations of terrorism, too, in this case state terrorism. The latest manifestations of state terrorism are well known. They were with regard to Nicaragua, Libya, other countries and regions. The U.S. intentions to take weapons and mercenaries to Ghana, which were reported, have been assessed by Valeriy Sukhin as an example of international terrorism. This anti-Ghanaian action was prepared and planned in the USA and mercenaries were recruited in the USA, too, he said.

WEEKLY 'INTERNATIONAL OBSERVERS ROUNDTABLE'

LD132037 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1130 GMT 13 Apr 86

["International Observers Roundtable" program with Spartak Ivanovich Beglov, APN Political Observer; Aleksandr Yevgeniyevich Bovin, IZVESTIYA Political Observer; and Vladimir Yakovlevich Tsvetov, Central Television and All-Union Radio Political Observer]

[Text] [Tsvetov] Hello, comrades! Despite the insistent calls by world public opinion and U.S. public opinion itself to heed the voice of common sense, and despite the warning by the Soviet Union that it will be compelled to abandon its unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests, the United States has nevertheless carried out an underground nuclear explosion. The significance of this step by the U.S. Administration lies not only in the fact, although this is evidently the most important thing, that it has demonstrated its obsession with the idea of achieving nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union, but also in the fact that the Washington authorities have shown the world once again that they have no desire to adhere to the accords reached at the Soviet-U.S. summit meeting in Geneva. You will remember that the sides agreed there to limit and reduce nuclear armaments and to strengthen strategic stability. It would appear that certain circles in Washington became frightened by the fact that points of contact in the positions of the USSR and the United States took shape in Geneva, and now those circles are trying to destroy the atmosphere of Geneva.

[Beglov] In this connection, I recall something that was said by a prominent U.S. publicist and member of the family that publishes THE NEW YORK TIMES from his observations of the actions of the present administration: The White House is not afraid to take a risk for the sake of war, but it is absolutely incapable of risking anything at all for the sake of peace.

[Bovin] That explosion did not surprise me at all -- it was all quite easy to predict. What is very interesting here is the evolution of the arguments that the White House is putting forth to defend its position. At first, as all our comrades know, they kept speaking about monitoring, saying that it was impossible to monitor.

Then we said: OK, since that is what is worrying you, please come over and let us negotiate about on-site monitoring. No porblem. Then they said: OK, you come over to us and let us monitor how we carry out explosions and how you carry them out. We said: But where is the logic? Let us do the monitoring to ensure that there are no explosions. After that, they stopped making a special fuss about monitoring and told the actual truth: We need nuclear weapons. We need to develop them. We need to have them reliable. So we will carry out nuclear explosions.

[Tsvetov] They need them to produce both new types of nuclear weapons and also the components of space weapons.

[Bovin] Precisely, precisely. After that they say: Let us first of all come to an agreement on doing away with nuclear weapons, and then we will stop the explosions. But that, too, is some sort of terribly curious logic. After all, what is the whole point of ending tests? Of course it does not end the arms race, but it does hamper it, because if there are not explosions it means you cannot create new weapons. It means you are not sure of the quality, so to speak, of the weapons that you have stockpiled. And all this hampers the arms race, which is in fact what is needed. That is precisely what our logic is: Let us not carry out explosions -- that will help us reduce the intensity of the arms race, and then we will come to an agreement. That is actual logic. But what on earth is the logic in saying: Let us first come to an agreement, then after that we will not carry out explosions.

[Beglov] There is logic, however, in the action.

[Bovin] Yes, of course, there is logic in the action.

[Beglov] We have spoken of the logic of the absurd in what is said, but there is without doubt a logic in the action, and if you take a look at the U.S. record of what it has done in this regard you can see that since 1945-46, it has been making leaps forward in the development of new nuclear technology -- by now probably several dozen such leaps forward. But now it is simply a matter of their wanting to seize the monopoly on a new generation of nuclear weapons, and it is no accident that precisely now, as has become known, $2 billion -- a whole $2 billion -- is being allocated for improving the whole complex...

[Tsvetov] The test site.

[Beglov] Yes, at the test site, and for what? In order to modernize the enterprises which produce tritium, uranium, and plutonium -- the chief nuclear materials; funds will be allocated for the construction of modern, new laboratories for studying the possibilities of the nuclear trigger and improving the nuclear trigger on laser weapons for space systems; and finally, they intend to improve nuclear warheads for new strategic offensive systems such as Trident-2.

[Tsvetov] The MX...

[Beglov] ... Midgetman and others. It has the air of not just a 5-year plan, but, I would say, of a 15-year plan or a 20-year plan.

[Tsvetov] We have just said why the United States needs nuclear tests: to check the readiness of its nuclear weapons already in existence, to create new types of nuclear weapons, and to develop the components of space weapons. But these nuclear explosions and the refusal to join the moratorium we proposed not only have a military aim, but a political one as well. It is a sort of nuclear trigger for the overall aggressive course of U.S. policy -- namely, to step up world tension, to complicate Soviet-U.S. relations, and, in this unbelievably complicated and alarming atmosphere, to threaten countries and nations by force, to demonstrate force, and, wherever the situation allows, to set force in motion.

[Bovin] The arrogance of force is one of the characteristic features of their policy. Take what happened to us in the Black Sea, when they turned up at Lastochkino Gnezdo. And what happened off the shores of Libya? All that business over our mission at the United Nations. And the hysterics that are going on over Nicaragua. And of course, people sometimes express the thought that, look, the Americans are behaving like boors, but we seem to be doing nothing in response. I have recently received several letters in this vein: How could this have happened, Comrade Bovin? We should have sunk the U.S. ships that came into our territory there. While thinking about this, a thought came into my mind. In 1976, the Americans celebrated the 200th anniversary of their independence, while our state is, I think, over a thousand years old, so as you can see we are 5 times older than they are...

[Beglov] Five times older.

[Bovin] Five times older, yes, and we have far greater historical experience, a far richer cultural tradition, for example, and tradition of political thought. The degree, as it were, of our responsibility in world politics, as actual experience shows, is considerably higher. It is the simplest thing in the world to say an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, but the stakes are very high. Our restraint and self-possession indicate precisely the responsible nature of our policies. Incidentally, the British weekly OBSERVER, which is a quite respectable bourgeois weekly, printed an article entitled "Rambo Prances in Washington," in which the author writes that the West would be shocked if Gorbachev indulged in the outbursts of emotion that we accept as the normal course of U.S. foreign policy. He concludes his article with the thought that Reagan's foreign policy is the foreign policy of a fanatic, not a statesman.

[Tsvetov] The statement by the Soviet Government that was published on Friday is yet another piece of evidence that our policy is based, not on emotions, but on healthy reasoning. Despite the blatantly fanatical devotion of the U.S. Administration to continuing nuclear tests, the Soviet Union rexpressed its readiness to return, at any time, to a mutual moratorium on nuclear explosions if, of course, the U.S. Government states that it will refrain from carrying out such explosions. At the same time, the Soviet Government confirmed once again its proposal that talks be started without delay on a complete ban on nuclear weapons tests. Surely reason will prevail some time in U.S. policy.

[Beglov] There is nothing left to do for the rest of world but to tell the Americans: Your morality, the morality of your politics has dropped to an all-time low. Let us recall what it was like 23 years ago, when the Moscow treaty on the prohibition of tests in three environments was signed. I happened to be in the United States at that time and saw to what extent people had taken heart who, well, literally, as they say, felt at a dead end over all the misuse of U.S. strength and its arbitrary nature. They could not see a way out. Then finally, there appeared a statesman in the United States, John Kennedy, who, following his very unsuccessful experience in this fist law -- you remember the incursion in the Bay of Pigs and the Caribbean crisis -- said: No, we must start over; we have to put an end to this; we must put down a new marker so that there will be a new beginning in our policy.

[Bovin] All the same, things are getting to the stage where there must be a new summit-level meeting. We would like it to be a new one, not only in terms of its ordinal number but also its content. The question that is most ready for a solution in principle is in fact the question of terminating nuclear tests. There have been many talks and the positions are to a large extent agreed. The only thing remaining is purely political will and a few technical details. On precisely this question, the United States, as we have just now been saying, says "no" in the most decisive manner. The question then indeed arises: What is it that they want from this new meeting? What are they working toward in general?

[Tsvetov] This kind of analogy arises: The United States invites our observers to the nuclear test site, not to check the termination of nuclear explosions, but to register these explosions, more precisely so as to bless them by their presence. In the same way, summit-level talks should, according to the United States, be just a sort of background against which it is easier to continue their arms race policy.

[Beglov] At any rate, it is clear on our side that we will not compete with them in a demonstration of strength and we will not compete with them in the game of whipping up a new cold war. This, as they say, is their choice and their responsibility. Our choice is different. Our attitude toward the next meeting and our aim at the next meeting boils down to the fact that it should yield both a new quality in relations between the two countries and a new quality with regard to the issues concerning disarmament and those proposals on the agenda. Without a new quality, there can be, of course, no question of the Geneva process, as it is now called, continuing and serving the cause of a change for the better in international affairs.

[Bovin] While there is still just the slightest chance, the task of the politician is to use that chance. If there is no chance, the task is to create the chance...

[Bovin] ...to create that chance, because, I repeat, the stakes are so high, and, our leaders are doing precisely this, without yielding to this virtual provocation the Americans are arranging, without answering force with force, so to speak, by trying somehow to approach all these problems sensibly -- complex, difficult, extremely contradictory as they are -- and to oppose this outburst of force, or whatever, with sense, responsibility, and restraint. If the U.S. tries to put us off concerning this matter, I am sure we will not yield to them.

[Tsvetov] Now we recall that at the Soviet-U.S. summit meeting in Geneva the U.S. side did not wish at that time to renounce the star wars program, or as it is officially called, the Strategic Defense Initiative. Five months have passed since that time however. In these 5 months, opinions have been expressed on the SDI above all by scientists, expressed by many state leaders, expressed -- and this is interesting -- by many former U.S. secretaries of defense and many former U.S. generals. The conclusion of the majority of these reactions is such that the creation of space weapons is, on the one hand, senseless, and, on the other hand, dangerous. Nevertheless, the United States is putting the star wars program into full gear.

[Beglov] Well, for Reagan, this star wars program is in a way something deeply personal. He really believes that he will achieve it, that will be it, and nuclear weapons will not be needed; they will become obsolete and unnecessary.

Even though this argument is absolutely unsubstantiated from an objective point of view and falls apart under objective analysis, Reagan believes in this, and a certain group of people who surround him evidently believe this.

And so they do their best to crank it up more and more, more so since there is a smell in the air not just of billions of dollars -- but of tens and hundreds of billions of dollars -- and the military-industrial complex -- a huge force in the states -- of course energetically supports all the business. And the result -- well, the result is such that the balance of terror unfortunately is accompanied by a balance of mistrust, too. So this mistrust will grow even further, because when we are faced with the fact of the start of these programs, we will also have to take certain countermeasures in the sphere of offensive arms and in the sphere of strategic arms. In general, the faster all this gathers pace, the more dangerous it will become to live in this world of ours, unfortunately. And this worries us above all.

[Tsvetov] Well, as the Soviet Union has more than once stated, it will not allow any superiority over itself, and the Soviet Union, in response to the U.S. star wars program, will propose and implement its own program, of course, and it will not necessarily be in space. Last week, the Warsaw Pact signatories appealed to the European states and also to the United States and Canada on the question of creating nuclear-free zones in Europe. This appeal says that such zones already exist in certain areas of the world, that this is already a political reality; and this is indeed so. If the current international situation has suggested this sort of thing...

[Bovin, interrupting] There are already three such zones: These are first of all, will include Antarctica, even though it is not one formally; Latin America, and now a certain zone in the Pacific Ocean...

[Beglov, interrupting] ...the southern part...

[Bovin] Yes, the southern part of the Pacific Ocean; there is already so to speak a corresponding agreement...

[Tsvetov, interrupting] That is, if there now exists only one path to achieving nuclear disarmament, that is, step-by-step disarmament, then it is evidently toward the same goal that this, if it can be so expressed, area-by-area solution leads. Now, Aleksandr Yevgeniyevich, you called one of your articles on this theme "The Zones of the Future." But this future already has its past: I would like you to give us a historical look at the issue.

[Bovin] You see here, you simply have to look at the juridical construction, perhaps, of these nuclear-free zones -- there are two main elements: The state pledges not to deploy, not to produce, and not to maintain nuclear weapons on its territory. This is the first aspect; and the second aspect is that the nuclear powers, for their part, pledge to respect this nuclear-free status and in no way use the threat of nuclear weapons against these states, not to insist on the siting of weapons on their territories, and so on and so forth. So these two elements must coincide. They do not always coincide. For example, take the latest case of the nuclear-free zone in the southern party of the Pacific Ocean, the Soviet Union naturally said: Go ahead! We are ready to sign a corresponding protocol. The Chinese have reacted generally positively to this. But such nuclear powers as the United States, France, and England, have at best kept up an ill-wishing silence.

[Tsvetsov] And the arguments against this are interesting. I recall the discussion of the issue of a nuclear-free zone in northern Europe. The idea was put forward back in 1963. And what were the arguments they immediately began at that time? First, that the creation of a nuclear-free zone would increase the danger of a nuclear war; that is, they said, it would unbind the hands of the Soviet Union. But the argument is both completely unacceptable and simply stupid.

[Beglov] Now, by the way, those in NATO rely on another argument, if one may call it that. In the countries of northern Europe, irrespective of whether or not they belong to military alliances, there are, practically speaking, no nuclear weapons.

[Tsvetsov] That, and it makes no sense, is what they say.

[Beglov] Why should we set all that up, because, then, they say, we will be playing a game that is against the interests of the Atlantic alliance and, by implication in the interests of the Soviet Union. Where is the fallacy in such thinking? People presently say, you know, that in Europe it is difficult to start disarmament, including nuclear disarmament because there is no trust. No, there is enough trust. What is a nuclear-free zone? What is the guarantee countries give that they will not site weapons on their territory and the guarantee of the nuclear powers that they will strictly observe their pledges? This is in fact a format for achieving a new level of trust in a specific way.

[Tsvetov] That is, the creation of a zone of trust, as I would call it.

[Beglov] A zone of trust and specific attitudes of trust between the Warsaw Pact and the Atlantic Alliance.

[Tsvetov] I would like to draw attention to another negative argument the NATO leaders are putting forward, namely that the participation, say, of Denmark and Norway in a nuclear-free zone, will limit their freedom of political action.

[Bovin] Well, that limits everyone to the same extent, Sweden, Finland, and our own country, insofar as we will adhere to this. A treaty, any accord limits the rights of those who participate in it to the same degree. You take certain obligations upon yourself. That is the whole point.

[Beglov] A very important watershed is being revealed now between two positions and tendencies in world politics. Some say: Let us not think only about what we will do and say, in the sphere of disarmament, but let us also strive to reach agreement on and perhaps even start with what not to do. If you agree on what not to do, it is easier to talk about what to do. This is the whole problem and it is very important in the context of the struggle for a nuclear-free zone. The more nonnuclear oases there are, the more states are removed from the zone, from the sphere of nuclear strategy, nuclear policy, and nuclear confrontation, and the easier it is to resolve the complex issues.

[Tsvetov] This idea about creating a nuclear-free zone in Europe, and not only in Europe, really does have a great future, because, after all, nuclear-free zones are now being created not only within the framework of states or of certain regions of the globe, but in individual towns there are even neighborhoods that are declaring themselves nuclear-free zones. This is an indicator of a tendency, an indicator of a desire of the population to have world without nuclear weapons.

Following a decision by the WPC, Asia Week was held 5-12 April. The aim of the week was to activate efforts of the public to strengthen peace and security on the Asian continent and in bordering regions of the Pacific and Indian Oceans. The importance of this week is due, in my opinion, to two things above all: First, Asia is now the most dynamically developing region, where the rates of economic growth in many ways exceed the rates of economic growth in other regions of the world. And then at the same time, this region is distinctive in terms of the enormous number of conflicts, both those that have already broken out, and also those that are still latently smoldering. For this reason, the creation here of an atmosphere of peace and security is extremely important. We are proposing, by the way, a very successful, in my view, approach for the region that is, the comprehensive resolution of security issues. What is being considered here, in my view, is taking into accout the proposals and intentions in the sphere of peace and security, of course, of all those involved in this region. I recall the most significant of these proposals. There is, above all, the all-embracing system of international security put forth by the 27th CPSU Congress. Further, there is a Soviet proposal to discuss and to adopt measures for trust in the Far East, with the participation of all interested countries. Such a step might lead to a lowering of the tension in the region and place one kind of barrier in the path of the arms race. The convocation of a conference of all Asian countries and working out, as proposed by the Mongolian Government, a convention of mutual nonaggression and the nonuse of violence between the states of Asia and of the Pacific Ocean might constitute a substantial contribution to the cause of peace in Asia.

The improvement of the atmosphere in the Far East would be facilitated by an accord on the mutual prevention of the deployment here of new intermediate range nuclear systems. The Soviet Union considers that alongside measures embracing the whole Asian Continent, the gradual attainment of various accords at subregional level would be of important significance, for expample the accords the DPRK is proposing to South Korea. The implementation of the initiatives of Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia aimed at attaining mutual understanding and a normalization of relations with the ASEAN countries would be a contribution to lowering tension in Southeast Asia. As to whether these proposals are good or bad, whether they are appropriate or not for one set of states or another, must, of course, be decided at the negotiating table. Above all it is necessary to map out the general line of movement toward peace and security in the region.

[Beglov] I think here, of course, the main thing, given all the complexity of the issue -- and the Asian and Pacific region is indeed such a huge geopolitical concept embracing half the globe with its subregional problems, the like of which have already been talked about here. In general, however, it is necessary to choose between two tendencies. One tendency is the U.S. tendency. This is to make use of the Asian and Pacific Ocean region as a whole or in parts, as a sort of element in the U.S. strategic system, and I would say, following the NATO model. I would call it the eastern front against the USSR and its allies in the Asian and Pacific Ocean regions. That is the U.S. approach. They approach any country or any region with one view: What value does the country represent for them from the point of view of ensuring their so-called vital interests and their global confrontation with the Soviet Union.

The other tendency runs through all the proposals you mentioned: the Soviet Union, the Mongolian People's Republic, the DPRK, the countries of Southeast Asia, India, and many others really want to create, country by country, zone by zone, in the final analysis a general zone of peace. That, it seems to me, is what lies behind our approach to this issue.

[Tsvetov] To conclude our conversation at the roundtable, I would like to express the hope that the present year, declared the International Year of Peace by the United Nations, will continue to be used by the peace-loving public to bring about practical steps in the direction of really freeing humanity from the threat of a nuclear catastrophe. The foreign policy of the Soviet Union, other socialist countries, and the nonaligned countries and also the existence of sensible politicans in the capitalist states themselves serve as the basis for this hope.

REPORTAGE ON AAPSO CONFERENCE IN KABUL

New Information Order Viewed

LD100559 Moscow TASS in English 2004 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Kabul April 9 TASS -- Babrak Karmal, general secretary of the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Council, has sent a message of greetings to the participants in the second conference of the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization [AAPSO] on issues of establishing a new international information order, which opened here today.

Using their financial and technological potential, international imperialism nd reaction are out to ensure their cultural and ideological domination over the countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America. Many ideological acts of sabotage against the forces of peace and progress are launched under the Pentagon's and the CIA's direct control, the message says. Even such international organizations as the U.N. and UNESCO have now become targets of information imperialism. The mass media of the imperialist states have become a tool of maintaining tensions in the world, of continuing the arms race, and creating a threat to mankind's cultural and moral values, the message says.

An example of this policy of the imperialist and reactionary circles is the ideological war against revolutionary Afghanistan, which can be rightly called a component part of the undeclared war being waged against it, Babrak Karmal stressed.

A report on behalf of the Revolutionary Council of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan was delivered by Haji Mohammad Tsamkani, vice chairman of the DRA Revolutionary Council. Imperialism and neocolonialism, he said, have launched an unprecedented ideological war against the forces of peace, progress and socialism. Lies and slanders are the main weapons of the imperialist stategist and militaristic circles of the USA and other NATO countries in that war.

The Western secret services play an increasing role in imperialism's ideological offensive. Thus, the U.S. CIA uses in its activity more than twelve hundred mass media in the United States and abroad. CIA stuff is spread daily by 200 newspapers, 30 news agencies and 20 radio stations in various countries of the world. The Pentagon also makes its contribution -- the programmes controlled by it are spread by 250 radio and 40 TV centres.

The so-called peace committees of the United States act as champions of the Washington administration's policy in 60 countries of Asia, Latin America and Africa. Nearly 2,500 million dollars are annually set aside by Washington for ideological expansion overseas, H.M. Tsamkani said.

Vadington, a representative of Mozambique, addressed the conference on behalf of the African countries. Our struggle, he said, is directed against the dominance of the international news monopolies. Journalists of the world, Vadington stressed, declare their solidarity with UNESCO and AAPSO, particularly on the issue under discussion.

The newly-liberated Asian and African nations suffer considerable damage as a result of subversive activity of international news monopolies, India's representative Kumar Santosh said, speaking on behalf of the Asian states. This happens because the Western news agencies serve the imperialist interests. They destabilise the situations and hatch plots against the national liberation movements, against Afghanistan, Libya and other countries.

The struggle for a new information order is above all that against imperialism, Mohammad Abdou, a representative of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen, said on behalf of the Arab countries. We welcome the heroic Afghan people, who are engaged in a fight against imperialism, and declare our solidarity with them.

The delegates to the conference were addressed by Vladimir Sevruk, member of the presidium of the Soviet Committee of the Afro-Asian Solidarity Organization, the head of the Soviet delegation. On behalf of the committee and the many thousand strong contingent of Soviet journalists, he welcomed the delegates to the conference and wished them much success in the work of the conference.

The establishment of a new international information order will serve the interests of peace and progress, said Dalanchik, a representative of Greece, speaking on behalf of the capitalist countries.

T. Granados, a representative of Cuba, declared, on behalf of the Latin American countries, their solidarity with the Afghan people.

The international information order of imperialism is one of the forms of colonialism. Everybody should oppose such a state of things, emphasized Chitri, a representative of the international organization of journalists.

Final Communique Criticizes U.S.

LD130901 Moscow TASS in English 0724 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] Kabul April 13 TASS -- The Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization has ended a conference on a new international information order in the Afghan capital.

The attending 50-odd delegations from different countries and representatives of eight international organizations discussed ways of stepping up opposition to imperialists' sway in the field of information in developing countries.

They also examined the issues of training personnel for the mass media of newly-free nations, the cooperation of national and regional news agencies with democratic international organizations, and resistance to U.S. imperialists' subversive activities against the United Nations, UNESCO and other international organizations.

The conference, which ran under the motto "A New International Information Order in the Service of Peace and Progress", sent a cable to U.S. Secretary-Ceneral Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Expressing outrage at the recent U.S. nuclear blast, it denounced the U.S. Administration's irresponsible action as an insolent challenge to world public opinion.

The cable said the spiral of the U.S. provoked arms race is propelling the world to a nuclear disaster. But the peace-minded nations still hope, it added, that reason will triumph and the United States will give a positive reply to the Soviet Union's constructive peace proposals.

The delegates also adopted a final communique stressing the need for every effort by the democratic mass media to counter imperialists' attempts to aggravate international tension and impart a fresh impetus to the arms race. The communique voiced concern about the U.S. Administration's negative attitude to the problem of bridling the arms race and the Soviet Union's constructive proposals for destroying all nuclear weapons by century's end. It sharply criticized U.S. imperialists' aggressive designs against independent and sovereign nations rejecting imperialist dictates such as Angola, Nicaragua, Afghanistan and Libya.

The conferees strongly censured the West's slanderous propaganda campaign, with the imperialist mass media going out of their way to present national liberation movements as "terrorist outfits" and hushing up the real instances of state-sponsored terrorism on the part of U.S. imperialists and their allies, in particular Israeli Zionists and South African racists. The communique stressed the important role to be played in overcoming developing nations' dependence on the West in the field of information by broader cooperation with socialist countries. Efforts for a new international information order, the conference said in a message to UNESCO Director-General Anadou Mahtar M'bow, are part and parcel of the campaign for peace and security. The delegates voiced solidarity with UNESCO's activities to promote state-to-state cooperation and peace on earth.

In their message they called on all governments and progessive and peace forces to give all kinds of support to UNESCO and protect it from political and economic pressure from the United States and Britain.

The attendees expressed profound gratitude to the people of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan for the provided possibility to hold the AAPSO Conference successfully. In an address to the Afghan people they said the delegates to this important international forum have demonstrated solidarity with the Afghans' ideals and rightful aspirations. The advances made by Afghanistan over the past eight years, the address said, attest to the fact that, despite all the scheming by imperialists and reactionaries, the Afghan people's will for progressive change and their determinstion to decide their future theselves are unconquerable. The vicious propaganda campaign mounted by international imperialists as part of their undeclared war on Democratic Afghanistan, the conferees said, cannot conceal the truth about the revolution in Afghanistan or its people.

The attendees at the conference, the address said, consider it their duty, a duty of honest journalists, to give comprehensive coverage to Afghanistan's achievements in political, social, economic and cultural fields and refute the lies about this country appearing in the Western press. They also regard it as their duty to identify with the Afghan people's efforts for peace and goodneighbourly relations on a basis of the right to self-determination, non-interference in domestic affairs and respect for national sovereignty.

The final session of the conference was addressed by Anahita Ratebzad, a member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan and an AAPSO vice-president. She spoke highly of the work by the conference and expressed satisfaction with its results. A new international information order, she said, is an important condition of peace, security and cooperation in the world.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON U.S.-LIBYAN TENSIONS

LD111522 Moscow TASS in English 1503 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 11 TASS -- The Reagan administration is preparing a new armed attack on Libya. The NEW YORK POST reports today that President Reagan has approved in principle a plan of striking blows at targets on Libyan territory. In accordance with this plan, the Pentagon intends to conduct air strikes against Libyan anti-aircraft complexes situated on the shore of the Gulf of Sidra and against airfields in the area of Tripoli.

These aggressive plans of the United States gives rise to objections even among its closest allies. As reported by the NEW YORK POST, the British and Italian Governments have refused to give the United States the right to use their air bases in carrying out a new aggression against Libya. Egypt has taken a similar stand.

U.S. Incites 'Military Hysteria'

LD112045 Moscow Radio Peace and Progress in Arabic 1530 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] The United States is preparing another armed provocation in the southern Mediterranean. The aircraft carriers America and Coral Sea and other 6th Fleet ships are going toward the shores of the Libyan Jamahiriyah. As it was arrogantly announced by a Pentagon official, the precise meaning of these movements is the completion of the action which began with the U.S. strikes against a number of Libyan targets at the end of last March.

At the same time, ABC television reports that the U.S. Defense Department has asked the space agencies for a complete set of photographs of Libya, which were obtained through the spy satellites, in order to choose the targets of the coming operation.

So, if we consider these feverish preparations by the United States, then the issue is about preparing for a wide-range armed aggression against Libya. The second step, according to the statement by Robert McFarlane, ex-assistant for National Security to the U.S. President, will be increasing the pressure on Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, even by the use of force.

A similar provocative stance was adopted by U.S. President Ronald Reagan himself when he spoke at a news conference in Washington. In his address at the conference, Reagan maliciously distorted the independent foreign course adopted by the Libyan leadership and heaped abuse on Col Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi personally. President Reagan justified the actions of the U.S. 6th Fleet against Libya and threatened it with more military actions. Later on, President Reagan was asked a legitimate question: Does this not lead to the death of many innocent people? The President's answers showed that the White House could care less about what might happen to victims among the civilian population or about the other consequences. As we can see, the U.S. Administration, ignoring the current facts, continues to bet on the use of force and on escaping the punishment for its aggressive practices, which violate the principles of international relations.

These dangerous concepts contain a threat to world peace and the security of all peoples without exception.

Then, Reagan himself admitted that the regional conflicts could develop into great all-out wars. If this statement has affected Washington's foreign policy course, however, then it has affected it in a different way: the United States is occupying the regions in which the United States itself plants the seeds of war and creates more points of tension and war danger.

Let us, for instance, take the focus of tension that was created in the southern Mediterranean because of the actions by the U.S. Administration. It is worth noting that Washington's aggressive practices arouse increasing concern among the Arab peoples, democratic public opinion, and naturally among the Soviet people. The Soviet Union calls for making the Mediterranean into a region of permanent peace and coexistence. The Soviet proposals specify spreading coordinated trust in this region by reducing the armed forces, withdrawing the ships carrying nuclear weapons from the Mediterranean, abandoning the deployment of nuclear weapons in the nonnuclear countries of the Mediterranean, and the nuclear powers making a commitment to not using force against any Mediterranean country which refuses the deployment of nuclear weapons on its territory.

It is also worth noting that the Soviet Union, not long ago submitted another long-term initiative for withdrawing U.S. and Soviet military ships from the Mediterranean. As the Washington leadership incites military hysteria in the region, it refuses to listen to reason. A spokesman for the U.S. State Department announced that the United States will never agree to withdraw its fleet from the Mediterranean. Again, this indicates that the U.S. imperialists care, before anything else, about practicing a policy of power much more than they care about reducing tension in the most explosive regions. This also is indicated by another series of feverish military preparation currently being carried out by the United States off the Libyan shores.

Neoglobalist Strategy Highlighted

LD111902 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1630 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Aleksandr Korshunov Commentary]

[Text] The development of events in the Mediterranean really leads any unbiased person to this kind of conclusion; judge for yourselves: The U.S. aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America have set sail from ports in Italy and Spain for Libyan shores. As U.S. Navy Secretary Lehman confirmed, they will be ready for action already today. Meanwhile, the NBC TV company reported: There is no question as to whether or not a strike will be delivered; it is all a matter of when it will be done.

In this way for the second time in the past week in the southern Mediterranean Sea, the most serious threat is arising to an independent Arab state and to peace in the Middle East region as a whole. This danger did not arise suddenly and its cause is far from it, being that aggressive Libya -- as the U.S. and other Western propaganda media suggest -- is encroaching on the political priorities of the free world. The root of the problem lies quite elsewhere: military and political blackmail, an economic blockade of Libya, and attacks on its leaders, sometimes even bordering on unprintable abuse, reflect the White House's extreme irritation with the independent policy of this Arab country. Libya has firmly stood up against imperialist expansion in the Middle East, against the U.S. attempts along with Zionist Israel to put the Arab world under its control.

But one forms the impression that Washington has seriously come to believe in the dangerous axiom, whose essence lies in force coming before right.

The anti-Libyan action is only an integral part of the policy of state terrorism conducted by the United States within the framework of the strategy of neoglobalism against those states which are defending their sovereignty and independence.

Today one would like to recall that the slogan "Force before right" is far from new; and history has always very severely punished all who have a short memory and have seized upon it as a weapon.

'Threat' Against Libya Scored

PM131810 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 12 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Pavel Demchenko Commentator's Column: "Aircraft Carriers Against Libya"]

[Text] The threat of American aggression is again hanging over Libya. In recent days editorial office teleprinters have been tirelessly hammering out alarming reports describing preparations for this aggression. THE NEW YORK TIMES writes, for instance: "U.S. Administration spokesmen have declared that President Reagan has decided to keep two aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean in order to keep open -- for the immediate future -- the option of a threatened or real attack... The bias in favor of more forceful actions than those taken 2 weeks ago is intensifying in Washington."

The foreign press take the view that the main aim of the new military venture is "to rock the Al-Qadhdhafi government or bring about its fall." The aim itself is criminal, and so are the methods used to achieve it. But, clearly, this is not all. In a situation where the new nuclear explosion carried out in the United States 10 April provoked loud condemnation throughout the world, Washington would like to divert attention to events elsewhere in the world. It is therefore no accident that the accusations against Libya claiming that it supports terrorists intensified precisely during the days when the preparations for the underground bomb explosion at the test site in Nevada were nearly complete.

Whatever the details, these events are linked. They reflect the essence of the policy implemented by the present U.S. Administration, that is, building up strength and not hesitating to use it in various parts of the world.

In addition to this, U.S. diplomacy is trying to win over other countries -- the NATO allies and states in the Near East -- to its anti-Libyan actions... However, judging by everything, Washington's pressure has misfired. According to journalists, the NATO powers are either taking "minimal" measures or trying to avoid taking any measures at all. And Egypt, where Washington has dispatched its representatives, has dissociated itself from the hostile actions against the neighboring country. The Cairo press, just like newspapers in other Arab countries, is currently full of statements condemning the aggressive U.S. anti-Arab course. This, according to the U.S. press, allegedly "complicates" U.S. "action" against Libya. In particular, the United States has had to resort to aircraft carriers "only" because the European allies have failed to put their airfields at the service of U.S. bombers. And all this is being discussed openly and shamelessly as it if were a question of a pleasure cruise rather than preparations for a barbaric provocation which will sow death and destruction in Libya.

The saber rattling in the Mediterranean reflects the general thrust of U.S. foreign policy.

At the same time, it shows particularly clearly that, despite military and diplomatic failures in the Near East in past years, Washington has not given up the idea of establishing its supremacy in that part of the world. U.S. imperialism has again unmasked itself as the main enemy of the Arab peoples and the source of provocations against developing states.

U.S. To Use Bombers From UK

[From the "International Diary" program presented by Oleg Blinov]

[Text] News agencies report that the United States is preparing new armed actions against Libya. For this, it is intended to use deck-based aircraft from the aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America, which together with their escort vessels are now approaching the Libyan shores. As THE NEW YORK TIMES reports, a total of 30 U.S. vessels will be within range for striking at Libya on 12 April. It is also planned to use U.S. strategic bombers based in Great Britain. The 6th Fleet's activity increased literally just a few hours after President Reagan made attacks on Libya at a press conference. On direct instructions from the President, the Pentagon has worked out and is elaborating a final plan for striking military and economic targets in Libya, an Arab country which does not wish to submit to U.S. diktat.

'Warlike' Preparations Noted

["USA Preparing to Strike at Libya" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Washington April 12 TASS -- Keeping up its anti-Libyan smear campaign, the United States has practically concluded its preparations for another aggression against Libya. ABC Television said the main forces of the U.S. 6th Fleet were now at actions stations and poised to strike at Libya as soon as the Reagan administration wished. The TV network had learnt that the aircraft-carriers Coral Sea and America, escorted by other naval ships, were already on their way to Libya from Sicily and would be sailing within a missile's reach from the Arab country.

Two U.S. carrier battle groups were now cruising 700 miles off Libya, while other U.S. aircraft and military units in the Mediterranean were staying on alert. Newspapers said the aircraft-carrier Eisenhower was also steaming towards the other two but State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb declined to confirm reports that it had already passed the Suez Canal and entered the Mediterranean. Commenting on the administration's warlike preparations, Senator Thomas Eagleton said all indications were the United States was going to strike. It was anybody's guess how it could all end, he added.

Contingency Plans Cited

LD121433 Moscow World Service in English 1310 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Aleksandr Druzhinin Commentary]

[Text] The situation in the Mediterranean countinues to give cause for concern, as the United States has once again sent its 6th Fleet, Coral Sea and America aircraft carriers to the Gulf of Sidra.

Washington makes no secret of having a number of contingency plans for attack against Libya. According to news sources, it's a matter of which will okayed by the White House rather than of when to attack. More on this from our commentator Aleksandr Druzhinin:

With no end of American naval vessels off the Libyan coast it's clear that America will continue daring Libya, regardless of the cost. It's catching at every pretext, however absurd, to accuse Libya of involvement in international terrorism. At Washington news conferences the Libyan leader, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, is spoken of in far from diplomatic terms. The United States clearly pursues two objectives: It wants above all to topple the Libyan Government. According to the American press the White House has already okayed appropriate steps. The idea is to teach independent Arab nations a lesson and to try and solve the Middle East problem the American way. This would help the United States to dominate a vital part of the Mediterranean. But there's certainly much more to the United States' anti-Libyan campaign.

Washington is craving for a President that would help it to dictate to a foreign country in disregard of public opinion and the norms of international conduct. That's why the situation near the Libyan coast has caused so much international concern. It shows that Washington is liable to act from a position of strength and asks questions later, and one can imagine the consequences.

U.S. 'Armada' Heading for Libya

U.S. Nearing Decision

LD121736 Moscow World Service in English 1500 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] The American ABC television network has said that two United States aircraft carriers, the Coral Sea and the America, with an escort are already on their way towards the Libyan shores. The chief of the White House Staff, Donald Regan, has made a statement to the effect that the administration is nearing a final decision in favor of an attack. The United States actions have caused extreme concern even among its closest allies. Ninety-nine percent of the phone calls and letters to the United States Embassies in Western Europe these days reflect the West Europeans' strongly negative attitude toward armed actions against Libya.

U.S. Resorting to 'Violence'

LD122152 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1701 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Leonid Rassadin report from Cairo]

[Text] Hands off Libya: - This demand by Arab states from the Persian Gulf to the Atlantic Ocean is assuming special significance today.

The United States again is threatening sovereign Libya with an aggression. In this connection, Arab countries, irrespective of their political orientation, just as a month ago, are demonstrating their solidarity with the Libyan people. Egypt's stance is particularly revealing: Egypt does not even have diplomatic relations with Libya. The Cairo EGYPTIAN MAIL is warning the United States against conducting new armed actions against Libya.

According to news agency reports, an enormous U.S. naval armada has already been concentrated in the south Mediterranean, close to the Libyan shore. Three strike groups of the U.S. Mediterranean 6th Fleet are headed by the aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America. They are essentially military bases on ships, carrying approximately 150 aircraft, including fighter bombers. The U.S. military, Tripoli radio said today, is clearly preparing to making another priate sally against the Libyan Jamahiriyah in the nearest possible future. Resorting to the practice of violence and terror in respect to independent states of Africa, Asia, and Latin America, the United States is primarily aspiring to impose her dictate on them. The Libyan people, Tripoli radio stresses, are full of determination to defend the independence and sovereignty of the motherland.

'Further Provocations' Planned

["USA Preparing Further Provocations Against Libya" -- TASS item identifier]

[Text] Washington 13 April TASS -- The United States continues busily preparing for further provocations agaisnt Libya. According to press reports, two U.S. aircraft-carriers groups have already taken up forming-up positions in the Mediterranean and are waiting for Washington orders on the further course of action.

The naval armada, including 27 warships led by the aircraft-carriers Coral Sea and America, is about 200 miles from the Libyan coast. The newspaper NEWSDAY said that the United States had already made the decision to strike at Libya and that one reason why President Reagan had not yet ordered the blow was the lack of support from U.S. allies in Western Europe.

The White House has sent U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Vernon Walters on an urgent tour of West European capitals to try and rally this support. Walters, who met with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher yesterday, will also hold talks with the leaders of West Germany, France and Italy in the next few days. Washington's emissary, papers reported, will be pressing the West European governments to give backing to U.S. military and other actions against Libya.

Rozanne Ridgway, U.S. assistant secretary of state for European and Canadian affairs, will also go to Western Europe next week. UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL said, however, that in Western Europe they were uneasy about increased U.S.-Libyan tension. NBC television reproted that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl had warned the United States against attacking Libya. It noted that Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi had also spoken out against military action against that country and that there was opposition to such action also in France.

Britain is the only U.S. ally that appears to be gravitating toward backing Washington's posture. The British SUNDAY TIMES said that after her talks with Walters Thatcher "is understood to be ready to support" U.S. military action against Libya.

Another British newspaper, the NEWS OF THE WORLD, said Thatcher was eager to help the Americans and did not rule out her consent to the use of British-based U.S. aircraft to deliver a blow to Libya. THE SUNDAY TIMES reported the arrival in Britain of an extra ten mid-air refuelling planes. The KC-10 tankers, it said, would enable up the F-111 bombers to make a return flight to Libya if it was decided to use them to attack it. Quoting reports from London, NBC Television said Britain would also make available to the United States its air fields on Cyprus.

New York April 13 TASS -- The U.N. Security Council has met the Maltese Government's request and resumed its discussion of the explosive situation in the Mediterranean resulting from continued U.S. muscle-flexing there. Malta's representative Savior Borg sponsored a draft resolution expressing deep anxiety over the massive naval buildup in the central Mediterranean in preparation for an armed attack on Libya. The draft demands refraining from any further action that could lead to the use of armed forces.

'No Evidence' of Libyan Terrorism

[Report from the "International Panorama" program presented by Boris Kalyagin]

[Text] Our special correspondent Leonid Rassadin was in Libya at the beginning of this week. Over recent days, however, the clouds have gathered even more darkly over the Southern Mediterranean. Threats of a military attack on Libya are once again resounding from the ocean. [video shows aicraft carriers at sea] Washington ordered its two naval task forces to return to the Libyan shores: they comprise 20 warships headed by the aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America. The head of the White House himself assumed the role of sharpshooter in the latest campaign. The U.S. President came out with crude insults against Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, the leader of the sovereign state -- an almost unprecendented instance in international practice.

The United States made use of two tragic events as an excuse for the latest escalation of hostility: the bomb explosion on board a TWA aircraft,[video shows TWA aircraft with blown-out side] resulting in the deaths of four Americans, and the recent explosion at a West Berlin nightclub discotheque, frequented by U.S. servicemen. [video shows outside of nightclub] One American soldier was killed there and 64 were injured.

The United States is trying to pin these terrorist actions on Libya, even though the leader of the Libyan Republic has stressed that his country has had nothing to do with them. The United States has absolutely no evidence of Tripoli's involvement in the incidents that occurred. Washington officials see Libyan agents everywhere: They allege that the Libyans have 35 U.S. sites in Europe and the Near East under surveillance. Even the Americans themselves take a skeptical view of this. Thus, THE NEW YORK TIMES observer Wicker stresses: The terrorist attacks that have been committed are not the work of some sinister madman or the result of any single group. They come from the profoundly deep-seated grudges of people who have at their disposal very few -- if any -- means of fighting against their mighty opponents. In the southern Mediterranean, Wicker goes on, these grudges are evoked by Israel's policies, by the fate of the Palestinians and by the conviction that the United States bears the chief responsibility for all the evils in the modern world.

As for Libya, this country's independent course has long given rise to ire on the part of the American Administration.

Alexander Haig, former U.S. secretary of state, recalls in his memoirs: Libya was one of the most pressing issues on the agenda of the very first session of the U.S. National Security Council chaired by Reagan, which was held on 21 January 1981. Terrorism was not yet under discussion, but even at that time the United States was already making plans for overthrowing the Al-Qadhdhafi government.

'New Military Threat' from U.S.

LD132140 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 13 Apr 86

[From the "Vremya" newscast; by unidentified correspondent]

[Excerpts] The escalation of interference by the United States in the affairs of the independent states of Asia, Africa, and Latin America is arousing the concern of the world public.

The United States conducts its interference under the cover of the so-called doctrine of neogolobalism. To subject the whole world to American interests is the aim of the neoglobalists. Under the pretext of protecting democracy and freedom, but actually to assert its domination, the United States has in fact declared a crusade against the democratic governments and developing countries. To punish them it puts together and arms counterrevolutionary gangs, and puts pressure on governments it does not like, and threatens, and sometimes carries out, military intervention. Libya just had to free itself from dependence on America and to eliminate U.S. military bases on its territory for it to become the object of the policy of neoglobalism.

Worrying reports have appeared again in the Arab papers. These concern the obviously suspicious movements of ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean basin. In this connection, Arab observers do not rule out that the U.S. military is preparing for yet another aggressive act against sovereign Libya. Let us recall that in March, U.S. aircraft and ships already struck criminal blows against a number of targets in Libya. And now here is a new military threat from the United States.

I have just returned from a trip to Libya. And I must say that the United States did not manage to frighten the Libyan people. We also saw how, at this difficult time for the country, Libyans were planting flowers in the center of Tripoli. This is also highly symbolic. The Libyan people want peace. They threaten no one. And in this difficult situation, they are ready to defend the independence and sovereignty of their motherland.

["U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Utters Threats to Libya" -- TASS headline]

[Text] New York April 14 TASS -- The purpose of the Reagan administration's campaign of blackmail and military threats against Libya is to make the leadership of that independent Arab country to forgo its independent foreign policy which is aimed at combatting imperialism's and Zionism's intrigues in the Middle East. This has been virtually confirmed in a CBS T.V. interview by John C. Whitehead, U.S. deputy secretary of state. He stated straightforwardly that Washington's objective is "to get Al-Qadhdhafi to change his conduct" and to reconsider his political course.

[TASS commentator Lev Aksenov: "On the Siting of Cruise Missiles in the FRG: What Are They Boasting About in Bonn?"]

[Text] Moscow, 14 Apr (TASS) -- The first squadron of new U.S. cruise missiles, which recently began to be sited in the FRG, has become operational. According to a report in the bulletin PARLAMENTARISCH-POLITISCHER PRESSEDIENST, this conclusion follows from a reply by the FRG Government to an inquiry by the group of "Greens" in the Bundestag. The threat emanating from FRG territory both for Europe and the world at large has thus substantially increased. In addition to the 108 "Pershing 2's" already deployed here the countries of the old world and neighboring regions are now threatened with "winged death" too.

It is worth noting that such a step by the U.S. military command has coincided with a sharp intensification in the situation in the Mediterranean where Washington is unleashing the latest most dangerous anti-Libyan campaign. To all intents, the cruise missiles are called upon in these tense days to strengthen the threat to the Libyan Jamahariyah created by the air power on Coral Sea and America and by other naval vessels in the U.S. naval force.

In this context, it is a legitimate question to ask what the leaders of the FRG were counting on when they placed the territory of their country under U.S. missiles. After all, it is no secret that the U.S. military-political leadership "in extreme circumstances" might not request their allies' agreement to use nuclear missiles. Taking into account the adventurist military policy of official Washington, it is perfectly possible that the FRG will be drawn into a confrontation not only without its agreement but even without the knowledge of its leadership. And yet there are those in Bonn who to this very day boast that the schedule for siting the missiles is being kept "strictly punctually...."

Korniyenko, Akhromeyev Comment

AU141103 Paris AFP in English 1049 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 14 (AFP) -- Georgiy Korniyenko, Soviet first deputy foreign minister, told a press conference here on Monday that the Soviet Union was "in contact" with Washington over preventing U.S. military action against Libya. Mr Korniyenko said that "the main thing is not to allow a U.S. attack against Libya." He added that: "For this reason the Soviet Union was doing what was expected of it" by being in contact with Washington, but he gave no further details.

According to rumours in Western diplomatic circles, the Kremlin has already used its "hot line" with the White House over the U.S.-Libyan crises in the Mediterranean.

Mr Korniyenko, asked what was likely to be the Soviet reaction to a U.S. attack, replied "to talk of what the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact members would do is counterproductive."

Marshal Sergey Akhromeyev, chief-of-staff of the Red Army, told the press conference that he was "worried" over the situation of Soviet military advisers in Libya in the event of an American "aggression" against it.

He did not answer a question about possible Soviet deaths last month when U.S. planes attacked SAM-5 missile batteries at the Libyan base of Surt. "The Soviet Union is aiding Libya and it has military experts stationed there carrying out strictly technical duties like the upkeep of arms and their combat readiness, as well as training Libyan soldiers," the marshal said. "If there is an attack and raids are made on targets where there are Libyan citizens and Soviets, then obviously the Soviets are running the same risk as the Libyans."

REAGAN, NAKASONE BEGIN FIRST ROUND OF TALKS

[Text] Washington April 14 TASS -- The first round of talks between Ronald Reagan and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan who had arrived in the United States for a visit was held at the U.S. President's country residence at Camp David on Sunday. One of the main items on the agenda of the talks is the question of drawing Japan into the "star wars" program. Washington does not conceal a desire to make use of Japan's newest technological achievements in the creation of space weapons. However, Nakasone, who cannot but reckon with the negative reaction by broad sections of the Japanese public to the U.S. space militarization plans, declined to give any official pledge concerning Japan's participation in the realization of the notorious "Strategic Defense Initiative". According to a White House spokesman, the Japanese premier only promised that Tokyo would cautiously continue to study the question.

Much attention during the talks is also being given to acute trade-and-economic contradictions between the two countries. They have been brought on, first of all, by the U.S. growing deficit in trade with Japan. The deficit ran at about 50,000 million dollars last year.

SHULTZ, DOBRYNIN HOLD TALKS, ATTEND DINNER

["Latest Meeting -- TASS headline]

[Text] Washington, 12 Apr (TASS) -- The latest meeting between Anatoliy Dobrynin, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, and U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz took place here [11 April]. During the meeting discussions of Soviet-American relations were continued.

On the same day the leadership of the Senate of the U.S. Congress gave a dinner in connection with the end of A. Dobrynin's term of office as USSR ambassador in the United States and his leaving Washington for the homeland. During the dinner there was an exchange of views on questions concerning relations between the USSR and the United States.

JAPAN, USSR CONCLUDE FISHERY AGREEMENT 11 APR

TASS Reports Talks End

LD111733 Moscow TASS in English 1721 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 11 TASS -- Conversations between USSR Minister of Fisheries Vladimir Kamentsev and Japan's minister of agriculture, forestry and fisheries, Tsutomu Hata, ended here today. The Japanese minister paid a working visit to Moscow. The ministers have outlined the ways of achieving arrangements at the second session of the bilateral commission on fisheries, discussed the prospects for the development of Soviet-Japanese cooperation in this area.

The delegation to the session of the commission set up under the inter-governmental agreement of December 7, 1984, have now embarked on practical implementation of arrangements reached by the ministers. The commission is discussing the conditions for Soviet and Japanese fishing operations in the 200-mile economic zones of of the USSR and Japan in the current year.

KYODO Cites Agreement

OW120031 Tokyo KYODO in English 0004 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 11 KYODO -- Japan and the Soviet Union Friday ended prolonged bilateral fishery negotiations with Japan agreeing to a sharp cut in this year's fish catch quota in the Soviet 200-mile fishery zone.

The agreement, reached between Tsutomu Hata, Japanese Minister of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries, and Soviet Fisheries Minister Vladimir Kamentsev, also places extremely severe restrictions on Japanese fishing operations in other fields, such as a total ban on bottom gill net fishing in the Soviet fishery zone.

The Hata-Kamentsev agreement sets this year's Japanese and Soviet catch quotas in each other's 200-mile zones at 150,000 tons each. The figure is only one-fourth of last year's 600,000-ton quotas.

The agreement capped hard negotiations that began between the two countries last December 23, based on a Japanese-Soviet fishery agreement concluded early in 1985. The talks were suspended twice as the Soviet side took an extremely touch attitude regarding Japanese fishing operations in its waters. As a result of this, Japanese fishing boats have been unable to enter Soviet waters for over three months.

In order to break the deadlock in the negotiations, Hata arrived in Moscow Tuesday for top-level talks with Kamentsev. The two ministers met three times after Hata's arrival and the Japanese minister made a "political" decision to accept virtually all the Soviet proposals from the standpoint that further prolongation of the negotiations would badly hurt Japanese fishermen, Japanese sources said.

UPCOMING NAKASONE VISIT TO U.S. ANALYZED

Biryukov Reports

LD111953 Moscow TASS in English 1911 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 11 TASS -- TASS political news analyst Askold Biryukov writes:

Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is about to pay a visit to Washington.

He has said that in addition to trade and economic questions, he is going to discuss in the American capital problems of the international situation. Getting ready to counter possible attacks on Japan's foreign trade policy, Nakasone plans to offer his partners a package of "new radical measures" prepared by Tokyo with a view to redressing the tilt in Japanese-American trade that has been in evidence for a few years now: For instance, last year the United States ran up a deficit of 50 billion dollars in trade with Japan.

Judging by the Japanese press, the premier is going to discuss from Washington's positions problems of disarmament and Soviet-American relations and to reiterate "the solidarity of the West" on a number of points. Lastly, he plans to demonstrate Tokyo's readiness to increase its contribution to the "strategic aid" to Haiti and a number of other pro-American regimes, on which Washington insists.

It is not yet clear what position the prime minister will take on the question in which the White House is now displaying special interest, on Japan's participation in the "star wars" program. The newspaper MAINICHI recalls in this context that just 15 months previously the Japanese premier stated his "understanding" of SDI. However, the newspaper says, the question of Japan's participation in SDI has not yet been settled and is likely to be raised by Reagan at the meeting in Camp David.

The prime minister himself, at first sight, is cautious. He has already said that he will "reserve" Japan's position at his meeting with the U.S. President. Tokyo's practical deeds, however, testify to a very different thing, to active preparations for the involvement of Japan in the U.S. program when the domestic political situation is right. It is reported, for instance, that the Japanese Foreign Ministry has already formulated a positive approach to Japan's participation in "research" under SDI. Moreover, the "need" for Japan to participate in that program is stated.

What is the justification of the Foreign Ministry officials for such an approach? Their reasoning is that SDI means a transition to "a safer deterrence on the basis of defensive weapons." They claim that the weapons developed under SDI "are drastically different from the existing nuclear and other armaments," that "they are not aimed at inflicting grave damage on the peoples and territories of other countries, nor are they weapons of mass destruction." The Japanese Foreign Ministry draws the conclusion that sounds amazing for the country which once fell victim to atomic bombings: "If the point in case were offensive weapons, it would be better to improve the existing nuclear armaments."

But the latest nuclear tests in Nevada, which outraged the whole world, just show that the United States, working on its "star wars weapons," is simultaneously forging new, more formidable warheads for intercontinental ballistic missiles: MX, Trident-2 ballistic missiles for submarines, etc. Moreover, Washington says that it is not going to stop that nuclear marathon.

As for the damage that the Japanese Foreign Ministry is trying to calculate, they seem to have disregarded the warnings of authoritative experts that space strike weapons intended to intercept incoming missiles can be used to hit from space stationary targets on earth. Moreover, they have "overlooked" another important circumstance.

The SDI authors, as they are going ahead with their wild idea, proceed not from reality but from the delirious schemes of such figures as Edward Teller, the "father" of the hydrogen bomb, whose only dream is to bury the "evil empire."

But dreams and realities are very different things. What is the lesson of the recent Challenger tragedy, for example?

It tells us that any malfunction in any component of the space system could cause missiles deployed in space to start towards wrong targets, just where chance would take them. If such an error happens when SDI systems are already in place, a global nuclear war will break out within 10-15 minutes, killing all life on earth.

Developing SDI weapons and simultaneously modernizing nuclear armaments and adding new types to their arsenals, the U.S. Administration poses a threat not only to the USSR but to mankind as a whole. One cannot agree more with the sensible view of MAINICHI, which advises that the prime minister should not yield to Reagan's pressure and assume obligations which would link Japan to the "star wars" plans.

Legantsov Comments

LD131002 Moscow TASS in English 0933 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 13 TASS -- TASS correspondent Vladislav Legantsov reports: Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone arrived here today on an official visit.

The official agenda of his talks with President Reagan, according to a White House announcement, provides for discussing bilateral problems and international issues of mutual interest in advance of the forthcoming summit of seven leading capitalist countries in Tokyo.

This will mean in effect, according to U.S. press reports, that Nakasone will come under hard pressure to make fresh unilateral concessions.

The U.S.A. TODAY newspaper believes that Ronald Reagan will try to get the Japanese premier to make an official commitment concerning his country's involvement in the "star wars" project.

It is an open secret that the Washington administration would like to have access to Japan's technological achievements, most notably in the field of radio electronics and laser facilities, hoping that these will be most helpful in the U.S. effort to develop space strike weapons.

The press takes the view that the U.S. President will also press Nakasone to agree to further increases in Japanese military spending and in the power of Japanese Armed Forces which Washington would like to take over a significant part of the policing functions currently performed in Asia by U.S. troops.

The talks will also deal with sharp trade and economic contradictions between the two countries.

Despite all its efforts, the U.S. Administration has proved unable to balance trade with Japan and last year the U.S. balance of payments deficit in trade with that country reached a shattering 50 billion dollars.

The Nakasone government has promised, under prodding from Washington, to take measures to help trim the deficit and even prepared recommendations about how this can be done.

But these recommendations, according to THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, are most vague.

FURTHER REPORTS ON BHUTTO'S RETURN TO PAKISTAN

Addresses Mass Rally

LD111434 Moscow TASS in English 1400 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 11 TASS -- The time has come to unite the ranks and overthrow the dictatorship, said Benazir Bhutto, leader of Pakistan People's Party (PPP), addressing a mass rally in Lahore Thursday. According to the ASSOCIATED PRESS news agency, several hundred thousand people gathered to greet the PPP leader who returned home from exile to head the movement against the government of Ziaul Haq.

Benazir Bhutto said that the PPP was determined to restore democratic rights and liberties in the country.

As the events in the Philippines and Haiti demonstrated, she emphasized, the present year is a bad year for the dictators.

More than 30 American flags were burnt down in the streets of Lahore Thursday in protest against U.S. military and economic aid to the Ziaul Haq regime.

Demands 'Transfer of Power'

LD120400 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 2200 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Dmitriy Morozov commentary]

[Text] The prominent figure of the Pakistan People's Party, Benazir Bhutto, has returned to Pakistan from exile. The daughter of the former prime minister of Pakistan, who was executed by the present regime, was met in Lahore by about a million inhabitants. In her very first statement she demanded that General Ziaul Haq transfer power to the people. Only quite recently, some 4 years or so ago, the Pakistan military would not have tolerated such impudence. Here is what the Indian newspaper TRIBUNE said about the situation in the country in 1981: The masses are helpless and have grown accustomed to getting along with the regime. Journalists know what is not to be written about and jurists know what not to defend.

Now, speaking in Lahore, even Agha Murtaza Pooya, editor in chief of the newspaper THE MUSLIM, dared to criticize the ruling regime, justly pointing out that any changes in the government take place at the whim of foreign benefactors, and described the reliance of Islamabad on the United States as shameless.

The Central Committee of the Movement for Restoration of Democracy, which includes the Pakistan People's Party, has expressed serious concern with the current internal situation in Pakistan and pointed out the impermissibility of aid for the Afghan dushmans.

At mass meetings in Punjab, Sind, in the North-West Frontier Province, the Pakistani public has spoken out in favor of the Pashtun tribes and has demanded the democratization of public life and the holding of new elections. Normally there was one answer available from the ruling regime for such demands: police truncheons. Over the first 5 years of the government of Ziaul Haq, more than 100,000 people were in prisons; 30,000 received punishment in the form of beatings with sticks. For the time being, the Ziaul Haq regime is failing to remain true to tradition.

Over the past few years, the number of people dissatisfied with the regime has grown to such an extent that the government lacks the police to suppress protest demonstrations.

This explains the unexpected tractability of Ziaul Haq in having permitted Benazir Bhutto to return to the country. By way of this maneuver, the ruling regime is attempting to demonstrate to the world its striving toward democracy, and also to calm the situation. Incidentially, even in Pakistan, there are few people who believe in the sincerity of this striving.

AFGHAN REBELS ALLEGEDLY INVOLVED IN DRUG TRADE

[Yuriy (Kirichati) commentary]

[Text] How do you think -- is there any connection between the shipments of American Stinger rockets to Pakistan and one of the strongest drugs, heroin? Don't say no. There is a connection and a direct one, too. I came to think of it when the United States attorney general, Edwin Meese, spoke on American television. Without any proof he tried to convince televiewers that Afghanistan was one of the main heroin-making countries. The fact that he had just returned from Pakistan was apparently supposed to make his words weightier. According to the official version, he stayed there solely to study drug traffic routes, but news analysts in Asia who commented on his visit said that if there was anything the official did study it was the needs and wants of terrorists, the situation in the camp of Afghan counterrevolution.

The places he has visited during the stay in Pakistan prove that. Among other Edwin Meese went to a border post in the Khyber Pass area which is used by counterrevolutionaries for crossing into Afghanistan. The United States attorney general also visited a camp of Afghan counterrevolutionaries near Peshawar. Of course, if he had time and inclination he could have also studied the drug traffic lanes in Pakistan, because, after all, he stayed in that country, not in Afghanistan. Undoubtedly, he would have collected ample material to this end because Pakistan ranks high in the world drug hierachy. The country owes this position first of all to Afghan counterrevolutionaries who have found shelter in the border areas of Pakistan. First, poppy growing was conducted there on a wide scale, then laboratories making heroin were built. According to THE NEW YORK TIMES there were about 20 such laboratories already in autumn, 1981. The question of marketing was also solved. The Pakistani weekly MARG thinks that heroin is smuggled through Port Karachi. It calls Karachi a heaven for drug smugglers. Narcotics are transported to the United States and Western Europe also with the help of the Pakistan International Airlines.

Now, does Washington know about all this? The opinion of THE WASHINGTON POST on the issue is unequivocal. The CIA and the American State Department are well informed about everything that concerns the production and marketing of drugs, this profitable business of Afghan counterrevolutionaries. Congressman Charles Rangel, who visited Pakistan in 1984, also confirmed the involvement of counterrevolutionaries in illegal drug trafficking. Why, then, doesn't Washington try to influence either the counterrevolutionaries or Islamabad that actually connives with the Afghan terrorists who make drugs? The United States has proclaimed Pakistan a frontline country and the main bridgehead of the undeclared war against Afghanistan. If the Pakistani authorities closed the camps of saboteurs and terrorists where the counterrevolutionaries are trained and expelled them from the Pakistani authorities [as heard] the war would soon stop. There's no need to say that the White House with its policy of fanning regional conflicts will not permit this.

Now a few words about the counterrevolutionaries themselves. The main reason why they are not forced to stop the production of narcotics is that the CIA does not want that. The money made by selling drugs is spent to hire assassins and terrorists and purchase arms, and this is a notable addition to American aid to various counterrevolutionaries. Many crimes committed in the Afghan soil have been paid with this money. Just think of the explosion at the Kabul polytechnical college, the shelling of a mosque at Herat and the shooting down of a civilian plane. By the way, foreign news agencies report that the plane had been shot down by an American Stinger rocket. So, as you see, the connection between the drugs produced by Afghan counterrevolutionaries and the supplies of the latest land-to-air Stinger rockets from the American military arsenal to them is direct. The more evident and cynical are the lies uttered by Edwin Meese on American television. Washington needed this to place the blame for its own complicity in the crime on others and justify at least in some way the expansion of the scale of the undeclared war against Afghanistan.

KABUL RADIO REPORTS 700 'BANDITS' KILLED

[Text] Kabul April 24 TASS -- As was reported by Radio Kabul, units of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan hit a strong strike on enemies of the April Revolution. They killed about 700 bandits and eliminated a big counterrevolutionary base not far from Khost, 40 kilometres from the frontier with Pakistan, in the course of an operation. 12 depots of arms and military equipment were destroyed, and a big quantity of weapons and ammunition was captured.

SITUATION IN KHYBER PASS REMAINS TENSE

[Text] Kabul April 12 TASS -- The situation in the Khyber Pass area remains tense.

Armed units of the Afridi tribe in recent days staged a number of attacks on Pakistani Army and police posts there.

BAKHTAR news agency reported that military motor vehicles carrying foreign instructors to saboteur training camps had been blown up on roads in several frontier districts.

Anger at the Ziaul Haq regime's policy is mounting in the free tribe zone. BAKHTAR reported a massive protest demonstration in the town of Quetta, which involved prominent public figures and clergymen demanding measures to democratize life in Pakistan.

KABUL PRESS CONFERENCE CITES 'SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITY'

LD130320 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1448 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Kabul, 12 Apr (TASS) -- A press conference was held here, at which convincing proof was presented of the subversive activity of foreign intelligence agencies against the DRA. Spies of the CIA and of the Pakistan special services, the CID, stood before local and foreign journalists.

The aide of the Pakistan consul in the town of Qandahar, Mohammed Shah, who was caught red-handed by the security organs of the DRA while committing an illegal act, has confessed.

He stated that he had been recruited by the Pakistan secret service as long ago as 1971. On the territory of the DRA, M. Shah collected intelligence information of a military nature, and also about the situation in the settlement area of the Baluchi tribes.

Pakistani citizen Badur Khan, who was arrested by the security organs of the DRA in the Shinwar region, admitted to being an agent of the CIA. He had been recruited a few years ago by representatives of the CIA in Karachi, who promised him great monetary remuneration for carrying out espionage tasks. In the course of 3 months he underwent training in Karachi, and then operated there as an agent of the CIA.

The Afghan Sayd Zekriya was a member of the dushman bands, closely cooperating with the counterrevolutionary grouping "Jamiat-e Islami Afghanistan." He also underwent specialist training in Pakistan to collect secret information on the territory of the DRA.

Present at the press conference were participants of the second AAPSO conference on the new international information order.

DRA ARMY CHIEF VIEWS ROLE OF ARMED FORCES

LD140909 Moscow TASS in English 0850 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Kabul April 14 TASS -- "The Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan (DRA), whose combat might grows stronger with every passing day, play an increasing role in the cause of the defense of the revolution and of its gains. The party and the Government of the DRA use every opportunity to strengthen the country's defense might and the fighting efficiency of the Afghan Army", Lieutenant General Mohammad Vasin Sadeqi, secretary of the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA), chief of the Main Political Administration of the Afghan Army, has said in an interview with a TASS correspondent.

"The past year", he went on to say, "became to the Afghan people a year of new victories over the counterrevolutionaries against whom a number of powerful strikes were delivered in various provinces of the country. The situation in Afghanistan gradually comes back to normal. The revolutionary power is now in control of all the 29 provincial centres. The population of thousands of villages, who were earlier terrorised by the counterrevolutionaries, have begun to work peacefully".

"The process of normalizing the situation in Afghanistan", Mohammad Yasin Sadeqi pointed out, "would be much quicker were it not for the undeclared war which is being conducted by the U.S. imperialist forces and by the regional reactionaries. Virtually this war is turning from an undeclared into a declared one. A vivid confirmation of that is the provision of Afghan counterrevolutionary forces with Stinger missiles by the USA and by the direct military and financial aid which the United States gives to the killers and plunderers who try to stop the process of progressive economic and social transformations in the DRA. But despite imperialism's attempts to revive counterrevolution, the latter is doomed to complete and inrevocable destruction", emphasized the head of the main political administration of the Afghan army.

"The Soviet Union", Mohammad Yasin Sadeqi said, "which renders fraternal internationalist assistance to us, is a sincere and true friend of the DRA. We shall never forget what has been done for the Afghan people by the Soviet servicemen and by Soviet specialists who spare no effort and at times risk their lives helping us to develop the economy, and to uphold the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the republic".

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON WEINBERGER'S ASIAN TOUR

Termed 'Disappointing'

LD111251 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0930 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger has arrived in Australia on the last stage of his 2-week tour of Asia and the Pacific. On the eve of his arrival in Canberra, the Australian Government again stated that it rejects any participation in the U.S. star wars program. Here is our commentator Vladimir Pashko:

For the fifth time since he took office as defense secretary in 1981, Weinberger has toured Southeast Asia, but probably none of his trips there have been as disappointing as this one for the United States.

In South Korea, the Pentagon chief was able to see with his own eyes the instability of the regime supported by Washington. The United States will maintain its Armed Forces in South Korea for as long as necessary, the minister stated.

Despite all his efforts he failed to speed up Tokyo's joining the star wars program or to obtain official agreement to this. Taking into account the mood of the country and the coming parliamentary elections, Nakasone stated that he does not intend to respond to Washington's proposal even at the coming meeting with the U.S. President.

The results of Weinberger's visit to the Philippines also seem disappointing for the Americans. The new leadership of the country very precisely opposed the American military presence, without speaking of a buildup. Through his stay in Manila, rowdy anti-American demonstrations went on unabated. The participants there demanded the removal of the Pentagon bases from the country.

Weinberger was met by the same sort of demonstrations in Thailand. Bangkok did not risk agreeing to the construction of depots for the U.S. Rapid Deployment Forces, which are opposed by certain circles of the Thai Armed Forces, along with a wide strata of the public. The Americans were only able to comfort themselves with agreement on the beginning of consultations on this. The trip by the head of the U.S. Defense Department is not yet over. At the moment he is holding talks with the Australians, and the main content according to reports from Canberra is the crisis in the ANZUS bloc, set up by the Americans some time ago. The crisis was caused by the prohibition by New Zealand against ships with nuclear weapons on board entering its waters. The target of this step is obvious. In the consciousness of people everywhere, a U.S. military presence is associated with danger. The people of Asia will never forget that they were used by the United States as guinea pigs, by testing atomic weapons on the Japanese and chemical weapons on the Vietnamese. Now Washington is trying to make the Asian countries participants in its adventurism against socialism. But this policy threatens all peoples, and recognition of this is quite obviously palpable for the U.S. defense secretary during his current tour of the countries of the region.

Rebuffed in Australia

LD131516 Moscow TASS in English 1434 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 13 TASS -- TASS commentator Vasiliy Kharkov writes: U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's statement at the National Press Club in Canberra on Saturday, which crowned his visit to Australia and his ten-day tour of Asia and the Pacific, was an example of the slanderous rhetoric used by Washington administration officials to justify U.S. stepped-up military preparations in that vast region.

Remaining faithful to his habit, the Pentagon chief also in that speech made a big effort to scare Australians with a "growing Soviet military presence" in the Indian and Pacific Oceans, though he was not able to cite any proof to back up the charge.

When attending newsmen asked Weinberger how those claims of his could be squared with the Soviet Union's major peace initiatives, including those for Asian and Pacific security, he passed the questions over in silence.

A Canberra TV network summed up his statement as an effort to frighten Australia with a "Soviet threat".

Why did the U.S. emissary need, as they say, to cast a shadow on a clear day, by resorting to anti-Soviet slander?

The U.S. Administration continues its attempts to enlist Australia in the "star wars" project, although Canberra has officially declared its negative attitude to it.

Weinberger was told this once again during his latest visit but he went all out to try to lure private Australian firms into involvement with the "Strategic Defense Initiative" with promises of big rewards.

There is ever stiffer public opposition in Australia to U.S. military bases in that country. This protest movement has of late been joined by more and more people from also those circles which have so far been keeping out of the campaign against foreign bases.

This has been due also to concern that American bases could be used in "star wars". During his visit to Canberra Weinberger did not exclude this possibility.

The Pentagon is willing to extend the network of its military facilities in Australia. The newspaper AUSTRALIAN reported a document prepared in Washington on this score, which lists concrete locations for such installations to be set up in the event of "any complications" concerning the use of U.S. bases in the Philippines.

To draw attention from these militarist plans, the Pentagon chief did not found anything better than playing once again the already shipping record about a "Soviet threat".

USSR, AUSTRALIA BEGIN TRADE TALKS IN CANBERRA

LD110339 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1555 GMT 10 Apr 86

[Text] Canberra, 10 Apr (TASS) -- The sixth session of the joint Soviet-Australian commission on trade and economic cooperation opened here today. A Soviet delegation headed by USSR Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade N. Smelyakov is taking part in its work. The Australian side is headed by V. Fitzgerald, deputy minister of foreign trade.

Issues of developing trade-economic and scientific-technical cooperation between the USSR and Australia are being discussed at the session. In his speech, V. Fitzgerald emphasized that the Australian Government and the country's business circles manifest a great deal of interest in the further development of trade with the USSR on a long-term basis. He announced that a decision had been adopted to allow the opening of an Aeroflot office in Sydney.

REPORTAGE ON VERNON WALTERS EUROPEAN TOUR

Seeks Support for U.S. Libyan Policy

[Text] Washington, 13 Apr (TASS) -- In an attempt to make its West European allies support Washintton's adventurist anti-Libyan course, the Reagan administration has sent Vernon Walters, U.S. representative at the United Nations, on a trip to Western Europe. According to a State Department announcement, Walters is at present in Britain, where he has had a meeting with Prime Minister Thatcher as part of "continuing consultations on the terrorism threat." It is under cover of this false tenet that the administation is whipping up the situation regarding Libya.

U.S. Use of UK Bases Viewed

[Text] London April 12 TASS -- In the light of reports that the Reagan administration may use U.S. bombers based in British territory for an aggressive attack on Libya, Tam Dalyell, a deputy of the House of Commons from the Labour Party, has demanded an urgent convocation of Parliament's session. He stated, in particular, that at that extraordinary session the Margaret Thatcher government should state what measures it is going to do about a U.S. action at this critical period. The member of Parliament emphasized that Britain should firmly demand that the United States abandon the plans aimed at attacking Libya. British territory should in no way be used as a launch site for U.S. air raids. The question may now arise of how effective is the British Government's control over the territory of its own country.

Paris April 12 TASS -- U.S. military preparations directed against Libya are seriously worrying Western Europe, writes the French "LIBERATION". The newspaper points out that West European countries express concern over possible consequences of a U.S. military intervention.

[Text] President Reagan has sent the United States delegate at the United Nations, Vernon Walters, to Western Europe to enlist support from the allies in NATO in the anti-Libyan campaign of the United States. In London, Vernon Walters had talks with the prime minister, Mrs Margaret Thatcher. As the MAIL on Sunday reports, Mrs Thacher agreed to allow the use of British bases in its territory and also in Cyprus for the operation against Libya the United States is preparing. Yet the other West European countries express alarm over these preparations and refuse to introduce sanctions against Libya.

Meets With France's Chirac

LD140931 Moscow TASS in English 0917 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Paris April 14 TASS -- Vernon Walters, the White House special emissary and U.S. Ambassador, to the U.N. has arrived in Paris.

Vernon Walters, who earlier visited Britain and West Germany, is jetting around West European capitals in a bid to enlist their suport for the anti-Libyan adventures of the Reagan administation.

The U.S. emissary has met France's Prime Minister Jacques Chirac and intends to be received by President Francois Mitterrand.

There have been no official reports on the results of the talks between Vernon and Chirac. However, according to the TF-1 television network, the head of the French Government has taken a cautious stance on the Libyan-American conflict and has called on Washington for its peaceful solution.

ZIMYANIN CONTINUES TALKS WITH FRG DELEGATION

[Text] Moscow, 11 Apr (TASS) -- A group of deputies of the USSR Supreme Soviet, headed by Mikhail Zimyanin, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and deputy chairman of the Foreign Affairs Commission of the Soviet of Nationalities of the USSR Supreme Soviet, today continued conversations at the USSR Supreme Soviet with a delegation from the Disarmament and Arms Control Subcommission of the West German Bundestag, led by Egon Bahr, chairman of the subcommission. Taking part in the conversations from the Soviet side were the following: USSR Supreme Soviet deputies Yevgeniy Velikhov, Georgiy Zhikov, Yuriy Izrael, and other officials. From the West German side: Deputies of the Bundestag Guenter Vergeugen of the Social Democratic Party, Juergen Todenhoeffer of the Christian Democratic Union, Hans Huyn of the Christian Social Union, Helmut Schaeffer of the Free Democratic Party, and Torsten Lange of the "Greens" party.

The sides held a thorough exchange of opinions about topical international problems and questions of bilateral relations. Zimyanin stressed the importance of intensive political dialogue which would facilitate the solution of burning problems and the return of international relations to the channel of detente. Resolute actions by all nations aimed at ending the arms race, above all nuclear arms, and preventing its spread to space and reducing conventional arms and armed forces in Europe are needed now more than ever, he said.

The West German parliamentarians' attention was drawn to the historic significance of Mikhail Gorbachev's January statement which advanced a program for the total elimination of nuclear and chemical weapons by the beginning of the 3d millennium. The Soviet side made a principled assessment of the U.S. Government's refusal to stop nuclear testing and join the USSR's real and concrete efforts directed at ending the nuclear arms race and abolishing nuclear weapons. The Soviet Union, it was said, favors reducing the level of military confrontation in Europe and is prepared to cooperate on that issue with all countries on the continent, including the FRG.

It was stressed that by signing the secret agreements on West German involvement in the American program to devise space strike weapons, Bonn is assuming equal responsibility with the United States for undermining world security. Zimyanin said that the Soviet Union's principled position, oriented at mutually beneficial cooperation with the FRG on the basis of the Moscow Treaty and consideration for the two countries' interests, remains unchanged. The USSR is firmly committed to the preservation and multiplication of the experience accumulated in bilateral cooperation, he pointed out.

Bahr stressed the importance of the proposals set forth in Gorbachev's 15 January statement, directed at preserving peace on earth. The sides held a detailed and frank discussion on these issues, with both sides discussing their views. The meeting's participants came out in favor of devloping inter-parliamentary contacts. The West German parliamentarians left Moscow on the same day.

FOREIGN MINISTRY REAFFIRMS SUPPORT FOR LIBYA

LD111632 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1602 GMT 11 Apr 86

["Representative of the USSR Ministry for Foreign Affairs on the Aggressive Plans of the USA" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow, 11 Apr (TASS) -- The Soviet Union decisively condemns all manifestations of the so-called policy of neoglobalism, which threatens sovereign states and facilitates the creation of tension and the intensification of confrontation, stated Valeriy Sukhin, deputy head of the USSR Foreign Ministry Press Department, today at a briefing for Soviet and foreign journalists, answering a question about the possibility of a new aggression by the United States against Libya.

Relations between the Soviet Union and Libya -- these are relations of friendship and cooperation in various fields, said the USSR Foreign Affairs Ministry spokesman. We have given and will give aid and support to the Libyan Jamahiriyah in its resistance against all aggressive intrigues.

JANA on Military Support

LD121943 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1730 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, 12 Apr (JANA) -- The Soviet Union has reaffirmed its backing and military support for the Jamahiriyah in its confrontation with U.S. imperialism in the Mediterranean.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman denied today [as received] in Moscow reports propagated by Western Media to the effect that the Soviet Union adheres to noninterference in the military confrontation in the Mediterranean.

Moscow-Tripoli Airlift Reported

[Text] Beirut, 14 Apr (MENA) -- Today's issue of the Lebanese paper AL-SHARG says that an airlift between Moscow and Tripoli has been established and Soviet submarines have returned to the Mediterranean.

The paper cites informed sources as saying that the Soviet Union is determined to fulfill its commitments to Libya and to supply it with all types of weapons necessary for its defense by airlift or by other means.

KATUSHEV HOLDS 'FRIENDLY' MEETING WITH LIBYA'S JALLUD

LD111420 Moscow TASS in English 1317 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 11 TASS -- 'Abd al-Salam Jallud, member of the revolutionary leadership of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, has received K.F. Katushev, member of the CPSU Central Committee, chairman of the USSR State Council for Foreign Economic Relations who is leading a Soviet Government delegation staying here.

At the meeting held in a friendly atmosphere the sides discussed questions connected with a further development of economic, scientific, technical, and trade cooperation between the Soviet Union and Libyan Jamahiriyah.

LIBYA BRIEFS SOCIALIST, ARAB ENVOYS ON 'U.S. THREATS'

PM141045 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 14 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[TASS report under general headline "The United States -- Libya: Threat of New Aggression"]

[Text] Tripoli, 13 Apr -- The heads of socialist countries' diplomatic missions accredited in Libya were invited to the Libyan People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison, where they were informed of the extremely dangerous development of the situation in the Mediterranean as a result of continuing U.S. threats. The JANA agency reports that during the meeting it was stressed that U.S. armed preparations have been completed and now the American military could at any moment commit aggression against the Libyan people, which responsible American figures and their NATO allies themselves confirm.

Ambassadors of Arab states were also invited to the Libyan People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison and informed of the real threat of American aggression hanging over the Libyan people. At this meeting, according to an agency report, particular emphasis was laid on the necessity for all Arab countries to combine efforts and oppose American imperialism's impudent pretentions.

An official representative of M. al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, said that Libya is taking the necessary measures to repel the aggressive action now being prepared by the United States.

At the same time, the JANA agency circulated a report which, citing well-informed sources, indicates that the U.S. CIA is planning a series of sabotage actions in the near future in various regions of the world in order to find a pretext for committing aggression against the Libyan people by ascribing these actions to Libya.

TASS CITES AL-QADHDHAFI ON 'RUDE' U.S. THREATS

[Text] Tripoli April 12 TASS -- The Libyan Jamahiriyah rejects the U.S. rude military threats which will not bully the Libyan people, stated Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, the leader of the Libyan revolution. In a statement to the JANA news agency he has emphasized that facilities in Libyan territory selected by U.S. aggressors for a strike are purely civilian ones.

JANA reported that the heads of diplomatic missions of NATO countries accredited in the Libyan Jamahiriyah were invited to the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison of Libya. They were told about the stand of some West European countries which politically and in a propagandist way connive at U.S. aggression and joined in the anti-Libyan campaign. The People's Bureau demanded that the ambassadors of NATO countries [provide the] necessary explanations on that score.

TASS CITES JANA COMMENTARY DENYING LINK TO FRG EXPLOSION

[Text] Tripoli April 12 TASS -- The Libyan news agency JANA has issued a commentary in which it rejects any involvement of Libya in the explosion in the West Berlin discotheque.

Statements similar to the one made by Chancellor Helmut Kohl of the FRG who asserted that there were a lot of proofs of Libya's involvement, JANA points out, are fabricated for the purpose of preparing world public opinion for a direct U.S.-NATO aggression against Libya.

The FRG's stand expressed by its chancellor, the commentary goes on, indicates that West Germany and other NATO countries follow in the wake of the U.S. Administration which seeks to draw West European countries into the realisation of U.S. aggressive plans and to make them accomplices in an irresponsible venture.

ARAB LEAGUE PLEDGES SOLIDARITY WITH LIBYA

LD131850 Moscow TASS in English 1611 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] Tunis April 13 TASS -- A statement of the Arab League circulated here says that in the course of a month Libya has become for the second time a target of open threats coming from the U.S. which is violating international law and jeopardizing security in the Mediterranean region.

The statement emphasizes that the hostile campaign launched by the U.S. against Libya is based on irresponsible and groundless accusations to the effect that Libya is allegedly involved in the recent acts of terrorism in Western Europe. The Arab League voices solidarity of Arab nations with Libya in the face of the threats and aggressive actions directed against its security.

IZVESTIYA REPORTS OUTCOME OF SOVIET-CUBAN TALKS

PM121340 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 12 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[TASS report: "In the Two Countries' Interests"]

[Text] Havana, 11 Apr -- The 16th meeting of the Soviet-Cuban intergovernmental commission on economic and scientific-technical cooperation has been held here. The Soviet delegation was headed by I.V. Arkhipov, first deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, and the Cuban delegation by Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, deputy chairman of the Republic's Council of State and Council of Ministers.

During the meeting, the results of Soviet-Cuban economic and scientific-technical cooperation in the last 5-year plan were examined and its prospects for the coming last 5-year plan were examined and its prospects for the coming 5-year period (1986-1990) discussed. The meeting participants analyzed progress in the construction of the Juragua nuclear power station, the conduct of geological prospecting and oilfield development work, and questions connected with the assimilation of capacities at textile enterprises constructed with USSR technical assistance. Attention was also given to questions of further expanding trade turnover between the two countries and of making provision for the shipment of external trade freight.

The participants discussed trends in scientific-technical cooperation for the new 5-year plan in light of the long-term program for the development of economic and scientific-technical cooperation between the USSR and the Republic of Cuba for the period until 2000 and the CEMA countries' comprehensive program for scientific-technical progress until the year 2000. The commission's work took place in an atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding.

A protocol was signed on the outcome of the work. Simultaneously a protocol on the results of the coordination of the USSR and Cuban Republic state plans for 1986-1990, an agreement on trade turnover and payments between the USSR and the Republic of Cuba scientific-technical cooperation for 1986-1990 were signed. The documents were signed by I.V. Arkhipov for the Soviet side and C.R. Rodriguez for the Cuban side. The signing ceremony was attended by Fidel Castro, first secretary of the Cuban Communist Party Central Committee and chairman of the Republic's Council of State and Council of Ministers, and also by A.S. Kapto, USSR ambassador to the Republic of Cuba.

A conversation was held between F. Castro and I.V. Arkhipov, which took place in the warm, fraternal atmosphere characteristic of relations between the two countries. The Soviet delegation left for home the same day. It was seen off at Jose Marti International Airport by F. Castro, C.R. Rodriguez, and other officials.

By decision of the Republic of Cuba State Council, I.V. Arkhipov has been awarded the Order of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes for his great contribution to socialist building in the USSR and to the development and consolidation of the relations of friendship and cooperation between the Soviet Union and Cuba. This high award was presented to him by F. Castro.

SOVIET SCIENTIST GIVEN ASYLUM IN U.S. EMBASSY IN BRAZIL

PY110106 Paris AFP in Spanish 0033 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Rio de Janeiro, 11 Apr (AFP) -- Soviet scientist Vladimir Ivanovitch Halturin, who disappeared in Brazil in March, was granted asylum in the U.S. Consulate in Belem, Para State, has already been sent to the United States, O GLOBO television reported tonight.

The information which is said to have been furnished by the U.S. Consulate in Belem, was neither confirmed nor denied by U.S. diplomats. The Itamaraty [Brazil Foreign Ministry] spokesman said this afternoon that the whereabouts of the Soviet scientist who disappeared in the port of Belem on 26 March, is not known. He added that the Soviet Embassy in Brasilia has reported the disappearance of Halturin, who was a member of the crew of a Soviet oceanographic vessel, to the Brazilian Government.

The general director of the Federal Police Department, Romeu Tuma, tonight in Brasilia confirmed the disappearance of Halturin, but said he had no information as to Halturin's whereabouts.

D'ESCOTO CITED ON RESULTS OF CONTADORA CONFERENCE

PM091458 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 9 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[TASS dispatch: "Contadora Group Ministers Conference Ends"]

[Text] Panama, 8 Apr -- The participants in the conference of Contadora Group foreign ministers and the Support Group comprising representatives of five Central American states which has ended here expressed themselves in favor of the continuation of talks with the aim of achieving a comprehensive agreement on a peaceful settlement of the situation in Central America and against Washington's backing for counterrevolutionary forces and foreign interference in the region's affairs.

The final document entitled the "Panama Communique," signed by the Contadora Group and the Support Group ministers, points out that a political settlement of the Central American crisis is the only way of achieving mutual understanding between the region's countries which in turn would provide a solid basis for signing a final version of a document on peace and cooperation in Central America.

The "Panama Communique" urges the foreign ministers of the five Central American countries to attend the conference of the Contadora Group and the Support Group scheduled to be held in Panama on 6 June this year to finalize an "Act of Peace." The ministers of the five Central American countries are asked to open talks without delay on the provisions of this document on which a united stance has not yet been elaborated, in particular regarding arms reductions and the ending of military maneuvers.

The foreign ministers of the Contadora Group and the Support Group denounced foreign interference in the Central American conflict, which hampers the achievement of a political settlement of the situation in the region, contravenes the UN Charter, and is a gross violation of the norms of international law.

On White House instructions, the representatives of El Salvador, Honduras, and Costa Rica adopted a pro-American stance at this conference. They opposed the stance of the Contadora Group and the Support Group on ways to achieve peace in the region. In an attempt to negate the results of the Panama conference, the ministers of these countries left the forum before the signing of the "Panama Communique."

Addressing journalists, Miguel d'Escoto, the Nicaraguan foreign minister, described the results of the conference as positive because the representatives of the Contadora Group and the Support Group reaffirmed their intention to continue the quest for a peaceful settlement of the situation in the region. He sharply denounced U.S. interference in Central American affairs and the U.S. interventionist course in respect to Nicaragua. Washington's militarist course, M. d'Escoto emphasized, is the main obstacle to achieving effective results at the talks on a political settlement of the conflict in the region. In order to achieve progress, he pointed out, it is essential that the United States stop financial and other aid to the counterrevolutionary gangs.

Gromyko Visits Sverdlovsk, Addresses Local Leadership

Plant, Obkom Meetings

1300 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Comrade Gromyko, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo, chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, who was in Sverdlovsk Oblast from 9 to 12 April, acquainted himself with the work of industrial, agricultural, and trade enterprises and the activity of local soviets, showing an interest in the urgent problems of the social and economic development of labor collectives. He visited the very old Urals enterprise, the Verkhisetskiy metallurgical plant. At a meeting with the managers and specialists there was a discussion of questions of accelerating scientific and technical progress, reconstructing the plant, raising the quality of the output, and training of the cadres. In the cold rolled steel shop, Comrade Gromyko chatted with the workers and asked about their working, living, and leisure conditions. Stress was laid on the need to improve the medical services, to show constant attention to the everyday needs of working people, and to wage a constant struggle to affirm a healthy way of life.

The plant has a subsidiary farm for various types of produce that are used in the plant canteens and children's preschool establishments and sold in shops within the area of the enterprise. Andrey Andreyevich Gromyko looked around the section producing fish for sale and noted the importance of further developing subsidiary farms of enterprises and organizations. Such farms play a considerable role in the implementation of the Food Program. In the plant's shop he chatted with sales assistants about the organization of trade. He was told about how setting up a retail services center right within the works makes women's domestic work easier and facilitates the improvement of raising the next generation in the family.

In the obkom a meeting took place with the leadership of the Sverdlovsk Obkom and gorkom, the oblispolkom and gorispolkom. Addressing those assembled, Comrade Gromyko told them of the impressions he had gained from his trip to the central Urals. The national economic plans are being fulfilled, on the whole, he said, but it is essential to do everything to ensure that the new plans connected with the scientifically-proven need for acceleration should also be fulfilled without fail. The task of acceleration raised by the 27th CPSU Congress is theoretically well-founded. He viewed the paths of scientific and technical progress as the basis for further rapid progress.

It is essential to get rid of the slogan which has now become outdated: Ours is no worse when something of ours is being compared with products from the capitalist world. In as far as development is proceeding rapidly, Comrade Gromyko noted, we must be bolder as we look to the future and think about what we will be doing tomorrow and what products we will be making tomorrow. That means it is necessary to strengthen the links between science and production in the Urals, and not only the Urals. The wish was expressed that all oblast enterprises should fulfill the state plan as there are some in the oblast that are still far from managing this. Attention was pointed to the need to raise the quality of output.

In the social sphere, the central Urals has achieved successes. In particular, the cultural and sports complex in Baltym settlement can serve as an example for rural areas today; there both children and adults can engage in sports and have a high standard of leisure. Publicity must be given to such construction and to the nature of the cultural and educational and sports work carried out. In towns, specially equipped basement premises in housing blocks do not require great expenditures and these can serve as examples for setting up small cultural and sports centers where young people can gather. Work has begun on setting up such sports gymnasiums in the basements in Sverdlovsk.

There was also discussion on the implementation of the school reforms and the need to consistently, and in a planned manner, resolve the housing problem in such a way that the task set by the 27th CPSU Congress as a very important political task — to provide every Soviet family with good housing, a separate flat or an individual house, by the end of the century — will be solved. Comrade Gromyko expressed confidence that the working people of Sverdlovsk Oblast under the leadership of the party organization would fulfill the plans of the 27th CPSU Congress.

In his trips around the city and oblast, Comrade Gromyko was accompanied by Comrade Petrov, first secretary of the Sverdlovsk Obkom, and by Comrade Lobov, chairman of the oblispolkom.

Televised Speech

LD111745 Moscow Television Service in Russian

[Text] Comrades, in terms of the depth of analysis, the adherence to principle, the candor of the evaluations and finally, the scale of tasks which have been put before the country, the 27th congress is an epoch-making event. It will undoubtedly have a positive and strong influence on all the processes in our society. The Central Committee Political Report, which was delivered at the Congress by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, has demonstrated the inexhaustible possibilities of socialist society. The congress has enriched the treasure house of scientific communism with important theoretical theses relating to both the questions of our internal development and to international affairs. [applause]

From the rostrum of the congress, with directness and bluntness, there was talk about omissions and unfavorable phenomena in the economy and in the social and spiritual sphere. You can put it this way: The congress literally breathed the truth. Today every soviet, in the light of the congress's directions, naturally puts before itself the question: On what should attention be concentrated first? Others also set these questions before themselves. The congress's directive is clear: The soviets carry responsibility for all aspects of life on their territory. If somebody can state, this is not my problem; then such an attitude is unacceptable for the soviets. Today successful economic development is only possible along the path of an intensification of production, a rise in labor productivity, a lowering of the prime output costs, an introduction of scientific and technological achievements, a perfection of national economic management, and a rise in good organization and discipline. These words from the decisions of the congress, in their preciseness and persuasiveness, are as though cast from metal. And it seems that they were adopted directly for the glorious city of Sverdlovsk, and your oblast. [applause]

Sverdlovsk Oblast and its oblast capital have the opportunity to demonstrate to the country a good model for the fulfillment of these tasks. Our time is short in order to put economic and social reserves, additional possibilities in production, science, and technology, into action and to use all the advantages and all the strength of the socialist social system. Familiarization with your affairs shows that what has been achieved is being evaluated more deeply than before. Reasons for omissions are being disclosed. More well-founded and concrete decisions are being worked out. The overall conclusion undoubtedly boils down to the fact that the activity of soviets is also changing for the better. A good indicator — in the first quarter of 1986 Sverdlovsk Oblast overfulfilled targets for the volume of production and labor productivity in industry. No less good an indicator — speaking in Tolyatti 3 days ago, Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev gave a positive assessment of the work of the Ralmash Collective, particularly of its plans to render help in reconstructing the Magnitka. Such an assessment should inspire the Sverdlovsk giant to prove it is capable of performing great feats of labor to the glory of our motherland in the future, as it did in the past. There...[applause interrupts] There is still a considerable amount of work to be done here, but there is also a considerable potential that has not been used so far and that has to be activated and set into motion.

Now about the situation in agriculture. Perhaps some people think reform in itself will bring more meat, milk, vegetables, and fruit to our tables. No, no one can count on this. This task can only be dealt with by people through their own labor and improved organization of it, all the more so since, on instructions from the CPSU Central Committee, the USSR Council of Ministers adopted a special decision that provides assistance in resolving the very acute problem of providing the population with milk products. So, now the matter is in your hands.

Speaking at a session of the oblast soviet, with the party aktiv taking part, it would be unjustifiable not to draw your attention to the necessity for a very serious attitude to road building. You know better than any third party that this is a bottleneck for you. Naturally, it holds back your potential. Your region is an industrial one and must have unhindered internal communications as well as reliable links with neighbors, with the whole country.

Among the most important directions in the soviets' work there remains the production of consumer goods — the expansion of the range of these goods and, especially, raising quality. As is known in the country as a whole and in your oblast, the market is already saturated with certain goods from the point of view of quantity. But people today are justifiably demanding not just clothing or shoes but quality clothing and shoes meeting the requirements and taste of people. In a word, it is quite appropriate to point out that everything that is created — from a man's suit to a lathe, from a bicycle to an ocean liner, from a lady's boot to a rolling mill — everything should be of quality. There should be no low-quality goods. They have no place, neither in the shops nor in the stores.

The issues of improving the living conditions of the Soviet people were voiced with special force at the party congress. Unfortunately, it is precisely housing that has become one of the most urgent problems of today. In order to fulfill the congress directive, to provide every Soviet family with flat or individual home before the year 2000, we need to act — that is for everyone to act. This is a task for all people. It is often said that the soviets lack resources. It is true that more resources are needed. I have to say that the corresponding decisions are under preparation and certain corrections to the existing position will be made. But the soviets are not doing everything that they should be doing — this is also axiomatic. And if there is neither a roble nor a kopeck left, then the soviets must boldly raise this issue. This, of all things, they should be doing as a minimum; this ought to be a duty of theirs. Or take questions of health protection. Soviet power ensured their worthy resolution, one that the working man can only dream of in capitalist conditions. Incidentally, the whole world has grasped this well. In a socialist society — in the present, also — the protection of people's health represents an important social task and attention to it should not slacken.

How many remarkable descriptions of the Urals are in existence! Nowhere else in the world can you find such natural splendor. It seems as though each mountain greets from afar those coming here in trains or cars. Rare beauty indeed! The logical conclusion arising from this is: Preserve the nature, the unique landscape, the charm of this land. It is a worthwhile and noble task. It also has other aspects — the national economy, social, and educational aspects. The soviets as a whole and the oblast's leadership must show vigor and inventiveness, so that, while developing the economy, the originality of these enchanting places can also be preserved. [applause]

We did not plan this meeting specially for 11 April, the eve of the 25th anniversary of man's first space flight — Yuriy Alekseyevich Gagarin's flight. However, it just so happened and this is precisely an occasion when the moment itself has, as it were, a significance that is not coincidental. It consists of this: that 25 years ago a big power, the Soviet Union, had already brilliantly demonstrated man's colossal capabilities for getting to know the laws of nature, so as to place them in the service of people, in the service of the cause of peace, for which our country is persistently struggling. [applause]

17. Working people in management! Resolutely reorganize work style and methods and eradicate departmentalism, localistic tendencies, and bureaucratism!

18. Soviet cultural figures! Create works worthy of the socialist epoch! Satisfy the working people's spiritual needs more fully!

19. Citizens of the Soviet Union! Participate actively in socialist self-management! Show more creative initiative and increase the role of the labor collective!

20. Long live the inviolable union of the working class, the peasantry, and the intelligentsia!

21. Long live the fraternal friendship of the peoples of the USSR!

22. Glory to Soviet women — patriots, working people, and mothers!

23. Komsomol members, young men and women! Be pioneers in the struggle for all that is new and advanced in our life!

24. War and labor veterans! Your place is in the ranks of active fighters for the great cause of communism!

25. Communists! Be in the vanguard of the struggle for the fulfillment of the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress! Affirm the pure and honest image of the party member by personal example!

26. Soviet soldiers! Vigilantly guard the peaceful, creative labor of our people! Glory to the valiant Armed Forces of the USSR!

27. Fraternal greetings to the peoples of the socialist countries! Long live world socialism — the mighty and influential force of modern times! Let the community of socialist states grow in strength!

28. Fraternal greetings to the peoples of the developing countries! Raise higher the banner of solidarity with the just struggle of the peoples of Asia, Africa, and Latin America against imperialist exploitation and oppression for an independent, progressive path of development!

29. Mayday greetings to the working class of the capitalist countries, which is waging a stubborn struggle against the monopolies' oppression for its rights and vital interests!

30. Fraternal greetings to the communist and workers parties! Let the class solidarity and cooperation of the communists of all countries in the struggle for peace and socialism grow in strength!

31. Fraternal greetings to the courageous fighters for the interests of working people who are languishing in torture chambers and prisons! Freedom for the prisoners of imperialism and reaction!

32. Peoples of all countries! Struggle against the threat of war, for the end of the arms race and the creation of a comprehensive system of international security!

33. Peoples of the world! Actively oppose the danger of nuclear war which emanates from imperialism! Strive for a complete halt to nuclear tests! Let us not permit the militarization of space!

34. Peoples of Europe! Struggle for peaceful cooperation and good-neighborly relations among states, for detente and the creation of reliable security on the continent!

35. Peoples of the Asian countries! Unite efforts in the struggle for security, good-neighborliness, and cooperation in Asia and the Pacific Ocean region!

36. Peoples of the world! Struggle resolutely against the imperialist policy of aggression and violence! Strive for the elimination of hotbeds of war danger!

37. Peoples of all countries! Step up the struggle for the democratization of international relations and for constructive collaboration among states in resolving the global questions of modern times!

38. Long live the Leninist foreign policy of the Soviet Union — a policy of consolidating peace and the security of the peoples and of broad international cooperation! Let peace, without weapons and wars, triumph on the planet!

39. Long live our great homeland — the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics!

40. Following the Leninist course of the 27th CPSU Congress — forward, along the path of communist creation and peace!

Kuybyshev Workers Cited on Gorbachev Visit

PM091402 [Editorial Report] Moscow SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA in Russian 8 April 1986 First Edition publishes on page 1 under the headline "The People's Support Inspires the Party's Plans" a 2,000-word own special correspondents V. Lysenko and N. Mikhaylov report on the Gorbachev visit to Kuybyshev Oblast. This report is similar to previous reports, but adds the following passage:

"A few hours before the event at the plant it was already known that there would be a meeting with the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. For a short interview we turned to well-known people at the plant.

"'How did you react to the news that you would be meeting with the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee?'

"Hero of Socialist Labor V.N. Yemelyanov, press team leader, replies: 'With understandable pride. After all, this is the first trip by the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee since the congress. The way I understand it is that the Central Committee consults the working class as the best way of organizing the fulfillment of the resolutions of the 27th party congress.'

"'What problems do you personally see as the most important?'

"'I would mention two very urgent problems, in my view,' Z.A. Belova, crane operator at the sheet rolling mill, replied, 'the strengthening of labor discipline and output quality.'

"A question for team leader Yu.T. Bryndin: 'What do you, as a member of the plant's party committee, consider to be the main thing in work with people today?'

"'At the plant we are now faced with the very acute problem of reconstructing production. We are doing everything on the move — "with no lunch breaks," as they say — without cutting but even increasing output. This is really important. But reconstructing consciousness is even more important and more difficult. We must ensure that everyone feels common tasks to be their own.'

"'It was long believed,' V.I. Drovyannikov, secretary of the party committee, enters the conversation, 'that it was impossible to ensure smooth working by metallurgists. But we changed the planning and norm-setting system and strengthened material and technical supply. And — this is the main thing — we ensured that it would be disadvantageous for each worker not to work smoothly.'

"...The workers greeted M.S. Gorbachev at the plant entrance. There were greetings and wishes for good health. There were exclamations: 'You've chosen the right course,' 'Let there be more order everywhere,' 'Keep it up!'"

Material Reserves Committee Chairman Retires

Uzbek Plenum Focuses on Existing Shortcomings

PM081430 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 31 Mar 86
First Edition p 2

[Own correspondent N. Gladkov report on Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee Plenum under the rubric "Implementing the Decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress" and the general heading "Working in the New Fashion"]

[Text] Uzbekistan — Mukarramkhon Karimova, weaver at the Margilan "Atlas" carpet fabric association has been minding 10 looms instead of 4 for a number of years now. This and her skill have enabled her to achieve high labor productivity year after year. During the 11th 5-Year Plan the weaver fulfilled 13 annual plans. Addressing the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee Plenum, which discussed the results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the republic Communists' tasks in implementing its decisions, the distinguished weaver said:

"The documents of the 27th party congress, imbued with concern for upgrading the country's economy and increasing the Soviet people's prosperity, fill us with a desire to work even harder, to give our all."

The great labor enthusiasm engendered by the congress decisions was mentioned also by I. Usmankhodzhayev, first secretary of the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee, who delivered the report: M. Mirkasymov, first secretary of the Khorezm party Obkom; T. Kirgizbayeva, team leader at Syr-Darya Oblast's "Malik" sovkhoz; V. Zhuravlev, general director of the Tashkent V.P. Chkalov aviation association, and other speakers during the debate.

While giving their due to positive trends, the plenum participants focused their attention on existing shortcomings in the leadership of the national economy and culture and on how to consolidate and develop the changes for the better which have appeared in the life of the republic and how to achieve a fundamental breakthrough in practical matters. Many people spoke approvingly about the principled criticism addressed to the Uzbek party organization at the 27th CPSU Congress. However, certain leaders find it difficult to overcome inertia, while others try to cling to the old ways. We cannot reconcile ourselves to the fact that in the current year 40 enterprises are already failing to meet the output sales plan and 185 enterprises are failing to meet the labor productivity growth plans. More than 200 collectives have broken delivery contracts.

Another fact was also cited: At more than 200 of the republic's enterprises the production targets set for this year are below last year's level. In a whole series of oblasts the planned increase in industrial output is below the republic average. The plans do not provide for a high rate of development, and speakers proposed that they be revised taking available reserves into account.

In the republic, where as many as 50 percent of enterprises require retooling, questions of production reconstruction are particularly topical. Nonetheless, even now it is planned to spend three-fourths of capital investments on new construction. Certain economic managers are still inclined mainly toward extensive deevlopment factors and party organs at local level appear not to notice this.

Indifference toward new machinery is being overcome only very slowly. At the Uzbekkhlopkomash association digital program control machine tools are in effect being used on one shift only. Multipurpose machining centers at the Ministry of Tractor and Agricultural Machine Building and the Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry are not working at full capacity either. Manipulators and robots are not operating efficiently at a number of enterprises.

Plenum participants proposed that the republic Council of Ministers and Academy of Sciences should look into questions of relations between science and production and the establishment of major intersector scientific and technical complexes and engineering centers. Is it perhaps normal that less than one-third of the 660 inventions proposed to practical workers by the republic Academy of Sciences' institutes during the past 5-year plan have been applied? The structure of existing science-and-production associations also needs to be further improved. A great deal of work is necessary to overcome the lag in agriculture and above all in cotton growing. Last year the prime cost of output exceeded the plan figure by almost R700 million. In addition to cotton growing, livestock raising, vegetable growing, and other agro-industrial complex sectors need to be deeloped at a higher rate.

The republic party organization faces major tasks in the social and everyday amenities sphere. At certain enterprises and construction sites manual labor predominates and sanitary and social amenities are either primitive or lacking altogether. There is a shortage of hostels, children's institutions, and canteens. The situation is especially poor as regards the provision of everyday amenities in rural areas. In the villages there are many old clay houses in which the provision of drinking water, electricity, and gas is poor, as is their connection to the radio and telephone network.

Overreporting and deception are being combated in the republic. But this struggle needs to be considerably stepped up. In Kashka-Darya oblast overreporting was exposed at almost one-third of the enterprises at which checks were carried out. Deception still persists in Namangan, Tashkent, and other oblasts, in the system of consumer, housing, and municipal services, state and cooperative trade, and public catering. In this context ministers V. Kuksenko, V. Dukhanin, and M. Khasanov were criticized at the plenum for tolerating "juggling" with figures in the sectors entrusted to them.

Plenum participants pointed out that many party committees are being slow to reorganize their work, they are still doing the work of economic organs and dealing with administrative questions. The passion for meetings and excessive paperwork is being eradicated with difficulty. Speakers emphasized that it is necessary to enhance the role and importance of primary party organizations. Yet not all party committees pay attention to them. Thus almost 5 months have passed since the report and election meetings and yet many raykoms, gorkoms, and obkoms have not heard a single primary party organization report. In general, the depth of the analysis made of the situation prvailing in grassroots components is inadequate.

The plenum participants assured the CPSU Central Committee that the republic's communists and working people will spare no effort to implement the party's designs and fulfill the state plans and socialist pledges.

Slow Progress Assessed at Lithuanian Plenum

PM111339 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 7 Apr 86 First Edition p 2

[Report by D. Shnyukas under rubric "Implementing the Decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress" and the general heading "Establishing the New"]

[Text] Lithuania — Lithuanian labor collectives have begun the new 5-year plan in a businesslike manner. Industry has overfulfilled the plan for the first quarter. Some 95 percent of the increase in production has been achieved through labor productivity growth. Crop farmers and livestock breeders have carried out shock work.

Nevertheless, it was noted at a Lithuanian Communist Party Central Committee Plenum discussing the tasks of the republic's Communists in light of the 27th CPSU Congress decisions, these achievements could be more substantial. It was stated in the report by P. Grishkyavichus, first secretary of the Central Committee, and in the speeches that the transition to an intensive course of economic and social development, improvement in work style, and renunciation of superfluous paperwork and bureaucracy is not progressing as rapidly as one would wish.

It was said that in recent years the republic's production and science potential has not been utilized satisfactorily. During the last 5-year period there was only a 30 percent growth in the capital-labor ration and a 22 percent increase in labor productivity. A well-balanced system for making economical use of material, fuel, and energy resources has not yet been developed.

Errors in production retooling which has led to a drop in the quality of many manufactured products, have been permitted by the republic's gosplan (Chairman B. Zaykauskas) and by the ministers of light industry, the furniture and wood processing industry, and the construction materials industry — I. Ramanauskas, K. Minetas, and S. Yasyunas. At the "Zhalgiris" plant (Director Yu. Savitskiy), the "Sirius" plant (Director L. Norkus), and a number of enterprises in local industry (Minister G. Simenenko), they count on expansion and new construction while existing equipment is neglected, although one-third more investment is channelled into the repair of this equipment than into the introduction of new equipment.

The USSR Ministry of Machine Building For Animal Husbandry and Fodder Production was sharply criticized by Ya. Matskevich, lathe operator at the Vilnius "Neris" agricultural machinery plant. This department still commits the sin of ill-considered action. When, for example, plant workers were preparing for production of the first industrial batch of mechanical rakes and tedders, instructions suddenly came from sector headquarters to increase the initial plan 10 times over. What is more, this arbitrary decision was not underpinned by resources. And, after tests it turned out that the tedders have considerable structural imperfections. Responsibility must be borne by the design organizations creating imperfect machinery and by those who plan the manufacture of equipment for which there is no demand, the speaker noted.

The successes of construction workers could also be more substantial. The obstacle here is the low efficiency of many teams working under the financial autonomy method and their meagre capacity. Sharp criticism was also addressed to designers. They still issue outdated technical decisions, drag out the designing of ordinary projects over many years, and have become bad hands at bureaucratism and red tape when formulating documents. The plenum demanded that R. Sakalauskas, chairman of the republic's gosstroy, restructure its work and strictly implement a unified scientific and technical policy in this sector.

The achievements of the republic's field and livestock unit workers are well known to the whole country. But even here a considerable amount of work has still to be done to make better use of land. Two years ago the republic's Communist Party Central Committee and Council of Ministers passed a resolution on radically improving potato cultivation. Alas, it has not worked — last year 1 farm in 10 did not even harvest 100 quintals per hectare.

Exceptionally favorable opportunities for radically improving ideological and educational work, it was noted from the plenum rostrum, have been opened up by the directives of the 27th CPSU Congress. The most important thing now is to convey to every individual the congress documents' spirit of innovation and constructive nature, renounce the practice of boasting the number of measures implemented, and aim for real results.

An example must be set here by party gorkoms and raykoms. They are expected to wage a principled struggle for socioeconomic acceleration and for people's healthy lifestyle and constructive leisure. Unfortunately, some party workers have reconciled themselves to stagnation and even to deterioration of matters. In this connection, the Shilalskiy Raykom (First Secretary P. Povilaytis) was criticized. An inclination toward outmoded work methods, a superficial approach, and haste and error in the evaluation and promotion of cadres is also characteristic of the Kayshyadorskiy, Anikshchyayskiy, Ukmergskiy, and a number of other party raykoms.

It was pointed out at the plenum that clear-cut, strict monitoring of the implementation of adopted decisions — that means verification of performance on the spot, rather than on the basis of reports and briefings — the development of criticism and self-criticism, and communist modesty and realism must become the everyday norm of activity for party committees.

The plenum outlined a specific program of action for Lithuanian Communists to fulfill the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress and to meet the targets for 1986 and the 5-year period as a whole. It also gave an assurance that the republic's working people will be loyal to the innovative course of the Leninist party.

Armenian Communist Party Holds Plenum 5 Apr

GF091452 Yerevan Domestic Service in Armenian 0200 GMT 6 Apr 86

[Text] The Armenian Communist Party Central Committee held its plenum yesterday. The plenum reviewed the results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the tasks of the republican and party organizations toward the fulfillment of the congress resolutions.

Comrade Karen Demirchyan, first secretary of the Armenian Communist Party Central Committee, delivered a speech.

The debate on the speech was participated in by Levon Saakyan, first secretary of Yerevan city party committee; Donoyan, employee at Yerevan [word indistinct] factory; Arutyunyan, first secretary of Leninakan city party committee; Gevorkyan, field worker in (Datonik) sovkhoz in Ashtarak Rayon; Oganyan, first secretary of Kirovakan city party committee; Ambartsumyan, rector of Yerevan State University; Shaginyan, Armenian SSR minister of internal affairs; Mstoyan, editor of RIA-TAZA newspaper; Abrahamyan, brigade leader in Yerevanshin construction and installation association; Arutyunyan, chairman of Armenian SSR Trade Unions Council; (Poleynikova), (?teacher) at Yerevan No 35 elementary school; (Tashjyan), first secretary of Sisyan Rayon party committee; Melik Oganchanyan, Armenian SSR culture minister; Imam Aliyev, chairman of Varsenik Rayon soviet executive committee; and (Tashjyan), secretary of Luys production association party committee.

Comrade Karen Demirchyan, first secretary of the Armenian Communist Party, delivered a concluding speech at the plenum.

The central committee's plenum adopted resolutions on the reviewed issues. Then the Central Committee's plenum concluded its work.

The Armenian Communist Party Central Committee Plenum's work was participated in by Polyakov, official at the CPSU Central Committee Organizational Party Work Department.

Slyunkov Speaks on Congress Results, Ensuing Tasks

PM041200 Minsk SOVETSKAYA BELORUSSIYA in Russian 16 Mar 86 pp 2, 3

["Account" of "Report by Comrade N.N. Slyunkov on the Results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the Republic Party Organization's Tasks for the Fulfillment of Its Decisions" delivered at the Second Belorussian Communist Party Central Committee Plenum held in Minsk 15 March 1986]

[Text] The party and the entire Soviet people are living and working under the indelible impression of the 27th CPSU Congress, N.N. Slyunkov said. Held at a crucial turning point in the life of the country and the contemporary world as a whole, it took place in the spirit of Leninist Bolshevik traditions, provided answers to fundamental questions posed for the party and society, and armed Communists and Soviet people with a clear vision of future tasks. The congress marked the beginning of a new stage in the Soviet state's development. It will go down in history as a congress which made truly strategic decisions which determine and will continue to determine in the years and decades to come the nature and pace of our advance toward a qualitatively new state of socialist society.

The party Central Committee Political Report which was delivered by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, the resolution on the Political Report, and the new edition of the CPSU Program substantiate creatively and from Marxist-Leninist positions the concept of accelerating the country's socioeconomic development which was advanced by the CPSU Central Committee April (1985) Plenum, and define the strategy and tactics of the comprehensive improvement of socialism. The party's peace-loving foreign policy course was revealed with convincing force, and foundations for the creation of an all-embracing system of international security, exceptionally important for the fate of all mankind, were formulated.

The Central Committee Political Report, the new edition of the program, the CPSU Statutes, and the other congress documents make a major contribution to the development of the theory and practice of scientific communism. They orient us toward the improvement of the style and methods of party leadership and restructuring of organizational and political work as a necessary condition for the further enhancement of the party's role and the intensification of its influence on all spheres of society's life.

The congress elaborated the CPSU's economic strategy and social policy, whose supreme goal is to steadily raise the material and cultural standards of working people's life on the basis of intensifying production in every way and enhancing its efficiency.

The congress demonstrated yet again our party's loyalty to Marxism-Leninism and its ability to interpret the situation in depth and evaluate it realistically, to learn correct lessons from past experience, and to find ways to solve pressing problems.

The course of the congress' work, its decisions, and the letters and telegrams that were received demonstrated the monolithic cohesion of Communists around the CPSU Central Committee and of the Soviet people around Lenin's party.

The 27th CPSU Congress unanimously approved the political course and political activity of the CPSU Central Committee and the stipulations, conclusions, and tasks set out in the Central Committee Political Report, and made it incumbent upon all party organizations to be guided by them in their work.

Communists and working people in the republic entirely and fully approve the congress decisions. They perceive it as their paramount duty to transform the conceptual energy generated by the supreme party forum into the energy of actions and to implement the CPSU's plans through their selfless labor.

Today, as the congress emphasized, the first and foremost task of the party and the entire people is to resolutely eliminate the adverse trends in the development of the economy, to accelerate it and make it more dynamic, and to open up scope for the initiative and creativity of the masses, for truly revolutionary transformations. The human factor is decisive in the implementation of the program set by the party. It can be activated only through a well-considered economic strategy, a strong social policy, and purposeful ideological education work.

The chief means for implementing the party's course of acceleration are scientific and technical progress and the fundamental restructuring of society's productive forces. Life has confirmed the need to change structural and investment policy and to shift the center of gravity from quantitative indicators to quality and efficiency, from interim to end results, from expansion of fixed capital to its renewal, and from accumulation of resources to their better utilization.

The basic parameters which must be reached by the republic's economy during the 12th 5-Year Plan period are defined in the "Intensification" program. But, in the light of the congress demands, it is necessary to ensure that even greater heights are scaled. National income has to increase by 26 percent instead of the previously set 23.8 percent. The entire increase must result from higher social labor productivity. Materials-intensiveness in the national economy has to be reduced by at least 5 percent. In order to achieve a halving of the national income's materials-intensiveness by the year 2000, during the current 5-year plan period this indicator must reach at least 16 percent instead of the 14 percent envisaged in the program, while the reduction of its energy-intensiveness must reach 11-13 percent instead of 9 percent.

In terms of their complexity and scale, these tasks can in no way be compared with what has been done previously. This means that it is necessary to reorient the thinking and restructure the work of all cadres, that we need forms and methods of work which will reliably guarantee the achievement of the set goals. What is needed is an innovative and nontraditional approach toward the development of science, technology, and production.

In order to double industrial production in the next 15 years, output must increase by 26 percent in the current 5-year plan period. Labor productivity must also rise by the same amount so that by 1990 this factor ensures the entire growth of output volume.

It is necessary to sharply accelerate the refitting of enterprises and to introduce more productive equipment and advanced technologies on a broader scale. Industry is faced with the task of raising the annual renewal of the operational part of production capital to 6-8 percent. A key role here has to be played by machine building.

On the basis of certification of the organizational and technical level of production, the republic's industry has elaborated plans for the reconstruction and retooling of plants and associations. But this must be perceived only as the first step in this direction. It is impossible to allow new projects, which are often started up with obsolete equipment, to be erected under the guise of reconstruction. And such instances have occurred. The "Minskiy Traktornyy Zavod imeni V.I. Lenina" and "Minsktraktorzapchast" associations plan to transfer old machine tools and technology from the umbrella enterprises to new premises at the Vitebsk tractor spare parts plant and the Lepel experimental gears plant.

The quality of plans for retooling, the speaker went on to note, must be subject to unflagging monitoring by ministries and departments and the Belorussian SSR Gosplan. It is incumbent upon party committees to check that inventories of production capital are completed everywhere in the current year and also that second and third follow-up certifications of the technical and organizational standard of enterprises are carried out during the 5-year plan period.

It is necessary to expand the scale of the development and manufacturing of specialized equipment using own resources. The majority of republic ministries and enterprises under union jurisdiction have been set targets for increasing the volume of their own machine-tool building. The progress of fulfillment must be monitored daily by party committees and organizations. Ministries and departments and the Belorussian SSR Gosplan must not see their task as being limited only to notifying volume indicators to enterprises. It is necessary to study in greater depth the potential which plants and associations possess for developing and manufacturing specialized equipment and means of mechanization and for modernizing machine tools and machinery and also to work out in detail alternatives for specialization and production sharing among enterprises. The Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers must accelerate the development of capacities at the "Kompleks" science-and-production association and must mobilize existing experimental and mechanical repair plants more fully in order to satisfy the republic's needs for products with intersector applications.

The purpose of mechanization and automation of production is to make labor more productive and more attractive. Only thus will it be possible to reduce the proportion of manual labor in industry to 22 percent and to release annually 2-3 percent of the work force in existing production units.

The solution of this most important economic and social problem requires new approaches, and primarily toward the elaboration of measures concerning scientific and technical progress. During the previous 5-year plan period these measures were implemented without any coordination, were aimed at the implementation of local tasks, and — of course — failed to produce the required return. The annual economic benefit from the introduction of scientific and technical progress measures amounted to 63 kopeks per R1 of expenditure, while this figure was 35 kopeks in Mogilev Oblast and 57 kopeks each in Brest and Grodno Oblasts.

In the current 5-year plan period it is necessary to ensure the comprehensive mechanization and automation of production on the basis of the application of robotics and electronics and the widespread introduction of flexible and labor-saving technologies. It is important that all levels of leadership and management should have a precise system of work organization and should exercise efficient monitoring in order to raise to 70 percent the share of labor productivity growth attributable to scientific and technical factors.

While retooling production and providing it with the latest equipment, it is necessary to show constant concern for its efficient utilization and the prompt assimilation of production capacities. It is, indeed, shortcomings in this work that account for the fact that labor productivity growth is lagging behind the increase in the capital:labor ratio.

Out of the 354 projects commissioned or reconstructed over a 9-year period, 110 have failed to reach their planned indicators while 96 operate with an incomplete work load. There many such enterprises under the jurisdiction of the State Agro-Industrial Committee and the Belorussian SSR Ministry of Industrial Construction and in the chemical industry.

When building new plants and associations the Belorussian SSR Gosplan and ministries and departments must thoroughly work out the questions of ensuring the raw materials they need and also markets for the output they will produce. It is time for clients to abandon the defective habit of accepting "reduced" projects which had been scheduled for commissioning, to give more attention to supplying new capacities with the skilled cadres they need, and to institute stricter expert assessment of plans.

It is necessary to analyze in greater depth the practice of machine tool and mechanism utilization and to eliminate the factors causing stoppages. The shift index of equipment operation in machine building and metal processing must be raised to 1.6-1.7 by the end of the 5-year plan period, which includes raising it to 2 for equipment with program control and automatic lines. The Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers must set targets for republic ministries and departments and for associations and enterprises under union jurisdiction to increase the return on capital to a level ensuring an increase of at least 1 percent during the current 5-year plan period.

As in the past, the reserve for labor productivity growth contained in the fuller utilization of work time has still not been fully activated. In order to strengthen organization and discipline, it is important to make use of the provisions of the Law on Labor Collectives and the measures for exerting moral, material, and legal influence. Greater persistence and consistency are needed in improving labor norm setting taking into account collective forms of labor and the achievements of scientific and technical progress and in ensuring that wages are strictly dependent on labor productivity. During the last 3 years the correlation of these indicators deteriorated in the Ministry of Local Industry (Comrade Kostikov) and the Ministry of the Construction Materials Industry (Comrade Bildyukevich). In 1985 wages rose faster than labor productivity in enterprises under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Fuel Industry (Comrade Filippov), the Ministry of the Forestry Industry (Comrade Markovskiy), the Ministry of Industrial Construction (Comrade Bril), and the State Committee for the Fish Industry (Comrade Donskoy).

The 27th CPSU Congress set the task of ensuring that in the next 5 years 60-65 percent of the increased requirements for the most important resources are met through savings of these resources. Analyses and estimates show that the republic can exceed this mark and approach the 70-percent mark for basic resources by the end of the 5-year plan period.

An accurate machinery for the management of this process must operate everywhere, and everyone, from worker to minister, must be fully aware of the means and methods by which the set goals are be attained. This machinery was spelled out in the recently adopted Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers resolution on saving resources and reducing the materials-intensiveness of production. The main thing now is to concentrate efforts on fulfilling the resolution and ensuring strict monitoring of this fulfillment. The Council of Ministers and the Belorussian SSR Gosplan must complete in the immediate future the elaboration of a similar program for saving energy and reducing the energy-intensiveness of production.

The maximum utilization of secondary resources must become a most important avenue of work. It is incumbent upon the Gosplan, ministries, and scientific institutions, together with production workers, to find ways to solve this problem. The Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers must amend the "Materials-Intensiveness" program and make provision in it for targets which would make it possible to increase the share of secondary raw materials in production consumption from 9 to 14 percent in the current 5-year plan period.

N.N. Slyunkov went on to dwell on the problem of quality. During the first 2 months [of 1986] the share of top-quality output in the total volume of output subject to certification stood at 51.4 percent against the 60.2 percent envisaged in the socialist pledges for the year. Production of such products has fallen in comparison with the corresponding period of last year in Minsk and Minsk Oblast. Brest and Vitebsk Oblasts and 29 associations and enterprises failed to fulfill their January-February plan for the production of output qualifying for the Seal of Quality.

An inspection has revealed that clear-cut plans for the renewal of production and its certification and for the improvement of the technical standard of products do not exist everywhere. Nor is there any proper order in planning. The share of top-quality output in the total volume and in the volume of output subject to certification under the total annual plans of enterprises is below the level set by the 1986 State Plan.

In conjunction with enterprises the Council of Ministers, the Belorussian SSR Gosplan, ministries and departments, party obkoms, and oblispolkoms must plan in the immediate future measures to increase the output of articles qualifying for the Seal of Quality which would guarantee the fulfillment of pledges.

It is necessary to accelerate the creation of an accurate machinery ensuring the enhancement of the technical standard and quality of output at enterprises and in sectors, rayons, cities, oblasts, and the republic as a whole. It is necessary to substantially raise the standard of work of all components so that the share of top quality articles in industry's total volume of articles subject to certification reaches 65-70 percent by the end of the 5-year plan period.

The acceleration of the national economy's intensification, the speaker went on, demands a substantial increase in the return from the republic's scientific and technical potential, as well as restructuring of the work of the Belorussian SSR Academy of Sciences, VUZes, sector scientific research institutes and design bureaus, and the plant sector of science.

The Belorussian SSR Academy of Sciences, reacting to the criticism levels against it in previous years, has planned a number of measures to improve its activity. Nevertheless, they cannot be accepted as complete in terms of the scope of the problems or innovative in nature. An innovative approach is needed today. The Belorussian SSR Academy of Science Presidium must look at these measures again and update them in the light of the 27th CPSU Congress' demands. Scientists' efforts must be concentrated primarily on providing scientific backup for national economic tasks, orienting applied development projects toward the solution of topical problems, and linking them closely with the development of priority sectors. Hitherto, only the Physical and Technical Sciences Department of the Belorussian SSR Academy of Sciences has joined one of the intersector scientific and technical complexes. The research carried out in the academy is not on the project lists of such leading all-union national economic complexes as "Light Conductors," "Biogenics," "Machine Reliability," "Robots," "Membranes," and others.

Last year's meeting of the republic party and economic aktiv on questions of the acceleration of scientific and technical progress heard correct proposals on the need to create scientific and technical associations on the basis of leading academy institutes specializing in physical and technical matters. Hitherto, however, these proposals have not been implemented. Blame for this lies with both the Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers and the Belorussian SSR Academy of Sciences Presidium. Constant complaints about the inadequate experimental base of science accompanied by failure to fulfill decisions that have been adopted — this is a graphic example of discrepancy between word and deed.

The criticism which was leveled at the congress against sector science applies fully to many of the republic's institutes and design bureaus. For example, research work conducted at the Minsk branch of the Scientific Research and Planning Institute for the Mechanization and Automation of Production Management in the Automotive Industry is neither comprehensive nor of a high standard. The economic benefit from the introduction of development projects is falling and now stands at less than R1 per R1 of expenditure. The branch has no noticeable effect on the work of the republic's motor vehicle plants. The question is: Is such a branch altogether necessary?

It is necessary to complete by no later than the first half of 1987 the certification of sectors' scientific, planning and design, and technological organizations. It is important to follow this up by practical measures to enhance the efficiency of sector science.

It is necessary to make fuller use of VUZ scientific potential. The Gosplan and the Belorussian SSR Ministry of Higher and Secondary Specialized Education must elaborate ways and forms to step up yields from VUZ science. The question of consolidating its production base remains acute. It could be solved by transferring small enterprises to educational establishments. But the Council of Ministers, the Gosplan, and the Belorussian SSR Ministry of Higher and Secondary Specialized Education limit themselves to just talk on this matter. This style is unacceptable today.

Great opportunities are offered by the forthcoming transition to the new system of scientific workers' remuneration. It is necessary to recertify cadres, give opportunities to young and active scientists, and analyze the topicality of the projects list of every laboratory and group.

Measures for the integration of science and production must be planned and systematic and must make provision for the creation of scientific and technical complexes, engineering centers, and dual-subordination sector laboratories. The Gosplan and the Academy of Sciences must submit proposals in this connection to the Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers in July this year.

It is time to do away with the useless practice of having valuable developments waiting years and even decades for practical application. The Belorussian SSR Academy of Sciences Institute for Microbiology has created technology for the microbiological synthesis of the product "Promiks" from milk whey. Its application increases weight gains and reduces fattening time in pig raising. The innovation was duly appreciated — not in the republic but in Estonia, where one kolkhoz has built a biological shop to process 20 metric tons of milk whey per day. Some 3 years ago the Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers Presidium Commission for Questions of the Agro-Industrial Complex decided that a similar production line should be created in one of Baranovichskiy Rayon's enterprises in 1983-1984. But the shop in question is only now embarking on the assimilation of the technology. This is efficiency for you! And how about scale? The shop's capacity is 40 metric tons of milk whey per day. Meanwhile, according to scientists' estimates, the republic is capable of processing 130,000 metric tons of milk whey into full-value protein per year and of obtaining an additional pig weight gain of 2,300 metric tons per year as a result.

It must become the rule that each year the Gosplan, ministries and departments, and enterprises under union jurisdiction should review proposals submitted by the Academy of Sciences and the Belorussian SSR Ministry of Higher and Secondary Specialized Education concerning the introduction of their developments into production.

The 27th CPSU Congress stressed that the reconstruction of the national economy will be impossible without the entire construction complex rising to a new industrial and organizational level, without a substantial reduction — by at least half — of the investment cycle. The republic program for improving the efficiency and quality of construction work during the 12th 5-Year Plan period pursues the achievement of this goal.

The Council of Ministers, the Gosplan, and the Belorussian SSR Gosstroy must resolve as soon possible questions linked with increasing the production by republic enterprises of the necessary equipment ensuring the comprehensive mechanization and automation of construction and installation work. Construction ministries and departments must accelerate the introduction of advanced technology, shift to deliveries of complete sets of infrastructural equipment in enlarged modules [komplektnaya postavka inzhenernogo oborudovaniya ukrupnennymi blokami], and improve the quality and prefabrication level of structural components and materials.

All those involved in the construction production line must be oriented toward cutting the duration of construction work. A normative schedule for commissioning must be set for every project, and progressive plans for construction organization must be elaborated. Equipment must be delivered on time. This goal must be pursued by the system of financial and credit sanctions, moral and material incentives, and party monitoring and exactingness. This is the vein in which clients and contractors, the Gosplan, the Gosstroy, and the Belorussian SSR Gossnab must restructure their work.

The capital investment quotas for all new construction projects must be set on the basis of construction duration norms. With a view to reducing the number of projects under simultaneous construction, it would be expedient to put many of them temporarily on ice by agreement with ministries and departments. It is important to elaborate measures to exert an economic influence on the stepping up of contractors' and clients' mutual responsibility for the prompt commissioning of capacities.

In order to implement more fully labor collectives' growing potential for utilizing development and social, cultural, and consumer service funds, the volume of construction on a self-financed basis must be increased by 30-40 percent. At the same time, it is necessary to establish a procedure for making design documentation and material resources available to enterprises engaged in construction on a self-financed basis and also for ensuring that construction organizations make their services available to them forthe manufacture of metal and ferroconcrete structural components and the supply of machines and mechanisms.

Many justified complaints have been made about the quality of construction and of housing construction in particular. One in five apartment blocks in the republic is classified "satisfactory" at handover time. New residents of many apartment blocks classified as "good" by acceptance commissions begin repairing or finishing off their apartments as soon as they move in. This can no longer be tolerated. The questions of quality must be at the focus of attention of construction site labor collectives and their party, trade union, and Komsomol organizations.

The Gosstroy, the Gosplan, the Belorussian branches of the USSR Gosbank and Stroybank, ministries and departments, and client enterprises must, together with the planning and contracting organizations, accelerate the introduction of the economic experiment aimed at reducing the resource-intensiveness and prime cost of construction work on the basis of the achievements of scientific and technical progress. It is necessary to complete the elaboration of stable prices per unit of construction output in the current year, which will make it possible to institute a procedure under which overexpenditure of resources would be disadvantageous, while savings would be rewarded.

The party has raised the question of fully supplying the country with foodstuffs as a paramount task. Definite progress has been observed in the republic, but the efficiency of agricultural production is rising only slowly.

A big role in implementing the set tasks is assigned to the new organs of management of the agro-industrial complex. Their purpose is to ensure the real and efficient integration of agriculture and the industrial sectors linked with it. Quite some time has passed since the decision to set up the agro-industrial complex was made, and yet the republic State Agro-Industrial Committee is still shaping the structure of management and dealing with its own apparatus. Current and even long-term problems are not being solved as the situation demands. It is already time to embark in real earnest on practical activity and to tackle questions directly concerning the fate of the 1986 plan and the 5-year plan as a whole. Belorussian Communist Party obkoms and raykoms must give relevant assistance to agro-industrial complex organs in this work. The prime need is to organize well the work of primary party organizations and orient their activity toward precise interaction by all subdivisions of the agro-industrial complex.

It is necessary to ensure a resolute breakthrough in boosting the productivity of horticulture and stockraising. It is incumbent upon us to create all the conditions for the guaranteed stable growth of output regardless of the weather. The main way to achieve this is by improving soil fertility and making broad use of intensive technologies.

We are still not fully prepared to work in the new fashion. Cadre training and certification are being dragged out. There is a shortage of chemical plant protection agents. Equipment renewal is progressing only slowly. Mogilev Oblast has fulfilled its target in terms of this indicator by only 50 percent. Only one-fifth of seed for flax to be cultivated using intensive techniques can be classified as top grade in Vitebsk and Mogilev Oblasts, and only one-third in Grodno Oblast. The Belorussian SSR State Agro-Industrial Committee (Comrades Khusainov, Klavsut, and Shuvalov) must take resolute measures to supply kolkhozes and sovkhozes with equipment that is in short supply, mineral fertilizers, and plant protection agents.

It is necessary to accelerate preparations for spring sowing as a whole. On some Vitebsk Oblast farms the availability of top-grade seeds for grain and pulse crops is below 80 percent. Equipment repairs are progressing slowly in Vitebsk and Mogilev Oblasts. Many places are lagging in terms of deliveries of organic fertilizers.

Shortcomings exist most of all in Vitebsk and Mogilev Oblasts (obkom secretaries Comrades Misuno and Parnitskiy, oblast agro-industrial committee chairmen Comrades Bulgak and Korneyev). Yet it was these oblasts that were the worst laggards in the development of agricultural production in the last few years. This means that lessons have not been learned from the past and that oblast cadres are being slow to change their attitude toward work and reorient themselves.

A sharp breakthrough must be achieved in the current 5-year plan period in the intensification of stockraising. The republic has a fairly good material and technical base for this sector, the necessary livestock herd, and great potential for improving feed production. Measures have been elaborated to increase stockraising productivity. Last year's results testify that the implementation of these measures will enable the republic to meet ahead of schedule the Food Program targets for milk and meat production and purchases. Brest, Grodno, and Minsk Oblasts can achieve this goal in terms of milk production and purchases already this year. In terms of milk purchases the republic as a whole has the potential to wipe out the arrears incurred during the last 5-year plan period this year, and to meet the 1990 targets next year.

In order to achieve this it is primarily necessary to increase animal productivity in every way. It is animal productivity that must account for the increased production and procurement of livestock products. Some undesirable trends have started emerging in many places, however. In some places people have taken the easy path — they have started increasing productivity by reducing animal numbers. The result is that milk yield per cow is rising without any additional milk being produced. This is typical of Goretskiy, Kostyukovichskiy, Krasnopolskiy, Shklovskiy, and several other rayons. Such an approach will not produce a larger quantity of milk and dairy products.

A breakthrough in dairy stockraising must be achieved already this year. The republic has pledged to increase cow productivity by 260 kg. How is this being accomplished? So far, poorly. In the first 2 months milk yields fell on one farm in every five. These farms represent 27 percent of the total number in Mogilev Oblast, 25 percent in Grodno Oblast, and 33 percent in Vitebsk Oblast. Instead of the planned 30 kg increase, an increase of only 22 kg has been achieved.

Cattle weight gains have fallen in comparison with the corresponding period of last year on farms in Vitebsk, Grodno, and Mogilev Oblasts.

Some leaders attribute the falls in milk yield and weight gain to feed shortages. But this is not the point. The entire question is one of the standard of economic management. This is proved by facts. One in every 10 feed shops or feed preparation units in Vitebsk, Mogilev, and Grodno Oblasts is not operational. Not a single oblast has met its targets for the production of its own mixed feed and enriched feed mixtures. There is much economic mismanagement on many farms, and the crudest violations of technological discipline are committed.

The Belorussian SSR State Agro-Industrial Committee and the oblast agro-industrial committees have hitherto been more concerned with calculating how to scale new heights than with specific local organizational work.

It is necessary to give more attention to the fulfillment of the Food Program in terms of meat procurements. Brest Oblast alone coped with its targets. Consequently, it is necessary to organize work so as not only to ensure the fulfillment of the current 5-year plan targets but also to make up the arrears which have been allowed to accumulate.

Analysis shows that the volume of meat purchases set by the Food Program for 1990 can be reached by Brest Oblast in 1987, by Grodno and Minsk Oblasts in 1988, and by the republic as a whole in 1989. This will, of course, demand great effort and restructuring of work by cadres. But this is the only approach that will ensure successful implementation of this task.

The summer must become the decisive period for increasing stockraising productivity. Every kolkhoz and sovkhoz must start right away work to tune up the feed production system so as to ensure green feed for animals from early spring until late fall. It is necessary to considerably expand the sowing of feed catch crops, particularly cruciferous crops, and to carry out in good time top dressing of perennial grasses, meadows, and pasture lands. The care of feed fields must be entrusted to mechanized contract links.

It is necessary to make better use of feed production capacities. Last year only half of them were mobilized to prepare hay by the forced ventilation method and process grain feed. Crude technological violations were allowed to occur in haylage and silage production. This year the Belorussian SSR State Agro-Industrial Committee, oblast agro-industrial committees, and rayon agro-industrial associations must ensure the complete transition to advanced feed procurement technologies.

Order must be introduced everywhere. No attention at all will be paid to references to inclement weather conditions or shortage of resources. It is time to make it clear to everyone: The success of the matter is determined by field and stock unit workers, farm specialists, and leaders of party and economic organizations. Belorussia's weather conditions allow the genuine cultivators of the soil to produce high harvest yields and to achieve growth in stockraising productivity every year. There are quite a few such people in every oblast and in every rayon, and their experience must be utilized everywhere.

It was pointed out at the congress that an immediately available source for augmenting food resources is to reduce losses during harvesting, transportation, storage, and processing. Measures in this direction were laid down in a resolution adopted recently by the Belorussian Communist Party Central Committee and the Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers. While consolidating the material and technical base of processing sectors, it is necessary to make broader use of the potential of interfarm production sharing, agro-industrial complex organizations, industrial enterprises, and bank credits.

The solution of the new tasks in the economy, N.N. Slyunkov went on to say, is impossible without an in-depth restructuring of the economic machinery and the creation of a comprehensive, efficient, and flexible system of management. The economic experiments being conducted in the republic have helped to noticeably strengthen contract discipline, to renew the product range more swiftly, and to reduce the time taken to start up production of articles. Output growth has been ensured mainly without increasing work force numbers. At the same time, the inadequate effect of some levers, incentives, and stipulations in the experiments have come to light. The Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers must comprehensively analyze the results of these experiments and must determine what must be done when and by whom in order to further optimize the economic machinery. Time waits for no man. Our entire industry must switch to the new conditions of work next year, and preparations for this must begin immediately.

It is no longer possible to tolerate the fact that some of our enterprises produce unnecessary low-quality output and their collectives do not bear the due moral and material responsibility and continue to receive their full wages and even bonuses. Last year alone about R70 million were spent on reducing the prices of unmarketable goods. The time has come to make the size of labor collectives' income directly dependent on the efficiency of their activity. It is necessary to accelerate their transition to complete financial autonomy, financial self-support [samookupayemost], and self-financing.

The Ministry of Light Industry, the Gosplan, and other republic economic departments must complete the working out of proposals for the introduction of complete financial autonomy in a group of light industry enterprises. It is necessary to accelerate the preparation of similar proposals by the Belorussian SSR Ministry of Consumer Services. The republic commission for the improvement of management, planning, and the economic machinery must determine the procedure and schedule for similar work to be done by other ministries and departments.

The 27th CPSU Congress gave a positive assessment of the experience of Belorussian railroad workers in increasing labor productivity on the basis of improving labor organization and incentives. Work has been done on the question of conducting a similar experiment in 1986-1987 in the Ministry of Motor Transport and the Belorussian Civil Aviation Administration and also in the Minsk Subway and at Belorussian SSR communications enterprises. The Council of Ministers, the Gosplan, and the Belorussian SSR State Committee for Labor and Social Problems must determine in the nearest future the potential and time schedule for applying the experience of the Belorussian Railroad in other sectors of the national economy.

The content, organization, and methods of activity of finance and credit organs, the State Committee on Prices, and the Belorussian SSR Gossnab require substantial restructuring.

In the light of the 27th party congress demands, it is necessary to be more persistent in improving the organizational structure of management and overcoming departmental barriers. A contribution to this work must be made by the general plan for the management of the republic's national economy, which already exists in draft form. When it is being finalized particular attention must be given to the management of complexes of interconnected sectors, the creation and development of science-and-production associations and intersector production units, the ensuring of close coordination of departmental and territorial management, and the streamlining of the management hierarchy [sokrashcheniye zvennosti]. Ultimately these measures must be aimed at simplifying the organizational structure of the management apparatus, reducing its numerical strength, and increasing the returns from its activity.

The improvement of management is inseparably linked with the improvement of planning. The paramount task of the Belorussian SSR Gosplan, its local organs, and ministries and departments is to ensure that plans for the current 5-year plan period are elaborated in depth and to a high standard, are balanced, and are coordinated in territorial and sectorial terms with national economic and scientific and technical programs.

The speaker then dwelt on the CPSU's program stipulation — to raise Soviet people's living standards to a qualitatively new level. One of the most topical problems here is to fully satisfy the working people's growing effective demand for high-quality and varied goods and services. During the current 5-year plan period it is necessary to ensure that every percentage point of growth of the population's money incomes is accompanied by an 1.4-1.5 percent growth in commodity turnover and paid services.

Leaders of many ministries and departments, enterprises, and even party and soviet organs underestimate the importance of this task. Commodity output targets for the first 2 months were not achieved by 84 enterprises. Most of them are in Minsk Oblast (21 enterprises) and Brest Oblast (17 enterprises) and under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Local Industry (21 enterprises). There have been no noticeable improvements in expanding the range or raising the quality of consumer goods. The practice of producing above-plan quantities of expensive goods enjoying only limited demand still prevails.

Existing quality control systems are inefficient, executive discipline and responsibility for the entrusted work have fallen, and quality control services perform their functions in an unsatisfactory manner at the republic Ministry of Light Industry and Ministry of Local Industry (Comrades Nagibovich and Kostikov) and in several enterprises under union jurisdiction.

Trade and consumer services for the population are also lagging behind today's demands. The necessary restructuring in the sphere of paid services is yet to occur. This sphere continues to develop within the framework of traditional views and approaches. The paid services targets set for enterprises and associations for 1986 are R202 million below the levels envisaged by the republic comprehensive program for goods and services. The targets for enterprises and organizations in Vitebsk, Grodno, Minsk, and Mogilev Oblasts are lower than the indicators for this year's national economic plan.

Particular anxiety is generated by the state of affairs in Minsk Oblast. Out of 93 enterprises and organizations in the city of Borisov, for example, 34 have had their plans for the volume of paid services approved by ministries and departments either without any growth or even at levels below those achieved last year, while 16 enterprises have not been notified of any plan figures at all.

The very same situation prevails as regards the planning of the production of top quality output and consumer goods. The republic plan contains one set of indicators, while enterprise plans contain a different set, at a considerably lower level. What is the cause of this lack of coordination, of this discrepancy? After all, both the Gosplan and the government have people responsible for these sectors of work — Comrades Makeychenko, Terekh, and Petrov. They failed to ensure a state approach to the work, essentially let matters take their own course, and displayed evident lack of control.

The improvement of people's housing conditions remains an acute question. It is planned to commission 24 million square meters of housing in the current 5-year plan period. In order to resolve this task it is necessary to pool the potential of the state and enterprises, credit facilities, and working people's personal savings. The Belorussian SSR Gossnab and oblispolkoms and rayispolkoms must assist people building their own homes [individualnyy zastroyshchik] in the acquisition of construction materials. The Ministry of Industrial Construction and the Belselstroy must put an end to the chronic underspending of funds allocated for cooperative housing construction.

It is necessary to give more attention to the prompt and proper repair of housing. Targets for capital repairs to the state housing stock were not achieved during the last 5-year plan period. Almost R1 in every R4 allocated for repairs to departmental housing was not spent. The Belorussian SSR Ministry of Housing and Municipal Services (Comrade Bezlyudov) is not taking any measures to improve the standard and quality of municipal services to the population and is failing to ensure proper maintenance of the housing stock. One apartment block in six is classified as "satisfactory" on commissioning after repairs, and this figure is one in three for Gomel Oblast and one in four for Vitebsk Oblast. About 90 percent of funds allocated by the state are spent on so-called cosmetic repairs. Meanwhile, many homes without modern facilities remain without comprehensive repairs for a long time, and this gives rise to justified complaints by working people.

The ministry leadership and collegium and its party organization must tackle most actively the key questions of the sector's development.

It is impossible to achieve qualitative changes in the social sphere without far-reaching transformations in the nature of labor. Mechanization, automation, and the application of electronics make new demands on people's educational and vocational training. This task cannot be resolved without restructuring the general education, vocational, and higher education schools and without creating a unified structure of postgraduate education. Nevertheless, as the 27th CPSU Congress noted, the implementation of measures envisaged by the reform is progressing slowly, without the necessary depth or persistence. This criticism applies fully to the republic. The Ministry of Education, the Belorussian SSR State Committee for Vocational and Technical Education, and their local organs must step up their influence on the improvement of the nature, forms, and methods of pedagogical cadres' activity.

The party attaches enormous importance to the development of health care. As yet the system of medical checks for the population, diagnostic services, and treatment in the republic are unsatisfactory. The material base of health care is still below modern requirements, while the assimilation of capital investments for this purpose is poor. During the 11th 5-Year Plan period the "Minskstroy" Combine underspent some R3.8 million on health care. Construction work on the Klimovichskiy Rayon hospital began back in 1981 and commissioning is planned for 1987, against a normative time schedule of 4 years. The blame for this lies mainly with the Ministry of Industrial Construction and the Belorussian SSR Ministry of Health.

It is necessary to show greater concern for war and labor veterans, and this does not mean just satisfying their material and everyday life needs. It is necessary to involve them more actively in social activity, and broader opportunities for participation in socially beneficial labor must be offered to those able and willing to work.

The Belorussian Council of Trade Unions, the Committee for Physical Culture and Sports, the Belorussian Komsomol Central Committee, and local soviets must improve the development of physical culture and sports. At present only 10 percent of working people participate in organized sports. Due to lack of departmental coordination stadiums and other sports facilities remain empty even on rest days.

The scale and complexity of the new tasks, N.N. Slyunkov emphasized, make high demands of the entire political, ideological, and organizational activity of party organizations.

The essence of the restructuring of party work consists of rigorously adhering to the 27th CPSU Congress decisions, developing intraparty democracy to the utmost, strictly observing the principle of collective leadership, developing criticism, self-criticism, and monitoring and verification of the execution of decisions, and enhancing the responsibility of cadres. In some places, however, restructuring is taking too long. Some of our cadres lack the persistence and consistency, and at times even the boldness, to abandon old-fashioned approaches or trite and formalistic methods and usages and their penchant for verbiage, ostentation, and pretentiousness.

The work style of the Khotimskiy party raykom (First Secretary Comrade Prudnikov) is not being renewed. As in the past, they still rely on the effect of all kinds of "didactic conferences." While on local visits, raykom staffers analyze the situation only superficially and give no assistance to kolkhoz and sovkhoz Communists in mobilizing people to overcome lags. This is why the situation in the rayon is deteriorating.

Central Committee sections and Belorussian Communist Party obkoms must investigate the reasons why restructuring is taking so long in some party committees and give these committees relevant assistance. In this work it is necessary to adhere to the congress conclusion that all party committees must operate as real organs of political leadership. It is incumbent upon them to resolutely give up performing the functions of state and public organizations and to organize work in such a way that everyone bears total responsibility for the entrusted work in the entrusted sector.

Some republic ministries and departments have still not fully overcome inertia and formalism, the habit of drowning vital work in meaningless and endless verbiage, and attempts to "play at restructuring." A large number of leading workers at the Belorussian SSR Ministry of Local Industry are wasting energy on accumulating all kinds of data and preparing all kinds of information. In the last 2 years the flow of documents to enterprises under the ministry's jurisdiction has increased by one-third.

This bureaucratic paperwork style of work is also typical of some other ministries and departments. As yet their party organizations have also failed to become catalysts of innovation, of the struggle against departmentalism and the creation of paperwork. The 27th CPSU Congress demanded that their role be enhanced in the restructuring of the activity of the management apparatus and of the sector as a whole.

Not a single organization, not a single leading worker must remain outside the scope of party control. No one must protect himself against responsibility for his actions and behavior. No one must evade criticism. An atmosphere of complacency and impunity develops wherever criticism and self-criticism are stifled, and it is there that most failures in work occur.

Party organizations must introduce a critical approach toward the work in hand and must aim to ensure that every leader is exacting in the evaluation of work results, does not delude himself about achievements, is not satisfied with inadequate results, and strives to make full use of existing reserves. Our cadres must get themselves in shape for resolving great and complex tasks, fulfilling intensive plans, and overcoming difficulties.

Party organizations must be particularly concerned about inculcating businesslike efficiency among cadres. It was noted at the 27th CPSU Congress that this is a matter of fundamental importance. Any discrepancy between what is said and what is done is detrimental to the main thing — the prestige of party policy — and cannot be tolerated.

It is impossible to achieve either restructuring or a breakthrough unless every Communist, and every leader in particular, understands that it is impossible to replace organizational work with an endless talking-shop or to drown vital work in eloquent but empty words. To use V.I. Lenin's words, the leadership of any sector must be in the hands of completely competent workers who can guarantee the success of the cause.

Belorussian Communist Party Central Committee sections must elaborate proposals to improve the certification of party, soviet, economic, and other cadres. It is necessary to improve the practice of hearing reports from leading workers and conversing with them.

Work with the cadre reserve also requires improvement. We have still not eliminated formalism in this work. The main point here is to study people comprehensively in practical work and acquire a good knowledge of their personal qualities. The reserve of candidates for promotion must also include party group organizers and secretaries of primary and shop party organizations — those who work directly in grassroots production components and whose organizational abilities have already been recognized by Communists.

To put it briefly, comrades, the task is to change the entire system of work with cadres in the light of contemporary conditions. It is necessary to create everywhere an atmosphere in which irresponsibility, lack of initiative, ostentation, bureaucracy, and the slightest deviation from the norms of our life will be appropriately assessed.

The 27th CPSU Congress demanded that the struggle for the party member's pure and honest image be stepped up and that constant concern be shown for augmenting and consolidating the party ranks. The Belorussian Communist Party Central Committee Party Organizational Work Section and party obkoms, gorkoms, and raykoms must define measures to improve admission to party membership and the education of Communists. The main thing is to study in depth people and their professional, political, and moral qualities and to protect the party against those who join it for careerist or other selfish reasons. Party organizations must create an atmosphere of mutual exactingness and principledness and all the conditions to ensure that every Communist develops into an active party fighter. The Communist's vanguard role must take the form of specific actions, practical deeds, and impeccable performance of social duty.

The soviets of people's deputies must become effective components in mobilizing the masses to accelerate the country's socioeconomic development. Efforts must be made to ensure that they are completely in charge of everything concerning the satisfaction of people's daily requirements and needs, the utilization of allocated funds and local potential and resources, and the coordination and monitoring of the work of all enterprises and organizations situated on their territories. It is incumbent upon party committees to give up supplanting soviets or engaging in petty tutelage and to boost exactingness toward Communists working in soviet organs.

The trade unions must accelerate the restructuring of work to mobilize people for the fulfillment of national economic plans, develop socialist competition, strengthen discipline, increase labor productivity, and improve workers' and employees' education. The trade unions, as the congress emphasized, must always keep social policy and the working people's interests in the forefront. Trade union organs have been repeatedly criticized for serious shortcomings in their work. But changes for the better are slow in coming. The leadership of the Belorussian Council of Trade Unions must draw serious conclusions from this.

Today, when the pace of the country's life is determined by the strategy of acceleration, it is necessary to resolutely get rid of obsolete methods of work by Komsomol organizations. Party organizations must help them to shape people who are politically active, knowledgable, industrious, and able to work, and to do everything so that the growing generation will carry worthily into the future the baton of the ideals of justice and freedom bequeathed by Great October.

Any restructuring, the speaker then noted, begins with the restructuring of awareness, with a clear and accurate understanding of the new problems, with the rejection of established stereotypes in thinking. The paramount task of party organizations is to help Communists and all working people to comprehend the ideas and directives of the 27th CPSU Congress, to make them the conviction and a guide to action for everybody. Utilizing the energy and potential of the agitation and propaganda aktiv, it is necessary to reach every specific person, to determine together with him the best ways and means to improve his work, and to reveal and activate any reserves for increasing production efficiency that may exist at his work place.

It is necessary to organize in March-June this year 8-10 study sessions within the system of political enlightenment and economic education devoted to the CPSU Central Committee Political Report, the CPSU Program and Statutes, the Basic Guidelines, and other congress materials. An integrated political day, sociopolitical readings, and speeches by propaganda group members devoted to the congress results must be organized in labor collectives in the immediate future.

It is important to organize matters so that propagandization of the party's objectives and policy is conducted jointly and simultaneously with the organization of practical work for their implementation. It is necessary to consolidate in every collective the lofty labor enthusiasm and the atmosphere of businesslike efficiency and creativeness generated by the congress. People's initiative and enthusiasm must channeled into accelerating the intensification of production on the basis of the introduction of scientific and technical achievements and advanced experience, strengthening discipline and order, affirming the principles of social justice inherent in socialism, and strengthening Soviet society's moral foundations.

It is necessary to proceed from the premise that the close harnessing of ideological work to the socioeconomic experience of the masses and organizational and economic activity offers the correct way to enhance the fruitfulness of educational efforts.

Of course, it is impossible to expect positive results if ideological workers continue as before to seek abstract prescriptions for restructuring. This is precisely the style that is typical of the Zhlobin party Gorkom (First Secretary Comrade Zaytsev). Quite a few papers, resolutions, and measures to improve educational activity are composed there. In document after document one comes across a string of hackneyed expressions like "to enhance," "to intensify," "to raise," "to step up...." The paperwork production line operates without a break — one resolution is adopted and another is withdrawn from monitoring. It is withdrawn not because it has been fulfilled, but because its time is up. There is no time left to monitor the essence rather than the time schedule. To put it briefly, the efforts of the gorkom apparatus are not geared to the main requirement — appropriate organization of affairs and specific work with people. Crime is on the increase in the city and the rayon, and drunkenness and religious observance are not declining.

The Gomel Obkom and its ideological sections tolerate such a style of ideological education work. They fail to set an example of restructuring and do not analyze in depth the activity of party gorkoms and raykoms as regards the leadership of this most important sector.

The congress considers that the main reference points in ideological work are the education of working people in a spirit of communist ideological commitment and devotion to the motherland, proletarian and socialist internationalism, a conscientious attitude toward labor and public property, and implacability toward bourgeois ideology and everything that is alien to socialism and to our culture and collectivist morals.

It is important to ensure unity of ideological education and economic organizational work in these very areas. Individual work must become the most important means of education. Quite a few party organizations in the republic have started to work more appropriately with those who violate the norms and principles of socialist communal life. This produces quite good results, and evidence of this can be seen in the experience of the Novopoltsk, Molodechno, Pinsk, and some other party committees.

The tenet concerning the major role played by leaders in education work is repeatedly asserted as axiomatic. In reality, however, by no means all cadres are aware of the force of the educational influence exerted by decisions they make, of the effect of personal businesslike efficiency on those around them, and of the ability to take other people's opinion into account, to objectively evaluate achievements, and to eliminate shortcomings.

The congress condemned the unseemly practice of keeping quiet about shortcomings and demanded that the Leninist principle that truth is necessary always and under all circumstances be observed everywhere. This is why it is necessary to expand publicity in the activity of leadership, administrative, and economic management organs. Without this it is impossible to enhance people's sociopolitical activeness.

It is necessary to consolidate everywhere the practice whereby leading workers and officials report back to the population. People must hear truthful words and see actual deeds. Publicity, businesslike efficiency, and monitoring from below — only under these conditions will it be possible to ensure the moral health of labor collectives and the achievement of the set goals.

There must be no slackening of efforts in the struggle against drunkenness and alcoholism. As yet all the work revolves around the thesis that drunkenness is harmful. It is necessary to move on to a new stage in both the perception and the solution of this problem: Drunkenness is an evil incompatible with our morals, our way of life, and the interests of the cause.

The mass news media have a singular role to play in breaking sharply with what is obsolete and in overcoming inertia in thought and action. The lofty social purpose of the press, as was said from the 27th CPSU Congress rostrum, makes it incumbent upon the editorial offices of newspapers, television, and radio broadcasting to critically re-evaluate their achievements and lay down measures to boost the effectiveness of publications and programs.

Depth and consistency are needed in presenting problems and eliminating verbosity, pretentiousness, and didacticism in programs and publications and conservatism in their authors' thinking. It is necessary to propagandize broadly, vividly, and convincingly the best experience of working in the new fashion and to criticize more boldly those who substitute ostentation for the essence of the work and distort the very idea of restructuring.

It is necessary to enhance the organizational role of the press. When the press does not strive to solve the problems posed in its pages, eliminate the shortcomings it has reported, and disseminate the experience it has publicized, it is wittingly or unwittingly displaying a discrepancy between word and deed. It is necessary to boost the effectiveness of such traditional forms of work as editorial office sponsorship of the most important national economic projects and the introduction of scientific developments, and organization of spot-checks in various sectors of economic activity.

There is another aspect to this question — supporting press initiatives and reacting to critical items in the press. By no means everything is in order here. No more than 300 replies were received last year in response to urgent reports by the republic newspapers ZVYAZDA, SOVETSKAYA BELORUSSIYA, and SELSKAYA GAZETA. Every instance when businesslike reporting by the press, television, and radio is ignored must be perceived as a violation of Leninist norms of party life, as opposition to innovation. Ideological work is creative work demanding constant questing. Ultimately its efficiency depends on cadres, their theoretical and vocational training, and their ability to think analytically, to work with people, and to demonstrate their convictions by personal example.

One of the party's main tasks under the conditions of accelerating the country's economic and social development is the active enrichment of man's spiritual world and the deep penetration by culture in the broadest sense of the word in all spheres of people's life and activity.

The congress noted the great role of creative unions in organizing the contemporary artistic process and emphasized the need to maintain among the artistic intelligentsia a truly creative atmosphere which furthers to the utmost the creation of talented, original, and socially necessary books, movies, shows, paintings, and musical works. The entire activity of the republic's creative unions must be imbued with this concern.

N.N. Slyunkov went on to dwell on questions concerning the discussion of the results of the 27th CPSU Congress at Belorussian Communist Party obkom, gorkom, and raykom plenums or party aktiv meetings, and at meetings of Communists and in soviet, trade union, and Komsomol organizations and in all labor collectives.

The plenums and meetings must be held in a businesslike fashion and must interpret achievements critically in the light of the congress demands. It is necessary to elaborate everywhere specific measures for the fulfillment of its decisions and of the plans for the current year and the 5-year plan period as a whole.

The 27th CPSU Congress, N.N. Slyunkov said in conclusion, opened up clear prospects for the party and the Soviet people, formulated specific tasks, and defined the ways to resolve them. Today we have no greater concern than the concern to ensure that the party's ambitious plans are implemented more rapidly. We must double and treble our efforts in the struggle for the implementation of the party's strategic course and the acceleration of the country's socioeconomic development. We must work creatively, with initiative, selflessly, and with inspiration so that every day that passes brings us closer to the set goal, to the fulfillment of the historic 27th CPSU Congress decisions.

Moscow City Soviet Session Views Congress Tasks

[Special correspondent V. Buldashov report: "A Mood for Action. Moscow City Soviet Session Discusses Tasks Stemming From 27th CPSU Congress Decisions"]

[Text] The Hall of Columns of the House of the Unions is full of people wearing deputies' badges. Deputies to the Moscow City Soviet have gathered for their regular session to discuss the tasks of the capital's soviets stemming from the 27th CPSU Congress decisions.

The report by Moscow Gorispolkom Chairman V. Saykin and the delegate speeches noted that Muscovites have embarked on the practical implementation of congress decisions. The soviet has began by restructuring itself, its ispolkom, the latter's administrations and sections, and the work of standing commissions. Efficiency and specificity are increasingly becoming part of the style of the leadership of the city's economy. The quantity of all kinds of "outgoing" paperwork has been reduced; the number of resolutions adopted by the Moscow Gorispolkom has been halved in the first quarter of this year. There is greater exactingness toward cadres and a persistent struggle is being waged against unwillingness or inability to work in the new fashion. This will be assisted by the process of certification: It will begin in the gorispolkom's administrations and sections in May.

A firm economic base has been established in the city. However, quite a few acute problems have also accumulated; previously, people preferred to mention them in passing while focusing attention on successes. Grave anxiety is caused, for example, by losses of work time. Last year the city lost 7.3 million man-days through stoppages, absenteeism, absence from work with the administration's permission, and time out for work at fruit and vegetable bases, urban amenity work, amateur artistic activities, and sports competitions during work hours.

Capital construction remains one of the worst bottlenecks. The approved schedule for the commissioning of health care, transportation, and trade projects; children's institutions; and cultural and consumer services projects has not been met in the last few years. Last year, for the first time in many years, the plan for commissioning housing was also not met. Analyzing the reasons for the unsatisfactory work by main administrations in the construction industry, deputies noted that they are rooted primarily in low standards of labor organization, slow retooling, and inadequate production base. The "Intensification-90" program, which is currently being elaborated, is aimed at the elimination of these shortcomings and the improvement of management structure. However, just as much attention must be given to people.

"It is difficult to get young people to go to construction sites and it is even more difficult to keep them there," Deputy V. Kapustin, team leader at the No 1 Housing Construction Combine, said. "You do not walk around construction sites in a white coat; nor are you — unfortunately — likely to come across any electronic equipment. And our workers do not demand these 'luxuries.' They are, however, entitled to expect normal production and everyday life conditions. Right now, there is nowhere to have lunch at construction sites; we are often without water, light, and heat. This is why advance main services work is so necessary in areas of mass construction. The question of providing housing for young families is particularly difficult to resolve. In our combine we have 280 young families with children, yet the spouses live in different hostels."

The city's housing pool consists of an area of some 145 million square meters. While only 63 percent of the Muscovites lived in separate apartments in 1971, the figure now is 83 percent. Yet, the problem remains acute: Many people still live in communal apartments or dilapidated homes. In order to solve it, it was stressed at the session, it is necessary to make wider use of housing construction cooperatives, set up Komsomol and young people's complexes, and develop self-financed housing construction by ministries and departments.

"If we peruse the list of people in need of housing space, it is not difficult to notice that, in many instances, parents are agitating for housing for their children. Yet, housing ought to be earned with one's own labor," Deputy Yu. Shilobreyev, manager of the No 1 Construction and Installation Trust, noted. "Only then can people appreciate the value of this labor, only then will we learn to look after and preserve this housing. This particular demand is met by young people's housing complexes. It is especially shameful that the first timid attempt in Moscow was made only in December 1985 when a resolution was adopted on the construction of an experimental young people's complex in Voroshilovskiy Rayon."

A different approach is now being applied to this work. It is planned to build 50 young people's complexes in the capital by the year 2000. Proposals are being elaborated to ensure that a housing distribution practice taking into account the principle of social justice could help keep cadres in the national economy.

The report and the deputies' speeches paid particular attention to the fact that it is necessary to tackle seriously a "sore" problem for Moscow — the rational utilization of labor resources. A resolution adopted by the Moscow Gorispolkom envisages a reduction in the numbers of industrial production personnel by at least 27,000 persons in the current 5-year plan period, and by 30,000 among those employed in science and the management sphere. As of 1987 no more workers will be brought in from other cities. Enterprises and organizations must fulfill their plans without so-called "quota workers," through accelerated labor productivity growth.

In terms of the nature of its tasks the 12th 5-Year Plan is difficult and worrisome. The deputies spoke frankly and knowledgeably about the causes of irregularities and omissions at their enterprises, the reserves which will be activated, and the need to enhance the activeness of deputies' production groups. Sharp criticism was leveled against the departmental approach displayed by some ministries toward the problems of intensifying the city's economy. It was especially noted that particularly large quantities of obsolete equipment have been in use for 25 years and more in enterprises under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry; the Ministry of Instrument Making, Automation Equipment, and Control Systems; the Ministry of the Machine Tool and Tool Building Industry; the Ministry of Chemical and Petroleum Machine Building; and the Ministry of the Automotive Industry; also, in light industry.

The consumer goods production situation cannot be considered satisfactory. Output per R1 of the wages fund is 1 kopek in enterprises under the Ministry of Power Machine Building, 5 kopeks under the Ministry of Ferrous Metallurgy, 6 kopeks under the Ministry of Tractor and Agricultural Machine Building, and 7 kopeks at the "Serp i Molot" Plant. Poor quality products and obsolete designs and models no longer satisfying the population's demands are still produced in large quantities.

Specific tasks were set for fulfilling the congress decisions and a principled evaluation of the state of affairs was made at the Moscow CPSU Gorkom plenum held a week before the session. The plenum noted, for example, that the standard of economic work done by the Moscow City Planning Commission is simply inadequate. Economic work is often replaced by directive decisions without any appropriate technical and economic substantiation or calculations or any advance discussion at rayon level. This evaluation was presented in a considerably milder form in the report to the session and deputies disagreed with this.

"The Moscow City Planning Commission is restructuring its work intolerably slowly," Deputy F. Kozyrevdal, first secretary of the Krasnopresnenskiy CPSU Raykom, stressed. "More often than not you come up against a brick wall of incomprehension when it comes to solving many questions of the rayon's socioeconomic development."

A large portion of the report and deputy speeches was taken up with questions concerning the implementation of voters' instructions; the development of the city's energy base, transportation, and consumer services; the implementation of school reform; the protection of the population's health; the intensification of the educational role of art and of cultural and enlightenment institutions; the organization of people's free time; and the struggle for a healthy way of life. Noting that a program for improving supplies of basic foodstuffs to Muscovites has been elaborated and is now being implemented and that a comprehensive "health" program is being elaborated, deputies drew urgent attention to problems which are still being solved only slowly. Serious complaints were leveled against the gorispolkom for its inadequate monitoring of the execution of individual resolutions.

The common theme in all the speeches was that it is necessary to ensure purposefulness and determination in actions without remaining satisfied with halfway measures; Muscovites have no right to lag behind in the acceleration of socioeconomic development.

B.N. Yeltsin, candidate member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Moscow CPSU Gorkom, took part in the session's work.

CSA Reports Labor Productivity up 4.6 Percent

1800 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] The results of the country's industrial performance in March have been summed up. The CSA bulletin stresses many collectives have adopted a policy of accelerating production pace and giving high quality output in strict accordance with contracts from the first days of the year and are following it firmly.

Avtovaz, ZIL, Minsk tractor works, the Latvian Sarkanais metallurgical works, Spassktsement cement works in Maritime Kray, and a number of others are among enterprises that are setting an example. The total volume of industrial output has increased by 5 percent compared to March of last year.

Labor productivity has increased by 4.6 percent in the same period. All union republics, except Moldavia, have coped with the tasks; the majority of the industrial ministries have fulfilled the month's plan.

Gosplan Deputy on Using Western Technology

LD121343 Moscow TASS in English 0900 GMT 12 Apr 86

["Does the USSR Depend on Western Technology?" — TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow April 12 TASS — "The Soviet Union sells more scientific and technological novelties than purchases", Genrykh Stroganov, deputy chairman of the USSR State Planning Committee, has told a TASS correspondent. "Over the past two decades over country has purchased approximately 700 licences abroad, and sold the same number of licences within a period of five years. The main buyers of Soviet licences are such industrially developed countries as Britain, Italy, France, the FRG, the USA, and Japan. I think the assertions being spread by some mass media that the USSR is allegedly dependent on Western technology do not tally with these facts".

"The Soviet Union has always favoured mutually beneficial economic, scientific, and technological cooperation with other countries and participation in international division of labour. But it has never made its development dependent on Western technology".

The main guidelines, endorsed by the 27th Congress of the CPSU, for the economic and social development of the USSR and intended for a period ending at the turn of the century, envisage the doubling of Soviet production potential in fifteen years' time by using the scientific and technological achievements of the Soviet Union and of the entire socialist community as the main lever.

"Our country", Genrykh Stroganov went on to say, "possesses large scientific and production resources for the implementation of these great plans. The USSR accounts for almost a third of world scientific products and a fifth of the world's technological inventions registered abroad. It must be admitted with regret that lots of big discoveries and inventions do not find application in industry for years. Such practice was not only sharply criticized at the congress of the CPSU and in the press. Effective measures are being taken with a view to overcoming such state of affairs".

Over the past five years the Soviet Union has exported 43,600 million roubles worth of industrial equipment alone, including planes and helicopters, grain harvesters and excavators. The range of the export of Soviet licences covers almost all branches of science and technology — from medical equipment, drugs, and food preparation technology to the most sophisticated processes in metallurgy and chemistry.

It is universally admitted that the USSR is ahead of the West in such important fields as welding equipment, casting of metals in electromagnetic field, and a number of others. Foreign experts who study the development of Soviet science and technology quite often state that discoveries made in the USSR are of value to world science.

Moves To Raise Product Quality Meet Resistance

PM091048 Moscow SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA in Russian on 2 April in its First Edition publishes on page 1 a 1,400-word editorial "Economic Review" entitled "Quality as the Yardstick of Labor." The article deals with the problem of establishing the quality indicator as a yardstick in evaluating labor and lists numerous complaints about the quality of consumer goods and also recent steps to ameliorate the situation.

The article states:"The first intersector industrial production-and-trade associations for the manufacture and marketing of light industry goods have appeared.

"SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA has already told its readers about the establishment of such associations in Estonia and Georgia. Acquaintance with their experience leads one to conclude that the development of this new, promising venture will not proceed without hitches. It infringes certain departmental interests and has therefore met with the opposition of certain economic managers. This was mentioned with concern also during the congress. Up to a point, this lineup of forces is probably natural. Nothing new is introduced without a struggle, and it is necessary to be prepared for this struggle. Local party and soviet organs should show more initiative in this matter. What is meant by this? That they should not wait until the departmental squabbles are resolved and should tackle the experiment more boldly.

"The party has set the task of achieving a radical breakthrough in improving the quality of work as swiftly as possible. The letter addressed by the Central Committee to party committees, soviet and economic organs, trade union and Komsomol organizations, and all working people calls for no effort to be spared in this regard. This is a nationwide task which can be resolved only through the efforts of all management components, all labor collectives, and each individual worker. It is necessary to act resolutely in this matter, using all the means available, be they economic, administrative, or educational. Half-measures are impermissible. What is needed is the utmost mobilization of forces, persistence, and consistency," the article concludes.

Agricultural Developments for 10-12 Apr Reported

LD130528 [Editorial Report] The following is a compilation of reports on agricultural developments in the USSR carried by Moscow Domestic Service in Russian, unless otherwise indicated, on 10-12 April 1986. Times of broadcasts are given in parentheses at the end of each item.

10 April

In the southern part of the Vakhsh valley in Tajikistan, the large-scale harvesting of fodder crops has started, with up to 200 quintals per hectare being gathered in some rayons. Some 40,000 hectares in Tajikistan are used to grow such interseasonal crops. The harvest now being gathered was sown in late autumn. The land can thus be cultivated almost throughout the year, which is important when the land is in a hot climate and needs irrigation. (0200 GMT)

11 April

Additional fertilizer is being applied to winter crops and perennial grasses in Bashkiria by the Ufa agricultural air service over an area of more than 600,000 hectares. (0204 GMT)

In the Chechen-Ingush ASSR, the sowing of early grain and pulse crops has been completed in 2-3 days, which is a record. The team contracting system, which has been adopted by nearly all farms in the area, helped to bring about this achievement. (0400 GMT)

In the Ukraine, widespread sowing of sugar beet, the republic's main technical crop, is taking place. Over 100,000 hectares of land are sown every day. Industrial technology is used in the cultivation of nine-tenths of the area sown to sugar beet. The work is being supervised by 500 agronomists and sugar beet specialists, allocated for the first time by the republic's agro-industrial committee. Specialized teams are carrying out the sowing. They have been recruited on the collective contract system by over three-quarters of the beet plantations. (0400 GMT)

Sowing of early cereals has been completed in southern regions of Rostov Oblast. Over 100,000 hectares have been sown to early grain crops in Belgorod Oblast. Mass sugar beet sowing is under way in the Ukraine. (Moscow Television Russian 0723 GMT)

Sowing of early grain crops has opened in Belorussia. (0800 GMT)

In Tajikistan, 80 percent of the land used for cotton production has now been sown. (2300 GMT)

12 April

Sowing units are now at work in the fields of 12 union republics and can be seen in the very south of the Russian non-Chernozem Zone. Several million hectares are occupied by spring crop seeds. In the European part of the country, spring is noticeably ahead of the traditional farmer's calendar, bringing early sowing periods. A session of the Union Council of Kolkhozes took place in Moscow in the last couple of days; participants noted that so far, this year's spring is favorable for farming. All who spoke noted that equipment has started to be prepared better, a result of the breakdown of departmental barriers in the creation of the Agroprom [Agro-Industrial Committee]. But not all its links are yet working with sufficient efficiency. Many farms, particularly in the non-Chernozem Zone, did not receive the fertilizer alloted to them. It is particularly needed now during the top-dressing and sowing period, and especially on areas being farmed intensively. The latter areas for growing grain are doubling. All farm chairmen said that the recent decision on a new economic mechanism in the agro-industrial complex is already starting to work. Production of a number of labor-intensive crops, vegetables in particular, can now bring in a good kopeck or two, whereas before there was a reluctance to grow them. Quantities of paperwork are growing smaller, although this is happening slowly. (1100 GMT)

Brest land improvement workers have started developing a large tract of land — Komarovka — in the floodlands of the western Bug; 4,000 hectares must be reclaimed here for sowing crops. A special dike and a system of pumping stations will ensure regular supplies of moisture to the soil. (1100 GMT)

Sowing of cereals was completed today in Chimkent, Dzhambul, and Kzyl-Orda Oblasts; together with winter crops, these crops occupy over 1,000,000 hectares. (Moscow Television Russian 1430 GMT)

Sowing of cotton is coming to an end on the first million hectares in Uzbekistan. (1950 GMT)

Plant Breeders Develop New Wheat Variety

[Igor Goranskiy report; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Soviet and Mexican plant breeders are working successfully to breed new varieties of wheat. Central Mexico: Peasants here gather in good and stable harvests of wheat. Interesting experiments are being carried out on an experimental field near the town of Irapuato by Soviet plant breeders Aleksandr and Olga Barsukov. With the assistance of local agronomists, they managed last year to cross 36 of the best varieties of Soviet and Mexican wheat. The first results have been obtained: Even with a visual comparison it is not difficult to see how impressive those experiments have been. [video shows two ears of wheat held side by side, one about 3 inches long, the other twice its length and girth] The little ear is our wheat brought from Kuban, and next to it is a giant ear grown by crossbreeding on the experimental Mexican field.

[Begin recording] [Scientist R. Malagon, in Spanish fading into Russian translation] Soviet scientists from the Vavilov Agricultural Academy have managed to obtain amazing results. They have obtained samples of a qualitatively new wheat which has characteristics that are very advantageous for agriculture. As a result of the experiments carried out in crossbreeding, the Soviet varieties have brought the hybrids a capability of withstanding drops in temperature: They have strong stalks and can resist disease. And from the Mexican wheat (?varieties) the hybrid has inherited a fast-ripening and a larger ear. The work is continuing and we are sure that it will bring good results. [end recording]

Murakhovskiy Speaks on Kolkhozes' Tasks

PM111413 Moscow SELSKAYA ZHIZN in Russian 11 Apr 86 p 2

[Report by Ye. Petrakov: "Union Council of Kolkhozes"]

[Text] A session of the Union Council of Kolkhozes was held in Moscow on 8 April. V.S. Murakhovskiy, first deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers and chairman of the USSR State Agro-Industrial Committee [Gosagroprom], delivered a report on the results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the Soviet kolkhozes' tasks in fulfilling its decisions. He stressed that the country's kolkhozes are called on to implement unswervingly the party's policy instructions on shifting the public economy to an intensive development path. The focus of attention is being transferred from quantitative indicators to quality and efficiency, from intermediate results to end results, and from the expansion of fixed capital to its renewal. All this is not a matter for the remote future but for the current 5-year plan, for each day of this plan.

It is important not only to eliminate the lag allowed in the 11th 5-year Plan but also to achieve the high indicators set by the Basic Guidelines for the Economic and Social Development of the USSR for 1986-1990 and the Period Through the Year 2000. Proceeding from the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress, we must double output growth rates.

The congress defined ways of resolving the large-scale tasks facing the kolkhoz peasantry. The kolkhozes' material-technical base is being strengthened and the efficiency of their production potential is being enhanced. Great scope for creative initiative is offered by the resolution "On the Further Improvement of the Economic Mechanism of Economic Management in the Country's Agro-Industrial Complex" adopted by the CPSU Central Commitee and USSR Council of Ministers.

The party congress, the speaker noted, stressed the need to unconditionally observe the democratic principles of kolkhoz leadership. Kolkhoz self-management and excessive administrative measures are incompatible concepts. The kolkhozes are socialist enterprises of the type which function on the basis of direct democracy. In practice the rayon agro-industrial associations and other organizations frequently interfere unjustifiably in the kolkhozes' activity, replacing the democratic management of kolkhoz production with excessive administrative measures. In a number of places the rayon agro-industrial associations and their supply [balansovyye] commissions order, compel, make demands on, and punish kolkhoz chairmen and specialists without the permission of meetings of kolkhoz members or of the boards. Interference in the operational activity of the kolkhozes is made out by some rayon agro-industrial associations to be a form of state leadership.

Sometimes the provisions of the model statute on questions of organizing production and labor are still violated. The "Krasnyy Oktyabr" kolkhoz, Novosibirsk Oblast, has switched to the progressive shop system of management. The reorganization has borne good fruit but the commission came and...imposed a ban and returned the farm to the obsolete system of production management. Individual rayon agro-industrial association leaders sometimes demand that the kolkhozes transfer the funds for the construction of various projects in cities and rayon centers. As a result kolkhoz funds are improperly diverted.

Unjustified interference in the affairs of kolkhozes and the violation of kolkhoz democracy cause serious damage to educational work among kolkhoz members. Their participation in the solution of questions of the labor collective's life becomes merely formal in such cases, the role of the human factor in resolving many tasks is diminished, and the authority of the chairman and specialists suffers. All this is intolerable. The agro-industrial associations must do everything to promote the kolkhozes' successful work and not impede them. Rayon agro-industrial associations must concentrate their activity mainly on elaborating a scientifically substantiated plan for the development of the rayon agro-industrial complex; on providing material and technical backup for farms; on introducing the achievements of science, technology, and leading experience; and on training cadres.

Kolkhoz democracy is being violated not only from without, the speaker noted. There are still farm leaders who, by their actions, are discrediting the democratic principles of kolkhoz life. Important questions are often resolved in volation of the kolkhoz statute — by the chairman on his own or by a narrow circle of people. The abuse of official position, unjustified decisions, and permissiveness have an adverse effect on the collective and on labor discipline. A proprietorial attitude toward public property is lost. In a number of places the replacement of general kolkhoz meetings with meeting of representatives is abused. This practice also deserves to be denounced. An unjustifiably large number of kolkhoz members have thus recently been removed from participation in the solution of general kolkhoz matters in Kherson Oblast.

The decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress require a fundamental change to the style and methods of leadership of kolkhozes. The task is to bring forms of management of kolkhoz production into line with its content and to ensure that centralized leadership is accompanied by the advantages of kolkhoz democracy. The task of the kolkhozes' councils is to follow most strictly the content of the proposals of the Model Kolkhoz Statute.

The work of the kolkhoz councils has slackened recently in some republics, krays, oblasts, and rayons. Some leaders have formed the opinion that rayon agro-industrial association councils assimilate the functions of the kolkhoz councils and their existence is therefore becoming pointless. This is a fundamentally incorrect opinion, the speaker emphasized. The activity of the kolkhoz councils consists not only of fulfilling some individual measures or mounting campaigns. They are called on to preserve and augment kolkhoz property. No one performs this work better than the kolkhoz representatives themselves.

The speaker dwelled on the most important tasks of the kolkhoz councils in fulfilling the plans of the 12th 5-Year Plan, and urged them to display truly proprietorial concern for increasing the fertility of land and assimilating intensive technologies. The kolkhoz councils must do more to generalize and disseminate the experience of the best farms which achieve a good yield on fields using intensive technology and must take steps for the mass instruction of cadres and the mastering of progressive forms of the organization and remuneration of labor. Intensive technologies must be introduced not only in arable farming but also in stockraising. The work of the Lenin kolkhoz, Novomoskovskiy Rayon, Tula Oblast, can serve as an example of successful activity in intensifying stockraising units.

Kolkhoz councils have great opportunities in enhancing the production efficiency of laggard farms. If the entire kolkhoz system and all echelons of the agro-industrial complex set about consolidating their economy with all its might, a breakthrough will come rapidly. For this, greater use should also be made of the potential of interfarm sharing. Much must be done for the social transformation of the countryside.

A crucial period has arrived — spring sowing is under way and livestock wintering is coming to an end. This spring may rightly be called the spring of acceleration. It should set the tone for the entire 5-year plan. Successfully passing the spring test means responding with deeds to the decisions of the 27th party congress.

The following spoke at the Union Council session: A.N. Tkachenko, first deputy chairman of the Ukrainian Gosagroprom; Hero of Socialist Labor I.Ya. Enns, chairman of the "Zarya Kommunizma" kolkhoz, Omskiy Rayon, Omsk Oblast; Hero of Socialist Labor G.A. Tsitlidze, chairman of the Lenin kolkhoz, Makharadzevskiy Rayon, Georgia; K.Ya. Vlats, chairman of the Telman kolkhoz, Pavlodarskiy Rayon, Pavlodar Oblast; Ye.I. Podolyanina, chairman of the Zhdanov kolkhoz, Shargorodskiy Rayon, Vinnitsa Oblast; V.M. Kalachik, chairman of the "Svetlyy Put" kolkhoz, Molodechenskiy Rayon, Minsk Oblast; and other comrades.

The Union Council relieved V.K. Mesyats of his duties as the council's chairman and member of the presidium in connection with his election as first secretary of the Moscow party obkom.

Hero of Socialist Labor I.I. Kukhar, chairman of the Vladimir Ilich kolkhoz, Leninskiy Rayon, Moscow Oblast, was elected chairman of the Union Council.

The session adotped a resolution to hold an all-union meeting of representatives of the union republics' kolkhoz councils in November 1986. The council also examined other questions.

V.A. Karlov, chief of the CPSU Central Committee Agriculture and Food Industry Department, and responsible workers of ministries and departments took part in the council's work.

[From the "Radio Mailbag" program]

[Text] Listeners will obviously have noticed that new sections have been introduced in many of our programs, which are aimed at publicizing the ideas of the congress. In today's "Radio Mailbag" broadcast we will address a question that has been developed in a post-congress document as well — the CPSU Central Committee and USSR Council of Ministers resolution on further improvement of the economic mechanism of management in the country's agro-industrial complex. It stresses particularly strongly that the role of financial autonomy must now be considerably enhanced. The experience of the past shows that ignoring the principles of self-recouping [samookupayemost] and self-financing, [samofinansirovaniye] and the upsetting of the material interest and responsibility for results of work, have considerably worsened the financial-economic situation of our kolkhozes and sovkhozes.

Genuine financial autonomy means first and foremost making the income of an agricultural enterprise dependent on the final result; that is why it must become the norm for literally all sectors of our country's agro-industrial complex, and particularly for kolkhozes and sovkhozes, writes Poltava Oblast agronomist Ivan Fedotovich Sheluchko. And this letter from Comrade Voskoboynikov from Kursk Oblast, contains a question: Please explain the principles of self-recouping and self-financing. At the microphone is Doctor of Economics Ivan Grigoryevich Ushachev, deputy director of the Institute of Agricultural Economics.

These two principles are among the basic ones in the system of financial autonomy relations. They are integral parts of the financial autonomy method. Both principles express primarily a repayment of expenditure on production of agricultural produce through income from marketing of produce and through income from work and services provided for other enterprises and organizations. The level of self-recouping is to a considerable extent identical with the level of profitability of production. The annual accounts of kolkhozes include tables for kolkhoz income and distribution of it. They show expenditures on production in the year under review. These are mainly material expenditures; they do not include expenditure on payment for labor, payments into centralized union funds for social security and insurance for kolkhoz farmers, and maintenance of cultural and everyday establishments, which is effected through special funds. When defining self-recouping, expenditure on payment for labor should be included in these material expenditures. These expenditures should be compared with clear profit or loss. Thus the category of self-recouping may be viewed as a criterion for the financially autonomous conditions of work of an enterprise and as a criterion of the efficiency of production.

As far as self-financing is concerned, although it includes self-recouping, this category is somewhat different. It is not the result of production, but the principle of an enterprise's work under financial autonomy. Full self-financing of economic and social development is when an enterprise does not receive budget allocations and resources from centralized funds, with the exception of state insurance to compensate losses due to natural disasters. This type is characteristic of economically strong kolkhozes that do not carry out land improvement work on account of budget funds.

As is known, an economic experiment has been in progress this year to improve the system of management and the economic mechanism on sovkhozes and kolkhozes and in other enterprises of the agro-industrial complex. This experiment is being carried out in Stavropol Kray, Vologda Oblast, Glazunovskiy Rayon of Orel Oblast, Kinelskiy Rayon of Kuybyshev Oblast, Pritobolnyy Rayon of Kurgan Oblast, Ordynskiy Rayon of Novosisbirsk Oblast, Krivosheinskiy Rayon of Tomsk Oblast, and Aleyskiy Rayon of Altay Kray. This experiment is aimed at introducing financial autonomy; that is, these kolkhozes and sovkhozes must be managed primarily by economic methods, applying self-recouping and self-financing. The first months of the new style work on these kolkhozes and sovkhozes show a great deal that is positive in the economic mechanism; but at the same time, certain shortcomings inherent in the basic conditions for the holding of the economic experiment are also coming to light.

Taking as a starting point the experiment being carried out in Stavropol Kray, for example, the kolkhozes and sovkhozes are not working on terms of self-recouping, even though this is supposed to exist and is the basis of the experiment. So far they are working according to a principle of a kind of self-financing. Self-financing there is based on inclusion in the mechanism of procurement prices of all budget allocations for financing of capital investments and of all budget allocations for growth in the norm for working capital, on payment of additions to the procurement prices for low-profitability and loss-making farms, and on other targets. Temporary shortage of funds is made up by credits.

As the economic experiment progresses, the defects and the omissions are being directly eliminated. This will make it possible by the beginning of 1987 to expand considerably the geographical extent of kolkhozes and sovkhozes where full financial autonomy is to be introduced, as is envisioned in the Basic Guidelines for economic and social development of our country, where it is written that we should strengthen the role of economic methods of management and strengthen financial autonomy in all areas of public-sector production.

Meeting Marks Cosmonautics Day, Gagarin Flight

LD112302 [Editorial Report] Moscow Television Service in Russian at 1255 GMT on 11 April broadcasts a 1 and 1/2-hour live relay from the Hall of Columns in the Moscow House of the Unions of a festive meeting marking Cosmonautics Day and the 25th anniversary of the launch of the first manned spacecraft, Vostock, with Gagarin on board.

At 1300 GMT as the party leaders and celebrities enter to take their seats on the platform, the announcer explains that they include "leaders of party and state; representatives of party, soviet, and public organizations of the capital; USSR airmen-cosmonauts; eminent scientists; military leaders; and cosmonauts from socialist countries.

At 1301 GMT Vasiliy Georgiyevich Zakharov, secretary of the Moscow Gorkom, begins the introductory address. He recalls Gagarin's flight and refers briefly to USSR space successes since then. "The successes of Soviet cosmonauts are clear evidence of our party's and state's concern to ensure that near-earth space should never be an arena of conflict and that it should always serve the progress, happiness, and security of the Soviet people and all mankind."

Zakharov then declares the meeting open and the anthem is played. Zakharov announces that "the report devoted to Cosmonautics Day and the 25th anniversary of the launch of the first manned space ship, Vostok, with Yuriy Alekseyevich Gagarin, pilot-cosmonaut of the USSR on board, will be delivered by Academician Vladimir Aleksandrovich Kotelnikov, vice president of the USSR Academy of Sciences."

At 1306 GMT Academician Kotelnikov begins his speech by recalling Gagarin's flight and notes that this anniversary is now marked throughout the world. He reminds the audience that the 27th CPSU Congress decisions envisage further space research: "The Congress came out resolutely against the arms race on earth and against transferring it into space. As noted in the CPSU Program which was adopted by the 27th Congress, the research and exploitation of space should be implemented only for peaceful purposes — to develop science and production in accordance with the demands of all the peoples."

Kotelnikov briefly summarizes the various historical events in the USSR space program, from the first sputnik, through Gagarin, Voskhod, Vostok-2, Soyuz, Salyut, and Progress. He refers briefly to the various types of research carried out in orbit. Kotelnikov praises the cosmonauts' level of training. He adds: "I would particularly like to mention the flight carried out by Vladimir Dzhanibekov and Viktor Savinykh who flew to the Salyut-7 station which was silent and not functioning; they managed to dock with it and repair it. To do this they needed high qualifications, resourcefulness, initiative, and I would say, heroism. It was a flight in which it was impossible to foresee all the possible situations.

"Finally, comrades, on 20 February this year the Mir orbital station was launched. It is a new-generation station which is also intended to carry out a program of manned space research in the interests of sicence and the national economy. The Mir station is equipped with a new docking system, with six docking ports. Two of these ports — the axial ones — will be used for docking visiting craft and for scientific modules. The four radial ones are work areas for scientific modules. On the station the processes of movement control, the work of the on-board systems, and the scientific apparatus are automated using modern computers; the electrical supply system has increased capacity and more comfortable conditions have been created for the crew. As you know, Cosmonauts Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solvyev are now at work on the Mir station; they are carrying out tests of its design components and on-board systems, and are adjusting the units and apparatus. Comrades, let us congratulate them on our festival and wish them success." The audience applauds. Kotelnikov then continues:

"The successful flights of the cosmonauts on the Salyut and Mir orbital stations convincingly prove the good prospects and high effectiveness of the policy adopted by the USSR of peacefully exploiting space — the policy aimed at creating and making use of permanently operating orbital manned complexes for scientific and national economic purposes. In this sphere we are the most advanced in the world; we have no competitors here."

Kotelnikov goes on to note the parallel use of automated space apparatus. Cosmos satellites have been used for research since 1962. Further successes were achieved with the Astron satellite, the Lunakhods and the Mars and Venera space apparatus. The latest Venera probes produced excellent images of Venus. He says: "The radar maps obtained during these flights are now being studied here and abroad with great interest. The United States intends to continue the radar imaging of the surface of Venus but will not be ready to do this until 1988." He recalls that the Vega apparatus obtained interesting information about Venus and Halley's Comet; many countries cooperated successfully in the Vega project.

Satellites are being used increasingly in the national economy, the speaker continues, particularly for communications. "Now, apart from the Molniya satellites, the Ekran, Raduga, and Gorizont communication satellites are in geostationary orbit. A network of ground stations is now in use, primarily Orbita stations which number about 100, and Ekran and Moskva stations which number over 4,000. Satellite communications systems allow television broadcasting to cover 93 percent of our country's population." Kotelnikov explains that much essential meteorological information is obtained from satellites. Hundreds of USSR organizations use space photographs; they receive more than 1 million photographic documents per year.

Speaking of international cooperation in space research, Kotelnikov recalls the setting up of the Interkosmos organization and its work and cooperation with other countries. "We also have experience of cooperation with the United States and the most significant page in this was the joint flight of the Soyuz and Apollo manned ships." International crews worked on the Soyuz craft. He says that two Syrian cosmonauts are now training in the USSR and a longer Soviet-French flight is also planned. "We are now working on several more major international projects devoted to peaceful space research. The implementation of these will be a significant contribution by space science to peace and human progress."

In conclusion Kotelnikov notes: "Comrades, in summing up the results of what has been done, one can say that our specialists, scientists, and workers in the space sphere have not worked at all badly. However, now, after the 27th CPSU Congress when the whole country is noting the successes that have been achieved and assessing its work self-critically and is seeking and finding reserves, removing obstacles, and outdated factors, we also see that we could have worked better. I wish to give the assurance that the glorious collective of specialists connected with space will be among the first to reorganize its activities in accordance with the precepts of the 27th congress. Allow me to express confidence that the USSR will continue to occupy a leading world position in space research and exploitation." Kotelnikov expresses his best wishes for Cosmonautics Day and the audience applauds.

Next to speak, at 1341 GMT, is Lieutenant General German Stepanovich Titov, USSR Pilot-Cosmonaut and Hero of the Soviet Union. In his 14-minute address, Titov notes the great strides made by Soviet cosmonautics since Gagarin's flight, by which time, he says, "in addition to theoretical developments, experience had been gained in creating rocket technology." All this, Titov continues, laid the ground for the realization of Tsiolkovskiy's dream of putting a man into space.

Titov then reviews the history of Soviet progress in space research and attributes its successes to the "outstanding scientists of today." He describes the process of selection that preceeded the initial training of 20 cosmonauts in Moscow in 1960 and the final selection of 6 people which culminated in Gagarin's flight into space.

Much has been accomplished, Titov continues, in the time from Gagarin's flight to the recent launching of the Mir station. "However, the path into space has not always been smoot straight, and victorious. As in anything new, there have been mistakes and failures. We have all experienced not only the joy of victories but have painfully suffered the bitterness of loss. Vladimir Komarov was killed while testing the new and first Soyuz space craft, and the flight by the crew of the first orbital station ended tragically when Georgiy Dobrovolskiy, Viktor Patsayev, and Vladislav Volkov were killed on their return to earth. Their feats serve as an example to the young generation of cosmonauts in fulfilling their duty to the people and to cosmonautics."

Cosmonautics today has become a branch of the national economy, Titov continues, promoting the country's social and economic development. "The unique characteristics of space are opening up a new era in the scientific and technological development of people on earth. Scientists today are discussing plans for orbital factories and facilities for producing materials with unique characteristics, and ideas are being put forward for using the energy resources of space. The realization of such plans requires the pooling of the efforts of all people on earth and the uniting of scientific and production potentials. The experience of various countries cooperating in major international programs indicates that this is the right and reliable path. However, reactionary circles in the United States have given their space programs a militarist tendency and aggressive direction. The United States is today trying by way of space to achieve military strategic superiority over the USSR. It is with this aim that they are drawing up plans for "star wars" and implementing programs to create new types of space-based weapons and systems called the Strategic Defense Initiative. The danger is exacerbated by the fact that the United States is trying — and not without success — to involve the economic and scientific potential of its allies in its space adventures. The cold blowing in from space is more frightening than the natural cold. The USSR is putting a great deal of effort into ensuring that scientific and technological progress and the achievements in the field of cosmonautics serve the interests of mankind's progress, and that they are not aimed at annihilating civilization."

At 1356 GMT Innokentiy Ivanovich Maltsev, a foreman at the Krasnyy Proletariy machine tool building works in Moscow, speaks for 11 minutes on Gagarin's achievements and his qualities as a man. This is followed by a greeting delivered by three "representatives of Moscow young people and students." At 1415 GMT Cosmonauts Kizim and Solovyev on board the Mir station are heard delivering a message from space praising the Soviet space achievement.

Zakharov thanks them for the meeting and declares the festive session closed at 1419 GMT.

Cosmonauts Undergo Physical Checkup 10 Apr

LD111815 Moscow TASS in English 1702 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 11 TASS — A TASS correspondent reporting from the mission control center

Soviet Cosmonauts Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovyev will celebrate the remarkable date — 25 years since the first ever manned flight into space — in orbit. The mail has brough numerous telegram and letters addressed to them. People congratulate Kizim and Solovyev on Cosmonautics Day and wish them success in fulfilling the mission's program.

Yesterday Kizim and Solovyev underwent a medical checkup with the help of a new multi-function data recording system, called "Gamma."

According to its findings, both cosmonauts are in good health. Pulse rates are normal at 62 (mission commander) and 66 beats a minute (flight engineer). Blood pressure is 115/70 and 120/70 mm of the mercury table respectively.

The program for today includes further testing of the Mir station, visual observation of the land surface and the area of the ocean, and a work-out.

The onboard systems of the manned orbital complex Mir — Soyuz T-15 — Progress-25 are functioning normally.

All-Union Science Conference Ends in Tashkent

GF071702 Tashkent Domestic Service in Uzbek

[Text] The all-union science conference dedicated to perfecting national relations on the basis of the decisions adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress concluded its work in Tashkent on 5 April. The conference was organized in accordance with a joint initiative made by the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee, the scientific council on national problems affiliated to the USSR Academy of Sciences, the Uzbek SSR Academy of Sciences, and the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee Party History Institute. During the 3-day conference, sociologists, experts on national relations, party officials, and leaders of ideological organizations and establishments from Moscow and the other fraternal republics discussed the most important issues related to the national trends prevailing in the current stage of social and economic development in the country.

The report read and the addresses made in the convocation pointed to the ways and means of (?effectively) realizing the national policy as bequeathed by Lenin and consolidating the means of creatively using the [words indistinct] under the new conditions and further strengthening the indestructable friendship of the peoples of the socialist homeland.

Ship's First Research Voyage — A new vessel belonging to the Far East scientific center, the Akademik Oparin, has set out from Riga on its first research voyage. A large number of laboratories for different purposes are on board the ship. Minicomputers that make work with various instruments easier are at the disposal of the scientists. For prompt communications with the shore and for confirming coordinates, the vessel is equipped with a satellite communications system. The purpose of the expedition is to study maritime organisms. The collective of scientific staff is looking forward to intense and interesting work in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. [Text] [Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0600 GMT 7 Apr 86 LD]

Nuclear Ship in Arctic — The center for sea operations in the western section of the Arctic reports that at the beginning of April, the nuclear ice-breaker Sibir will return to this region of the Arctic. It has been working in the White Sea for 40 days and escorted the transport vessel Olevsk to the western edge of the ice. Now it will escort the MV Kola into the Yenisey Zaliv. From here the transport of reinforced ice class will continue its independent journey to Dudinka. [Summary] [Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0200 GMT 7 Apr 86 LD]

New Small Computer — Oryol, Central Russia, April 8 TASS — The Orlyol control computer factory has launched production of the first of a new series of small computers, which is a small computation centre for automated systems monitoring technological processes. The computer conforms to the world standard of such-type machines as to its memory volume and productivity (one million operations per second). In 1986-1990 the USSR will boost 130 percent production of computer facilities as against the previous five-year plan period. [Text] [Moscow TASS in English 1608 GMT 8 Apr 86 LD]

Ships Use Satellite Links — Volna-6 satellite communications terminals have been assembled on the first 20 large-tonnage vessels of the Far Eastern shipping line. They make it possible, via the centers situated in various countries, to establish contact with the shore by telephone and teletype in a matter of minutes. In the Soviet Union such centers have been created in Odessa and Nakhodka. With their aid our motor vessels, which are making voyages in the Atlantic, Indian, and Pacific Oceans, are served. The large-scale introduction of satellite communications facilities enables seamen to tackle the tasks of delivering cargoes promptly and efficiently and to successfully negotiate the zones of impassibility of radio waves when ordinary communications transmit the necessary information to the shore with difficulty. Officers Speak on Air Defense Forces Day

Commander Marshal Koldunov

LD131315 Moscow Television Service in Russian
1000 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Address by Aleksandr Ivanovich Koldunov, commander in chief of the Air Defense Forces, chief marshal of aviation, twice Hero of the Soviet Union, on the occasion of Air Defense Forces Day, in the studio on 13 April — recorded]

[Text] Dear comrades, this year Air Defense Forces Day is being marked with special political and labor animation. The thoughts and feelings of the Soviet people and the soldiers of the Army and the Navy are turned toward our own Communist Party and the decisions of its historic 27th congress. The congress answered the key questions of life and has armed every Communist and every Soviet man with a clear program of action for speeding up the socioeconomic development of the country.

Like all the Soviet people, the personnel of the Air Defense Forces sincerely, with all their hearts, approve and support the party's decisions and its internal and foreign policy. In response to the high assessment of the military work given in the Central Committee Political Report to the 27th congress, the soldiers of the Armed Forces are resolved to continue serving their people wholeheartedly and to selflessly fulfilling their miliary duty.

Under the wise leadership of the Communist Party, the Air Defense Forces have traveled a great and glorious course: from the first subunits, set up on Vladimir Ilich Lenin's instruction, to a modern service of the Soviet Armed Forces. The personnel passed with honors the combat test during the years of the civil war and the foreign military intervention and made a significant contribution to the defense of the gains of the Great October. The air defense formations and units carried their battle colors with dignity through the severe trials of the Great Patriotic War. Together with other services of the Armed Forces, they frustrated the enemy's perfidious designs for destroying our cities, industrial facilities, and the Soviet people's cultural valuables through strikes from the air. Some 3,000 enemy aircraft were brought down on the approaches to Moscow and Leningrad alone. Crack units of the fascist aviation did not manage to overcome the air defense and ruin these major historical centers. High examples of Soviet patriotism, courage, and bravery of air defense soldiers manifested themselves clearly in the battles of Stalingrad and Kursk, on the Kuban, and in every major operation by the Soviet Armed Forces.

It was not by accident that the first ones to be honored with the title of Hero of the Soviet Union at the outset of the war were air defense fighter pilots: Lieutenants Ryabtsev, Kalabushkin, Zdorovtsev, Zhukov, Kharitonov, Junior Lieutenant (Alikhin), and numerous other famous patriots of our homeland. During the war years, the Air Defense Forces destroyed more than 7,000 enemy aircraft, over 1,000 tanks, approximately 1,500 guns and mortars, and much other enemy war equipment and man power. The homeland and the party have appropriately assessed the heroic feats and the military prowess of the defenders of the air borders. More than 80,000 of them were awarded orders and medals, while 93 were honored with the high title of Hero of the Soviet Union. Twenty-nine Air Defense Forces formations and units were made guards and 11 were given honorary names.

The present generation of air defense soldiers is proud of the immortal feats of the frontline soldiers, holds sacred and augments their combat traditions, and is perfecting its readiness for the defense of the homeland. The Soviet state decisively supports the curbing of the arms race, elimination of the threat of a new nuclear war, and the preservation and strengthening of universal peace. The 27th CPSU Congress advanced the proposal to create an all-embracing system of international security, which received wide support from all progressive forces of our planet. The new peaceful proposals by the Soviet Union, expounded in his speech on Soviet television by Comrade Gorbachev, Mikhail Sergeyevich, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, are permeated with a firm striving for the preservation and strengthening of peace and for halting nuclear arms tests.

But the aggressive forces do not cease their military preparations. As emphasized at the 27th CPSU Congress, the United States and its military-industrial machine, which as yet has no intention of reducing its momentum, remain the prime movers of militarization. The ruling U.S. circles are increasing their military potential; developing new nuclear, chemical, and conventional weapon-systems; and conducting preparations for the militarization of outer space. The policy of U.S. imperialism, directed at kindling hotbeds of tension in various regions of the planet and at achieving military superiority over the Soviet Union, runs against the interests of peace and security of peoples.

In consideration of the complex international situation and the growing aggressiveness of the reactionary imperialist circles, the CPSU Central Committee and the Central Committee Politburo devote unabated attention to the defense capabilities of the country, the fighting strength of the USSR Armed Forces, and the strengthening of military discipline. In accordance with the Law on the USSR State Borders, important tasks in the defense of the interests of the Soviet state are placed upon Air Defense Forces, who also in peacetime remain at action stations and are in around-the-clock operational readiness.

Thanks to the constant concern of the Communist Party and the Soviet Government and to the efforts of designers, scientists, engineers, and workers, air defense formations and units have considerably raised their combat capabilities. They now possess weapons which are able to destroy modern air attack weapons over a wide range of altitudes and speeds and in any meteorological conditions. Our excellent cadres skillfully handle first-class combat equipment. Every third air defense soldier has obtained awards of distinction in combat and political training. Almost 100 percent of the personnel are qualified specialists and 80 percent of them are first- and second-class specialists and holders of combat qualifications.

The principle and determining characteristic of the Air Defense Forces is their constant readiness for action. This readiness embraces all aspects of the personnel's life and activities and is ensured by sustained martial labor and high personal responsibility for the work at hand. The personnel's military skill is based on the very rich experience of the Great Patriotic War, the advanced views of Soviet military thinking, and the comprehensive mastering of more effective methods of combatting modern air attack weapons.

Among the Air Defense Forces, as throughout the country, active, creative, and inspiring work is under way to fulfill the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress. Commanders, political bodies, and party and Komsomol organizations are putting organizational and educational measures into effect in order that service in the Air Defense Forces, as in our entire Army, continues to be a school of education, courage, and patriotism. The quality of combat and political training is improving. Organization and discipline are being refinforced. Party political work is being perfected. Socialist competition under the slogan — Let us fulfill the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress; let us reliably defend the gains of socialism — has assumed wide dimensions in the units and subunits.

The atmosphere of principledness and high responsibility for the work at hand and for an objective and self-critical assessment of the results obtained, which was created by the congress, is taking hold in the activities of the leadership, the political bodies, the staffs, and the party organizations. Implementation of the tasks set by the USSR minister of defense for the 1986 academic year is being effected according to a tough combat schedule. The surface-to-air missile forces and fighter aviation are fulfilling their academic and combat tasks for the winter period with excellent and good results, and the radio-engineering troops have achieved new levels in combat and political training.

The units and subunits have lent broad support to the initiative by the country's front-ranking collectives to hold a communist subbotnik dedicated to the 116th anniversary of the birth of Vladimir Ilich Lenin. In daily combat study and in the course of exercises, interaction with other types of armed forces is strengthening and developing, as is combat cooperation with the air defense forces of the Warsaw Pact armies.

In marking the holiday, the air defense personnel assure the Communist Party Central Committee and the Soviet Government that they will continue to vigilantly guard the socialist fatherland's air boundaries and remain in constant readiness to defend the Soviet people's peaceful labor. We express our heartfelt gratitude to all workers, party and local soviet bodies, scientists, designers, DOSAAF organizations, and creative unions for their concern and great attention to the defenders of the fatherland's air borders. On our holiday we address warm congratulations to the glorious veterans of the Air Defense Forces, participants in the Great Patriotic War, and generals and officers in reserve and in retirement. We wish you, esteemed comrades, sound health and active work in the military and political education of young people and in propagandazing combat traditions.

Esteemed comrades, allow me to cordially congratulate you, Army and Navy servicemen, and all who are today performing their responsible service in the Air Defense Forces, on the holiday, and to wish you new and remarkable achievements in fulfilling the historical decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress.

Deputy Comander Col Gen Smirnov

0815 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Address by Colonel General Aleksey Grigoriyevich Smirnov, deputy commander in chief of the Air Defense Forces, on the occasion of Air Defense Forces Day, on 13 April; place not given; from the "Time, Events, People" program presented by Igor Grigoryev — recorded]

[Excerpts] The birth and development of the Air Defense Forces are organically linked with the Great October Socialist Revolution and Vladimir Ilich Lenin's activities.

In conditions of scientific-technical progress, fundamentally new means of air defense have been created, primarily guided missiles and automated control systems. Today, the Air Defense Forces are the most highly automated service of the Armed Forces. Created by the talent of Soviet designers, through the effort of the engineering and technical personnel, workers and servicemen of the defense industry, the first-rate military equipment with high combat capabilities today enables the surface-to air missile forces, fighter aircraft personnel, and the air defence radar equipment operators to locate and destroy the enemy's air attack weapons throughout the entire range of altitudes and velocities of their use, in any weather conditions, at the far approach routes to protected facilities. The permanently sustained high level of combat readiness is a distinctive feature of our troops, and at the same time one of the most important demands made of them. They are entrusted with carrying out a peacetime task of national importance — that of ensuring the security of the fatherland's air frontiers. To fulfill this task, a major part of the Air Defense Forces and equipment is on 24-hour combat duty, and the rest is maintained in permanent readiness for combat use within a short period of time. To fight the latest means of air and space attack, it takes not only perfect combat equipment but also the highest possible degree of professional skills among soldiers, sergeants, and warrant and commissioned officers which will ensure its dexterous use in combat. The air defense servicemen, selflessly devoted to the Communist Party and the Soviet people, fully possess these qualities.

Thirty-two percent of them are excellent in combat and political training and 96 percent are qualified specialists, including 75 percent who are highly qualified. In the course of the socialist competition, which is widely expanded under the motto — To ensure fulfillment of the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress, reliable defense of the socialist gains — formations and units of the Air Defense Forces are reaching new levels of combat skills. The Guards Putilovsko-Kirovskiy surface-to-air missile air defense regiment holding an Order of Lenin, which is under command of Lieutenant Colonel Kurdenkov, is in the vanguard of the socialist competition in our service of the Armed Forces.

The winter training period is drawing to a close. In the course of combat training, which was conducted under the mark of ushering in the party congress in a fitting way, the standards of training of Air Defense Forces formations and units have been significantly raised. In the work of commanders, political bodies, headquarters, and party and Komsomol organizations, the bulk of effort is directed at rigorous execution of the demands of the party Central Committee and of the Soviet Government on enhancing vigilance, combat readiness, and the ability to give an unconditional and guaranteed rebuke to an aggressor's attack and to the ensure successful performance of our troops in any conditions of warfare.

In conclusion, allow me to warmly and cordially congratulate all Soviet people, servicemen and veterans of the Armed Forces, workers of the defense industry on Air Defense Forces Day and to assure the Soviet people and the Communist Party that servicemen of the Air Defense Forces are always ready to fulfill their service duty in defending the air frontiers of the fatherland and that they will give a crushing rebuff to any aggressor.

FURTHER SOVIET REACTION TO U.S. NUCLEAR TEST

More on Press Conference

PM141527 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 15 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[TASS report: "For the Ending of the Arms Race; Press Conference in Moscow"]

[Text] On 14 April a press conference was held at the USSR Foreign Ministry press center for Soviet and foreign journalists in connection with the Soviet Government statement on the carrying out of a nuclear explosion in the United States. Taking part were G.M. Korniyenko, USSR first deputy foreign minister; Marshal of the Soviet Union S.F. Akhromeyev, chief of general staff of the Armed Forces and first deputy defense minister of the USSR; and A.M. Petrosyants, chairman of the USSR State Committee for the Utilization of Atomic Energy.

The statement at the opening of the press conference said that the Soviet leadership proceeds from the premise that there is no task more important and crucial right now than halting the growth of the danger of war and sparing mankind from the nuclear threat.

Fully determined to achieve a fundamental improvement in the development of world events, the Soviet Union has defined the struggle for halting the arms race and preventing it in space and for completely eliminating nuclear and other weapons of mass annihilation by the end of the century as the central avenue of its foreign policy for the years to come.

Common sense and the conclusions of authoritative specialists says that a foundation to the process of eliminating nuclear arms can be laid most effectively and at the same time most simply by means of the total cessation of tests of these weapons. The nuclear systems already in service would not be improved and the creation of new ones would be virtually impossible.

There is very objective prerequisite today for a mutually acceptable solution, encroaching on no one's security, to the question of a total ban on nuclear explosions with the establishment of strict verification [kontrol] of the observance of such a ban. All that is needed is the political will.

Guided by the desire to set a good example and to give the necessary impetus to the cause of nuclear disarmament, the Soviet Union took a bold step in August last year -- it introduced a unilateral moratorium on all nuclear explosions. For this it had to suspend the fulfillment of the relevant program and embark on certain military and economic expenditures.

Announced initially for the period through the end of 1985, our moratorium has twice been extended. On each occasion the Soviet Union has honestly issued a warning that the unilateral moratorium cannot be endless and that there is a limit beyond which the USSR will be unable to go. This limit is determined by the interests of our country's security and the security of our allies.

Unfortunately, the U.S. leadership did not stand the test of its responsibility and literally blew up a unique chance to halt the nuclear arms race in Nevada on 10 April. Under these conditions the 11 April Soviet Government statement that henceforth it is freed from its unilaterally adopted commitment to refrain from conducting any nuclear explosions was no surprise to anyone, I believe.

At the same time, it was emphasized that the Soviet Union is prepared to reintroduce at any time the moratorium on all nuclear tests, given a U.S. reciprocal readiness to introduce such a moratorium. Here it is once again up to Washington to reply.

Our proposal to begin talks without delay regarding a total nuclear test ban is also still on the U.S. Administration's desk. The USSR is ready for any form of such talks -- bilateral, trilateral, multilateral -- provided the matter leads to an agreement being reached.

In the light of recent events it is our profound conviction that the problem of banning nuclear weapons tests is not only not being removed from the agenda but, on the contrary, is becoming still more acute, and the Soviet Union intends for its part to strive with unremitting vigor to resolve it.

Replies were given to numerous questions from journalists.

Question: Could you explain from a military viewpoint the importance of banning nuclear tests?

Answers: A nuclear test ban is a serious and real measure to limit the nuclear arms race. An end to nuclear explosions will "freeze" the further development of nuclear ammunition technology and, consequently, will delay and perhaps even halt the creation [sozdaniye] of new models of ammunition and will slow down the development [razrabotka] of new kinds and types of nuclear means (carriers). The quantitative buildup of nuclear charges would also be halted at the same time. A nuclear test ban would erect a barrier in the way of the creation [sozdaniye] of various kinds of nuclear charges for space strike arms under the "star wars" program. In short, ending nuclear explosions is one of the reliable paths leading to the reduction of nuclear arsenals.

Question: Through Washington's fault, the USSR's unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions did not become bilateral and did not stop nuclear tests. Was this Soviet act justified?

Answer: In declaring a unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions, the USSR demonstrated its determination to strive in practice, using, among other things, the force of its own example, for an end to the nuclear arms race. The Soviet moratorium made the problem of ending nuclear tests one of the central issues in world politics. It vividly illuminated who is really in favor of eliminating the nuclear threat and makes the elimination of nuclear weapons the objective of his practical policy, and who, while getting away with peace-loving words, seeks to build up his nuclear might at an accelerated pace.

This Soviet act evoked a wide, positive response throughout the world, and roused and spurred into action the forces which are in favor of ending nuclear explosions and starting a movement toward a nuclear-free world. As a result even now, when through the fault of the United States the Soviet moratorium has ceased to operate, the question of ending nuclear tests remains at the center of the world community's attention. In other words, a more favorable situation has been created for the continuation of the struggle for a total ban on nuclear tests. All this makes it possible to consider our action justified, despite the fact that it has not yet brought complete success.

Question: Washington justifies its refusal to end nuclear tests in terms of the difficulties of verification [kontrol]. What can be said about that?

Answer: M.S. Gorbachev's statements have dealt precisely, clearly, and in detail with verification. Questions of verification pose no problem. First, the seismological stations which the USSR and the United States have are able to carry out verification reliably, and moreover their technical potential is improving constantly. Second, we can make use of international seismological data, and in particular we can take advantage of the proposal of the leaders of the six states in this connection. Third -- most important -- the Soviet side is prepared, if necessary, to accept on-site inspections.

Question: Washington resorts to various kinds of maneuvers in order to avoid resolving the problem of a nuclear test ban. What lies behind this?

Answer: The Soviet Government statement says that Washington conceals behind these actions its intention of continuing to threaten mankind with the nuclear sword. The United States continues to seek military superiority over the Soviet Union, and the NATO bloc over the Warsaw Pact Organization. It is for this purpose that nuclear charges are being tested for new types of nuclear weapons: MX, Trident-2, and Midgetman ballistic missiles, as well as for space-strike arms under the "star wars" plan. The U.S. President himself recently spoke about this.

There are no other reasons. The various "arguments," like the U.S. lag in nuclear tests, the need to maintain a "deterrence" potential, references to the inadequacy of verification [kontrol] — all this is misinformation of the public. For a long time the U.S. Administration has taken refuge behind the problem of verification, a problem of its own devising. When the USSR said that there were no verification problems, that it agreed to any form of verification, international included, it turned out that the U.S. leading circles did not want a nuclear test ban.

Question: What damage has the USSR sustained during the moratorium?

Answer: The USSR has suffered a certain amount of damage from the military viewpoint, of course. But the political benefits of this step in the struggle to halt nuclear tests and limit the nuclear arms race have been greater than the purely military damage.

Question: What is the USSR's stance on nuclear tests by other countries, including France?

Answer: The USSR's attitude toward nuclear tests is precise and clear. We advocate the complete cessation of nuclear weapon tests everywhere. And the USSR and the United States must set an example in this respect as the states possessing the biggest nuclear potentials. We believe that the other nuclear powers, including France and Britain, must join in a nuclear test ban.

Question: What steps will the USSR take in the event of U.S. aggression against Libya?

Answer: The main thing here is to prevent U.S. aggression against this country, as against any other state. The Soviet Union is doing all it can in this sphere. But I think it might be counterproductive to say now what the USSR would do and when. That is all I would say in reply to your question on Libya.

The press conference participants answered some other questions posed by journalists.

Bogachev Contrasts Policies

LD141523 Moscow TASS in English 1402 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 14 TASS -- Follows commentary by Vladimir Bogachev, TASS military news analyst:

The U.S. Administration declares in public that the ultimate goal of the United States is the total elimination of nuclear weapons, but at the same time announces its plans to expand the American plants producing nuclear materials for missile warheads, bombs and artillery shells. President Reagan urges physicists to pool their efforts so as to ensure the use of the atom solely for mankind's benefit, and soon after that orders a modernization of a nuclear test range, which will cost the American taxpayers almost two billion dollars.

As if jeering at the common sense of the Americans, the U.S. Administration claims that the sole reliable way to disarmament lies through a build-up of nuclear weapons by the United States. He also maintains that a militarisation of outer space can be prevented only by placing thousands of nuclear systems, many of which will be tipped with nuclear warheads, in near-earth space.

If one is to believe Washington, to make the nuclear weapons "obsolete" they should be first modernized, and in order to make them "powerless" it is necessary to increase the yield and accuracy of the American nuclear warheads. In conformity with that reckless concept the U.S. Administration categorically refused to follow the Soviet Union's example and put an end to all nuclear blasts, motivating its decision by the claim that renunciation of nuclear testing will prevent a modernization of American nuclear weapons. This stand by Washington most clearly reveals the real essence of the American "disarmament concept."

The Soviet Government is deeply convinced that an end to nuclear explosions would strongly slow down the nuclear weapons race, would make it possible to start practically eliminating that mass destruction weapon. For almost nine months the USSR refrained from conducting nuclear explosions, thus giving the U.S. Administration a chance to confirm through practical actions its statements about the striving for a nuclear-free world, and join in the Soviet moratorium.

The general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee has proposed the U.S. President to meet soon in one of the European capitals to reach agreement on an end to nuclear testing. Washington's answer to that proposal was yet another nuclear explosion in Nevada, which demonstrated for the whole world to see its moral and political weakness and placed the interests of the military-industrial complex above those of the American people.

Under these conditions the Soviet Union was forced to announce that from now on it is free from its unilateral commitment to refrain from any nuclear explosions. At the same time the Soviet Union will further persistently press ahead for the resolution of the problem of testing in the interests of the whole mankind.

The USSR is prepared for any form of talks with the USA on that issue, for any type of agreement provided things go towards reaching agreement on a ban on nuclear explosions.

'Insolent Challenge'

PM141443 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 12 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Own correspondent A. Tolkunov dispatch under the general headline "Blow to the Peoples' Hopes: The United States Has Conducted a New Nuclear Explosion in Nevada": "An Irresponsible Step"]

[Text] New York, 11 Apr -- A crimson dawn broke over the Nevada desert. In a symbolic act of civil disobedience Americans crossed the test range perimenter one after another. Several activists from Greenpeace, the antinuclear organization, has already infiltrated the range in protest at the explosion being prepared there. They were immediately arrested. In all, around 100 people were arrested. Demonstrations against the tests have been held in many U.S. cities....

But the bomb was still detonated. Why? According to the official statement, this U.S. explosion, the ninth during the Soviet Union's unilateral moratorium, was necessary. Why? To develop [rzrabotka] new warheads for the MX ICBM's and for the Trident-2 missiles for submarines. These and subsequent tests planned for the near future will provide an opportunity to "check out" the new systems' ability to survive a nuclear strike and will be designed to "trigger" an X-ray laser -- one of the main components of the "star wars weapons" that are being developed [razrabatyvat].

For more than 8 months now our country, fulfilling its unilateral moratorium, has urged the elaboration of an all-embracing treaty and has put forward more and more new initiatives in this sphere. We have sincerely striven to realize the hopes for a peaceful nonnuclear future for all peoples on earth.

Our appeal has not been heeded. And it was not headed because some people still clung to the hope of achieving strategic superiority.

That is why there is now such feverish activity in the Pentagon, the Livermore, and Los Alamos nuclear laboratories, and the headquarters of the largest nuclear subcontractors. The arms race is being launched not only on earth but also in space -- after all, the new explosions are already intended for the development [razrabotka] of "star wars weaponry."

Such is Washington's irresponsible course and the White House's insolent challenge to all mankind.

Test Draws Protests

PM141906 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 12 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[Own correspondent L. Koryavin Dispatch: "Explosion in Nevada and Explosion of Alarm"]

[Text] Washington -- The United States has held another nuclear test in Nevada. As soon as it was reported on ABC TV a title reading "Nuclear Test" appeared on the screen. But instead of shots of Nevada there were scenes showing zinc coffins covered with the Stars and Stripes. There had been a "slipup" -- the operators had played the wrong film. They showed excerpts from a report on the shipment to the United States of the remains of U.S. servicemen who died during the dirty war in Vietnam....

But the coffins were a convincing illustration of the report on the new test of the deadly weapon which threatens to turn the living earth into mankind's nuclear grave. In Pentagon circles it is being pointed out that the "experiment" of involving the current explosion in Nevada was to test the impact of radiation on missile warheads. No secret is made of the fact that the plans for improving nuclear weapons and testing them are intimately bound up with the program for expediting the production of components of the so-called "Strategic Defense Initiative," that is, with the creation of "star wars" weapons.

Nuclear explosions are organically linked with the creation of the so-called nuclear-charged X-ray laser to give these weapons unprecedented destructive force.

The Nevada test reflected the strategic concept of U.S. ruling circles, which are gambling on a "strong America." In U.S. militarist circles it is cynically stated that the present explosion in Nevada will "give away" to other tests to follow in the very near future -- 16 are planned in all, official U.S. Department of Energy circles are stressing.

The new nuclear tests in Nevada generated a wave of condemnation in the United States. In the region directly adjacent to the Nevada test site there are now more than 200 demonstrators who have stated that they are ready to prevent the explosion at the risk of their lives. The police have stopped them. But neither the police nor the U.S. authorities can stop the broad wave of protest which is currently sweeping over the United States in connection with the latest nuclear weapons test.

It was opposed by Senator Cranston, who stressed that U.S. nuclear policy is not in America's national interests.

Protest against the nuclear explosion is being voiced from the Nevada test site to Congress. The protesters are demanding that the United States heed the voice of reason and stop the tests, stop playing with fire.

Grassroots Opinion Cited

PM140849 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 10 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[Own correspondent G. Vasilyev report: "Grassroots' Movement: Reasonable America Is Against Nuclear Explosions"]

[Text] New York, 9 Apr -- Before sitting down to write this report I looked through the latest newspapers which I had just bought as a street kiosk. My eye was immediately caught by a report in THE NEW YORK TIMES: "At the test range in Nevada preparations are underway for the next nuclear explosion. It will most likely take place in the next few days.

....Sometimes in Las Vegas, a city famous throughout America for its gaming houses, a distant rumble is heard, after which people feel a slight tremor of the ground beneath their feet. The dissolute rich fall silent for a minute and the roulette wheels stop for a moment. At the Nevada testing range, 70 miles northwest of Las Vegas, they are exploding nuclear devices and testing the latest types of weapons of mass destruction.

The once again of wheel of fortune spins and passions flare.

There is something symbolic about this juxtaposition of the gaming houses, bathed in neon light and gripped by feverish emotion, and thedeep underground silos where thermonuclear death rages. Something reminiscent of feasting at a time of plague. Something which becomes a symbol of the America of the Pentagonites, the weapons manufacturers, the "theorists" from right-wing "think tanks," all those fanatical fighters against communism who are prepared to jeopardize the future of the world, the future of mankind.

But in Nevada, as in any other American state, there are also completely ordinary people, people who work to earn their crust of bread, who raise their children, who are worried about their future in the shadow of nuclear apocalypse. They regard the underground shocks whose epicenter is in their neighborhood as a stimulus to action. I called the local section of the American peace test organization in Las Vegas. This association of peace-loving Americans became known to the country after mass demonstrations and acts of civic disobedience near the fence of the testing range last November, on the threshold of the Geneva summit conference.

"We are now preparing for new protest demonstrations," I was told by Nancy Hale, one of the organization's national coordinators. "Despite appeals from all over the world, the Pentagon is continuing its nuclear weapon tests. This is a challenge to world public opinion and a slap in the face for those Americans who are unequivocally in favor of ending explosions and of the United States responding with positive actions to the Soviet moratorium on all nuclear tests."

Millions of ordinary Americans, alarmed, worried, and indignant, speak through Nancy Hale, a mother of three who came to Nevada from her native Oregon to make what contribution she could to the great and noble cause of saving the world from the nuclear plague. And what do the experts think about all this, those who are capable of assessing the present situation from the viewpoint of the global problems of world policy?

Arthur Cox is well known in Washington, author of a number of books on Soviet-American relations and an expert in the sphere of military strategy. In a recent book Cox wrote about the great significance which would be attached to the conclusion of a Soviet-American treaty on a general nuclear test ban: "It would show the whole world the determination of the two great powers to end the nuclear arms race...What would be the point of trying to create costly new types of arms, if you could not test them?...The Soviets are ready to sign such a treaty tomorrow..."

"How do I assess the present situation? Extremely alarming, to put it mildly," Cox answered my question. "The U.S. Administration's categorical rejection of a moratorium and the Pentagon's intention of continuing nuclear explosions with a view to developing sophisticated types of arms are a blow against hopes for progress. Yet M.S. Gorbachev has clearly demonstrated that the Soviet Union is prepared for serious talks; it has extended the moratorium and agreed to certain forms of on-site inspection."

In Arthur Cox' opinion the White House's frankly negative position on the question of banning nuclear tests is the result of increased activeness by the extreme right and the most aggressive and militarist elements both within the administration and around it. The best-known representatives of these forces, he says, are Richard Perle, assistant secretary of defense; Fred Ikle, deputy Pentagon chief; Kenneth Adelman, chief of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency; General Abrahamson, leader of the SDI program, and, of course, their spiritual mentor, nuclear maniac and "father" of the hydrogen bomb, physicist Edward Teller. They believe that by mobilizing its economic and technological resources and using vast funds, the United States will forge ahead in sophisticated types of armaments, achieve a position of strategic superiority, and be able to dictate its will to the Soviet Union and the whole world.

"And what do you think?"

"I think that in present conditions, when mountains of nuclear explosives have been stockpiled, military-strategic superiority has become pointless. Nuclear weapons cannot be an instrument of reasonable foreign policy."

Arthur Cox heads the American Committee on East-West Accord. This is a public organization whose leaders include well-known Americans involved in Soviet-American relations, former ambassadors, military figures, big businessmen, and scientists. In Reagan's America today, these people have been "shut out" onto the periphery of the country's political life. But they are active and express their opinion, which reflects the sentiments of relatively large U.S. circles, those who are worried about Washington's policy of confrontation.

It is no exaggeration to say that the question of ending or continuing nuclear weapon tests is the focal point of the attention of millions of people today. People's attitude toward it has become the litmus paper by which the position of a praticular figure or organization on the main problem of our times can be defined very simply and highly accurately. The Soviet proposal to the United States together with the other nuclear powers to reach agreement on ending nuclear explosions, a proposal backed up by the Soviet moratorium, opened up a real, effective path toward curbing the arms race. It is hard to submerge this proposal in the quagmire of sticky debates about individual types of arms and armed forces and about who has more of what -- debates which have become Washington's customary means of evading Soviet proposals without openly saying "no" to them.

The Soviet moratorium and the USSR's persistent efforts to bring the United States into the process of slowing down and then reversing the nuclear race could not fail to make a great impression on the American public. Seeking to counteract this effect, the U.S. Administration began to advance one pretext after another for saying "no" and escaping the blame. First they said that the United States was lagging behind the Soviet Union in terms of the number of nuclear tests carried out, and that therefore it must "catch up with" the USSR. This dishonest fabrication was speedily exposed. Having failed with one ruse, they started talking about the difficulties of verifying the observance of a nuclear test ban. But this "argument" did not last long either. The Soviet Union officially announced that it is prepared for certain forms of on-site monitoring of the observance of a possible agreement. And today, robbed of its last disguise, the White House states without beating about the bush: We will continue tests in order to create new types of arms.

THE WASHINGTON POST has just published an article by Walter Pinkus, saying that, as is clear from Energy Department budget documents, the Reagan administration, which is already financing the biggest American nuclear weapon production program in the last 20 years, seeks the appropriation of additional resources for the expansion of nuclear weapon production capacities capable of producing these weapons in still larger quantities in the nineties. Among other things, the author of the article indicates, the department seeks the appropriation of resources for the construction of modern new laboratories which will study the possibility of using the energy of nuclear explosions to create beam weapons within the framework of SDI.

The nuclear explosion carried out at the Nevada range 22 March aroused a wave of indignation which was felt throughout the country. The ostentatious, defiant step taken by the U.S. Administration on the eve of the expiry of the moratorium announced by the Soviet Union was seen by people of goodwill as a challenge to public opinion and an outrage against the Americans' post-Geneva hopes. People of various political views and different social positions are taking part in protests and acts aimed at bringing the rabid "hawks" to their senses: workers and housewives, students and office workers, politicians and religious figures.

I look through the newspapers of recent days.

New York. The city council of America's biggest megalopolis adopted a resolution calling on the Washington administration to join in the Soviet moratorium on nuclear tests and renounce the "star wars" program.

Washington. Representatives of a large group of American women's organizations are picketing the White House. In a letter to President Reagan they call on him "for the sake of our children and future generations to stop nuclear explosions... and enter into talks with the Soviet Union to conclude a treaty on a mutual, verifiable nuclear test ban."

I could cite more examples. Indeed, the confrontation over the question of a nuclear test ban has considerably "shaken" America. Actions in favor of curbing the nuclear genie have become a "grassroots movement," as they call it here. Even in small settlements, at the spring session of the municipal councils in the last few days one of the urgent problems of life under discussion has been that of how to influence the Reagan administration to respond positively to the Soviet Union's appeal for an end to nuclear tests.

Sentiments locally must be taken into account by the congressmen and senators, many of whom are soon to run for reelection. As already reported, at the end of February the U.S. House of Representatives adopted a resolution, after a fierce debate, calling on the President to immediately resume talks with the Soviet Union with a view to concluding a treaty on a general and complete nuclear weapon test ban. Preparations are now under way on Capitol Hill for the discussion of a draft resolution submitted to the House of Representatives by Patricia Schroeder (the draft already has 85 cosignatories) and a similar draft from Senators Cranston, Hatfield, Kerry, and Simon providing for the cessation of appropriations for American nuclear tests for as long as the USSR continues its moratorium.

All this -- the noisy debates on Capitol Hill, the private discussions in quite "backwoods" towns, the demonstrations by mass public organizations, the personal opinions expressed by well-known scientists and politicians -- indicates that America longs for the reason, common sense, and realism which are now in such short supply in the country's policy.

CHERVOV EXPLAINS EUROPEAN MISSILE BALANCE

AU141303 Bratislava PRAVDA in Slovak 10 Apr 86 p 6

[Article by Colonel General Nikolay Chervov: "The Soviet Proposal On Intermediate-Range Missiles; Important Issue of Security in Europe"]

[Text] In the joint Soviet-American statement on the results of the meeting between CPSU Central Committee General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev and U.S. President R. Reagan in Geneva, the representatives of the two states favored the speedy achievements of progress in spheres where points of concurrence exist, including in particular the idea of a preliminary agreement on intermediate-range missiles in Europe.

Thus, both sides have great responsibility with regard to realizing this achieved agreement. Without a bilateral endeavor it is impossible to achieve real progress here. Concrete deeds are needed, leading to attainment of the set objective.

Regarding the USSR, it affirms with word and deed its firm intention to achieve the fulfillment of the Geneva agreement. It exerts a maximum effort to rid Europen of nuclear weapons completely -- both intermediate-range as well as tactical weapons. The appropriate Soviet proposals are laying on the negotiating table in Geneva. The USSR's goodwill is attested to by the measures it has unilaterally adopted: suspending the further deployment of intermediate-range missiles in Europe; rescinding the state of alert of a part of the SS-20 missiles which have been deployed in retaliation to the American Pershing-2 and cruise missiles; as well as dismantling their fixed installations.

In his statement of 15 January Mikhail Gorbachev submitted a radical new proposal -- the proposal to liquidate Soviet and American intermediate-range missiles in the European zone. What is involved here are, on the American side, the Pershing-2 and cruise missiles deployed in Western Europe and, on the Soviet side, the intermediate-range missiles deployed in that region. The United States and USSR will physically liquidate these missiles and will not transfer them to other regions or hand them over to other countries. Following the fulfillment of these commitments, one envisages thorough and strict supervision, national and international, with all means, including on-site verification (inspection).

The new Soviet proposal is flexible and constructive. It creates realistic prerequisites for an agreement, taking into consideration the USSR's expressed willingness to conclude this agreement with the United States on the liquidation of intermediate-range missiles in the European region, without any immediate connection with the problems of strategic weapons and outer space. The only requirement is that the United States does not supply its strategic missiles and intermediate-range missiles to other countries (that would block the channel for possible circumvention of the future agreement) and Britain and France do not increase their corresponding nuclear weapons (issues concerning this problem could be the subject of a direct exchange of view with Britain and France).

It is not difficult to see what the fact that the nuclear weapons of Britain and France are not counted means. It involves a compromise variant that disturbs the logic of the arms race. It would be unnatural if, at a time when the United States and the USSR were to reduce their nuclear potential, Britain and France were to increase the quantity of their nuclear weapons. Even now their missiles have more than 500 nuclear warheads, and in the coming decade their number will reach 1,200 units. Under conditions of radical reduction of the appropriate U.S. and USSR nuclear weapons (by 50 percent, to 6,000 nuclear projectitles for both sides) and the liquidation of the American and Soviet intermediate-range missiles in the European region, the share of the British and French nuclear potential in the mutual strategic correlation between NATO and the Warsaw Pact would substantially increase. In other words, the realization of the British and French plans -- in case an agreement with the United States is reached -- would lead to NATO's unilateral military advantages.

Therefore, London and Paris' commitment not to increase their nuclear weapons would constitute a positive contribution to the common project of nuclear disarmament. They would ensure strategic stability in a period when a radical reduction in USSR and U.S. nuclear weapons would be taking place.

The Soviet program of nuclear disarmament submitted by Mikhail Gorbachev on 15 January also solves the issue of Soviet intermediate-range missiles in the country's eastern part.

In that region, our intermediate-range devices face the corresponding devices of the United States, which has here about 400 intermediate-range delivery aircraft (the aerial power on 7 aircraft carriers, the F-16 aircraft in Japan, the F-16 and F-4 aircraft in South Korea, in the Philippines, the long-range cruise missiles on the combat vessels Iowa, Missouri, and so forth). The USSR is willing to solve the issue of its intermediate-range missiles in Asia. According to the Soviet program, in 15 years there would be no missiles of any kind there. But at the same time one has to resolve the question of what to do about the American intermediate-range devices deployed in the Far East.

The assertions that the USSR has begun transferring SS-20 missiles from the East to the West are not responsible. The Soviet side has declared more than once that it has no intention of doing anything of the sort. The United States could be reproached for having the same intentions with regard to the transfer of its Pershing-2 missiles to Europe. Well, should additional guarantees be necessary, it would obviously be possible to come to a special agreement that Soviet intermediate-range missiles will not be transferred from the Asian to the European regions -- with corresponding commitments regarding the U.S. missiles. The existing modern devices make the supervision of such an agreement possible.

In harmony with the Soviet nuclear disarmament program other important issues are also being resolved -- the issues of Soviet operational-tactical missiles of enhanced range which have been deployed in retaliation for the Pershing-2 and cruise missiles, and the tactical weapons. If the American intermediate-range missiles in Europe were to be completely liquidated, then the presence of the Soviet operational-tactical missiles deployed there would also become unnecessary. The liquidation of tactical nuclear weapons -- by all nuclear states -- is envisaged in the program's second stage (beginning in 1990). Thus, in that sphere, too, the USSR is not thinking about any advantages for itself. We want only one thing -- to reduce the level of nuclear counterweight, reinforce general security, and free people from the burden of nuclear weapons.

The liquidation of American and Soviet intermediate-range missiles in Europe would be an important step which would lead to a rapid turn for the better on the European Continent and be favorably reflected in the world situation. A path would be cleared toward a radical reduction of nuclear weapons and their consequent total liquidation. This step can be taken immediately; it is not necessary to waste time with other issues. Now everything depends only on the political will of the American side, on its willingness to use not words but real deeds to fulfill -- constructively and on a bilaterally acceptable basis -- the mutual commitment aimed at accelerating the solution of this problem, enshrined in the joint declaration of 21 November 1985.

'AGGRESSIVE DESIGNS' BETRAY U.S. GLOBAL POLICY

PM141101 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 11 Apr 86 Second Edition p 3

[Candidate of Economic Sciences Yu. Katasonov article under the rubric "United States -- Locomotive of Militarism": "Strategy of Total Adventurism"]

[Text] There are U.S. doctrines, strategies, and strategic concepts without number, as the saying goes. Despite being verbally disguised as defensive, the essence and substance of these strategic aims are betrayed, as they say, by aggressive designs. Designs on a literally global scale, which threaten peace and international security in all parts of the planet and are being realized ostentatiously, arrogantly, and in disregard of the world community's opinion.

The "administration's determination" -- recently announced in Washington -- to continue the planned nuclear test program has been perceived not only as Washington's unceremonious response to the USSR's urgent appeal to subscribe to its unilateral moratorium on all nuclear explosions. It is a challenge to the world public and to the overwhelming majority of the world's states which demand an end to nuclear weapon tests as the first step to banning and eliminating nuclear weapons everywhere. It is further graphic evidence that the U.S. Administration is not inclined to halt the material preparation for war.

"The Reagan administration," S. Hoffmann, the American specialist in international affairs, writes, "has brought with it a cruel, all-embracing strategy aimed at securing nuclear superiority, waging ideological, political, and economic war, changing the world correlation of forces -- all at Moscow's expense -- and removing elements of cooperation from Soviet-American rivalry." All this is subordinated to confrontation, and not only with our country, in the main direction for Washington politicians and strategists -- the military direction.

In point of fact, the same thing is even acknowledged in official documents of the Washington administration. Thus, the "Defense Directives for 1984-1988" state: "The United States must declare economic and technical war on the Soviet Union in peacetime, develop weapons which the Russians will find it hard to counter with anything, impose disproportionately large military expenditure on them, open up new spheres of military rivalry...."

The material embodiment of such a pretentious and adventurist aim is the huge program which is currently being implemented for the "rearmament of America" with the illusory aim of achieving U.S. superiority over the USSR and NATO superiority over the Warsaw Pact. The core of the program is the creation and deployment of a number of nuclear first-strike systems both inside and outside the United States itself, primarily in Western Europe. The United States is putting its "star wars" program into top gear. It is drawing certain NATO allies into this disastrous plan, making them accomplices in a new and still more dangerous round of the arms race.

Washington's aim of deliberately using strong-arm pressure methods and threats in international relations is leading to the further exacerbation of the already dangerous situation in the world. Even nuclear blackmail is not ruled out here, having its origins in the atom bomb raids on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, which, as it known, were carried out not out of any military necessity but for the purpose of intimidating the Soviet Union and making it "compliant." Since then Washington has resorted repeatedly to nuclear threats. In the period 1946 through 1975 alone, according to the Brookings Institution's figures, the question of the possible use of nuclear weapons was considered 19 times -- against the USSR, the PRC, the DPRK, and Vietnam. And in the early eighties American Government circles discussed the question of the possible use of nuclear weapons in the Near East.

The world public perceived as a gross provocation the militarist "games" conducted on the present U.S. Administration's initiative and simulating the American leadership's actions in a nuclear war. In this venture the role of the president was played by W. Rogers, former secretary of state. This "flexing of nuclear muscles" was of a particularly sinister and provocative nature against the background of the fact that many thousands of units of U.S. nuclear weapons are permanently deployed in various parts of the world and, according to U.S. and NATO military strategies, can be used by them first.

The adventurism of U.S. strategy can also be perceived in the plans and practice of the use of conventional weapons in, for example, the piratical actions against Grenada, Lebanon, and Libya, which the Pentagon calls "low-intensity conflicts." The use of American conventional weapons by gangs of counterrevolutionaries against the peoples of Nicaragua, Afghanistan, and other countries with progressive regimes is on a growing scale.

Pentagon plans also envisage the possible escalation of local conflicts into a "conventional world" war -- by way of limitless "horizontal" escalation. There are also plans for so-called "vertical" escalation, which, according to the Pentagon strategists' designs, would open up the way for a conventional war to develop into a nuclear war. The Pentagon believes that the criterion for military superiority is the ability to "dominate in escalation," that is, to ensure American predominance at all levels of the development of any conflict.

The gamble on launching "economic" and "technical" wars against the Soviet Union and on using the arms race for this occupies an important place in the strategy of total confrontation. Here, too, patently unrealizable goals are set. History has repeatedly disgraced bourgeois prophets who have predicted the Soviet Union's economic exhaustion. Our country now possesses everything it needs to make a proper reply to any challenge from imperialism.

"Psychological warfare" is an invariable constituent part of the strategy of total confrontation. It is being waged against the world of socialism and against the liberated countries which have chosen the path of independent development. "The 'psychological war' unleashed by imperialism," the 27th CPSU Congress pointed out, "can only be described as a special form of aggression, of information imperialism, trampling on the peoples' sovereignty, history and culture. It is also direct political and psychological preparation for war...This is the only possible interpretation of actions whereby people are taught to look through a gunsight at any society not to imperialism's liking."

The main direction of "psychological warfare" is unbridled anti-Sovietism and anticommunism. Its methods and substance -- chauvinism and the preaching of "American exclusivity," propaganda of violence and attempts to justify U.S. claims to imperial hegemony -- also square perfectly with the doctrine of piracy and plunder which is officially called "neoglobalism." "Psychological warfare" operations are conducted with the help of a giant propaganda machine (newspapers, magazines, radio, television, movies, and so forth). The tone is set by statesmen and politicians of all ranks and by top military officers.

Examples of such operations are provided by the present vociferous propaganda campaigns against the USSR's proposal to end nuclear tests and for the continuation of the race for nuclear and other arms, and in justification of the undeclared wars against Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Cambodia, and Angola and the aggression against Libya. The U.S. Administration has taken on the leading role in this propaganda orgy. An apt description of its activity was provided by Canadian Professor (F. Knelman) in his book "Reagan, God, and the Bomb. From Myth to Politics Under Conditions of the Nuclear Arms Race." "Ultraconservative forces which preach double-dyed anticommunism, believe in the inevitable end of the world, and argue that the "commanding place in the world' belongs to the United States," the author states, "have acceded to power in the United States...The activity of the administration, which has at its disposal the tools of destruction of the 20th and even the 21st century, is directed by people who think in terms of the 19th century." This is the somber reality of present-day America.

As Comrade M.S. Gorbachev has pointed out, the policy of total opposition and military confrontation has no future. Fleeing into the past is not an answer to the challenges of the future but, rather, an act of despair, but this does not make such a stance any less dangerous.

SDI MEANS 'DANGEROUS CONSEQUENCES' FOR EUROPE

LD132255 Moscow in English to Great Britain and Ireland 1900 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] In a letter to Radio Moscow, Mr David Dickenson of Northwood asks: How will Moscow reciprocate if the United States deploys weapons in space? The question is answered by Nikolay Borin of our staff:

In a public statement earlier this week the Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev gave a clear-cut answer to your question, Mr Dickenson. Addressing residents of Tolyatti, a city on the Volga, Mikhail Gorbachev said: If, despite common sense, the United States persists in its line, we shall find a convincing way to reciprocate and not necessarily in space. There is nothing the United States can do that we can't in our case, the Soviet leader said. A ban on space-strike armaments is not a matter of being afraid to fall behind, but a matter or responsibility. This is why, Mr Dickenson, the Soviet Union's reply to the program of stars wars continues to be a call for a ban on deploying strike-weapons in space, just as the exploration of space for the benefit of the people of the earth remains the Soviet Union's alternative to the Strategic Defense Initiative.

It's not by chance that the words "response" and "responsibility" have one and the same root. How we respond to many challenging problems is the measure of our responsibility today. As you probably know, Mr Dickenson, the responsibility of making a choice faces not only Moscow but the capitals of Western Europe also. And it is also well known that not all of them passed the test of responsiblity when they replied to Washington's call to join this new arms race, a race which a West German author has aptly said creates a new front in the universe. By agreeing to participate in the Strategic Defense Initiative, London, Bonn, and now Rome have created a precedent fraught with the most dangerous consequences for European security. The Strategic Defense Initiative, being an extremely destabilizing system, will do nothing for the defense of Europe.

American experts, members of the Union of Concerned Scientists, feel that technically the defense of Western Europe from space is even less feasible than the defense of the United States itself. Yet, instead of taking the simple and clear-cut road to a nuclear-free Europe offered by the Warsaw Treaty countries, some of the West European capitals, including Bonn and London, are increasingly leaning towards the idea of a European Strategic Defense Initiative, a Euro-SDI. The plan is dangerous because it conceals from Europeans that the United States regard it as a useful appendage to the star wars program. The commander of the NATO armed forces in Europe, the American General Bernard Rogers, admits that a pool of West European military firms could enable the United States to buy military equipment in Western Europe at more favorable prices.

At the same time, a Euro-SDI threatens Europe not only from space. As you, Mr Dickenson, have probably noticed, the idea of such a European project originated in Bonn, where it was advanced by the Federal German Defense Minister Woerner. The minister has every support on this from Josef Strauss, a man notorious for his revanchist views and the leader of one of the most extreme right-wing parties in that country. Some of the West German politicians of this type regard SDI and Euro-SDI as something in the nature of compensation for the ban preventing Federal Germany from having nuclear weapons.

This is the reason, Mr Dickenson, why the Soviet Union is in no hurry to respond militarily to the efforts of the United States and a number of (?other) NATO countries to create a new generation of space weapons. The entire history of the postwar period, beginning from the creation of nuclear weapons, shows that Moscow has only been compelled to reciprocate challenges from the United States and its partners in an arms buildup. Today such military challenges and responses have become much more dangerous and I would like therefore to conclude our conversation today with the words from your letter, Mr Dickenson, that I fully support: Let's hope that Americans see sense over the star wars issue.

ISRAELYAN LAUDS RESPONSE TO GORBACHEV PROGRAM

[Text] The Disarmament Conference is continuing its work in the Geneva Palace of Nations. Our correspondent, Vladimir Dmitriyev, interviewed Viktor Levonovich Israelyan, head of the Soviet delegation, who spoke about the reaction aroused at the conference by the 15 January statement of Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev:

[Begin Israelyan recording] The fraternal socialist countries gave us their full support, both in explaining this document, and in joint work at the beginning of the talks on this document at our conference. The representatives of the nonaligned states, Cuba, India, Algeria, Mexico, Argentina and many others, approved the basic tenets of Mikhail Sergeyevich's statement in their speeches, which shows that the Soviet Union's 15 January program is in harmony with the aspirations of the Nonaligned Movement.

The prolongation of the moratorium on any nuclear explosions by the Soviet Union and our proposal to begin multilateral talks at the conference on ending such tests also aroused an exceptionally favorable reaction among many states. But in this question too, placing the affair on a practical level, so to speak, was unsuccessful because of the opposition of the United States, which, as is known, stops in its tracks any proposals, bilateral, trilateral, or mutilateral.

The new ideas contained in Mikhail Sergeyevich's statement on the questions of banning chemical weapons, also met with support. In a word, the work is going on very actively and intensively. The Soviet Union, and the other socialist countries with the support of the nonaligned states, persistently aims at getting the good statements, with which the leaders of the Western world associate themselves from time to time, should be implemented as conventions, treaties, agreements on the limitation of the arms race and disarmament. [end recording]

U.S. UPHOLDING 'LOGIC' OF ARMS RACE AT GENEVA

[V. Dmitriyev report from the "Novosti" newscast]

[Text] A regular session of the disarmament conference is continuing its work in Geneva. At the center of attention of those taking part -- and they are the representatives of 40 countries -- is the large-scale initiative of the USSR. The initiative consists of a step-by-step plan for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction. This initiative was supported by the delegations of the socialist countries, and the nonaligned and neutral states responded to it in a positive way.

There are forces at the conference, however, that are opposed to the search for practical solutions in implementing the plan for the elimination of nuclear weapons. These are, first and foremost, the United States. The American delegation, while stating in words the adherence of the United States to peace and disarmament, in fact upholds the logic of the arms race, following instructions from Washington, of course. This kind of approach certainly does not accord with the Geneva spirit. The Soviet side has stressed repeatedly that it is essential to ensure a changeover to intense work aimed at concrete results on the priority issues of the agenda of the conference. One of these is a ban on nuclear weapons tests. The proposal of our country that multilateral talks be started here on halting such tests has given rise to favorable reaction on the part of many states. We are studying with great attention and interests the Soviet initiatives set out in the statement of Gorbachev, the general secretary, says Rolf Ekeus, the head of the Swedish delegation. I believe that the disarmament conference will be able to start examining in practical terms the issues concerning the reduction of nuclear armaments in the very near future, for it is upon the solution of this that the fate of mankind depends.

COMPARISON OF PENTAGON SPOKESMAN ON BINARY WEAPONS

Moscow in Portuguese to Portugal at 2100 GMT on 12 April broadcasts a TASS Washington correspondent's report on U.S. plan to deply binary chemical weapons in Europe. The Moscow Portuguese version has been compared with the TASS version published in the 11 April Soviet Union DAILY REPORT, page AA 10 and found to be identical with the following variations:

Paragraph one, last line reads: ...on that issue.

These statements by Welch at a hearing of a subcommittee of the Senate Armed Forces Committee showed with the utmost clarity that the Pentagon intends, in the near future, to start implementing its plans to create in Europe a new hotbed of great danger to both people and the environment.

He said that...(adding paragraph omitting phrase on first line of paragraph two.)

Paragraph two, line three reads: chemical rearmament program. According to Thomas picking up line five, omitting sentence, deleting lines seven and eight.

Rest of the item reads as follows: Also completed is the first stage of proving ground testing of another kind of binary munitions: the "Big Eye" air bombs. On describing the "Big Eye" chemical air bombs as a critically indispensable arms system, the Pentagon representative sincerely confessed that they are destined for launching strikes on objectives deep in enemy territory. This provides further evidence that the deployment of new U.S. chemical weapons in West Europe is in no way intended as a means of defending the Europeans.

Attempting to justify these sinister plans, Welch opted to use the worn-out propaganda fabrications regarding the United States alleged weakness in the field of chemical weapons. Yet the facts attest to the contrary. At present the United States has the world's biggest chemical weapons arsenals. In U.S. bases abroad alone, there are 55,000 tons of highly toxic nerve-gas munitions in store, as well as grenades, artillery shells, air bombs -- all in all, more than 90 types.

It should be recalled here that Washington unilaterally refused to continue negotiating with the USSR as soon as there emerged the slightest hope of a prospect of an agreement that might prevent the United States from carrying out its chemical rearmament program which, it would appear, has long since been achieved....(rewording paragraphs three and four, adding final paragraph.)

SHEVARDNADZE RECEIVES INTERNATIONAL PARLIAMENTARIANS

LD111654 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1540 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, 11 Apr (TASS) -- E.A. Shevardnadze, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and USSR minister of foreign affairs, today received the leaders of the international organization "Parliamentarians for Global Actions," (O. Grimsson), (R. Ter Beek), and (N. Dunlop).

E.A. Shevardnadze stressed the immutable aspiration of the Soviet Union to strive for the total and universal elimination of nuclear weapons by the end of this century. An important practical step on this road would be the cessation of all nuclear weapons tests. It was noted that on the Soviet side, serious efforts are being undertaken to solve the problem of ending nuclear tests. With this aim, in August 1985, a unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions was established, and later extended. But the other side, the United States, refused to follow this example and join the moratorium. Completely ignoring the demands of the broad world public to end explosions, on 10 April, the United States again carried out a nuclear weapons test. They thereby frustrated the possibility of making the moratorium mutual, of getting down to curtailing the nuclear arms race in practice.

The USSR will continue to struggle persistently for the total banning of nuclear weapons tests. It is ready without delay to begin talks in any form, during which, of course, issues of monitoring [kontrol] would be examined. The Soviet position envisages the use of both national technical means of monitoring, and international procedures, including on-site inspection.

The representatives of the organization "Parliamentarians for Global Actions" told of the work being carried out by their organization in favor of nuclear disarmament, noting that at the present time, they regard the cessation of nuclear weapons tests as a prime task. They highly commended the Soviet Union's efforts in this area of the struggle against the nuclear threat and spoke in favor of continuing the battle against nuclear tests.

'INTERNATIONAL SITUATION: QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS'

LD120222 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0930 GMT 11 Apr 86

[From the "International Situation: Questions and Answers" program presented by Vyacheslav Lavrentyev, with Gennadiy Shishkin, Oleg Maksimenko, Igor Surguchev, and Viktor Levin -- not further identified]

[Excerpts] [Lavrentyev] The editorial office has been getting many letters lately in which radio listeners express their indignation at the attitude of the U.S. Administration toward the fate of the world. Surely the U.S. Government understands how serious the world situation is, and how dangerous it is now in the nuclear age to play with fire, writes Comrade Barydina from Chelyabinsk. There is probably no more noble nor more sensible aim than to destroy nuclear weapons, says a letter from Khrunov in Syzran. Why does Reagan not want to join the Soviet moratorium on nuclear explosions, or to accept other aspects of our peace proposals? I have asked Gennadiy Arkadiyevich Shishkin, Political Observer, to answer this and a number of other questions concerning Soviet-U.S. relations. Gennadiy Arkadiyevich, please.

[Shishkin] Initially, Washington justified its reluctance to stop nuclear explosions with the fact that there is, allegedly, no effective means of verification [kontrol]. But this, of course, was just a ruse. The most authoritative specialists, including Americans, have concluded that the cessation of nuclear testing can be controlled effectively by national means.

In addition, the Soviet Union has for a long time now been stating its readiness to agree to international verification and to certain on-site verification [kontrol na mestakh] measures. This clear position was confirmed decisvely by Comrade Gorbachev from the rostrum of the 27th CPSU Congress. We have said repeatedly -- the USSR is open to verification. Our interest in it is no less than others'. All-embracing and very strict verification [proverka] is probably the most important element of the disarmament process. In our view, the essence of the matter is as follows: There can be no disarmament without verification [kontrol], and there is no sense in verification [kontrol] without disarmament.

The speech by the CPSU general secretary on Soviet television on 29 March, and his proposal to hold a meeting with the U.S. President in any European capital to reach an accord on stopping all nuclear explosions, gave a powerful new impetus to the struggle of peace-loving forces to ban the testing of nuclear weapons. Appeals, calls, and resolutions urgently calling for the Soviet proposal on holding a summit meeting between the USSR and United States on the cessation of all nuclear tests to be accepted have been reaching the U.S. Administration. Reagan's refusal to meet is indicative of the moral and political weakness of the U.S. position and of a lack of readiness for positive dialogue. In essence, the U.S. Administration -- as was already clear from Reagan's statement of 14 March in response to a joint message from the leaders of Argentina, India, Mexico, Tanzania, Sweden, and Greece -- is deliberately substituting observation of the continuation of these tests in place of measures to verify compliance with an accord on the cessation of nuclear tests. In inviting the Soviet Union to send its scientists to the United States to observe the implementation of nuclear tests, Reagan has tried to divert attention from the U.S. refusal to join the moratorium and begin talks on full cessation of nuclear testing. The true underlying reason for the White House's position is evident: To Washington, renunciation of nuclear tests is undesirable since it runs counter to the true aims of the United States -- the achievement of military supremacy. This aim runs counter to the Geneva agreements, when both sides made statements about the impermissibility of nuclear war and the impossibility of winning such a war, and that the sides will not strive for nuclear supremacy.

There exists a direct, immediate correlation between relying on the continuation of nuclear tests and the star wars program. Nuclear tests are a means for creating new forms of armaments, such as nuclear pumped lasers for example, including those intended for deployment in space. The principled, honest Soviet position on the issue of stopping nuclear tests corresponds to the demands of the widest circles of the international public. The Soviet position is practically identical to the position expressed in the appeal of six states from the five continents. Apart from this, at its last session, the UN General Assembly spoke in favor with a majority of votes, for ceasing the testing of nuclear weapons. The parties of the Socialist International adopt a similar position. It is supported not only by communists and social democrats, but by liberals, conservatives, Christians, eminent public figures in the fields of science and culture, and by millions of ordinary people.

So, for 8 months already, the Soviet Union unilaterally has not conducted nuclear tests. Over the same period, the United States has carried out eight officially declared nuclear explosions and is preparing to carry out still more. The U.S. is doing this in a demonstrative way, haughtily, disregarding the opinion of the world community.

The Soviet Union will be forced to resume nuclear explosions if the United States persists in carrying out its own tests. The Soviet Union cannot inflict damage on its security. The possible resumption of Soviet tests is not the choice of the Soviet Union, but a step forced on it by the United States. In addition, the Soviet Union is full of determination to continue its tireless efforts for the cessation of all nuclear tests.

Humanity is standing at a crossroads that demands definite responsibility. The consequences of the nuclear race can become dangerously unpredictable. It is necessary to act jointly: This situation affects one and all.

Recently, high-ranking figures of the U.S. Administration have been expressing dissatisfaction at the open diplomacy of the Soviet Union; that is, that the Soviet leadership is acquainting the world public with its initiatives. Gennadiy Andreyevich Chushkin from Cheboksary writes: If the U.S. Government is really striving, as it asserts, for the strengthening of peace, then what is it in the Soviet approach which it finds disturbing?

The U.S. Administration, in its characteristic demagogic manner, is constantly striving to present itself as something that it is not. We have frequently been able to observe how the Washington hawks have now donned the garb of the peacemakers -- now of the opponents of nuclear wars, now of the supporters of stopping the arms race. But with the slightest check of the facts as to their veracity, the official actors on the Washington stage flop ignominiously. It is precisely thus that matters stand with respect to the U.S. attitude toward open diplomacy.

Everyone knows very well that the pioneer in this was Soviet Russia, which decisively broke with secret diplomacy and published all the secret, predatory treaties and appealed over the heads of governments directly to the people to take the cause of peace into their hands. Trying to rerun history, the U.S. State Department in February 1983, came out with its own program, bombastically titled, "The Democracy of Public Diplomacy." Avoiding discussion in Congress, President Reagan rushed, by way of the publication of Directive No 77, to begin the practical application of this program. Very quickly both the reason for the rush and the fact that this brand new, routine Washington doctrine had and has nothing in common either with democracy or with public diplomacy became clear. The so-called public diplomacy turned out in fact to be nothing other than a political supplement to the U.S. interventionist Rapid Deployment Forces within the framework of neoglobalism. If the United States, with the aid of the Rapid Deployment Forces, is attempting to exert military pressure on young states, then the aim of the new program is to undermine them from within, to create a fifth column within them with the aid of bribery, blackmail, and other dirty methods to bring people to power who are acceptable to the United States.

True, open diplomacy which expresses the hopes of the people and, given the involvement of the people, truly democratically discusses and resolves some of the most important questions which disturb humanity is deeply alien and repulsive to the very essence of capitalism. And one need not be surprised that Washington literally went into a state of shock when it came up against the truly open diplomacy of the Soviet Union.

We are all witnesses to the enthusiasm with which, throughout the world, the Soviet program for the annihilation of weapons of mass destruction by the end of this century, put forth by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev on 15 January, was received. The program by common admission, is historic in terms of its scope and significance. Up until now, we have all been observing the incredible commotion it has aroused in the Washington corridors of power. This thorough panic has only intensified as a result of the fact that at the 27th CPSU Congress it was stressed once again that the Soviet Union intends to strive persistently for the implementation of this program, regarding this as the central purpose of its foreign policy for the forthcoming years.

This general purpose of the policy of the Soviet Union is fortified by the fact that the Soviet leadership, in the best traditions of Leninist open diplomacy, has appealed with its proposals not only by way of the traditional diplomatic channels, but directly to world public opinion and to the people.

For more than a month, Washington has quite simply been refusing to respond in any way to the Soviet initiative. When finally however, they gathered up their spirits in Washington, they did so with unconcealed irritation. Even U.S. Secretary of State Shultz stated that in order to surmount the stalemate in Soviet-U.S. relations in the sphere of verification of weapons, it is necessary to activate so-called quiet diplomacy, the essence of which, according to Shultz, should consist in the discussion of problems through closed channels.

As we can see, there is not even the scent of any true public diplomacy in the approach of Washington to come of the most important issues of the present day. However, in connection with the utterances of Shultz, many observers throughout the world question how it is possible to reconcile the call for quiet diplomacy, the aim of which is supposedly the search for ways of verifying weapons, with the fact that in his statement the secretary of state at the same time affirmed the negative position of Washington with respect to holding a summit in the near future in Europe to conclude an agreement on prohibiting nuclear tests.

[Lavrentyev] Radio listener Goryechev from Rostov-na-Donu asks us to talk in more detail about the experimental printing of the newspaper PRAVDA in France. First of all, I will state one reservation: Since in every capitalist country newspapers belong to private entrepreneurs, the experimental printing of the newspaper PRAVDA, too, is not being done on an inter-state exchange basis, but as a private initiative.

The initiators in France are Philippe Jost, deputy editor in chief of the weekly VENDREDI, SAMEDI, DIMANCHE, and Michel Gigant, editor in chief of the sports review AUTO. With a group of partners they have translated this year's 7 January PRAVDA, which was published in France on 23 January, with a print-run of 260,000 copies. On the very same day, at the initiative of U.S. publisher Charles Cox, a trial issue of PRAVDA came out in the English language in Minnesota.

How is one to explain this most curious phenomenon in the bourgeois press? The Soviet paper appears at a time when U.S. publishers are relishing the topic of alleged human rights violations in the Soviet Union; and the press of French newspaper magnate Hersant is inflating as much as possible the theme of Russian spies, who are allegedly threatening the security of France, at this time of an abundant flow of anti-Sovietism.

Moreover, it is translated word for word, with no comment. The reason for this would seem to be twofold: First of all, there is growing interest in our country. Obviously, people are tired of all kinds of propaganda distortion, they want to get information without prejudiced commentaries and idle conjecture, so to speak, at first hand.

Nor is it accidental that the trial issues of PRAVDA should come out at the beginning of this year. On the eve of the 27th CPSU Congress particularly, world interest in our country increased. During the party forum, 2 billion foreign television viewers found out from direct transmissions how Soviet Communists live. And the influential U.S. newspaper THE NEW YORK TIMES having published in one of its issues the text of the Political Report, increased its circulation by 200,000 copies, which in turn brought its publishers considerable profits. It is curious to note that we have before us a rare case of Western journalists and publishers acting in the spirit of the Helsinki Final Act, that is, bringing people the truth about signatory countries.

The organizer of the experimental issue of PRAVDA in France is now thinking of a similar issue of LITERATURNAYA GAZETA. Well, good luck to a good undertaking.

Asked if it is possible that Washington might deal with Chon Tu-hwan in South Korea in the same way as it did with Duvalier, Lavrentyev recalls a recent WASHINGTON POST article headlined "General Chon's Throne is Rocking More and More," highlighting how the United States is watching events there very carefully, fearing that the effects of continued repressions of the increasing number of demonstrations could undermine the U.S. strategy in the region.

REPORTS ON IPU CONFERENCE IN MEXICO CITY

View World Issues

PM140926 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 11 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[TASS report: "At the Interparliamentary Union Conference"]

[Text] Mexico City, 10 Apr -- Parliamentarians from almost 100 countries meeting in the capital of Mexico for the 75th IPU Conference have finished discussing the problems of preserving peace and averting nuclear catastrophe, which are vitally important for all mankind.

The draft resolutions, which the conference's drafting commission has begun examining, show that the parliamentarians are aware of the responsibility they bear for curbing the arms race, achieving effective disarmament, and preventing the militarization of outer space. Parliamentary groups from various countries are insisting that the United States follow the USSR's example and stop nuclear explosions, which would pave the way for a general and complete ban on nuclear weapons tests. Many delegations share the Soviet standpoint that ending the arms race is a prerequisite for resolving ever-worsening global problems.

Conference participants drew attention to the growing scale of international terrorism and called for an end to all forms and manifestations of it. Speakers stressed that state terrorism was the most dangerous form of terrorism.

The United States, representative of the Portuguese parliamentary group J. Lemos stated, is grossly flouting every norm of international law under the slogan of "combating terrorism." All of us, and above all the U.S. parliamentary group, must do our utmost to end the Reagan administration's glaring violation of the basic rights of peoples in various regions, particularly in Central America.

If you are to successfully combat terrorist activity, a representative of the Soviet delegation said, you must first and foremost help actively to eliminate its causes: Colonialism; aggression; violations of states' political independence, national sovereignty, and territorial integrity; interference in their internal affairs; racism; and the policy of apartheid and genocide. When analyzing international economic relations the conference stressed the need to restructure them on the basis of justice and equal rights for all countries.

The disastrous state in which the developing countries find themselves as a result of Western powers' imperialist, neocolonialist policy, speakers noted, is now a very major world problem.

Delegates from Cuba, Mexico, and a number of other states demanded that Western powers repudiate protectionism in trade with Third World countries and cease plundering debtor countries' raw material resources.

The Soviet Union, L.A. Borodin, deputy of the USSR Supreme Soviet and first secretary of the Astrakhan CPSU Obkom, stated, favors setting up an economic security system which would offer every state equal protection from discrimination. Along with disarmament, it would provide a reliable foundation for international security in general.

It is our firm conviction, the Soviet delegate stressed, that the developing countries progress along the path of economic and social development and their achievement of genuine independence crucially depend on progress in strengthening world peace and international security, ending the arms race, and achieving disarmament. Therefore the struggle against the nuclear danger and the arms race and in favor of preserving and consolidating peace will continue to be the main thrust of the USSR's foreign policy activity.

Voss Addresses Meeting

PM141553 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 13 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[TASS report: "At the Interparliamentary Union Conference"]

The IPU Conference, which is continuing its work here, has been addressed by Soviet parliamentary delegation head A.E. Voss, chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Soviet of Nationalities and first deputy chairman of the USSR parliamentary group.

Today the development of world events, he said, has reached a point where particularly responsible decisions are required, a point where inaction or delay could lead to nuclear catastrophe. Speaking about the need to struggle to end the arms race, the Soviet delegation head recalled that the Soviet Union had taken a whole series of unilateral steps to that end: It had introduced a moratorium on deploying medium-range missiles in Europe, reduced their number, and suspended all nuclear explosions -- not having carried out nuclear explosions for more than 8 months now.

We are forced to note, A.E. Voss said, that the U.S. Administration is continuing to pursue its adventurist course of seeking to achieve military superiority, is whipping up the arms race and seeking to spread it to outer space, and is grossly interfering in a number of states' internal affairs.

In its attempts to "rectify" a situation that is unfavorable to it, Washington has revived the concept of "new globalism," the Soviet delegation head continued. This policy foments regional conflicts and threatens international peace and security. It is directed against all independent people. A.E. Voss pointed out, in particular, the U.S. blatant flouting of the norms of international law in Central America, where a policy of pressure and threats is being pursued against the sovereign state of Nicaragua and attempts are being made to impose alien systems on that country's people and deprive them of the opportunity to decide their own destiny. The Soviet Union, which advocates a just political settlement in Central America, pays tribute to the Latin American countries' efforts in that regard.

We are deeply convinced, the Soviet delegation head stressed in conclusion, that it is more important than ever to find ways of peaceful cooperation among states and to create an all-embracing international security system.

The recent 27th CPSU Congress formulated the bases of such a system in which every aspect of the modern concept of international security -- military, political, economic, and humanitarian -- is united together. Soviet parliamentarians are ready to cooperate in this direction with all those who really cherish the ideals of peace.

SIX WORLD LEADERS SEND MESSAGES TO REAGAN, GORBACHEV

Praise Gorbachev Proposals

LD141852 Moscow TASS in English 1806 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 14 TASS -- The leaders of Argentina, India, Tanzania, Sweden, Mexico and Greece have expressed satisfaction with the Soviet Union's position to the effect that the renunciation of nuclear testing is an important step towards an end to the nuclear arms race.

In a message to Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, which was circulated here today, they spoke highly of the Soviet Union's declaration of a unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions, subsequent decision to extend it after March 31 until the first nuclear blast in the United States, and expressed readiness to use the help of the six [words indistinct] verify an end to nuclear testing.

The leaders of the six countries hailed Mikhail Gorbachev's statement to the effect that nuclear weapons should be destroyed completely for all time.

They said that as long as there existed nuclear weapons, the risk of their being used, either accidentally or deliberately, could not be ruled out completely.

The message urged a complete elimination of nuclear weapons, saying that an end to all nuclear testing should be a first step on this road.

Express 'Regret' to Reagan on Test

LD141855 Moscow TASS in English 1837 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 14 TASS -- The leaders of Argentina, India, Tanzania, Sweden, Mexico and Greece have expressed profound regret at the latest U.S. underground nuclear test.

A letter, which was sent on their behalf to U.S. President Ronald Reagan in April and whose text was circulated here today, voiced the deep conviction that an immediate end to all nuclear weapons testing was a first step to completely eliminating those weapons of mass destruction.

CONSULTATIONS ON BERNE-CSCE EXPERTS MEETING BEGIN

LD111425 Moscow TASS in English 1208 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Berne April 11 TASS -- Preparatory consultations to organize a meeting of experts on contacts between people are nearing completion here. The meeting is to be called by the decision of the Madrid follow-up meeting of the states participating in the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe [CSCE].

It has become known in the quarters close to the Berne consultations that serious differences concerning the agenda and the organizational framework of the meeting have made themselves felt during the consultations. Acting in strict compliance with the Madrid mandate and the practice that has taken shape, the delegations of the socialist countries have suggested that the conference be held in three stages approximately equal in duration. At the first stage it is proposed to discuss questions related to the development of contacts between people, agencies and organizations.

At the second stage the meeting could consider possible suggestions and recommendations on questions under discussion, and at the third stage -- formalize the results of the meeting, that is, work out a final document acceptable to all delegations.

This constructive approach on the part of the socialist countries has run into resistance of the United States and some other NATO countries. Their proposals aim for revising the Madrid mandate and the practice of the activities of expert meetings within the framework of the CSCE -- the practice that has taken shape over a decade. A number of delegations taking part in the consultations have serious doubts that the NATO countries are striving for a serious and business-like discussion of questions. Their proposals make one think that the NATO countries are working toward turning the Berne meeting of experts into an arena of propaganda struggle and confrontation. This is precisely what their demands on making plenary meetings open to the public and the press are aimed at.

All this evokes serious concern of all those who are sincerely interested in a business-like and constructive work of the meeting of experts from 33 European countries, the United States and Canada on contacts between people.

CPSU HAILS WORKING CLASS IN GREETINGS FOR MAY DAY

LD122124 Moscow TASS in English 2014 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 13 TASS -- In its appeals on the occasion of the May Day, the day of international solidarity, the CPSU Central Committee hailed on the occasion of the holiday the working class of capitalist countries which is waging an intense struggle against the oppression of the monopolies, for its rights and vital interests. The appeals were published here today.

The CPSU Central Committee sent its fraternal greetings to communist and workers' parties. It urged the Communists of all countries to strengthen class solidarity and cooperation in the struggle for peace and socialism.

The CPSU Central Committee also sent its fraternal greetings to the courageous fighters for the interests of working people who were languishing in prison cells, and demanded: "Freedom to prisoners of imperialist and reactionary forces".

The CPSU Central Committee sent fraternal greetings to peoples of socialist countries. It proclaimed: "Long live world socialism -- a powerful and influential force of today. Let cooperation between socialist countries grow stronger".

INITIAL REACTION TO U.S. BOMBING OF LIBYAN SITES

Air Strikes on Tripoli Reported

Strikes at Reagan's Instruction

U.S. Ignored Allies' Stand

LD150218 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0153 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Washington, 15 Apr (TASS) -- The United States has made a series of carefully planned air strikes on Libya. As a White House representative said, the operation was carried out on personal instruction from President Reagan. In the spokesman's words, U.S. aircraft subjected Tripoli, the Libyan capital, and also the town of Benghazi to bombing. From the utterances of the White House representative it has become clear that in making the decision about the new barbaric act of state terrorism against Libya, Washington completely ignored the stand of its West European allies. Yesterday participants of an extraordinary session of the EEC Council of Ministers at foreign minister level in The Hague came out against the unleashing by the United States of military actions against Libya. "This decision by the EEC, the White House representative stated, did not play any part at all." [quotation marks as received]

The White House representative did not rule out the possibility that the United States might carry out new armed acts against Libya. We are prepared to do this once again, he said.

CBS television has reported F-111 bombers in particular, which are based on the territory of Great Britain, took part in the raid on Libya.

Action to End in Failure

LD150341 Moscow TASS in English 0334 GMT 15 Apr 86

[The United States Aggression Against Libya: "Neoglobalism" Means Crimes and Bloodshed -- TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow April 15 -- TASS political news analyst Vladimir Goncharov writes: American imperialism has perpetrated a new bloody crime:

From words - rude and inadmissible verbal attacks against Libya and its leadership, from military demonstrations and provocations against that sovereign and freedomloving country Washington has moved to naked aggression. Neoglobalism, the American Administration's officially professed doctrine, has started speaking in its true tongue -- the tongue of bombs, flames and death. The very same tongue that Washington used when dealing with Vietnam as it scorched its people and land with Napalm, the very same tongue that it is using with free Nicaragua while sending hired killers, the Somozists, against its people. The tongue of aggression by means of which it made short shrift of Grenada.

The people of Afghanistan are learning what neoglobalism means as bloody wounds are inflicted upon them by the counter-revolutionaries who are on Washington's payroll and gouge out the eyes of old men and behead youths.

And now it is Libya which has incurred the hatred of the American neoglobalists by its consistent defence of the interests of the Palestinian people, by its support of all forces of independence and liberation in the Middle East, by its independence and liberation in the Middle East, by its independent policy.

The aim of the new bloody American aggression is to try to intimidate the Libyan people and also to show the other nations that the present American Administration will not stop short of using military force to fulfill its hegemonistic political plans. It is yet early to speak of the consequences of this new act of state terrorism by the United States. But the infamous action launched by the American politicians and military will certainly end in ultimate failure. History itself convincingly bears out the inevitability of such an end for the new American aggression.

Details on 'Barbarous' Attack

LD150609 Moscow TASS in English 0600 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 15 TASS -- TASS correspondent Nikolay Turkatenko reports:

The United States made a barbarous attack on Libya on the night of April 14 to 15. U.S. Secretary of Defence Caspar Weinberger has stated that the strike against the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Banghazi was delivered by F-111 bombers from U.S. bases in Britain "with the knowledge of the British Government" and by planes from U.S. aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean.

Laser-guided 500-2,000-pound weapons were used. The Pentagon chief admitted that contact with one of the U.S. aricraft was lost. He said it was difficult to say so far whether the United States sustained any losses.

In a nationwide televised address, President Reagan tried to justify the direct armed aggression against Libya by assertions that the USA was ostensibly fighting terrorism and that the act was taken "in self-defence". In so doing the President referred to -- the U.N. Charter. He threatened that the USA was prepared to deliver new strikes "if necessary". U.S. Secretary of State Goerge Shultz has also resorted to assertions about "self-defence".

The opinion of local analysts is that the attack on Libya by the U.S. Armed Forces indicates that the U.S. Administration on the plea of "fighting terrorism" more and more widely and overtly pursues a policy of state terrorism against the governments of those countries whose policy is unwelcome to Washington.

The aggression against the Arab country has given rise to indignation and protests in the United States. A mass demonstration has taken place outside the gate of the White House under the "Hands off Libya" slogan.

Robert Byrd, the leader of the Democrats in the U.S. Senate, has expressed concern over the fact that the President issued an order to attack Libya in circumvention of the Congress. In an interview to the CNN TV network he said Congress leaders were summoned to the White House ostensibly for consultations when the order to attack had already been issued.

Attack 'Totally Unjustified'

LD150648 Moscow TASS in English 0631 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 15 TASS -- TASS correspondent Georgiy Shelenkov reports:

The United States has commited a barbarous and totally unjustified aggression against a sovereign Arab state -- the Libyan Jamahiriyah. At night and this morning U.S. F-111 strategic fighter-bombers from NATO bases in Britain and carrier-based aircraft of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean bombed twice the residential blocks of the Libyan capital and of the city of Banghazi. Among civilians, there are tens of killed or wounded, including foreigners. An air raid was made on the resident of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, the leader of the Libyan revolution. Libyan radio reported that some members of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi's family were injured.

According to preliminary data, the piratic attack by the U.S. military involved an aggregate of more than thirty aircraft. It has been announced here that Libyan air defense gunners shot down three aircraft.

The United States' armed aggression committed against the independent state -- a U.N. member nation -- in breach of the norms of international law and of the U.N. Charter, has been carried out within the framework of the rabid anti-Libyan campaign which the U.S. Administration has been fanning up for a long time, using as a pretext unfounded accusations have been repeatedly and firmly rejected by the Libyan leadership. In actual fact, the independent anti-imperialist course of Libya, which rejects the U.S. doctrine of "neoglobalism" and consistently comes out in favour of restorating the legitimate rights of the Arabs and in favour of a just and lasting settlement of the Middle East problem, does not obviously suit Washington.

Peace Committee Statement

LD151049 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0957 GMT 15 Apr 86

["Statement by the Soviet Committee for the Defense of Peace" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow, 15 April (TASS) -- On behalf of millions of Soviet supporters of peace, the Soviet Committee for the Defense of Peace expresses anger and indignation at the unprecedented act of aggression committed at the personal command of President Reagan by the U.S. Armed Forces against the Libyan Jamahiriyah. The residential areas of the Libyan capital were subjected to a bombing attack by aircraft that took off from U.S. bases in Britain and from the aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America, cruising near the Libyan coast. There are numerous fatalities [zhertva] among the civilian population in Tripoli.

This piratical raid crowned a campaign that has been going on for many months of gross blackmail, pressure, and military provocation against Libya, which was carried out with the accompaniment of far-fetched accusations against this country. Flouting all standards of international law, the United States has once again displayed open contempt for world public opinion, which demands an end to the threats toward Libya, and has once again demonstrated to the entire world the policy of so-called neoglobalism in action.

Feeling sympathy for Libyan citizens who have suffered in the course of this bandit action, the Soviet people resolutely demand an end to barbaric acts of aggression and terror against Libya and the immediate withdrawal from the Mediterranean of the U.S. Armed Forces, which are sowing death and destruction.

We call on all the world's peace-loving forces to raise their voices in protest and condemnation of the barbaric actions of the U.S. military in the Mediterranean and to demand a prompt end to U.S. aggression against Libya. Soviet peace supporters once again declare their total solidarity with the Libyan people, who are courageously standing up for their inalienable right to live in peace and to freely choose their own road of development.

JANA: At Least 20 U.S. Planes Lost

LD151022 Moscow TASS in English 1015 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 15 TASS -- The American aggressors lost not less than twenty F-111 planes which took off from bases in Great Britain and F-14 planes based on 6th Fleet aircraft-carriers during their barbarous raid today morning, JANA news agency has reported, quoting Libyan anti-air defence sources.

Israelyan Deplores Attack

AU151033 Paris AFP in English 1029 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Geneva, April 15 (AFP) -- Viktor Israelyan, head of the Soviet delegation to the U.N. Disarmament Conference here, said Tuesday that the U.S. air attacks on Libya here a "kind of aggression unacceptable to us".

Mr. Israelyan, speaking at a press conference, described the air raids on Tripoli and Banghazi as "barbaric". He referred to "recent talks in Washington" when: "We tried to do our best to prevent any aggression against Libya". But he regreeted the "very negative character" of the American side at the discussions.

The Soviet delegate considered that the U.S. attack would not prevent individual and state terrorism.

Raid Arouses 'Anger, Indignation'

LD151151 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1030 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Commentary by Sergey Fanton]

[Excerpts] According to preliminary information no less than 35 F-111 bombers were used in the piratical foray by the U.S. Air Force, as well as accompanying fighters and refueling aircraft.

Libyan radio has reported that three U.S. planes were downed by fire from antiaircraft defenses. Immediately after the operation President Reagan spoke on national television. In his speech, he confirmed the attack on Libya was undertaken on his personal order. This act of aggression is essentially a direct continuation of the campaign of blackmail and threats directed at Libya by Washington and the U.S. Administration's unsubstantiated accusations of this country's role in terrorism.

It is characteristic that on the eve of the attack Libya's People's Foreign Liaison Bureau made a statement that stresses that it opposes any form of terrorism, air piracy, and all acts where innocent people become victims. This was a direct answer to the U.S. attacks on Libya in connection with the recent terroristic actions in West Berlin. By deciding to carry out military actions against Libya, Washington completely ignored the position of its West European allies. As a White House representative cynically stated, this EC decision played no role. Special concern was provoked in Great Britain by U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger's remarks that the strike against Libya was delivered with the permission of the British Government with aircraft from U.S. bases in England.

Mass demonstrations are taking place in the United States itself. Hands off Libya, End military actions, are written on the placards brought to the White House by protesters.

Washington's policy of state terrorism and its assertion about the logic of using crude force as the only method in international practice, are causing anger and indignation throughout the world.

TASS Views U.S. 'Aggression'

LD151055 Moscow TASS in English 1045 GMT 15 Apr 86

["U.S. Agression Against Libya and Policy of 'Neoglobalism'" -- TASS identifier]

[Text] [No dateline as received] The present U.S. Administration has long been heading for the banditry which U.S. aircraft are now perpetrating in the Libyan Jamahiriyah. The invasion of Grenada. The undeclared war against Nicaragua, the overt support for Savimbi bandits and the course towards the overthrow of the legitimate Angolan Government. The activisation of the CIA's "dirty operations" around the world -- this is precisely the policy of "neoglobalism" or "low-intensity warfare", proclaimed by the Reagan administration.

After today's U.S. piratic air raids on Tripoli and Banghazi, which have resulted in numerous casualties among civilian population -- children, women and old men -- President Ronald Reagan, while boasting that "our forces have succeeded in their mission", came forward with a false version that the bombing raids were launched in retaliation to the April 5 explosion in the West Berlin nightclub frequented by American servicemen. But who would believe that?

It is noteworthy that even the USA's NATO allies did not take on trust the U.S. official version that the administration ostensibly possesses an "irrefutable evidence" of Libya's involvement in the terrorist act in West Berlin.

It is a fact that long before the explosion in the West Berlin discotheque the U.S. Administration embarked on ousting the people's regime in Libya that displeased Washington.

Way back in 1981, the CIA started implementing the plans of physically eliminating the leader of the Libyan revolution, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. The plan was approved at the highest level.

The fact that Al-Qadhdhafi's residence was chosen as one of the principal targets of the April 15 raids by the U.S. Air Force was additional evidence of the existence of the plan of the American special services. The present administration gave the green light again to their terrorist actions.

Here is what Ibrahim Nafeh, editor-in-chief of the Egyptian newspaper, AL-AHRAM, wrote in the publication the other day: "Not many people know that a conference was held in the White House in mid-June last year at the initiative of the U.S. President's national security adviser. The conference adopted a decision to launch a military action against Libya. The White House, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Department of State gave their consent. It was pointed out that the action should be carried out in coordination with a friendly state in the region."

Nafeh got his information at firm hand because it was Egypt to which the White House assigned the part of a "friendly state" that was to pull the "chestnuts" out of the fire for the Pentagon.

On three occasions, the United States put pressure on the Egyptian leadership with a view to pursuading it to launch armed aggression against neighbouring Libya.

The first attempt of this kind was undertaken soon after the White House conference when the U.S. President's National Security Adviser Poindexter made an urgent trip to Cairo and promised Egypt American military aid and air cover in the event of Egypt's attack on Libya.

The second attempt was made late in December last year, and the third in January this year, when, Nafeh wrote, "Reagan returned again to the plans of dealing strikes at Libya. Another highly-placed White House emissary appeared in Cairo for consultations on this issue." "And the third time, too, the Arab Republic of Egypt rejected the U.S. proposal on taking part in action against the neighboring Arab state..."

The Soviet Union rejects terrorism in principle. We are confident that at the present time the main source of international terrorism is the present American administration that has elevated terrorism and the export of counter-revolution to the status of state policy, and is wielding a "big stick."

Leaders of the U.S. Administration are evidently confident that the "Vietnam syndrome" is over and that now, they say, American imperialism is free to perpetrate arbitrariness and trample with a soldier's boot on sovereignty and national dignity of other states and peoples. However, unlike official Washington, the world has not forgotten the lessons of the adventure in Vietnam.

The world remembers how in 1964-1965 U.S. military with the same kind of insolence and impudence crept into the marshes of Indochina, how the United States tried to "bomb Vietnam back into the Stone Age". And we remember how in 1968-1969 the U.S. crawled out of Vietnam badly battered. The wild outburst of great-power chauvinistic passions and the intoxication with strength in the first years of the Vietnam adventure gave way in 1968 to million-strong demonstrations in New York and other American cities in protest against the dirty war. President Lyndon Johnson had to take away his candidacy and refused to run for president for a second time. Insolence and effrontery of the U.S. military go beyond all limits.

The ruling circles of the U.S. are openly banking on force in order to thrust its will on other countries. However, peoples reject the out-dated policy of diktat in international relations.

No one is given to forget the lessons of history, because they can recur.

REPORT, COMMENT ON NAKASONE'S WASHINGTON VISIT

Camp David Talks Viewed

LD141920 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1445 GMT 14 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Vladimir Tsvetov]

[Text] Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone has had a meeting at Camp David with U.S. President Ronald Reagan. According to Japanese tradition -- particularly pertinent in this case -- Nakasone brought the master of the White House a gift. This was a long list of measures which, Nakasone assures him, are intended to reduce the Japanese trade surplus with the United States, amounting to $50 billion.

As is often the case, the Japanese gift turns out to be magnificent and gaudy but of almost no practical use. The measures elaborated by Japan are hardly likely to reduce the American deficit in its trade with it. This is realized in the White House but there have been no cries of protest. This is not because one should not look a gift horse in the mouth but rather because the White House is calculating that in response to its indulgence Japan will lend its support to the U.S. adventurist foreign policy at the Tokyo meeting of heads of state and government of the seven developed capitalist countries to be held in May.

First, in the field of a joint strategy regarding the Soviet Union: Should it come about during the Tokyo meeting of the Big Seven that one or other of the participants should be afflicted with doubts about the expediency of the present American line of whipping up international tension, Japan will stick up for the United States.

Second, the United States is hoping that, even if at the meeting Japan does not join the Strategic Defense Initiative, it will at least show itself well-disposed toward it.

Then there is another point. At the Tokyo meeting the United States intends to raise the question of a joint struggle against terrorism, which is the language the White House uses to describe American military provocations, the latest of these being against Libya. The U.S. President is hoping that in the person of the Japanese prime minister he will find support for his dangerous actions.

Nakasone Ends Visit

LD150950 Moscow TASS in English 0429 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 15 TASS -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan has completed his two-day visit to the United States during which he had talks with President Reagan.

Speaking at a press conference before flying to Tokyo the head of the Japanese Government promised to take measures to reduce America's deficit in the trade with Japan that is the main source of sharp bilateral contradictions in the economic sphere. Meantime, despite repeated such promises in the past, the United States deficit in the trade with Japan reached 50 billion dollars last year.

Nakasone stressed his government's readiness to continue building up Japan's military might and strengthen its military ties with the United States. But the Reagan administration has failed to make the Japanese premier make formal commitments about Tokyo's participation in the "star wars" programme.

It was admitted by a State Department spokesman that Nakasone had only stated that Japan would "carefully continue studying this matter".

BUSH TOUR FAILS TO FOIST U.S. PLANS ON ARABS

LD141530 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0930 GMT 14 Apr 86

[From the "International Diary" program presented by Vladimir Pashko, report by Cairo correspondent Leonid Rassadin]

[Text] U.S. Vice President Bush's visit to a number of Arab states in the Persian Gulf and the Arabian peninsula has ended. Our correspondent Leonid Rassadin reports from Cairo.

In the course of the current trip, Bush visited Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, and the Yemen Arab Republic. I followed attentively the reports of his talks with the leaders of these Arab countries, and this is what is noteworthy: The United States has yet again failed to foist on the Arabs its truckling conditions for a settlement in the Near East region. Reagan's notorious Near East plan, put forward as far back as several years ago has once again found no support whatsoever in the Arab world. This is understandable, for the U.S. Administration is trying to find the sort of settlement -- if one may call it that -- that will void the legitimate right of the Arab people of Palestine to once and for all set up an independent state on their own soil. The U.S. vice president, in the course of his talks in the four Arab capitals also devoted a good deal of attention to the issue of the situation on the international oil markets. On this issue as well, as the Arab press points out, Bush had to listen to a good deal of criticism about the hostile activity of U.S. and other Western multinational corporations. Between the United States on the one hand and the Arab oil-producing states in the Persian Gulf on the other, as Arab observers emphasize, there are serious disagreements. The results of Bush's current trip to a number of Arab states have confirmed these differences with renewed vigor.

CIA'S CASEY 'FULMINATES' AGAINST JOURNALISTS

LD120322 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0402 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Aleksandr Lyutyy report]

[Text] Washington, 11 Apr (TASS) -- The director of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, William Casey, was not pretending to be angry. Addressing members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors he fulminated against those journalists who "reveal secret information." Practice has shown that in the language of the current administration this category comprises anything that does not suit the intelligence services or the government as a whole. People in Washington are especially irritated that the U.S. press has recently been publishing revelations of CIA subversion in the most varied regions of the world, which contradict all standards of international law. In particular they tell of the close cooperation between the U.S. intelligence services and the anti-Nicaraguan contras, the Afghan dushmans, National Union for the Total Independence of Angola and the terrorists. The truth about the plans in Langley to murder the Libyan leader Al-Qadhdhafi has also been revealed.

Casey unequivocally told journalists that information about such dirty dealings would be better kept to themselves, if they do not want to get themselves into trouble. Coming from him this threat sounded especially sinister. The assembly was well aware of what recently befell, for example, one of the major U.S. television networks ABC. It was enough for it to show a program revealing CIA secret operations against a number of Asian countries when it was promptly "muzzled." It was simply taken over by the Capital City Communications concern. The present head of the CIA, the former founder and chairman of this concern, remains one of its main shareholders. This influence surely helped Casey ensure that this "seditious" TV company was devoured, and he will not doubtless play a significanct role in its editorial policy.

The brainwashing of journalists and machinations by the CIA director clearly have shown once again what Washington's declared "freedom of the press" is worth in practice.

TASS ON GROWTH OF U.S. MILITARY-INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX

LD141724 Moscow TASS in English 1630 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April April 14 TASS -- TASS Political News Analyst Yuriy Kornilov writes:

According to FORTUNE journal, the organ of the U.S. big buisness, the volume of sales of the Pentagon's biggest contractor, the huge "Boeing" aviation and space corporation rose by 23 percent in 1985 on the previous year, while its profits went up by 312 percent, the corresponding figures of "General Dynamics" were 183 and 176, " Rockwell International" -- 42 and 93, "Litton Industries" -- 426 and 233.

These figures are another confirmation of how rapidly the war industry, the economic foundation of the military-industrial complex, is developing in the USA. The Pentagon's orders are now fulfilled by more than 30 thousand large contractors alone. 43 out of 145 branches of the U.S. industry are war-oriented. The United States accounts for over three quarters of the total output of artillery equipment, over two-thirds of the output of shipbuilding of all NATO countries. The most industrialized country of the capitalist world has the most militarized economy, is the driving force of militarism.

When analysing the "FORTUNE" list of the largest war-industry corporation of the USA getting the biggest profits, one cannot overlook the fact that most of those corporations are associated with the implementation of Reagan's so-called Strategic Defence Initiative. And this is not accidental: the programme for "star wars" preparation which, according to experts' estimates will cost 1,500 billion-2,000 billion dollars promises to bring and already brings fabulous profits to war-industry tycoons. If the war industry were asked to invent the most profitable alternative to arms control, it could not come up with a better proposal than the star wars plan, writes the BULLETIN OF ATOMIC SCIENTISTS which appears in the USA.

What kinds of arms are planned to be used in "star wars"? The most important place among them is held by lasers with nuclear pumping for whose development a series of nuclear tests is needed. So there is an obvious direct link between Washington's banking on the continuation of nuclear explosions and SDI programme. This link was pointed out once again by Senator Edward Kennedy the other day. Commenting on another test explosion of a nuclear device, the test code nemed "Mighty Oak" that was conducted in Nevada on April 10, he said with full reason that Washington clearly intends to whittle a "big stick" out of that oak for waging "star wars"...

The figures sited by FORTUNE this indicate not only the growth of the U.S. war industry. They also show who it is that is interested directly in the continuation of nuclear tests that are part of SDI. Arms manufacturers who form the backbone of the U.S. big business and who are closely linked with the Pentagon and military-bureaucratic groups that reign on the Washington political Olympus are those who order ever more nuclear explosions in the USA, the explosions that evoke the mounting indignation and protests of the peaceful people the world over...

REPORTAGE ON QIAN QICHEN VISIT FOR CONSULTATIONS

Visit To Space Flight Center

OW121043 Moscow in Mandarin to China 1600 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] The Chinese delegation headed by Qian Qichen, special envoy of the Chinese Government and Chinese vice foreign minister, and Li Zewang, Chinese ambassador to Moscow, visited the mission control center in a Moscow suburb on 10 April. Qian Qichen is in Moscow to attend the new round of Soviet-Chinese political consultations.

While in the control center, the Chinese guests saw on the TV screen how Soviet Cosmonauts Kizim and Solovyev were working on the Mir space station. Through the radio communications system, the Soviet cosmonauts expressed welcome to the Chinese delegation, saying that they wished very much to have friendly Chinese cosmonauts among their colleagues in space flights. Kizim and Solovyev also asked the Chinese delegation to convey best regards and best wishes to the great Chinese people.

Shevardnadze Receives Qian

LD141702 Moscow TASS in English 1640 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 14 TASS -- Eduard Shevardnadze, a member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee and foreign minister of the USSR, today received Qian Qichen, a deputy foreign minister of the Chinese People's Republic who is the Chinese Government's special envoy to Soviet-Chinese political consultations.

An exchange of opinions took place on Soviet-Chinese relations and certain international problems.

Eduard Shevardnadze called Qian Qichen's attention to the principled assessment given by the 27th Congress of the CPSU to the present-day world situation, which in many ways is at a turning point, and to the basic principles, formulated by the congress, of building an all-embracing system of international security. Stress was laid on the importance of provisions, voiced by Mikhail Gorbachev in the CPSU Central Committee's Political Report to the CPSU Congress, on the issues of Soviet-Chinese relations.

It was pointed out that despite the differences in the USSR's and the CPR's [PRC] approaches to some international problems and countries, the interests of both states objectively coincide where the matter at issue is the struggle for peace and socialism and against the threat of a nuclear war and the arms race, in particular its extension into outer space.

The Soviet Union believes that the reserves of bilateral cooperation are vast and that this cooperation should be based on the principles of equality and mutual benefit, with each country treating with respect its commitments to its friends and allies. A significant contribution to improving the political relationship between the two countries could be made by developing contacts and ties, up to and including a summit meeting.

Taking part in the conversation were Leonid Ilichev, a deputy foreign minister of the USSR who is the Soviet Government's special envoy to Soviet-Chinese political consultations, and Li Zewang, ambassador of the CPR to the USSR.

Consultations End; Qian Departs

LD141745 Moscow TASS in English 1732 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 14 TASS -- The eighth round of the Soviet-Chinese political consultations was held in Moscow from April 7 to April 14.

Leonid Ilichev, USSR deputy foreign minister, and Qian Qichen, special representative of the Chinese Government at the Soviet-Chinese consultations, PRC deputy foreign minister, continued an exchange of views on questions pertaining to normalizing Soviet-Chinese relations and some international issues.

The sides pointed out a broadening of diverse ties and contacts and reaffirmed their striving for a further improvement and development of the relations between the two countries in the political, economic, scientific-technological, cultural and other fields. The consultations proceed in a frank, calm and businesslike atmosphere.

The sides believe the consultations and the dialogue to be useful and agreed to hold the next round of consultations in Beijing in October 1986.

Qian Qichen has left for Beijing today upon completion of the latest round of the Soviet-Chinese political consultations.

TASS CITES PRC 'CONCERN' OVER LIBYA RAIDS

LD151306 Moscow TASS in English 1119 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Beijing, April 15 TASS -- The Chinese Government today expressed profound concern and anxiety over the resumption of U.S. air raids against Libyan territory, and condemned these actions as violating norms of international relations. According to NEW CHINA NEWS AGENCY, a spokesman for the Chinese Foreign Ministry said in connection with the American air strikes at Libyan cities that the U.S. actions sharply worsened the situation in the Mediterranean and the Middle East.

The Chinese Government denounced such actions as attacking the territory of another country and infringing its sovereignty in violation of the norms of internatinal relations, he said. The Chinese Government was against the encroachment upon the territory of a sovereign state under the pretext of striking terrorism, the spokesman added.

SPECIALISTS PREPARE COAL MILL PLAN FOR PRC

LD090708 Moscow TASS in English 0620 GMT 9 Apr 86

[Text] Kharkov April 8 TASS -- A project for the construction of a coal dressing plant in Zanyang, Shanxi Province, has been drawn up by Kharkov experts (Soviet Ukraine) at the request of the PRC coal industry ministry. The mill will put out annually nearly 800 thousand tons of coke concentrate for metal smelting. It is planned to use at the factory new hydraulic Cyclones, which are successfully employed in Soviet industry. These mills are without an analogue in foreign technology, they make it possible to give up the traditional multi-stage technology requiring considerable electricity consumption. They at once "separate" coal into the end products of dressing: ready concentrate and also fuel of ordinary calorific value and barren rock.

JAPANESE BUSINESS DELEGATION MEETS USSR'S MARCHUK

OW141307 Tokyo KYODO in English 1242 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 14 KYODO -- Soviet Vice Premier Guriy Marchuk Monday asked Japanese business leaders to cooperate in improving plants imported from Japan 10 to 15 years ago, visiting Japanese officials said.

The plants are getting superannuated, he told 18 key members of a high-powered delegation of the Japanese business community which is here to attend the 10th joint session of a private Japanese committee for economic cooperation with the Soviet Union and its Soviet counterpart.

The businessmen, led by Ryoichi Kawai, leader of the delegation and board chairman of Komatsu Ltd., met with Marchuk, who is also chairman of the State Science and Technology Commission, to discuss bilateral exchanges in the field of science and technology. They took Marchuk's remark to mean that the Soviet Union intends to place primary stress on improving existing plants under the 12th Five-Year Plan beginning this year and thus economize on funds for modernization, the officials said. The vice premier also said that saving of resources and energy is an important aim in both construction of new sophisticated factories and improvement of existing plants.

Kawai said Japanese businessmen want to discuss with the Soviet side the possibility of cooperating in resources and energy saving, noting Japan's great success in this field, they said. The three-day conference here will start Tuesday.

The Japanese delegation, comprising about 240 members, is interested to ascertaining what types of cooperation the Soviet Union is seeking from Japan under the 12th Five-Year Plan, especially because the meeting will be the first since Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev came to power.

The Soviet side is expected to explain the five-year plan, while the Japanese delegation will explain the current state of the Japanese economy and Japanese wishes regarding bilateral economic cooperation, according to the officials. After detailed discussions at eight subcommittees on [words indistinct] plenary session will adopt a joint statement on the final day Thursday, they said.

USSR CITES JAPANESE VIOLATIONS OF FISHERY TERMS

LD121356 Moscow TASS in English 1304 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 12 TASS -- "Soviet inspectors have identified flagrant violations of salmon fishery terms in the northwestern Pacific by Japanese fishermen," Yuriy Znamenskiy, deputy director of the institute of informatics of the USSR Ministry of Fisheries, has told a TASS correspondent. "Many ships exceed the established quotas and understate salmon catch data. It was ascertained that their real catch is much greater than indicated by the data entered in fishery log books."

The Soviet scientist recalled that the problems connected with salmon fisheries have been under discussion for decades during international forums, within the framework of bilateral inter-governmental agreements, and unofficial consultations. Scientists and fishing-industry circles have been drawn into the argument.

The countries which are the source of salmon fishes and which conduct only inshore catching of the fishes resolutely come out in favour of complete termination of salmon sea fisheries which cause an irreparable damage to salmon population.

"The ruinous nature of salmon fishery outside the 12-mile zone manifests itself most clearly with regard to the salmon fishes which spawn in Soviet waters and dwell in the northern Pacific," Znamenskiy emphasized. The years-long drift fishery conducted by Japanese fishermen who put 10-15-kilometres-long nets [along] salmon migratory routes has resulted in the elimination of individual small stocks salmon. By the mid-70s almost all salmon species spawning in Soviet waters were found to be in a state of deep depression and their aggregate average yearly stock dwindled by more than 320,000 tons as compared with that in the 50s. This bore most heavily on valuable salmon fishes -- dog salmon, Coho salmon, red salmon, and Chinook salmon.

The disastrous decrease in the stock of the Far Eastern salmon fishes was substantially reversed only after the Soviet Union introduced a 200-mile economic zone in 1977 and took more effective protection measures concerning migratory fishes along the entire migratory route. Within the framework of the Soviet-Japanese commission, the USSR set a number of restrictions on sea fisheries of salmon: the general quota was reduced, the number of ships cut down, areas closed to salmon fishery were established, and fishing-gear parameters determined.

"The measures taken, as has been shown by research in the coastal zones and in spawning grounds, partially make up for the huge deficit which developed in the depression years. However, the actual intake of salmon to spawning grounds is still much lower than the permissible level, Professor Znamenskiy said.

"Thus, with the optimum intake of six million dog salmon species to the rivers of western Kamchatka, only 500,000 species get there. The state of affairs with coho salmon is unsatisfactory, too -- 400,000 species get to the spawning grounds instead of 1.5 million. Spawning grounds in other areas are not utilized to the full either."

Soviet scientists' estimate is that the aggregate stock of salmon fishes in 1986 will be much lower than in the cyclical year 1984 which was a low-yield one, too. The open-sea poaching of salmon by Japanese boats has a negative effect on the fishery situation, Znamenskiy stated.

"A paradoxical situation takes shape: The USSR -- a country where salmon comes from -- forbids its fishermen to conduct sea fisheries of salmon even for sporting purposes. Inshore fishery was even suspended in some areas of the Kamchatka and Sakhalin. At the same time the Japanese side does not seek to diminish the damage done by drift fishery to salmon stocks spawning in the rivers of the USSR and connives at flagrant violations of the jointly accepted regulations."

The catch of the most valuable salmon fishes that are in a depressive state by Japan is unjustifiably great. It accounts for about 40 per cent of sea fisheries of salmon by Japanese fishermen (and for less than 10 per cent in fisheries by the Soviet fishermen).

"Having set a salmon catch quota for the Japanese fisherman last year once again, the Soviet side reiterated its fundamental position concerning the need for a restructuring of the activities of the Japanese drifter fleet as soon as possible. A legitimate question arises: Is this not restructuring dragging out for too long, and is it not time to move from the warnings, which have been issued by the partner for years, to radical measures? The range of such measures, as is shown by the practice of cooperation of other countries in the Pacific and Atlantic Ocean regions, is sufficiently wide", Yuriy Znamenskiy emphasized.

JAPAN TO BUILD NEW TRAINING RANGE NEAR USSR BORDERS

LD140749 Moscow TASS in English 0731 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Tokyo April 14 TASS -- According to "SANKEI SHIMBUN", Japan's Armed Forces Command has decided to build a special training range on the Hokkaido Island coast to perfect the manoeuvres of Japan's land forces in the so-called "emergency conditions".

The decision came straight after Caspar Weinberger's, U.S. defence minister, visit to Hokkaido and is part of Japan's ruling circles war preparations in the country's northern regions bordering on the Soviet Union.

PARAMILITARY EXERCISES BEGIN IN SEOUL

LD142122 Moscow TASS in English 2109 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Tokyo April 14 TASS -- Early in the morning today police sirens rent the air in various Seoul areas, signalling the beginning of a regular paramilitary exercise "to fight terrorists." Army, police and "civil defence" units as well as reservists occupied key posts in the city and started mopping up every block in search for mythical "saboteurs."

Such exercises are held by the Seoul regime under various pretexts every spring. This time the exercise was necessary allegedly for "preparing to preclude terrorist acts against participants in the Asian games" to be held in Seoul next autumn.

However, local analysts point out that the real aims of this militarist venture is to stem the wave of the growing movement against the pro-American dictatorship by isolating active participants in the movement for democracy whom the authorities unashamedly label as "terrorists."

The puppet clique in South Korea has been frightened by the scale of mass anti-government demonstrations held in Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, Taegu and other cities. They provoked a real shock among the Washington rulers who got convinced of Chon Tu-hwan's rickety position. To save his regime from a downfall, the USA is increasing its dollar handouts to the Seoul ruler. During his recent visit to Seoul, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger promised him 230 million dollars for strengthening the Army this year.

USSR, MONGOLIA SIGN 1986-1990 TRADE AGREEMENT

LD112351 Moscow Television Service in Russian 2054 GMT 11 Apr 86

[From the "Novosti" newscast]

[Text] Talks between the governmental trade delegations of the USSR and Mongolian People's Republic ended on 11 April in Moscow. An agreement has been signed on trade turnover and payments between the Soviet Union and Mongolia for the years of 1986-90, as well as the protocol to this agreement for 1986. The agreement and the protocol were signed by Comrade Aristov, USSR minister of foreign trade, and Comrade Dulmaa, Mongolian minister of foreign trade. The volume of the mutual trade should increase by over 25 percent over the 25 years, which would be an important contribution to fulfillment of the long-term program of developing the economic and scientific-technical cooperation between the two countries for the period up to the year 2000. The talks were held in the atmosphere of fraternal friendship and businesslike cooperation.

INDIAN FOREIGN MINISTER CONDEMNS U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

LD150940 Moscow TASS in English 0829 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 15 TASS -- The U.S. air raid on Libya is evidence of total disregard for international laws and can only be assessed as a clear act of aggression against Libya's sovereignty and territorial integrity, India's Minister for External Relations Bali Ram Bhagat has declared.

Speaking in parliament, he stressed that the U.S. actions were posing a serious threat to security in the Mediterranean and universal peace.

Indrajit Gupta, a Communist Party of India deputy of the People's House, said that the U.S. bandit action was placing the world at the brink of catastrophe.

Members of India's supreme legislative body expressed solidarity with the Libyan people who were repulsing American imperialism's aggression.

ANNIVERSARY OF SOVIET-INDIAN TIES NOTED

LD141949 Moscow TASS in English 1850 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 14 TASS -- The USSR has shown itself to be a true and tested friend of India, which has always come to her help at her time of trial, India's minister of state for petroleum, Chandra Shekhar Singh, said at a rally devoted to the 39th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the USSR and India. The rally was attended by members of the government of the republic, notable politicians and public figures. The two friendly countries, the minister said, are bound by common goals in the struggle for world peace and security and against the aggressive policy of imperialism.

The growth of multifaceted contacts between the USSR and India is characteristic of the entire history of relations between them. The emergent republic owes much to Soviet assistance in the development of the key economic sectors and to the establishment of the public sector. Deep-going and strong bonds meet the interests of the peoples of the two countries and will expand and grow stronger from one year to the next, Chandra Shekhar Singh said.

India thinks highly of the Soviet Union's policy of peace, he continued. The constructive proposals put forward by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, have been broadly supported in India. They point a realistic way to the deliverance of mankind from nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction and to the removal of the threat of nuclear catastrophe. The Soviet Union's major practical steps for continued world peace meet the aspirations of mankind as a whole. The USA does not want to understand this. Sooner or later, however, Washington will have to respond to the appeal of the peoples. This is the command of the times.

BUSH LOOKS AT 'AFGHAN PROBLEM' ON PERSIAN GULF TRIP

TA141022 Moscow in Dari to Afghanistan 1500 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Commentary by Rafael Arutyunov]

[Text] Dear listeners: U.S. Vice President George Bush is concluding his visit to a number of countries in the Persian Gulf region.

He has visited Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, and the Yemen Arab Republic. His trip is related to numerous issues that not only concern the interests of this region but go much further. According to news agency reports, during his meetings and talks in the above-mentioned countries, Bush devoted particular attention to the so-called Afghan problem. Our commentator, Rafael Arutyunov, has written the following in this connection:

Everyone is aware that for Washington, the so-called trite and notorious Afghan problem means concealing its refusal to halt its crude interference in Afghan domestic affairs. One of the main aims of Bush's visit to the Gulf region is precisely this. It is appropriate to mention that prior to Bush's trip to this region the U.S. Government adopted several decisions aimed at escalating the undeclared war against the DRA. For example, Washington decided to dispatch modern antiaircraft Stinger missiles to the counterrevolutionary bands. In the past only America's close allies were supplied with such war materiel. These U.S. measures can definitely be considered not only provocative but a violation of recognized international laws and mores.

It is obvious that Bush considered it his duty not only to justify U.S. actions but also to draw those Arab countries which he was visiting into anti-Afghan conspiracies. However, it was reportedly not so easy for Bush to force the Arabs to concern themselves with the so-called Afghan problem in order to please America, particularly when the Pentagon's recent aggression against Libya was taken into consideration.

This was no easy matter for Bush. Even those countries that support the Afghan counterrevolutionaries gave Bush a cool reception. Perhaps it is also not accidental that of the issues discussed with Bush in the Persian Gulf states, news agencies are devoting attention not to the Afghan problem but to other issues, such as the Palestinian problem. Bush was told in Saudi Arabia and the Yemen Arab Republic that this problem should be solved.

Yes, it is difficult not to observe in Arab countries what, in fact, is taking place in and around Afghanistan. At the very time that Bush was launching anti-Afghan adventures in the Persian Gulf region, the jirga of free Pashtun and Baluch tribes -- the inhabitants of the Afghan-Pakistan border areas -- was being held in Kabul. They not only expressed support for the DRA Government but declared their resolute determination not to allow U.S. imperialism and its Pakistani associates to use their lands in the undeclared war against Afghanistan.

Despite all efforts by the United States, its potential to interfere in the DRA's affairs is being confined. The jirga of the free Pahstun tribes in Kabul is further proof of this, and its resolutions manifest another fact as well -- that the United States pits the Muslims against each other merely for its own imperialist interests. It does not make any difference whether it is Afghanistan or Pakistan or the Arab countries. The main purpose of the mission of U.S. Vice President Bush was precisely this, and he tried to achieve this goal during his visit to a number of Arab countries in the Persian Gulf region.

SOLDIERS' ACTIONS UNDER FIRE IN DRA RECOUNTED

PM091408 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 7 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 6

[Special correspondent V. Lukashin "Reportage from Afghanistan": "'I Am Covering You'"]

[Text] Kabul -- The accompanying officer knew the situation and the dushmans' habits.

"Was that submachine gun fire?"

"Of course," I hurriedly replied. "Why?"

"OK," the lieutenant colonel sighed. "I will keep the submachine gun. You take the grenades! And watch out for anything. Pull the pin and throw it in the bushes..."

I looked at my companion in amazement.

"Before we can reach Lieutenant Colonel Babushkin we have to get through 'Nightingale Grove,'" he explained. "It is a wild place! You can get shot up. The bullets fly like wild nightingales..."

Leaving a cloud of yellow dust behind it, the jeep tore off into the quarry. Coming toward us were dilapidated taxis and a string of tattered buses decked with garlands of paper flowers. In order to get onto the highway it was necessary to go through the commercial part of town.

Its narrow alleys were crammed with rows of stalls. There was everything there! The latest models of Japanese radio receivers, rolls of Indian fabrics, Chinese umbrellas... Here too were piles of raisins, dried apricots, and roasted nuts. But the town ended as unexpectedly as it had begun. A moment later we were alone on the highway.

Now and then we passed armored personnel carriers with Afghan soldiers inside. They looked closely at our faces. There were orange groves along the road. The lieutenant colonel gave the order to brake. In a ditch I saw the burned-out shell of a bus and brown spots of blood on the tarmac.

"This is where 'Nightingale Grove' starts," the lieutenant colonel explained. "See the 'commando' post up ahead? It is the last one...Farther on they shoot out the wheels with rifles and shoot the passengers with submachine guns. Seems like it is over now..."

The driver stepped on the gas and I looked at the orchard thickets. Everything was quiet. Perhaps just as quiet as it was when Captain Nikolay Tsebruk's search party set out. I did not know what had happened to the reconnaissance patrol men...

The situation in this part of Konarha Province was unfavorable. Exploiting the proximity of the Pakistani border, the deep ravines, and secret tracks, dushman gangs one after another crossed into Afghan territory. Pretending to be poor by day, they collected handouts but were actually on reconnaissance. A group of subversives was transferred here too...

At the time, the state of affairs in (Malavar) ravine was of particular concern to the Afghan command. Here, according to preliminary reconnaissance reports, was where the enemy's main forces were concentrated. Then our friends asked to go on reconnaissance patrol...The task was assigned to Capt Tsebruk's company.

Late in the evening, opening a large map on a ground sheet, the captain and Lieutenant Nikolay Kuznetsov worked out the details of the patrol.

"Your group will go first," Tsebruk assigned the task. "You must be at the village at three in the morning...The dushmans' first ambush is there. Block all exits, silently destroy the post, and proceed to the old fortress. By all accounts, that is their main stronghold. We will start operating together there. Understood?"

"Perfectly!"

Tsebruk glanced at Kuznetsov.

"You are probably worried."

After all, it was his first battle...

"A bit. Going alone..."

The captain pondered.

"You are right, namesake. Take Warrant Officer Bakhmutov, Sergeants Nekrasov and Shapovalov, and Private 1st Class Fediv...They have been under fire before. They will not let you down..."

The sun set and an orange glow glimmered over the mountains. Watched by the lieutenant, the reconnaissance men prepared their uniforms, cleaned their pistols and submachine guns, and packed dry rations. Some of them wrote letters...

Dim moonlight lit the peaks. The reconnaissance party walked along the side of the road. It was chilly and quiet, but Kuznetsov knew that the silence could be broken at any moment. Right now dozens of evil eyes could be watching the reconnaissance party's progress. "And what if nobody is there?" The square blank mud walls with their narrow openings were reminiscent of stage sets. It seemed that the village is dead.

Suddenly a heavy machine gun fired from the flat roof of one of the houses on the hillside. Another fired alongside.

"Get down! Combat positions!" the lieutenant ordered and, shouldering his submachine gun, leapt behind a boulder. Fountains of dust were thrown up by the bullets. "Seems as though everyone is alive!" Kuznetsov realized this from the return submachine gun fire: The soldiers were firing in short bursts. WO Bakhmutov was firing closest. But things looked bad. Realizing the situation, the dushmans were trying to destroy the reconnaissance party...

Only then did Kuznetsov realize how difficult real fighting is. It is one thing to make decisions on the training ground but quite another under fire. "Judging by the hail of fire there is a large gang in the village. They are obviously trying to surround us," the lieutenant thought, "there is time to form a circle. But how can I raise my head? Sorry guys! There is just one way out..."

"WO Bakhmutov! Pass it on: General retreat. You stay with me."

The warrant officer nodded in understanding, changed his magazine, and again pulled the trigger. One burst, another, and another. And suddenly the submachine gun fell silent.

"Bakhmutov! Igor! What happened?..."

Going back behind the boulder, the lieutenant saw that the dushmans were hurrying to cut off the group's escape. It was then that Kuznetsov drew the fire on himself. That allowed the reconnaissance party to withdraw. Only PFC Vasiliy Fediv was left behind. They said he was dead...A dushman tried to turn him onto his back. But what happened? In a flash Fediv plunged a knife into the dushman's throat. Kuznetsov turned around: His soldiers had gotten out of range.

The lieutenant sighed with relief. His conscience was clear. He had done everything he could. Now they had to hang on! Suddenly a piercing pain seared his leg. There was no time to bandage it. The dushmans were getting nearer and nearer. Young and healthy, they climbed straight up like a pack of hungry wolves. Gritting his teeth Kuznetsov pulled the trigger. He did not miss. But he was running out of ammunition. He fired his last, shortest burst. He flung the submachine gun aside. "Looks like that is it..." With an effort the lieutenant threw a grenade into the dushmans. He only had one left...He licked his dry lips. "Now just let them come a bit nearer..."

He could not have known that Capt Tsebruk was making his way to the battleground. Realizing that the lieutenant was surrounded, he had roused the entire company. But each step forward was difficult: The dushmans had been reinforced. The captain could even hear Kuznetsov firing. It suddenly went quiet...

"Forward!" Tsebruk drew himself up to his full height and engaged in hand-to-hand fighting. Now he could even see Kuznetsov. The lieutenant was leaning against a boulder. He was clutching a grenade in his right hand.

"Hang in there, Kolya! I am right behind you..."

But Kuznetsov could hear nothing. He could just see the dushmans' evil bloodshot eyes. They wanted to take the lieutenant alive. When the bandits surrounded Kuznetsov he pulled in pin and threw the grenade against the boulder...The survivors fled.

"No, you cannot be dying!" the captain gasped, raising his gun. Alongside, his soldiers were firing at the bandits. They had no equal in hand-to-hand fighting. The machine gun fired again. The captain staggered, but lobbed a grenade over the mud wall before falling into the dusty grass. The battle flared with new force. The crimson dawn lit up the outlines of the fortress....

...It was a short journey to Lt Col Babushkin's garrison. Snowcapped mountains glinted around the turn and I saw the sunburnt valley along which medieval houses were scattered.

Martial law was in force in the territory of the military township. Even the roads were strewn with crushed bricks. The windows in the barracks were slightly ajar. I saw sleeping soldiers.

"Let them rest. They were on a mission last night," the lieutenant colonel explained.

Leaning against a cypress tree, a young sergeant was quietly strumming a guitar. It was cool and quiet at the headquarters. Senior Warrant Officer Vasiliy Stulba was writing a letter at the writing desk. We got talking. He showed me the letter. I remember the very first, clearly written lines: "Everything is fine here. It will soon be spring and the first flowers will be appearing. But do not worry about me. The service is going fine..."

"What is there to talk about anyway?" Lt Col Babushkin sighed. "It was a localized engagement. Or rather, reconnaissance...But the stabilization of the situation in this part of the province depended on its outcome. The task was fulfilled. I am sorry for the guys...They have all been nominated for awards."

He handed me two sheets of paper. The text was short and closely written. Here is the main part...

"Lt N.A. Kuznetsov. In carrying out his combat assignment was cut off from the subunit's main forces and surrounded by insurgents...Fought to his last cartridge. Having exhausted all his ammunition, blew himself up and the insurgents near him with his last grenade..."

"Capt N.N. Tsebruk. A brave, disciplined, and resolute officer. Realizing during the combat operation that the party had been surrounded, broke through to it and personally directed operations..."

"They were excellent officers," the lieutenant colonel said softly. "The men followed them into fire and water. That's all I can say..."

I then talked to Lieutenant Gennadiy Udovichenko. He was friends with Kuznetsov.

"Kolya was a strapping guy with red hair. He played the accordion superbly. He loved singing. My first impression of him was of a great happy guy. But he was brought up in a children's home. Apart from his grandmother he had no one...We served together in Leningrad Military District. Even then his character was clear. He was strong-willed, competent, and good. We also respected Capt Tsebruk. We studied under him. He probably knew the names of all the men. His wife is in Brest Oblast. She should know that Capt Tsebruk was a real man..."

We traveled back. My companion kept looking at his watch: It was nearly 1700 hours. "Nightingale Grove" was up ahead. The driver put his foot down. And suddenly shadows were visible around the turn. The lieutenant colonel raised his submachine gun. The alarm was premature. We were met at the roadside by an Afghan patrol.

Returning to Moscow, I learned that the officers' feat was rewarded with high awards: Lt N.A. Kuznetsov was posthumously awarded the title Hero of the Soviet Union. And Capt N.N. Tsebruk was awarded the order of the Red Star. I have told only what I know about them.

TRIBAL JIRGA ADOPTS RESOLUTION IN KABUL

GF141556 Baku International Service in Azeri 1200 GMT 14 Apr 86

[From "Important Developments in the World Last Week" program]

[Text] Dear listeners, the jirga of the independent tribes living in Pakistan's border regions was held in Kabul last week. The elders and the representatives of the Afridi, Shinwari, Mohmand, [name indistinct] and Baluchi tribes said that they had arrived in the land of fraternal Afghanistan to express support for the April Revolution and discuss their struggle against the turmoil caused by the Pakistani Army and against that army's moves in the region which threaten peace.

They discussed the criminal moves of the Islamabad regime in the region where the independent tribes live. The jirga participants described the effort of the United States to use the lands legally owned by the tribes to continue its undeclared war against the DRA as the main cause of the tyranny created on their lands. The resolution adopted by the jirga last Thursday expressed the determination of the Pushtuns and the Baluchis to evict the Pakistani Army units and the bands of robbers supported by the enemies of Afghanistan from their lands. The resolution also expressed gratitude for the aid the Soviet people are extending to the DRA to safeguard freedom and the gains of the April Revolution.

'ZONE OF PEACE' CALLED FOR IN INDIAN OCEAN, PERSIAN GULF

GF131537 Baku International Service in Azeri 1200 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Unattributed commentary: "Converting the Indian Ocean Into a Zone of Peace"]

[Text] Dear listeners, the Soviet proposals to ward off the nuclear threat and curb the dangerously high pace of rearmament have received broad and positive response throughout the entire world, including the Asian countries. The Asian peoples praise highly the position held by the Soviet Union on many issues of vital importance for that continent. For example, the Soviet Union supports the struggle waged by the non-aligned countries to convert the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf into zones of peace. The Soviet Union is also in favor of convening an international conference on the Indian Ocean. The peoples of the littoral countries are also very much in favor of convening such a conference.

The question, however, is the existence of more than 30 U.S. military and support bases in the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf. Nuclear arms and chemical weapons have been stored at many of them. These deadly arms have also been deployed in the main base on Diego Garcia -- which belongs to the United States and Great Britain. This base provides airports for heavy bomber aircraft and transport planes and ports for (?ocean-going) ships and nuclear submarines. Diego Garcia has a major communications link with the U.S. bases in the Persian Gulf -- bases close to the border of Iran. Furthermore, the interventionist Rapid Deployment Force units, affiliated with the U.S. Central Command Headquarters, have also been deployed in this region. The strategists in Washington have placed 19 sovereign Asian and African countries -- including Iran and Afghanistan -- within the sphere of influence of the forces affiliated with the Central Command. U.S. warships spearheaded by carriers continuously cruise in the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf. With the participation of the NATO allies of the United States they carry out naval exercises in both regions.

The militarization of the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf over the Iran-Iraq war, which has continued for about 6 years now, has attained a dangerous level. The imperialist countries use this war as a pretext to interfere in the affairs of the region. Under the circumstances, the Soviet proposals concerning the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf are of particular importance. The Soviet Union has no military bases in the region. Nor is the Soviet Union preparing to have such bases. Our country is prepared to hold talks with the United States to limit military activity in the Indian Ocean. It insists on convening an international conference on the Indian Ocean to create a peace region.

Obviously, the [word indistinct] rivalries are not few in this huge region. The political situation in the different sectors of this region is unstable. However, it is absolutely clear that the countries of this region must search for their own direction. This should be (?without pressure). A move must be made to coordinate and quickly unite the endeavors to find a political solution to the problems so that the tension arising from military confrontations in various parts of Asia can be defused and the situation stabilized.

POLISH RADIO CALLS U.S. LIBYAN ACTS 'STATE TERRORISM'

LD150747 Moscow TASS in English 0745 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Warsaw April 15 TASS -- Polish radio today described U.S. air force bombing of Libya's cities as an unprecedented act of state terrorism.

The broadcast said that the barbaric U.S. action which resulted in civilian casualties caused anger and justified indignation of broad sections of the international public.

HONECKER SPEAKS AT BERLIN MEMORIAL UNVEILING

PM141151 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 6 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[TASS report: "No Task More Important"]

[Text] Berlin, 5 Apr -- There is no more urgent task for mankind today than that of ensuring peace and preventing a nuclear catastrophe. This was stated by E. Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee and chairman of the GDR State Council, on addressing the participants in a thousands-strong rally at the unveiling of the K. Marx and F. Engels Memorial in the center of Berlin.

The history of the revolutionary workers movement and socialism, the GDR leader said, attests that the working class needs peace to acheive its aims. The proposals for ridding the world of all kinds of nuclear weapons and creating a system of international security, advanced by M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, and confirmed at the 27th CPSU Congress, are of truly historic significance. They show mankind the road to the future without fear of destruction and without the nuclear threat both on earth and in space. These proposals accord with the peaceful desires of the people and of all who are conscious of their responsibility for mankind's destiny.

The ideas of the founders of scientific socialism are being realized in the GDR. Tremendous work still undoubtedly has to be done to fulfill the SED program in various spheres of life. The results acheived by millions of working people during the preparations for the 11th SED Congress strengthen our confidence that these aims will be achieved, E. Honecker said.

THATCHER APPROVED U.S. USE OF UK BASES FOR LIBYAN RAID

LD150828 Moscow TASS in English 0743 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 15 TASS -- U.S. Secretary of Defence Caspar Weinberger has stated that the strike at the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi was delivered by planes from the U.S. aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean as well as by F-111 bombers from U.S. bases, located in British territory, with the knowledge of the British Government.

In answer to journalists' questions as to whether Mrs Thatcher had approved the taking off of F-111 aircraft from British territory, the Pentagon chief stated that permission to that effect had been given.

Thus, the British Government has once again shown that it obediently follows in the wake of the U.S. adventuristic policy. Ignoring the opinion of its own people, London supported Washington's strategy of state terrorism which poses a threat to peace throughout the world.

NETHERLANDS FOREIGN MINISTER CONDEMNS U.S. RAID

[Text] The Hague April 15 TASS -- Hans van den Broek, foreign minister of the Netherlands, has condemned the U.S. air raid on Libya. Van den Broek, who chaired an emergency session of the Council of Ministers of the European Communities held here, said that the EEC had declared unambiguously for a political solution to the conflict and the prevention of the escalation of military tension.

PARLIAMENTARY LEADER RAPS U.S. NUCLEAR TEST, AIR RAID

LD151014 Moscow TASS in English 0947 GMT 15 Apr 86

[text] Bonn April 15 TASS -- The nuclear test conducted by Washington and U.S. Air Force strikes at Libyan territory are a manifestation of the Reagan administration's positions-of-strength policy, said Horst Ehmke, deputy leader of the Social Democratic Group in the West German Bundestag.

Speaking in an interview to Deutschlandfunk radio station, he criticized U.S. moves against Libya describing them as a demonstration of military strength which was detrimental to a peaceful settlement of the conflict between the U.S. and Libya and called into question prospects for safeguarding peace in the Mediterranean region.

REPORTAGE ON SWEDISH PRIME MINISTER CARLSSON'S VISIT

Arrives, Met by Ryzhkov, Talyzin

LD141342 Moscow TASS in English 1340 GMT 14 Apr 86

Meets Gorbachev

LD151034 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] In Moscow this morning, Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson was received by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. The meeting was actually supposed to take place later today, but was moved up apparently because of last night's events in Libya. Before the meeting with Gorbachev, Prime Minister Carlsson visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier outside the Kremlin wall to honor the memory of the 20 million Russians who fell during the World War II.

Talks Focus on Bilateral Issues

LD151229 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1030 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson today had his most important meeting during his visit to Moscow that began yesterday, when he met party leader Gorbachev. The meeting lasted over 2 1/2 hours, more than the Swedes had dared hope for, and the talks were held in a very close (?circle). This is what Ingvar Carlsson said at a (?news conference) after the meeting:

[Begin recording] [Carlsson] We had a thorough review of bilateral questions, including problems connected with the Baltic. We also had time for a detailed survey of our views on humanitarian questions. We had an appreciative [word indistinct] about Swedish foreign and neutrality policy, from General Secretary Gorbachev and we also jointly expressed the wish to increase our trade and contacts in the cultural field. I explained Sweden's stance as a nonaligned and independent nation in the world today, how we view our opportunities in that regard and of course, the rights we believe we are also entitled to: that people in our country and in other countries that do not have nuclear weapons should have the right to live in a secure and safe world in the future.

[Reporter Kerstin Brunberg] After his meeting, this was the only statement Ingvar Carlsson made about the segment of the talks that concerned the Soviet Union and Sweden, but he did answer a few questions about the U.S. bombing of Libya. Ingvar Carlsson will in a short time meet the head of government, Nikolay Ryzhkov, where the talks, so to speak, will be more detailed than those held in the Kremlin with Gorbachev.

Ingvar Carlsson speaks about frank talks on such topics as Sweden's desire to have its borders respected, and what is interesting is of course, on one hand, is getting the Soviet reaction to this, and on the other, to follow the course of events in the long term. For the present, the Soviet [words indistinct] reception is very friendly and accommodating.

Additionally, two important agreements will be signed this evening in conjunction with the official banquet. First, there will be a trade agreement which is being extended for 9 years, while the framework of the agreement has also been extended. Second, there is an agreement on royalty payments for literary and photographic works.

The USSR has not paid Swedish authors in anything but rubles, which can only be used here, but this agreement, which must be seen as a very important one, will mean that the Soviet Union will not only pay Swedish authors in convertible currency, but also pay for works written 50 years ago and translated into Russian. For an author like Astrid Lindgren, whose children's books exist in large editions in the USSR, this must be quite a success. This is Kerstin Brunberg in Moscow. [end recording]

SHEVARDNADZE RECEIVES GREEK AMBASSADOR FOR TALKS

LD101711 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1637 GMT 10 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, 10 Apr (TASS) -- Today, Eduard Shevardnadze, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo, USSR minister of foreign affairs, received Ioannis Grihgoriadis, ambassador to the USSR from the Greek Republic [as received] at the latter's request. International issues of mutual interest were discussed in a conversation which took place in a friendly atmosphere. Mutual satisfaction was expressed with the progress of good-neighborly relations and cooperation between the USSR and Greece, and the striving of both sides toward further expansion and deepening them was affirmed.

WESTERN EUROPE IN 'HUMILIATING SITUATION' ON LIBYA

LD142025 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1345 GMT 14 Apr 86

["Walters' Journey: Arm-Twisting Sessions" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow, 14 Apr TASS Observer Leonid Ponomarev writes:

Twisting the arms of the NATO allies has become the norm of the Washington administration's behavior when it comes to getting support for its latest international provocation. Vernon Walters, ambassador at large of the President, U.S. permanent representative to the United Nations, is now touring the capitals of Western Europe on such a mission. His task is to get support in the West European capitals for any U.S. actions against Libya -- above all, military actions.

Walters' mission was devised as a particularly secret one, but it did not turn out that way. The international consequences of the anti-Libyan provocation being organized by the White House are so unpredictable that it was deemed sensible in Western Europe not to conceal U.S. intentions.

To judge from reports in the West European and U.S. press, Washington's pressure on Western Europe has been met in NATO capitals with undisguised apprehension and alarm. Not because the U.S. anti-Libyan hysteria is not approved of there, or because they do not share the U.S. policy there -- no. They both approve and support it. But the thought grates on them that the United States, without standing on ceremony with its European allies, is practically starting to use the Mediterranean Sea as a theater for military actions by the U.S. Armed Forces, as a region considered to be "the underbelly of Europe." The Reagan administration is personally determining whether there will be war or peace in that region, and the West European governments are merely being given the offer of "supporting" an U.S. military action, of creating the appearance of "collective" actions. The West Europeans have turned out to be in this humiliating situation more than once, paying for their "automatic loyalty" to Washington.

Walters' visits to London, Bonn, Paris, and his forthcoming visit to Rome show that in each capital there are reservations regarding the adventure being devised by Washington against Libya. And yet a general preference for a political resolution, and not for the use of the firepower of aircraft carriers, is shining through. The United States was unable to enlist open support from its allies. But in their behind-the-scenes compromises with the Reagan administration, the main U.S. NATO allies are attempting merely to define "permissible sanctions" against Libya instead of decisively ruling out any possibility of Washington unleashing a military conflict in the Mediterranean Sea. No one can stand aside from the looming threat of U.S. provocation and the West European governments of the NATO countries carry the same responsibility as Washington for U.S. activities in this part of the world.

CHANCELLOR KOHL CLARIFIES STANCE ON ARMS ISSUES

PM141255 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 14 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[Report by own correspondent Ye. Bovkun: "FRG: Contradictory Position"]

[Text] Bonn -- Addressing journalists in Bonn on 11 April, H. Kohl set forth his cabinet's position on questions of disarmament and arms control and contacts with the socialist countries.

The federal chancellor noted the existence of positive advances in the development of East-West relations and assured those present that Soviet-West German dialogue will remain the key avenue of the FRG's entire ostpolitik.

The leader of the right-wing coalition made several general remarks about the need to implement the Geneva accords and to resolve the nuclear and chemical weapons problem. But when he tried to develop his own theses it became clear that his pretentious statements about readiness to effectively promote detente are in flagrant contradiction with Bonn's aims and intentions.

While leading politicians of the Social Democratic Party of Germany and even the Free Democratic Party have denounced Washington's refusal to associate itself to the Soviet moratorium on nuclear weapons tests, H. Kohl has launched into obscure discourses about the "inevitability" of such tests and has in fact approved the actions of the U.S. Administration which has allowed a real chance of concluding an agreement with the Soviet Union on halting nuclear explosions to slip by.

The contradictoriness of Bonn's position has also been displayed in the question of chemical weapons. Denouncing the policy based on the "all or nothing" principle at the beginning of his speech, Kohl nonetheless stated that the Federal Government considers it possible to resolve the problem only if there is an "all-around ban" on chemical weapons and therefore opposes any "regional solutions," that is the creation in central Europe of a zone free from such means of mass destruction.

On the other hand, regarding the U.S. "star wars" program, the Bonn chancellor expressed himself with the utmost clarity, stressing that this space project is "justified" and "politically necessary." "Kohl has once again defended SDI to journalists," FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE comments.'

FURTHER REPORTAGE, COMMENT ON PCI CONGRESS

Natta Delivers Report

LD102344 Moscow TASS in English 1445 GMT 10 Apr 86

[Text] Florence April 10 TASS -- General Secretary of the Italian Communist Party [PCI] Alessandro Natta delivered a report to the 17th Congress of the Italian Communist Party under way here.

"We have set ourselves the task to open a new stage of the party's policy, to implement ideological, programme and organizational renewal of the Italian Communist Party," Alessandro Natta said.

"We have gathered here to draw conclusions from vast democratic experience accumulated by the Italian Communists. We wish to bring more young people into the party", he said.

"Different generations of Communists, veterans and young party functionaries, however, are united in their striving to resolutely make progress, set out new horizons, to be transforming themselves, if we wish to transform the state and society". Alessandro Natta called the attention of the delegates of the importance of increasing the party membership, of vigorous participation of all rank-and-file Communists in the daily activity of the Italian Communist Party, enhancing their awareness.

Questions of upsurge and counteroffensive of the left forces, at which a strike has been dealed by the conservative circles in many of the most developed Western countries, must be in the spotlight of the debate at the Congress of the Italian Communist Party, Alessandro Natta said. It is necessary to make the Italian Communist Party a force that would be ever ready to govern the country, to work out programmes and decisions at the level of up-to-date demands. This stems from the history and traditions of the party of Antonio Gramsci and Palmiro Toglatti.

"The problem is to draw up correctly the policy both for the period ahead and on a long-range, and consequently to determine the new level to which the reformatory policy of the party should be brought", the speaker went on.

Dwelling on international problems, the general secretary of the Italian Communist Party declared: "First of all we must ponder on whether we have a correct approach to the subject of the international detente after the Geneva meeting. I believe that absolutely justifiable was an approach with hope and at the same time with caution to an initial step along the raod of the resumption of the detente process".

"The 27th CPSU Congress consolidated still more the process of new envigoration of the Soviet foreign policy. It became apparent what a positive impetus the new Soviet peace initiatives can give and are giving, if they are consistently implemented, as it was also during the latest crisis in the Mediterranean, when the Soviet Union advanced the proposal for a simultaneous withdrawal of the fleets of the two great powers from the region".

"We view as particularly important Mikhail Gorbachev's statement about a complex interrelationship of the processes now taking place in the world and the fact that it is impossible to oppose numberous and dangerous contradictions without achieving considerable mutual understanding among peoples and countries with different social and economic systems, starting from the problem of ending the arms race".

"We have long given up making a choice in favour of any camp," the speaker said. "And now we fully confirm this refusal which stems from a responsible understanding of the present-day international reality, from political needs of our country and efforts to promote the contribution that Italy can and must make in supreme interests of peace".

"Certain persons have been surprised that we positively met the new elements in the foreign policy course of the Soviet Union, as if we have thus almost refuted out previous opinions", Alessandro Natta said. "While being aware of what has changed in the USSR's foreign policy, and wishing success in the implementation of the radical reforms announced in the Soviet Union, we do not close our eyes to many serious unresolved problems there", he said. "Those who have not realised in due time the need for serious and profound criticism and now applaud what is new without having dared in the past to combat what was outdated, are seriously contradicting themselves".

"We are now capable of appreciating the efforts aimed at the creation of a new international climate and resumption of the detente process in the world, ever more so since we proceed from our complete autonomy in deciding on our stand with regard to the Soviet Union, basing themselves on political, and not on ideological concepts", Alessandro Natta said at the congress.

"The Italian Communists declare resolutely against the arms race. We have never glossed over the tendencies fo the U.S. Administration. Reagan has no supporters within our party," the general secretary of the Italian Communist Party said to the applause of the delegates.

"The real problem now is how to put an end to the political course that is dangerous both for the whole world and for the American people". Alessandro Natta made a call for clearly distinguishing between the Government of the United States and the American people.

"The Italian Communists criticise the U.S. Administration above all for its foreign policy course, for the obstacles it places in the way of a positive advance that was started in Geneva".

"We have already declared that militarisation of space is veritable insanity, no matter who conducts it", said the general secretary of the Italian Communist Party. "Therefore we demand that Italy refuse to participate in the SDI programme. The attempt to make a distinction between joining in the SDI politically and consent to the participation of European firms in the imlementation of that American programme holds no water either."

Dwelling on Italy's foreign policy, Alessandro Natta pointed to the lofty spirit of national sovereignty that exists among the Italian people. He emphasised that the independent foreign policy line of the country can be pursued only if Italy rids itself of the dependence of its transoceanic ally.

The general secretary of the Italian Communist Party criticised the domestic policy of the Rome government. He emphasised that the present authorities have been unable to resolve the numerous acute social and economic problems that face Italy today. At the same time, a positive assessment was made of certain initiatives of the government headed by Bettino Craxi, the initiatives he took in the international arena in the interests of peace, of the settlement of local conflicts, of ensuring the national independence of the country. The speaker said that a profound crisis existing in Italy can be resolved only by adopting an alternative programme of development and changing political government in Italy. He touched upon the question of relations of the Italian Communist Party with other leading Italian political parties -- first of all with the Italian Socialist Party and the Christian Democrats, Alessandro Natta stressed that the idea of a democratic alternative advanced by the Communists presupposes bringing closer the stands of the Italian Communist Party and the Italian Socialist Party.

Dwelling on some inter-party problems he declared that the Italian Communist Party today is a contemprary party of renewal and social tranformations, Alessandro Natta declared for the further development of inter-party democracy, emphasising particularly that this trend must lead not to the creation of internal trends, factions and groups in the party, but to a still greater and resolute unity of the Italian Communist Party. The debates of the main report are held at the 15th Congress of the Italian Communist Party in Florence.

International Situation Viewed

LD131551 Moscow TASS in English 1540 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] Florence April 13 TASS -- Delegates of the 17th congress of the Italian Communist Party which is under way here concentrated their attention on the dramatic worsening of the international situation of the the aggressive actions of the U.S. Administration which is going on with nuclear tests and is actively whipping up military and political tension in the Mediterranean.

Addressing the congress, Gian Carlo Pajetta, member of the leadership of the Italian Communist Party, said: "The whole of mankind is living through a difficult moment of its history which can become frightening. We, Communists, should neither pass in silence nor underestimate its danger. The latest developments show that the risk, as well as anxiety, are growing".

"The Geneva meeting opened up the way to the hopes of peoples, of all the progressively-minded forces. On the one hand, there exist the words and policy of Ronald Reagan which manifest themselves, among other things, in the support for the counterrevolutionary forces and the continuation of the nuclear tests. On the other hand, solid, energetic peace initiatives have been put forward by the General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev", he said.

Speaking about the foreign policy pursued by Italy, he pointed out that it was influenced to some extent by the stand of Italian Communists. At the present stage the problems of Italy's membership in NATO, of ensuring national autonomy, independence and national honour should be raised in a different way.

Gian Carlo Pajetta emphasized that is was necessary to decide on what terms Italy should remain in the alliance, taking into consideration the fact that today there exists Europe which would like, without withdrawing from NATO, to be regarded as a single entity.

Delegates of the congress met with storms of applause a report of Lazio Giovanni Berlinguer, secretary of a regional committee of the party, who demanded that Italy and other West European countries exert efforts for warding off the U.S. military threat hanging over the Mediterranean. It would meet the interests of all the countries, including Italy.

The report made by Giorgio Napolitano dealt with relations between the Italian Communist Party and other left-wing forces in the Apennines and the continent in general.

The closing speech was delivered at the congress by the General Secretary of the Italian Communist Party Alessandro Natta.

The delegates passed over to the election of the steering bodies of the Italian Communist Party.

Natta Concludes Congress

LD140830 Moscow TASS in English 0817 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Florence April 14 TASS -- Alessandro Natta, general secretary of the Communist Party of Italy (PCI), made concluding remarks at the 17th PCI Congress that completed its deliberations here.

On behalf of Italian Communists he expressed gratitude to the delegations of communist and workers', socialist and social democratic parties, national-liberation movements, progressive forces, and public organizations for attending the PCI congress and asked them to convey fraternal greetings to their activists and the people in their countries.

At the time when the 17th PCI Congress continued its work the war threat looming dark over the Mediterranean, and not only that region for that matter, has sharply intensified, Alessandro Natta said. The danger of a direct U.S. armed attack on Libya has grown more dramatic.

"We have declared and reiterate it today -- Europe can and should raise its voice," he said. "This is the task facing all the countries. Flames of war can break out in the Mediterranean any moment."

Another nuclear explosion conducted by the United States, the speaker said, "has compelled the U.S.S.R. -- and it was logical to expect that -- to end Moscow's unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing till the time the U.S. agrees to the termination of such testing."

If this time most reactionary and extremist forces gain the upper hand, Alessandro Natta warned, the situation may go out of control. To prevent that, vigorous actions of people are required.

The PCI general secretary described as "mad" the foreign policy of the present U.S. Administration and said that the PCI should take an active part in the mass peace movement.

To stop the hand of "hawks", it is essential to bring millions of people into the anti-war movement, he emphasized. Our duty at the present historical phase is to work for peace, for reviving the process of detente, for ensuring Europe's concerted action and for preventing Italy from being drawn into a venture of some kind.

The 17th PCI Congress ended with the election of the leading bodies of the party. Alessandro Natta was elected PCI secretary general. Paolo Bufalini was elected chairman of the Central Control Commission of the party.

CPSU APPEALS TO EUROPEAN PEOPLE ON MAY DAY

LD122128 Moscow TASS in English 2020 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 13 TASS -- "Work for peaceful cooperation, goodneighbourly relations between nations, for detente and the creation of reliable security on the continent." This appeal the CPSU Central Committee has addressed to peoples of Europe on the occasion of the May Day, the day of international solidarity of working people. In the appeals on the occasion of the holiday published here today the CPSU Central Committee proclaimed: "Let class solidarity and cooperation of communists of all the countries in the struggle for peace and socialism grow stronger".

The CPSU Central Committee congratulated on the occasion of the May Day the working class of capitalist countries which, according to the appeals, is waging "an intense struggle against the domination of the monopolies, for its rights and vital interests"

The CPSU Central Committee sent fraternal greetings to peoples of socialist countries. It proclaimed: "Long live world socialism a powerful and influential force of today. Let cooperation of socialist countries grow stronger".

ARAB LEADERS VOICE CONTINUING SUPPORT FOR LIBYA

Syrian Statement

LD151059 Moscow TASS in English 0935 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus April 15 TASS -- According to a report of the Syrian news agency SANA, President Hafiz Al-Asad of Syria had a telephone conversation with leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi earlier this morning. The conversation dealt with U.S. air strikes on the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Banghazi.

SANA circulated a statement by an official Syrian spokesman. With the aim of establishing American dominance in the region, subordinating the Arab nation to its will and encouraging Israel to stage new acts of aggression against Arab countries, the statement said, the United States made air strikes at the territory of the Libyan Jamahiriyah.

By organizing that attack it demonstrated yet another time its contempt for the interests of international security. The actions of the White House, the statement emphasized, are a flagrant violation of the United Nations charter and norms of international law and an infringement on the will of peoples, their freedom and national sovereignty.

Strongly condemning that barbaric American aggression against sister Libya, the Syrian Arab Republic declares that it stands steadfastly on Libya's side and places its entire potential at Libya's disposal, the statement said.

It urged the Arab countries and their governments to confront that aggressive action and take all the necessary measures to abort it.

Syria called the attention of the world public to the aggressive American policy that threatened universal peace, security and the future of mankind, and called for repulsing provocative U.S. actions.

Reaffirmation by PDRY

[Text] Aden April 15 TASS -- Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas, a member of the Politbureau of the Central Committee of the Yemen Socialist Party, chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme People's Council of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen [PDRY] spoke on telephone with Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution.

During the conversation Al-'Attas reaffirmed full-scale solidarity of the people of South Yemen with the Libyan people.

Al-'Attas said that Democratic Yemen was on Libya's side and that the defense of Libya's sovereignty was the defense of sovereignty of all Arab countries.

SOVIET-LIBYAN TALKS ON LONG-TERM COOPERATION END

LD150655 Moscow TASS in English 0645 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 15 TASS -- Soviet-Libyan talks on the questions of developing long-term economic, technical, trade and engineering cooperation were held in Tripoli on April 8-14.

The Soviet delegation was led by Konstantin Katushev, chairman of the State Committee of the USSR for Foreign Economic Relations and member of the CPSU Central Committee, and the Libyan delegation was headed by Fawzi al-Shakshuki, secretary for planning of Libya's General People's Committee.

During his stay in the Libyan Jamahiriyah, the head of the Soviet delegation was received by the leader of the Libyan revolution, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, who handed over a message to Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee.

ARAB DISUNITY IMPEDES MIDEAST SETTLEMENT QUEST

PM141657 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 10 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[Article by Konstantin Geyvandov: "Vulnerable Link"]

[Text] The recent U.S. aggression against Libya provoked an immediate reaction from the Arab world. The Arab League Council, then in session in Tunis, unanimously passed a resolution decisively condemning this treacherous attack on one of the countries belonging to the Arab League and stating that the escalation of aggression is fraught with a threat to the peace and security of all Arab states, and to peace throughout the world. It demanded that the U.S. Administration cease all military operations against Libya and immediately withdraw the U.S. fleet from its shores. Members of the council spoke in favor of taking active measures to repel the aggressor by granting aid to the Libyan Jamahiriyah, including military aid.

I do not doubt that the unanimous rebuff delivered to the U.S. aggression by the Arab states played a far from minor role in the Pentagon's decision to end "maneuvers" far earlier than the stated time and to withdraw its naval armada from Libyan shores. According to press reports, even Congress and the U.S. State Department expressed concern and fears with regard to the unfavorable effect of Washington's anti-Libyan actions on the United States' "long-term relations" with the Arab world. Vice President Bush was forced to admit at a press conference that some countries in the region had "publicly taken a none too benevolent attitude to what we did" in the Gulf of Sidra. But, at this point he hastened to voice the hope that, privately, the leaders of these states would say differently.

In connection with this formulation of the issue by a high-ranking representative of the U.S. Administration, a commentary by the Kuwait newspaper AL-WATAN is noteworthy. "The U.S. aggression against Libya," it writes, "would never have happened if the Arabs had achieved the necessary degree of solidarity. The Pentagon's bombing of Libyan targets, like other acts of aggression, are indirectly a reflection of inter-Arab contradictions." These words, it seems, contain the bitter truth characterizing the present state of affairs in the Arab world.

Yes, the absence of unity and cohesion in the ranks of the Arab countries has always been and remains the weakest and most vulnerable spot. This fact is constantly exploited in the anti-Arab policies of the United States and Israel; policies aimed, on the one hand, at foiling any solution to such an all-national problem for the Arab world as that of achieving a comprehensive and just Near East settlement, and, on the other, at further materializing the "idea of preserving Israel's clear military superiority over its potential enemies in any possible combination," to which idea President Reagan invariably swears loyalty.

If one takes a look at how events have developed since 1967, one can draw the conclusion that the American Israeli allies have succeeded fairly well, systematically sowing dissent among the ranks of their Arab enemies.

Sometimes, for example, they claim they are at war with Syria, without affecting, they say, the interests of other Arab states, and things end with Israel annexing Syria's Golan Heights. Another time, hiding behind the far-fetched thesis of the necessity for a defense against so-called Palestinian extremism, Tel Aviv unleashes aggression against neighboring Lebanon.

And now, striving to perpetuate occupation of this country's southern regions, the Israeli military, together with their U.S. patrons, are trying to persuade the Arab public that the occupationists' terror and repressions on Lebanese soil are virtually the only way of... safeguarding Israel's security. Repaying one good turn with another, Tel Aviv's leaders are vying with one another in their raptures over the Pentagon's military adventure against Libya, in no way embarrassed that in this respect they must do a solo on an international scale.

Creating a situation of dissent and dislocation in the Arab world with the aid of maneuvering, intrigues, and sometimes direct intimidation, the American-Israeli allies have for more than a decade sabotaged an all-embracing Near East settlement, the heart of which is the Palestinian problem. It is not surprising, therefore, that the pan-Arab program on this question, drawn up in 1982 at a summit meeting in Fes, has not moved an inch in its implementation, although it has received virtually universal support from the world community of nations. At the same time, exploiting the lack of unity within Arab ranks, Washington and Tel Aviv are methodically trying to insinuate new separate and capitulatory agreements in any form, as is attested to, in particular, by the current visits to the region by U.S. Vice President Bush and by State Department emissary Murphy.

Here we can once again trace the same handwriting which has become characteristic of the American-Israeli tandem's activity in the region. While Washington works on so-called moderate regimes, offering as the "carrot" supplies of new types of weapons and the services of U.S. naval armadas, Tel Aviv continues its overt saber rattling. The latest batch of threats, which addressed in concentrated form the neighboring Arab states, was recently delivered by Israeli Defense Minister Rabin.

Here are some of them: 1. There is a possibility of war with Syria; 2. Israel is encountering increased activity among partisan units from Lebanese territory... and we are prepared to answer the challenge; 3. The continued PLO presence in Jordan can only serve to increase the tension between our two countries and will, with time, threaten the present regime in Jordan.

Washington, trying not to lag behind its junior parner, is now threatening to "finish the job" in Libya. The United States recently resorted to another trick, now attempting to create the illusion for Arab countries that its Tel Aviv ally does not always act with a whip in its hands, but can sometimes produce a carrot from behind its back. Thus, after the recent visit to the United States by Israel's Prime Minister Peres, a State Department spokesman reported that the United States and Israel have begun discussion of a multibillion-dollar "Marshall Plan" to develop the countries of the Near East in order to help create a more favorable atmosphere for achieving peace in the region.

What can be said about this? First, if such a multibillion-dollar fund is set up, the lion's share of the funds it collects will go to Israel. The only difference will be that the burden of the cost of supporting the chronically crisis-striken Israeli economy will in this case have to be shared with Washington by its West European allies and Japan, which there are plans to involve in financing the fund. Second, if, after this, there is any money left for the Near East version of the "Marshall Plan," it goes without saying that the American-Israeli partners are counting on using it to pay for the planned separate and capitulatory deals.

Going back to the questions of Arab unity and solidarity, it must be said that during my visits to the region I repeatedly heard it said that Arab national security is indivisible. I have no doubt that Algerian President C. Bendjedid proceeded precisely from this when he said recently in Moscow: "In the present complex conditions in the struggle to establish a just and lasting peace in the Near East, the ranks of Palestinian opposition must unite and all Arab countries must rally around this opposition." I am sure that achievement of this aim would receive the highest possible appraisal from the peoples of the Arab east.

INTERNAL STRIFE HARMS CHANCES FOR LEBANESE PEACE

PM111101 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 10 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Own correspondent Yu. Glukhov report: "Lebanon: A Worrying Time"]

[Text] Beirut, April -- "Political stagnation, deadlock, paralysis" -- these and similar pessimistic assessments of the Lebanese situation predominate in the Beirut newspapers. They can also be heard at meetings with politicians and sensed in the mood of the Lebanese. A time of hope has once again given way to a time of worries.

The present deterioration in the country's situation is connected with events which took place on 15 January this year. On that day a coup took place in East Beirut within the "Lebanese forces": S. Ja'ja, chief of the general staff, removed E. Hubayqah from the post of leader of the "Lebanese Forces" and took his place.

The "15 January putsch" was of greater significance than the personal struggle for power among the right-wing hristian militia which had been exacerbated in recent months. Once again the domestic political equilibrium, achieved as a result of major efforts to elaborate a formula for national consensus in Lebanon, was disrupted.

Let me remind you that at the end of last year, through the mediation of Syria, an agreement was concluded in Damascus between the main warring factions -- the "Lebanese Forces" on the one hand and the Amal movement and the Progressive Socialist Party (PSP) on the other.

The Damascus agreement contained a broad program of reforms aimed at eliminating the main causes of internal tension. In particular, it envisaged the renunciation of the principle of confessionalism, that is, the distribution of posts on a religious and communal basis. In the transitional stage it was proposed to even out the representation of Christians and Muslims in parliament (at present this ratio is six to five in favor of the Christians) and to review the functions of the president, prime minister, and so forth.

The events of 15 January set back the normalization process which had begun. The putschists demanded a revision of the Damascus agreement. These demands were supposed by Lebanese President A. al-Jumayyil.

By all appearances, right-wing Christian bourgeois circles, especially the Maronite branch, were not prepared to give up their privileges for the sake of national unity. In accordance with confessional law only the Maronites have the right to nominate a representative for the post of president. They have long held other key positions in state life also.

The country is divided into opponents and supporters of the Damascus agreement. But this watershed does not only follow the religious line, as Western propaganda ofter suggests. It is a question in effect, of a struggle between conservative and progressive trends in the country's socioeconomic and political development, between those who would like to preserve the existing structures and those who advocate changes.

That is why the Christian and Islamic extremists find themselves objectively in the same camp, paradoxical as it may seem at first glance.

The split led to the ending of intrastate political contacts. The prime minister, the speaker of parliament, and the Muslim ministers are boycotting the president. The government has not met for some months. The political stagnation is promoting a further deterioration in the general situation.

The constant outside interference complicates the domestic situation. Lebanon has long since drained the bitter cup of a "settlement" according to Western formulas. The peace brought on the bayonets of the U.S. Marines and soldiers of the "multinational forces" led to terrible trails. Yet, now the Lebanese are being persistently fed this "idea": In the conditions which have arisen, the West could provide a formula for a Lebanese settlement to replace the Damascus agreement. An attempt is thus being made to push Lebanon onto the path of repeating the grievious errors of the past.

Reports have appeared in the Beirut press about the revival of collaborationist ties between the "Lebanese forces" and Israel. Apparently, some people, on the basis of selfish interests, would like to consign to oblivion even the fact that Israel aggression has cost and continues to cost Lebanon dear.

There have also been hostile attacks on Syria from the opponents of the Damascus agreement, although experience shows that it was Syria which succeeded in playing the part of intermediary and acting as a stabilizing factor in the Lebanese situation.

The heat of political passions developed into military confrontation, in which the "Lebanese Forces" are opposed by detachments of the PSP, Amal, and a number of other organizations. In recent weeks dozens of settlements to the east and north of Beirut, the suburbs of the Lebanese capital, and its center have found themselves in the zone of armed clashes. There have also been outbreaks of fighting in the region of the Palestinian camps in West Beirut between the Palestinians and the Amal Movement. All this results in more and more casualties.

As usual, Tel Aviv has taken advantage of the latest round of clashes within Lebanon. The Israeli military has again invaded regions deep within the country. Some 1,500 officers and men, hundreds of tanks and armored carriers, helicopters, and gunboats providing cover from the sea took part in the "combing operation" which lasted many days. Israeli aircraft have just bombed Sidon, situated 40 km south of Beirut, again.

It is a vital necessity for Lebanon to settle the domestic crisis. Torn by internecine strife, it is defenseless in the face of the Israeli aggressor and the imperialist forces which support it.

IZVESTIYA Publishes Gromyko Sverdlovsk Speech

[TASS special correspondents N. Potapova and A. Sivtsov report: "Soviets' Tasks in Light of 27th CPSU Congress Decisions"]

[Text] Sverdlovsk, 11 Apr — The tasks of Sverdlovsk Oblast soviets of working people's deputies in implementing the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress were examined by a session of the oblast soviet together with the party aktiv which took place today. A.A. Gromyko, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, participated in its work.

Addressing the session he said:

Today we are discussing a question of immense importance — the tasks of soviets stemming from the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress. The congress was an event of historic importance. It showed that the party is confidently pursuing a Leninist course and is worthily carrying out the role of vanguard of the working class and the entire Soviet people.

The Central Committee Political Report delivered at the congress by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, showed the inexhaustible potential of socialist society.

The congress enriched the treasure-house of scientific communism with important theoretical provisions relating both to questions of our domestic development and to international affairs.

The congress program documents fully accord with the tasks set by the party of improving socialism and are imbued with the idea of the need for qualitative changes both in the economy and in society as a whole. The line of the CPSU Central Committee April (1985) Plenum was fully approved. The plenum put forward and substantiated a detailed concept of accelerating the country's socioeconomic development. The essence of party strategy lies in ensuring a materially and spiritually rich life for Soviet people under conditions of peace and in more fully revealing the colossal potential and advantages of the socialist system.

A.A. Gromyko went on to say that the high labor enthusiasm which has recently been evident everywhere is the response to the decisions and directives of the congress. It is also typical of the working people of Sverdlovsk Oblast — a powerful economic, scientific, and cultural center in the Urals which occupies a leading place in the country's sociopolitical and economic life.

Today, in the light of the congress directives, each soviet is naturally asking what it should primarily focus on. Others are also asking the same question. The congress directive is clear: Soviets are responsible for all aspects of life on their territories. Whereas some people may state that it is not their question, such an attitude is unacceptable for soviets. This was also stated at the 27th congress.

As organs of state power, the soviets are masters at the local level. And where this is not true, we must strive to ensure that it becomes so! They lead economic and sociocultural building. They cannot shift this responsibility onto anyone else. Housing and education, consumer goods and health care, transportation and trade, consumer services and nature protection, concern for increasing the material and spiritual level of Soviet people's lives — this is just part of the soviets' boundless sphere of activity.

Questions of social policy have always been at the center of attention of party and state — they have been examined at each CPSU congress. But never before have they been posed with such acuteness or so combatively as they were at the 27th congress. Anyone who was a delegate to the congress accurately and clearly realizes this. The congress called for a resolute turn toward the needs of the social sphere and for an intensification of the social orientation of the economy, scientific and technical progress, and the running of the country's life. And an important role in this is played by the soviets. This idea was well and convincingly emphasized by M.S. Gorbachev in his speech a few days ago in Tolyatti.

Plans, namely the plans for the economic and social development of territories, are the main effective means of resolving urgent tasks locally.

An obligatory demand is being made on plans: They must be comprehensive. In the context of plans and actions, comprehensiveness means combining the interests of sectors, territories, and local soviets and enterprises under higher jurisdiction into a single whole, a single unit. Hence it follows that wherever a new plant, factory, or combine is being built, good quality housing, schools, hospitals, stores, creches, kindergartens, roads, sidewalks, movie theaters, and stadiums should be built at the same time. It is a truism that where this is observed, things go better.

However, life attests that this approach is not yet predominant everywhere. This is because of both to long-standing overcentralization and obstacles that have now been erected by certain ministries and departments. The inability of a number of economic leaders to properly take the population's real needs into account, their inadequate understanding of their responsibility for their job, and sometimes plain bureaucratism all play their part. That is why leaders of local soviets often act as petitioners and go from one authority to another, parading their eloquence, which, as a rule, staunch bureaucrats do not lack.

The 5-year plan for the country's economic and social development is now being drawn up. In June it will be examined by the USSR Supreme Soviet and after adoption will become law for all. And what stands behind the plan figures must be implemented. The congress decisions and the nationwide enthusiasm which they have generated oblige us to do so.

Today successful economic development is only possible on the path of intensifying production, improving labor productivity, reducing output prime costs, introducing the achievements of science and technology, improving the running of the national economy, and increasing organization and discipline. These words of the congress decisions are almost cast in metal in terms of their precision and conviction. Thus it seems that they were directly adopted for the glorious city of Sverdlovsk and for your oblast. Sverdlovsk Oblast and its oblast capital are able to set the country a good example in fulfilling these tasks.

A.A. Gromyko stressed that the majestic tasks set by the party congress demand changes from Soviet organs in the style of work in the highest meaning of the phrase. Initiative, creativity, and professionalism must be the norm of behavior and the internal conviction of each Soviet worker.

We have tight deadlines for introducing economic and social reserves and the additional potential of production, science, and technology and for utilizing all the advantages and the entire force of the socialist social structure.

To this end it is necessary to do a great deal of work. There are many soviets in the cities and the countryside where the necessary restructuring of thinking has not yet taken place and where inertia and sluggishness still abound. Discussion of questions of soviets' activities at USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium sessions, conversations with deputies — workers, kolkhoz members, and specialists in various sectors — and monitoring work by Supreme Soviet standing commissions show that meetings, conferences, and all types of current measures often overshadow the main reason for the Soviet power's existence. The task of really improving people's lives and satisfying working people's interests and needs is overshadowed.

I recall how Vladimir Ilich Lenin once reacted to the actions of the Moscow city soviet. Having discovered that the ispolkom was discussing organizational questions much more than economic questions, he noted: "This is abnormal! It should be the other way around."

I draw your attention to Lenin's position because it is no less topical today than it was in 1920. The essence of the matter is that the organizational work of soviets must not become inward-looking. It is necessary to resolve specific economic and socio-cultural tasks. To that end organizational work is pursued, improved, and made better. Therein lies its task and its purport! Without this it is an empty vessel.

I do not want to make a list at this point, noting the obviously positive things in the oblast. But objectivity demands that your positive achievements be recognized. Your experience deserves to be studied by others.

Familiarization with matters shows that you are assessing what has been achieved more profoundly than in the past, revealing the reasons for shortcomings, and drawing up more well-founded and specific decisions. The general conclusion is undoubtedly that the activity of soviets is changing for the better. This is a good indicator.

In the first quarter of 1986, Sverdlovsk Oblast overfulfilled the targets for production volume and labor productivity in industry. That is a no less good indicator! There is still plenty of work here; but there is also plenty of unutilized potential, which must be awakened and put into action. Perhaps some people will not understand where this dormant potential lies. Such potential does exist in Sverdlovsk Oblast; it is at its enterprises, which have become the pride of the country. In order to awaken and utilize the potential of these enterprises, it is necessary to show greater initiative, will, and resolve.

What, for instance, is the capital construction situation with respect to the enterprises and farms of the oblast's local soviets? In 1985 construction plans were only 69 percent fulfilled for consumer service projects, only 62 percent fulfilled for communications facilities, and only 53 percent fulfilled for local industry projects. And it is not only contracting construction organizations that are accountable here but also local soviet organs. They are not outside observers. As you can see, there are bright spots and dark areas.

This is the picture in the oblast as a whole: Last year the capital construction plan was not fulfilled. More than 4,000 projects simultaneously are at the construction stage and a number of them have been under construction for more than 10 years.

Now for the state of affairs in the oblast's agriculture: Can your present-day harvests of agricultural crops and milk yields really be deemed suitable? What conclusions have been drawn from the fact that one in every four farms finished last year at a loss? Yet the congress resolutely stressed that the agro-industrial complex requires paramount attention.

The essence of the congress directives regarding the restructuring of management in agriculture is known to you: It is necessary to effect a transition to the planning, financing, and management of the agro-industrial complex as an integrated whole at all levels. This must intensify the ties between agriculture and the processing and servicing sectors and improve the economic machinery.

There may be some people who think that the restructuring will automatically bring more meat, milk, vegetables, and fruit to our tables.

No, no one can expect this to happen. This is why I fully share the opinion expressed at your oblast party conference in January that high milk yields must be struggled for directly at the stock unit and feed shop level. And this task can be resolved only by the people's labor and its improved organization.

It would be unfair if, addressing the oblast soviet's session attended by the party aktiv, I failed to draw your attention to the need for a most serious attitude toward the matter of road construction. You know better than any outsider that this is one of your bottlenecks. It fetters your potential, of course.

It is no accident that your plan in this respect is tight. It has been elaborated, and quite well elaborated at that. I am basically familiar with it. It is a tight plan: The volume of road building is set to increase by 40 percent during the 5-year plan period, and almost 2,500 km of hard-surface roads are due to be commissioned. The route of the Krasnoufimsk-Sverdlovsk-Tyumen main highway linking Europe with Asia, which you also have to build in the 12th 5-Year Plan period, runs across your territory.

The of production consumer goods, the expansion of their variety, and in particular the improvement of their quality remain among the most important avenues of soviets' work. Speaking about the important problem of consumer goods quality, and generally about the quality of output produced by the national economy, it is expedient to recall that passage of the Central Committee Political Report which says: "There is a need for radical measures ruling out the production of defective products and substandard goods. With a view to this, it is necessary to apply the full power of material and administrative influence and make use of our laws. There is evidently a need to pass a special law on output quality." Such a law is already being drafted.

The activity of soviets covers a number of other spheres for which they bear responsibility — exacting and labor-intensive, but nevertheless important spheres since they affect man's interests directly, regardless of whether he lives in a city or in the countryside. I have in mind primarily housing construction. It is no accident that questions of improving Soviet people's housing conditions were given a particularly forceful airing at the party congress.

Action by everyone is needed to fulfill the congress directive of ensuring an apartment or individual home for every Soviet family in the period through the year 2000. This is a task of the entire people. All ministries and departments, every labor collective, the trade unions, and the Komsomol must play their part in resolving it. And, of course, every soviet of people's deputies, which has an obligation to fully examine the current state of affairs of housing on their territory and be aware of the existing housing pool and actual needs as regards the improvement of housing conditions. Every soviet must mobilize all energies, primarily local potential and resources, to achieve the set goal.

Let us look at the question of health care. Soviet power has ensured a fitting solution for it, a solution of which working people can only dream under capitalist conditions. Incidentally this is well known throughout the world. The preservation of people's health is an important social task in socialist society and in our time, and unflagging attention must be given to it.

The party congress pointed out strongly and energetically the need to sharply improve the state of affairs in this sphere. Good medical services including the utilization of the latest equipment, check-ups, regular medical examinations at work, and the creation of modern medical treatment institutions — this is what Soviet man needs.

Unfortunately, there are instances when medical treatment institutions are short of medical personnel, certain medicines, or places for patients. Other serious shortcomings also exist. This situation is intolerable. Soviet people have a right to expect a sharp improvement of the state of affairs throughout the health care sphere.

The preservation of health demands the pooling of efforts by soviets, trade unions, and enterprises in organizing rest periods in preventive clinics, sanatoriums, and other health care institutions. The oblast's major enterprises maintain them in a fair condition. Labor and rest must be a source of Soviet people's satisfaction. Soviets must be directly involved in monitoring the fulfillment of plans for the construction and quality of such projects and must organize their work in conjunction with the trade unions.

We have so many remarkable descriptions of the Urals! Such natural beauty cannot be found anywhere else in the world. It seems as if every mountain greets the traveler from afar, whether he is arriving by train or car. What rare natural beauty. No wonder it has been so succinctly depicted in Bazhov's stories! Rainbow-hued Ural rocks have fired the imagination of many generations of people, both young and old.

The logical conclusion stemming from this is that nature, this unique landscape, the region's beauty must be preserved. A worthwhile and noble task! It also has other aspects — national economic, social, and educational. Soviets and the oblast leadership in general must display energy and inventiveness so that, while developing the economy, the originality of these enchanting places can be preserved.

The Communist Party and the Soviet state show constant concern for socialist legality and the maintenance of public order and are struggling against those who break the law, against embezzlers and bribe-takers. Much has been done in this struggle at the local and republic level. People who breach the norms of our morals, abuse trust, and overstep legal limits must be held most rigorously to account. There must be such accountability! Help in this direction is offered by publicity and control, and primarily by control from below — control by workers collectives and public organizations.

People's deputies also have a great role here. Who if not a deputy knows and must know the situation in the region and in production, and sees those who live off unearned incomes and breach the principles of social justice? Much depends on deputies and their active stance. Every one who has been elected by the people must be a fighter for the implementation of the 27th CPSU Congress directives.

The struggle against crime remains topical. While there was an overall reduction in the number of serious crimes in your oblast last year, there are stilll a significant number of instances of embezzlement of socialist property, theft of private property, and hooliganism.

Strict obedience of laws is both a constitutional and a political demand. It is incumbent upon law enforcement organs, leaders of ministries, departments, enterprises, institutions, and organizations, and all officials to bear this in mind in their daily activity.

A serious struggle is being waged in the country against drunkenness and alcoholism. Today, as was noted at the party congress, there are already tangible successes in the struggle against this social evil. This is confirmed by numerous facts. But the objectives set by the party must be achieved strictly in line with the laws that have been passed. There must not be and there will not be any retreat at all. Socialist society must be sober and morally healthy! This is an obligation imposed on every citizen of the country by the morals of socialist society and the lofty ideals of our world philosophy.

The organization of meaningful leisure and the improvement of the work of culture centers, clubs, libraries, and cultural and sports complexes constitute an important aspect of soviets' activity. Tourism, physical culture, amateur artistic activity, and truck-farming and orcharding associations — all these enable people to spend their free time sensibly.

It is completely appropriate to also draw your attention to a question closely linked with this — the question of expanding the construction and consolidating the material and technical base of rayon culture centers and clubs in the countryside. This question was recently discussed at the CPSU Central Committee Politburo. As you know from the relevant resolution which was published in the press, it is planned to build twice as many club institutions in the 12th 5-Year Plan period as in the 11th. And why should Sverdlovsk Oblast not set an example in the solution of this important problem? In our opinion, your potential allows you to do so!

The need to further deepen democratic principles in the running of the state and the activity of ispolkoms was discussed at the party congress. Indeed, it is necessary to do much more work to improve the state apparatus and eliminate red tape and bureaucracy.

The 27th congress showed that the success of the cause and the acceleration of the country's development can be ensured only through the creativity of the masses. And if the state of affairs were to be examined exactingly and in a principled party fashion, one could not fail to perceive that the human factor is still inadequately utilized in our socialist practice.

It can be said without exaggeration that our economic and human potentials are both inexhaustible. Taking the country as a whole, deputies alone number 2.3 million. This is a vast number! The guarantee that this potential is inexhaustible lies in the very nature of the socialist system, the full power of the people, the public ownership of the means of production, and the absence of exploitation and oppression.

The CPSU Central Committee Political Report and the congress decisions defined most lucidly the international strategy of the Communist Party and Soviet state, the chief aim of which is to ensure for Soviet people the opportunity to live and labor in peaceful conditions.

A.A. Gromyko stressed that the Soviet Union's proposals concerning a world free of weapons of mass destruction have encountered active support from broad sections of all the progressive public. These proposals have also been received with understanding by those figures in the West who, while not being ideological kindred spirits of ours, soberly assess the threat hanging over mankind and display a sincere interest in the improvement of the planet's political climate.

The new Soviet initiatives are exerting a tremendous influence on the course of events in the world. They instill in people's hearts the hope that lasting peace is possible, albeit a difficult matter.

We do not, of course, shut our eyes to the fact that militarist circles in the United States and in the NATO countries are gambling on prolonging the arms race and on strong-arm methods in world politics. After all, during the Soviet-U.S. meeting at the highest level in Geneva it was stated in the joint document that there must be no nuclear war and that the sides will not seek to attain military superiority.

All this indicates that those who oppose the improvement of the international situation and the arms race apologists are reluctant to renounce a dangerous course in world affairs.

Guided by the decisions of the congress, our party will seek to solve the problems of international security, of the reduction and total elimination of all types of weapons of mass destruction, and of preventing the militarization of space. The Soviet Union intends to continue to follow the Leninist course of peaceful coexistence among states.

In a nutshell, it is a question of a vigorous Soviet foreign policy in all spheres in the interests of the highest and most noble goal — the preservation of peace. In the struggle to solve this task the Soviet Union is marching arm in arm with the other fraternal socialist states.

In seeking to end the arms race and strengthen peace, the Communist Party and Soviet State are paying unremitting attention to the strengthening of the country's defense capability. M.S. Gorbachev spoke most clearly about this from the 27th CPSU Congress rostrum. We shall continue to cherish fondly the security of our motherland. The Warsaw Pact Organization — a constructive factor in European and world politics — stands guard like a mighty bastion over the borders of the fraternal socialist states.

The foundation of the effectiveness of our foreign policy is the selfless labor of the Soviet people. In whatever sector of communist construction a Soviet person may be working, he has to know full well that his labor is also a contribution to our country's foreign policy.

Our optimism is guaranteed by the heroic labor of all Soviet people, including the working people in the twice order-bearing Sverdlovsk Oblast and the order-bearing city of Sverdlovsk. The people will never forget the contribution made by Urals workers to the victory of October and the building of socialism, and remember the heroism displayed by Sverdlovsk's people during the grim years of the Great Patriotic War. The oblast's working people are rightly proud of their successes.

The party Central Committee expresses confidence that the oblast's working people will do everything to resolve the economic and social tasks facing them, thus writing new pages in the annals of the Soviet people's heroic deeds.

We did not particularly plan for this meeting of ours to take place on 11 April, on the eve of the 25th anniversary of the first manned flight in space by Yuriy Alekseyevich Gagarin. It just happened. This is an instance when accident seems to have a deliberate meaning. It consists of the fact that 25 years ago a great power — the Soviet Union — brilliantly demonstrated man's colossal ability in unraveling the laws of nature so as to make them serve mankind and the cause of peace, for which our country is persistently struggling.

Gramov To Head New State Sports Committee

MVD Collegium Discusses Congress Tasks

PM141000 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 10 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 3

[Unattributed report: "Collegium Session"]

[Text] An enlarged session of the USSR MVD Collegium was held on 9 April. It discussed the tasks of internal affairs organs stemming from the 27th CPSU Congress decisions.

It was noted at the Collegium that in the work of internal affairs organs to reinforce legality and law and order, paramount importance is attached to preventive measures, elimination of the causes and conditions contributing to violations of the law, and efficient disclosure of crimes. Specific measures were outlined to step up the struggle against embezzlement of socialist property, the receiving of unearned income, bribetaking, speculation, drunkenness, hooliganism, parasitism, and other antisocial phenomena.

Particular attention was devoted to questions of selecting and placing cadres; further improving party and political, and ideological and educational work with personnel; increasing openness; regularly informing the population of internal affairs organs' activity; strengthening ties with labor collectives and the public; and improving work style.

Participating in the Collegium's work were: N.I. Savinkin, chief of the CPSU Central Committee Administrative Organs Department; USSR Prosecutor General A.M. Rekunkov; Chairman of the USSR Supreme Court V.I. Terebilov; USSR Minister of Justice B.V. Kravtsov; V.M. Mishin, first secretary of the Komsomol Central Committee; responsible workers in the CPSU Central Committee and the USSR Council of Ministers; and the leaders of a number of ministries and departments.

Historian Examines CPSU's Leading Role

PM091054 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 4 Apr 86 First Edition p 2

[Article by Doctor of Historical Sciences V. Kasyanenko:"The Leading Force of Society: the 27th CPSU Congress: Strategy of Acceleration"]

[Text] The 27th CPSU Congress has adopted a scientifically substantiated, realistic, and mobilizing strategy for the acceleration of the country's socioeconomic development based on scientific and technical progress, a strategy that has met with the Soviet people's active support. Deepening and enriching the ideas and revolutionary initiatives of the CPSU Central Committee April (1985) Plenum, the congress has swung society sharply toward new tasks.

Closing the congress, M.S. Gorbachev said: The party "is entering the postcongress period better organized, more united, and more battleworthy, equipped with a well-considered long-term policy. It is fully resolved to act purposefully, aware of the complexity, scale, and novel nature of the tasks facing it, not afraid of difficulties and obstacles."

The decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress have made a considerable contribution to the further development of the Marxist-Leninist teaching about the Communist Party and its growing role in socialist society.

Historical experience indicates that at every new stage of communist building, the CPSU's leading role is enhanced in accordance with the changed conditions; its influence on the activity of all the components of the socialist society is intensified. This is true in particular of turning points in history when demands on party leadership increase substantially. The concept of acceleration adds new content to the party's activity. This activity is marked by a more profound and comprehensive approach to tackling domestic and international problems, an intensification of the scientific substantiation of immediate and long-term tasks, an increase in the effectiveness of policy, and an improvement in the style and methods of work of the party itself.

The new edition of the CPSU Program adopted by by the congress defines the main factors which lead to the law-governed enhancement on the party's leading role and result in increasingly high demands on the standard of political and organizational activity.

The current stage, the stage of socioeconomic acceleration, is a truly crucial stage in the life of our country. The integral nature of our social system is being enhanced, the close interrelationship between economic, social, and spiritual progress is growing stronger, and the scale and complexity of the processes of communist building are increasing. The new society grows and develops not spontaneously but as a result of the people's conscious efforts directed by their political vanguard. Consequently, the importance of effective political leadership and of consciously influencing the course of acceleration increases.

The party's leading influence permeates all spheres of our life. And it cannot be otherwise in the conditions of an integral system of real socialism and the increasingly complex interrelation and interdependence between economic, political, social, and educational factors and processes which require scientific management.

The upsurge in the creative activeness of the masses and their extensive involvement in the management of production and administration of state and public affairs are also inseparably bound up with enhanced party influence.

The deepening of socialist self-management and the further democratization of society demand, on the one hand, that the masses' activity is developed and encouraged, and on the other hand that the whole gamut of diverse social interests is taken into account and harmonized. Neither is possible without the active participation of the party.

The elaboration of the long-term strategy for the country's development is based on the conclusions of Marxist-Leninist theory, on the profound interpretation of the practice of communist building, and on a quest for scientifically substantiated and prompt answers to the questions raised by life. This was graphically reflected in the elaboration of the innovative concept of acceleration and the clarification and enrichment of the theoretical principles concerning the ways of achieving a qualitatively new state of Soviet society.

The enhancement of the party's role in the country's progress is also tied up with spiritual and ideological processes, namely the enhancement of the working people's consciousness and the eradication of the vestiges of petit bourgeois mentality and morality and of all deviations from the norms of the socialist ways of life.

A fundamentally new element among the factors which determine the enhancement of the CPSU's leading role that is recorded in the documents of the 27th congress is the organic link between these questions the and changes which are taking place in the international arena. The increasing complexity of the situation in the foreign policy sphere determines the CPSU's historical mission in international affairs and in the elaboration of the peace-loving course aimed at ensuring the country's security, curbing aggressive forces, and delivering mankind from the threat of a nuclear catastrophe.

The party is becoming an increasingly active force, in international politics so to speak, it has, after all, produced most important initiatives aimed at eliminating the nuclear threat and strengthening peace on earth and in space. The 15 January 1986 statement by M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, and the extensive program for creating a comprehensive system of international security set forth in the Political Report to the 27th CPSU Congress serve as vivid confirmation of this.

In short, the present time and its problems and concerns dictate the further intensification of the party's influence on the state of affairs inside the country and the improvement of the situation in the world.

The law-governed enhancement of the CPSU's leading role was also vividly demonstrated in the course of the 27th party congress proceedings. The entire spirit of the congress and its documents and materials are the practical embodiment of the CPSU's leading and directing activity in all spheres of Soviet society's life and of its active stance in the international arena.

The party can successfully implement the new tasks only if it itself is in the process of continual development. Proceeding from Marxist-Leninist theory and its own rich historical experience, the CPSU is enhancing the scientific substantiation of its policy, boosting the human factor in every way, strengthening the unity between ideological-theoretical, political-educational, organizational, and economic work, and waging an uncompromising struggle against all manifestations of stagnation.

The CPSU regards the acceleration of scientific and technical progress, the renewal of society's material and technical base, the transfer of the national economy to an intensive footing, the improvement of social relations, the implementation of a strong social policy, and the education of harmoniously developed individuals as the main task in its leading and directing work.

There are many examples of this kind of guiding influence being exercized by party organizations on the course of the acceleration of scientific and technical progress and the implementation of social programs. Places where positive experience in party leadership has been accumulated were cited at the congress. They included Leningrad, the Ukraine, Belorussia, Georgia, Latvia, Sverdlovsk and Chelyabinsk Oblasts, and other parts of the country. However, this restructuring has taken place far from everywhere.

The party endeavors to see and assess the state of Soviet society in its entirety, with all its progressive and negative trends. The 27th CPSU Congress presented a remarkable "lesson in truth," an example of efforts, proceeding from principled class positions, to grasp a complex situation and objectively assess achievements, difficulties, and contradictions. While duly appreciating what has been achieved, we want to advance more swiftly on a qualitatively new basis. Complacency goes against the very nature of the Communist Party, against the very nature of socialist society.

Experience indicates that even the best scientific concepts and slogans which objectively reflect the natural needs of social development do not produce the desired results if they are not backed up by active organizational, ideological and political education work among the masses. having drawn up the strategy of acceleration, the party is focusing efforts on the practical organization of this matter, on the deployment of cadres, and the restructuring of the activity of all its components. The main task now is to guide society toward the practical implementation of the party's general line and to mobilize the people's entire creative potential for this purpose.

"The current stage, the stage of the qualitative transformation of society, demands new efforts, from the party and all its organizations, principledness in assessing their own work, efficiency and selflessness," the resolution of the 27th congress says. "The further enhancement of the party's leading role and the intensification of its influence on the activity of all the components of socialist society will be promoted by the consistent implementation of the provisions contained in the new edition of the CPSU Program, and the party statutes which embody and develop the bolshevik principles of party building and of the style and methods of party work and the ideological and moral norms of Communists' conduct elaborated by V.I. Lenin and proven in practice."

The Central Committee Political Report, the new edition of the CPSU Program, and other congress documents clearly define the ways and means of enhancing the party's leading role within the political system of Soviet society. The party itself is the highest form of a self-governing sociopolitical organization and acts as the leading force and main guarantor of the development of socialist self-management. By developing democracy within the party and enhancing the activeness of Communists who work in all components of the political system, the CPSU channels in the right direction the process of the deepening of self-management and broadening of participation of the masses, of every citizen, in the country's affairs. However, the party does not administer society directly, it does not supplant the state. This was stated with the utmost emphasis at the congress. The CPSU believes that it is essential to scrupulously respect the specific functions of party, state, and social organs, to efficiently coordinate their work, and to eradicate manifestations of bureaucracy, deception, and infringements of party and state discipline.

By the entire structure of its internal life, which is based on the Leninist principle of democratic centralism, the party is setting up an example of creativeness, democratism, initiative, collectivism, and comradeship. It is possible to say that our socialist society's broad democracy begins with democracy within the party, with the free and open discussion of all vital problems. And even the exercise of the party's leading role itself is inseparable from the "intensification," so to speak, of internal party life, the strengthening of the unity of the CPSU's ranks, and the galvanization of every Communist.

The ways and means of improving internal party life are well known and proven in practice. They are the strict observance of the rights and obligations laid down in the statutes, of Leninist norms, and style of work of Communists and party collectives, prevention of discrepancies between words and deeds, greater effectiveness of criticism and self-criticism, the creation of a healthy atmosphere of comradeship and mutual assistance, and the firm establishment of collectivism and efficiency.

The statutes' stipulations that Communists must display a high sense of responsibility and exercise their vanguard role in production and public and daily life acquire a new content. It should be noted that even the statutes of the Communist League which were drafted with the active participation of the founders of Marxism proclaimed the principle that the Communists' way of life and work must accord with the aims of the struggle, with the Communists' obligation to display "revolutionary energy." (Footnote) (K. Marx and F. Engels: Works, Vol 4, p 524) Communists are regarded as an example in everything — the way they work and the way they behave. The Communists' vanguard role does not exist in general terms, it is expressed in practical deeds, the Central Committee Political Report said. In this context, the demands made on every party member concerning his attitude toward public duty and the fulfillment of party decisions, and the requirement that they must present an honest and clean image are growing.

The processes which are taking place in all spheres of society's life have shown that it is necessary rigorously to Leninist principles in the selection, placement, and education of cadres. At the same time, the replacement of a certain section of cadres which is currently under way is not a sign of some kind of critical situation. It is a natural process of renewal in the course of which the party adheres to the Leninist principles of combining enhanced exactingness toward cadres with a caring attitude toward them.

The creative and bold approach to raising and resolving pressing problems, the principled intolerance of shortcomings, and the endeavor to enhance the Communists' vanguard role are evidence of a qualitatively new level of the effectiveness of the CPSU's leading role. All this enriches the Leninist teaching on the party of the new type and its creative mission in building communism.

In proclaiming its strategic course toward accelerating the country's economic and social development, the party has confirmed that its policy is geared to ensuring the welfare of the working people. The decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress indicate particularly clearly that our party is truly a part of the people, acts invariably in the spirit of high responsibility toward the people, it constantly broadens and deepens its links with the broadest masses of the working people, and lives for their needs and concerns. And the people reciprocate with vigorous support for its policy and its general line. In this support, in the indestructible unity of the party and the people, lies the most important and essential precondition for the enhancement of its leading role and the guarantee of the implementation of all our plans.

Dissident Pastor Gets 5 More Years in Prison

AU101912 Paris AFP in English 1907 GMT 10 Apr 86

[Text] Stockholm, April 10 (AFP) — Pastor Pyotr Rumachik, imprisoned vice-president of the Soviet Baptist Church, has been sentenced to an additional five years in a Siberian labor camp, Sweden's Slav Mission announced here Thursday. The mission said it had received information that 54-year-old Mr. Rumachik, married, with five children, was sentenced by a Soviet court last February "for saying that religious freedom does not exist in the Soviet Union and for breaking labor camp regulations."

Mr. Rumachik was to have been freed in August from a labor camp after serving five years for "anti-Soviet activities," which included maintaining links with Western "anti-Soviet elements."

The Soviet Baptist Church, a clandestine organisation, has some 100,000 members, 170 of whom are in custody, the mission said. The Slav Mission is an ecumenical organisation considered well-informed about the problems of Christians in Eastern Europe.

Uzbek Water Shortage, Irrigation Problems Cited

Party, Government Decision

GF131633 Tashkent Domestic Service in Uzbek

[Summary] "The Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee and the Uzbek SSR Council of Ministers have adopted a decision on the concrete measures required for the struggle made against water shortage and for improving water supply to irrigated lands. The decision noted that rainfall in the main [word indistinct] region within the republic's territories from October to March was 50-70 percent of the normal amount. In fact, it was 2-2.5 times less than those in 1984 and 1985.

"Regardless of the water shortage, the necessary measures have not been taken everywhere in the republic. Wastage of water has been allowed in the Kara-Kalpak ASSR, as well as in the Bukhara and Kashka-Darya Oblasts. A number of rayons in the republic have failed to successfully employ the agro-industrial measures required for preserving water.

"The Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee and the Uzbek SSR Council of Ministers advised the oblast and rayon party committees, the Kara-Kalpak ASSR Council of Ministers, the rayon soviet executive committees, and the Uzbek SSR State Agro-Industrial Committee, including the organs affiliated to it, to take the necessary agro-industrial measures on time and to secure the proper use and supply of water."

Joint Meeting Held

[Summary] "The successful and timely use of irrigation water to acquire abundant quantities of yield from (?cotton) and other agricultural products and the employment of measures designed to prevent wastage of water constitute the (?priority) task of the (?agricultural domain). This was the theme discussed in the joint meeting held by the Uzbek SSR Ministry of Land Reclamation and Water Resources, the Uzbek SSR State Committee for Water Resources Construction, and the main trust for sovkhoz construction. The meeting discussed the tasks of the water resources organizations as derived from the results of the work carried out during the first quarter of 1986 and from the decisions adopted by the 27th CPSU congress and the 21st Uzbek Communist Party congress.

"Significant attention was focused on the use of drinking water resources and on the need to employ modern methods in irrigation to acquire a high yield from each hectare of land with less water."

The meeting also discussed modern forms of organizing work and criticized departments which have unsuccessfully used the work force of the brigades.

"Comrade Usmankhodzhayev, first secretary of the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee, addressed the joint meeting. Meanwhile, Comrades Antonov, secretary of the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee, and Dzhurabekov, first deputy chairman of the Uzbek SSR Council of Ministers Presidium and chairman of the Uzbek SSR State Agro-Industrial Committee, participated in the work of the convocation."

Uzbek Party Bureau Criticizes Railways Situation

GF101636 Tashkent Domestic Service in Uzbek
0115 GMT 10 Apr 86

[Summary] "In its regular meeting, the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee Bureau discussed matters concerning the work of the Central Asian Railway Administration's party committee aimed at employing the experience of the Belorussian railway workers for organizing the work of the Central Asian Railway collective with a view to rendering it more successful. The (?railway) party committee and the other party organizations are making a slow effort in reorganizing the forms and methods applied in their work. They have not fully used the experience of the Belorussian railway collective. The effort concerning the improvement of the use of the main funds has not produced appropriate results."

Work is being arbitrarily abandoned by individuals and transportation vehicles are remaining idle due to deficiencies in the organization of work concerning the transportation of goods and passengers. The party organization has not been demanding enough on the leading cadres for achieving the required final results.

"Not all of the Central Asian Railway sectors have been electrified and each and every sector requires significant repairs. Meanwhile, work is continuing to automatize the handling of the transportation of goods and passengers. (?Deficiencies) are emerging in the work to set up automatic equipment and [word indistinct]. Work discipline in the collectives is weak."

The ways and means of facilitating the use of the sources of energy are not being properly utilized. Meanwhile, party control over the weighing of goods and over transportation is weak.

"The leading officials and the trade union committee of the railway network are making little use of the experience gained by the Belorussian railway workers regarding the improvement of control work under the new economic conditions. They have not been carrying out organizational work on a wide scale for explaining the objectives and tasks of the experiment being conducted in the fields. Sufficient concern is not being attached to safeguarding the work of the [word indistinct] and improving their production and living conditions. The funds allocated for this purpose are not being used. The work of the livelihood services organizations is [words indistinct]."

The Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee Bureau recommended that the Central Asian Railway party committee take resolute measures to remove existing shortcomings and increase the pace of the work of railway factories aimed at employing modern technical and technological methods. The party committee was advised to utilize the contemporary experience of the railway factories in the Belorussian SSR and consolidate the work aimed at realizing the important economic experiment. The conditions required for positive creativity must be created in work collectives everywhere to facilitate their work in drawing up their production plans and employing modern work methods.

The Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee Bureau also discussed the most important measures for preventing the wastage of water and improving water supply to irrigated lands. Due to the negative winter and spring conditions, a serious situation exists in the republic's water resources domain. Compared with last year, the level of the republic's running streams is lower. In view of this, the party, soviet, and economic organs, and the primary party organizations and all the workers employed in the agro-industrial field were advised to channel all their strength and effort to prevent wastage of water and to take the required measures for acquiring abundant quantities of agricultural yield.

The bureau also discussed and approved the measures taken by the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee for removing deficiencies and realizing its critical observations. It assigned concrete tasks to the republic's party organs, ministries, and administrations in that regard.

The bureau discussed the work carried out by the republic's commission concerned with organizing the vacation of youths. It also discussed other matters related to the guidance given to the development of the economic field and to other fields. Relevant decisions were adopted on the matters discussed.

Moldavian Party Plenum Discusses Congress

[Report by B. Yevladov under the rubric "Implementing the Decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress": "Establishing the New"]

[Text] Moldavia — Moldavian labor collectives have a considerable number of good deeds to their credit. The republic's industrial enterprises fulfilled the plan for the first quarter of this year relating to production output by 103.5 percent, the production growth rate reached 8.6 percent, and that of labor productivity reached 5.5 percent. The quarterly targets for sale to the state of all types of livestock products were met. In past years all this would have been considered a major success. Disruptions in the work of individual sectors of the economy and laggard rayons and enterprises could remain in its shadow. Now evaluation is far stricter.

Participants in the Moldavian Communist Party Central Committee plenum — it discussed the tasks of party organizations stemming from the 27th CPSU Congress decisions — concentrated their attention on critically analyzing the state of affairs. The report delivered by S. Grossu, first secretary of the Moldavian Communist Party Central Committee, and the speeches highlighted reserves and evaluated achievements at the start of the new 5-year plan as only the first contribution to realization of its plans.

Participants in the plenum devoted particular attention to questions of reconstructing the republic's national economy on the basis of the latest scientific and technical achievements and restructuring the economic mechanism and the management system. It was noted that essential reequipping of production is still only slowly developing. The republic's Gosplan and a number of ministries and Communist Party Central Committee departments which have been unable to concentrate forces in priority areas of accelerating scientific and technical progress were criticized.

Product quality was spoken of with concern at the plenum. Since the beginning of the year the republican administration of the State Committee for Standards has prohibited the manufacture of several dozen obsolete products. Year after year it rejects a considerable proportion of footwear manufactured by enterprises under the Ministry of Light Industry. The causes are well known, but effective measures to rectify the situation have not been taken either by Minister G. Zhitnyuk or by the party committees of the ministry and enterprises.

Dissatisfaction was voiced from the plenum rostrum at the unwarrantedly weak links between science institutions and practical work. Thus, several science and production associations have been set up in Moldavia's agro-industrial complex. Some of them have made a worthy name for themselves, contributing to the successful development of various sectors of agriculture. But only some. Horticulturists in the republic have not felt the effect of the "Kodru" science and production association headed by its general director, A. Vylku. In the many years it has been in operation, the association has simply been unable to propose a reliable system of horticulture, irrigation, and protection of long-established planations. But even available experience has not yet forged paths into every field. One farm in six commits breaches of technological requirements and the harvest of corn, for example, is only half the republic average.

Participants in the discussion attached particular significance to restructuring in organizational party, ideological, and educational work. Today we cannot operate in the old way, in accordance with old patterns. The Moldavian SSR Gosplan must concentrate forces on carrying out the strategic task of accelerating socioeconomic development.

The speakers demanded radical improvement in the activity of finance and credit organs. At present they clearly take insufficient account of reserves for reducing prime production costs and subject plans to amendment, as a result of which the losses incurred by laggards are covered by those work well. Gosbank institutions have not renounced their formal approach to issuing loans. The real task is to create the economic conditions for production development of a cost-conscious nature.

The plenum devoted serious attention to questions of monitoring fulfillment of adopted decisions. Unfortunately, the Moldavian Communist Party Central Committee has not set an example of persistency here. During the last 5-year period it adopted 11 resolutions on questions relating to developing land reclamation and improving the use of irrigated lands, including 3 since the CPSU Central Committee resolution on the work style and methods of the Moldavian Communist Party Central Committee. And what has happened? Plans for land reclamation have remained unfulfilled and the productivity of irrigated fields is low.

During the period of holding the precongress report and election campaign communist exactingness substantially increased. It is important, the speakers said, to continue increasing the demands made on cadres and to develop criticism and self-criticism as an effective means of rectifying and preventing errors. Party principle is not a seasonal thing, it is a weapon for daily use. But in a number of party organizations exactingness still frequently cedes place to veneration for officialdom. Until recently, for example, V. Dobynde, former administrator of affairs of the republic's Council of Ministers, was not subjected to monitoring. He clearly abused this fact. Similar cases have not yet been eliminated.

The plenum passed a resolution outlining a clear-cut program of action to fulfill the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress and the plans for socioeconomic development.

Reportage on Leaders' Appearances, Speeches

Dolgikh at Petroleum Meeting

[Text] An extended meeting of the Collegium of the Ministry of Petroleum Industry and Committee of the Trade Union of the Petroleum and Gas Industry Workers Union Central Committee Presidium took place today in Moscow. The tasks of petroleum worker collectives in the implementation of the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress were discussed. Comrade Dinkov, minister of the petroleum industry, gave a report.

The need was stressed at the meeting to mobilize all existing reserves in order to raise the sector to the planned level of work, and to fulfill unconditionally the tasks of 1986 and of the 5-Year Plan as a whole. Particular attention was paid to the development of the scientific and technological progress in the petroleum industry and the unconditional fulfilling of the tasks in the construction of housing and social, cultural and consumer facilities.

Comrade Dolgikh, candidate member of the Politburo and secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, spoke at the meeting.

[Text] An exacting, critical discussion on ways to reorganize work and increase the fighting spirit of all Komsomol sections took place at the plenum of the Komsomol Central Committee today which discussed the results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the tasks of Komsomol organizations in fulfilling its decisions. The plenum expressed the support of Soviet youth for the party's strategic course for the acceleration of the socioeconomic development of the country and the activities of the CPSU and the Soviet state for the strengthening of peace on the planet. The report by Mishin, first secretary of the Komsomol Central Committee, and other speeches spoke of the need to increase the activeness of each Komsomol member in fulfilling the large-scale tasks set by the party and the resolute overcoming of shortcomings in Komsomol work. Plenum participants stressed that Komsomol members and youth would give their strength, knowledge, and energy to the practical realization of the party's innovative plans.

Specific measures for the strengthening of all organizational and educational activities of the Komsomol were determined in light of the demands of the party forum. Razumovskiy, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, spoke at the plenum.

[Report delivered by Viktor Maksimovich Mishin, first secretary of the Komsomol Central Committee, on 12 April at the 12th plenum of the Komsomol Central Committee in Moscow; from the "Yunost" program — recorded]

[Excerpt] Social and economic acceleration dictates the necessity to determine precisely and strictly the functions of the Komsomol in the sphere of material production. We must reject decisively the faulty practice by several Komsomol committees of duplicating the work of economic organs, by helping them out, and of distracting certain workers with functions not proper to the Komsomol. We must develop in every Komsomol organization an approach whereby in every affair, great or small, it sees first and foremost the educative aspect. Finally, it is time for Komsomol committees to reject the duplication of trade unions' work in questions of organizing competition. Great moral damage is caused by the practice of useless organizers forcing young people to copy out on carbon paper socialist pledges which have been lying for ages in the trade union committee. It is time to put an end to this, comrades.

It is the duty of the Komsomol and all its detachments to make a worthy contribution to the creation of the material and energy basis for acceleration in Siberia and the Far East. Today we know in which directions and how we need to act. But the list of unresolved problems of shock Komsomol construction sites — and not only those situated east of the Urals but also in other regions of the country — still remains extensive.

For many years, at the all-union shock Komsomol construction sites of the Minsitry of Power and Electrification, the Kansk-Achinsk and Ekibastuz fuel and energy complexes, Atommash, Permskaya state regional electrical power plant, and TETS-3 in Khabarovsk Kray, there have been serious shortcomings in the organization of labor. The collectives of Komsomols and young people often stand idle. There is a serious shortage of accomodation and cultural and leisure facilities. The measures taken by the ministry — let's not beat around the bush — are half-hearted. They do not solve the problem as a whole. This approach we consider to be a direct undermining of the very idea of shock Komsomol construction sites, a manifestation of consumerism, callousness and indifference toward young people. We are not demanding that the young people be pampered. But to demand that economic managers should create conditions according to their contract obligations is our right and our duty. This is one of the most important tasks of the Komsomol committees and of the staff of the Komsomol central committees at the shock Komsomol sites.

It must be admitted in all openness that the makeup of detachments of volunteers needs to be significantly improved. It is essential to do this work in such a way that where the detachments are made up a rigorous selection procedure should be organized, along with professional training for the job, putting together the brigades and production collectives.

The restructuring of the Komsomol's work in organizing the patronage of capital construction demands that shortcomings be decisively uprooted. For example, throughout the 11th 5-Year Plan period, plans for appeals for voluntary work were regularly not fulfilled by the Komsomol Central Committee of Kazakhstan, headed by Comrade Abdrakhmanov; of Tajikistan, headed by Comrade Sultanov; of Kursk, headed by Comrade Solovyev; and several other Komsomol oblast committees. The Komsomol Central Committee Bureau has confirmed the plans for appeals for voluntary work on all-union shock Komsomol sites, but already some Komsomol workers are addressing requests to the Komsomol central committee to reuse these plans downward. Two [word indistinct] weeks ago, Tazhbambayev, first secretary of the Kalmyk Oblast committee of the Komsomol, citing objective difficulties, informed workers of the Komsomol Central Committee that not even 50 envoys of the republic would go out as part of the all-union detachment. And this happened when, in answer to the shock ticket [as heard] action, more than 100 requests had come from young men and women in Kalmykia, wanting to go out to shock sites in Western Siberia and the Far East.

[TASS report: "Concern for the Environment"]

[Text] A routine session of the Commission for Environmental Protection and the Rational Use of Natural Resources of the USSR Council of Ministers Presidium was held on 9 April.

The commission examined the nature conservation section of the USSR Gosplan's draft State Plan for the Social and Economic Development of the USSR for 1986-1990 and the State Committee for Science and Technology's report on the plan for scientific research work in that sphere. USSR ministries and departments and union republic councils of ministers have been instructed to finalize this section of the draft plan on the basis of the tasks of further intensifying nature conservancy activity in our country set by the 27th congress.

The session was chaired by V.S. Murakhovskiy, first deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers.

Vorotnikov, Aliyev at RSFSR Forum

1530 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] A republican conference today considered the tasks of the soviet and economic bodies of the RSFSR, the further improvement of the production of consumer goods, the improvement of their quality, and the development of the services sector in the light of the decisions of the 27th party congress.

It was commented that measures have been taken recently to develop the manufacture of consumer goods, to renew the range of products, and to satisfy more fully the demand of the population for manufactured service products. However, many enterprises are still not coping with the tasks set on the manufacture of products, while the range of products and their quality do not correspond to the increased demands of the population.

Commercial services and public nutrition require further improvement. The need was stressed for the unconditional fulfillment of the comprehensive program of the development of production and the improvement of the quality of consumer goods and the services sector.

Comrade Vorotnikov, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the RSFSR Council of Ministers, spoke at the conference. Comrade Aliyev, member of the Cpsu Central Committee Politburo and first deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers; Comrade Biryukova, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee; department chiefs of the CPSU Central Committee; and responsible staff members of ministries and departments took part in the work of conference.

[Text] The representative of the members of the electorate and Inamdzhan Usmankhodzhayev, first secretary of the Uzbek Communist Party Central Committee, held talks in Karshi city, the capital of Kashka Darya Oblast, on 8 April. In his address, Usmankhodzhayev explained in detail the tasks of the republic's workers related to realizing the decisions adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress. In particular, he discussd matters concerning the workers of Karshi city. Upgrading the economy of Karshi city requires further consolidating the work of the people's deputies soviets, improving transportation work in the city, and consolidating order and discipline.

The meeting emphasized the requirement of successful and fruitful work on the part of each individual to successfully realize the plans drawn up the the 27th CPSU Congress.

REACTION CONTINUES TO U.S. NUCLEAR TEST

More on Korniyenko Briefing

LD151509 Moscow in English to North America 2300 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Excerpts] [Announcer] Right now, an account of a press conference held in Moscow on Monday in connection with the latest American nuclear tests. The Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman answered questions from members of the press gathered at the press center.

This is Lutz Lehmann from West German television first program. The general secretary has said that he's going to meet Mr Reagan under no conditions [as heard] but he spoke about the spirit of Geneva and this spirit of Geneva should be reanimated. I would like to know if you see a possibility for the general secretary to meet Mr Reagan under the conditions of today.

[Korniyenko in Russian, fading into translation] The Soviet position on a summit remains the same as it was outlined just recently by Mikhail Gorbachev said the Soviet deputy foreign minister. The Soviet leader favors another summit without any preconditions. But such a meeting ought to yield practical results in the disarmament sphere. The West German television correspondent was quite right to highlight the need for an appropriate political climate preceding the summit and such a climate has yet to be created.

[Announcer] Another question was put to Marshal Akhromeyev, the chief of the Soviet General Staff, also present at the press conference.

(?Phillip Taubman) from THE NEW YORK TIMES. Was there a point in recent months in which you thought that the political gains were not worth the military costs and did you recommend perhaps ceasing the moratorium some time in the last few months?

[Akhromeyev in Russian, fading into translation] The Soviet people, be they soldiers or civilians, all want less military tension, a stop to the arms race and a more stable future, said Marchal Akhromeyev. This desire of the people is fully shared by the Soviet Government and by the Soviet Armed Forces and their command. We are aware of the fact that the Soviet military are pictured in the West as professing ideas contrary to those publicly stated by the Soviet Government. This is simply not true. The Soviet General Staff had never expressed any desire whatsoever to end the moratorium, despite certain costs in military terms. The ultimate decision to end the self-imposed ban was forced on us by the American blatant sabotage, not by Soviet military lobbying.

[Announcer] The following question was addressed to the Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Georgiy Korniyenko.

Stuart Loory, Cable News Network. Mr Korniyenko, how open is the Soviet offer to resume its moratorium if the United States is willing enter into discussions? In other words would the Soviet Union be willing to enter into discussions on a moratorium after the United States completes its modernization and improvement program on its nuclear weapons?

[Korniyenko in Russian, fading into translation] The very word moratorium, said Georgiy Korniyenko, both in English and in Russian means a stop to all nuclear testing and not the completion of a nuclear modernization program. I think Mr Loory should know this and his question seems to be rather misleading.

Dubinin's News Conference

LD121115 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0324 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] New York, 12 Apr (TASS) -- The statement the Soviet Government issued in connection with the USA's carrying out a nuclear explosion on 10 April has aroused a resounding response at the United Nations. As Yu. Dubinin, the USSR's permanent representative at the United Nations stated at a press conference it is appropriate to recall within UN walls that the USSR's declaration and continuation of the unilateral moratorium on any nuclear explosions took into account of the frequent UN General Assembly appeals approved by the votes of almost all UN members. The USSR will persist in conducting a principled policy aimed at banning the testing of nuclear weapons and concluding the appropriate international treaty. This policy is in accord with the hopes of the peoples and is totally in harmony with UN decisions.

Yu. Dubinin expressed the hope that the urgent problem of ceasing nuclear tests would continue to occupy an important place in UN activity and in the personal efforts of its secretary general. The USSR confirms its proposal on immediately starting talks in any form on the total banning of nuclear weapons tests: within the framework of the Geneva disarmament conference, the trilateral talks among the USSR, United States and Great Britain, or bilateral Soviet-U.S. talks. Moreover, the USSR is ready to undertake, jointly with other countries, the necessary steps to extend the Moscow treaty banning nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere, in space, and underwater to include underground tests, also, as the 40th session of the UN General Assembly had urged the USSR's permanent representative stressed.

U.S. Planning Another Test

LD160644 Moscow TASS in English 0631 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 16 TASS -- The United States is going to set off yet another nuclear explosion within the next few days, THE WASHINGTON POST reported today, quoting well-informed sources.

It will be the third nuclear test this year.

Riding roughshod over international public opinion, the Washington administration, according to press reports, intends to stage a total of at least 15 nuclear blasts this year.

The testing program is connected in many ways with the development of a partially space-based multi-tier missile defense.

Verification Stand Elaborated

PM151121 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 15 Apr 86 Second Edition p 3

[Colonel V. Larionov "Expert's Opinion": "Not an End in Itself but a Reasonable Measure"]

[Text] The CPSU Program approved by the 27th party congress outlined a broad package of constructive measures aimed at ending the arms race, at disarmament, and at ensuring peace and security. The CPSU tries to ensure that questions of limiting arms and averting the threat of war are solved by means of honest and strictly observed accords based on the sides' equality and identical security and that any attempts to hold talks "from a position of strength" and to use them as cover for an arms build-up are ruled out.

There is no weapon that the Soviet Union would not be prepared to limit or ban on a mutual basis involving effective verification [kontrol].

The program for eliminating nuclear and other kinds of mass destruction weapons advanced in the CPSU Central Committee general secretary's statement of 15 January this year attaches great, indeed fundamental significance to the question of verification [kontrol]. The Soviet Union has advocated and now advocates that comprehensive inspection [proverka] of the fulfillment of all possible agreements in this sphere be the most important element of the disarmament process and that any agreements on limiting arms be reliably verified [kontrolirovat].

The Soviet Union's approach to questions of verification [kontrol] is based on readiness to take any reasonable measures to help limit the arms race. At the same time, of course, verification [kontrol] is not an end in itself. As was emphasized at the 27th CPSU Congress, "disarmament without verification [kontrol] is impossible, but neither does verification [kontrol] without disarmament make sense." Hence an important practical conclusion: The extent and the methods of verification [kontrol] must correspond to the nature and extent of specific accords. Specific verification [kontrol] methods must be chosen in each case with regard to what practical measures will be taken to limit arms.

What are the possible methods of ensuring reliable verification [kontrol] of the implementation of the disarmament measures proposed by the Soviet Union?

Above all, there is the use of the sides' existing national technical means of verification [kontrol]. Experience of the use of these means to verify [proverka] the treaties and agreements concluded earlier confirms their incontestable priority. Such means of verification [kontrol] are continuously being improved, and their potential is growing.

If necessary, additional measures can be provided to help enhance the effectiveness of verification [kontrol] by national technical means. These could be, for example, agreed notification on questions connected with the fulfillment of accords and the exchange of quantitative data on arms provided for when drawing up agreements envisages that special procedures will be drawn up for the destruction of nuclear weapons and also for the dismantling, reequipping, or destruction of carriers. Here there must be agreement on the numbers of weapons to be destroyed at each specific stage, on the places where they will be destroyed, and so forth.

Other additional measures could also be taken, right down to on-site inspections [inspektsii]. Only it is important that such measures do not serve as an instrument of interference in states' internal affairs or harm any of the sides.

The USSR's approach to questions of verification [kontrol] -- in all directions of limiting and reducing arms — leads to the creation of guarantees of the security of all the states participating in this process and, in the final analysis, to the creation of a comprehensive system of international security. It shows the groundlessness of the attempts by the United States and other NATO countries to use the verification [kontrol] problem to erect artificial obstacles at the talks on limiting arms and to delay reaching mutually acceptable accords there.

It is known that Washington uses references to verification [kontrol] difficulties to block the solution of the problem of banning and totally eliminating chemical weapon stockpiles, refuses to solve the problem of banning space-strike arms, on which the solution of the problem of nuclear arms reduction in turn depends, and is slowing down the process of reducing armed forces and arms in Central Europe.

Recently this tactic of Washington's has been manifested particularly noticeably in the question of ending nuclear weapon tests and in the U.S. refusal to join in the Soviet moratorium on all nuclear explosions. The Soviet Union has declared that verification [kontrol] of the ending of tests is no problem. It can be ensured by national technical means and also with the help of international procedures -- where necessary, even with on-site inspection [inspektsiya]. The Soviet Union has expressed readiness to take advantage of the six states' offer to give assistance in verifying [proverka] the ending of nuclear tests. It has also been suggested to the U.S. Administration that experts from the two countries -- the USSR and the United States -- meet at any time, in any place to discuss questions connected with verifying [kontrol] the ending of nuclear explosions. This clear USSR stance has torn the mask of hypocrisy from the Washington opponents of ending nuclear tests.

The USSR's proposals in the verification [kontrol] sphere clearly demonstrate our country's readiness to solve constructively and without delay the urgent problems of limiting the arms race in all directions, reducing the danger of nuclear war breaking out, and strengthening throughout the world.

U.S. 'Nuclear Madness' Criticized

PM150951 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 13 Apr 86 First Edition p 3

[Colonel M. Ponomarev "Military-Political Review": "Against the Nuclear Madness"]

[Text] The nuclear explosion code-named "Mighty Oak" which rocked the test site in Nevada on Thursday once again lit up the very essence of Washington's policy. It exposed it as utterly brazen, high-handed, and characterized by a total disregard for the opinion of the world community and its own people. In sanctioning this explosion, the White House has demonstrated to the peoples of the world that the U.S. ruling group overtly puts the interests of the U.S. military-industrial circles before the interests of the whole of mankind.

The world community responded to Washington's provocative actions with a storm of anger. Illusions turned to dust -- the illusions of people who despite facts to the contrary still believed until a few days ago that the U.S. Administration was capable of heeding the voice of reason, that ultimately it would join the moratorium on all nuclear explosions introduced by the Soviet Union more than 8 months ago. The irresponsible actions of the U.S. Government are regarded everywhere as an overt challenge not just to the Soviet Union but also to the peoples of all continents, to the world as a whole.

Blinded by its unrealizable dream of military-strategic superiority over the Soviet Union, the Pentagon is demonstratively declaring its plans to proceed with the implementation of its nuclear test program with the aim of improving existing mass destruction systems and creating [sozdaniye] new such systems. An explosion code-named "Jefferson" is scheduled to take place on 23-24 April, THE WASHINGTON POST has reported. In all, another 13 nuclear explosions are planned this year, not counting the two which have already been carried out. And many of them will be experiments with nuclear devices within the framework of the program for the creation [sozdaniye] of "star wars" weapons, that is, space strike arms -- which, incidentally, was the case with the explosion just carried out.

This is the harsh reality. And it bears out again and again how well-founded and topical the following conclusion drawn by the 27th CPSU Congress is: At no time during the postwar decades has the situation in the world been so explosive and unfavorable. Indeed, the arms race unleashed by the United States and its allies in the vain hope of taking social revenge and the development of military technology have brought the world to a critical point.

The Soviet Union poses the question as follows: Is it possible to overcome the negative trends in the development of today's contradictory yet interdependent world? Is it possible to deliver our planet from the threat of a nuclear catastrophe? It is possible to ensure that very complex international problems are resolved by political rather than military means; is it possible to ensure peaceful cooperation between states and peoples? And to all these questions a firm and unequivocal answer is given: Yes, it can be done. It can and must be done.

Furthermore, the USSR has indicated specific and feasible measures to achieve this end which accord with the innermost aspirations of the Soviet people and all other peoples. Our country is persistently questing for a way out of confrontation. To this end, the unilateral Soviet moratorium on nuclear explosions was extended twice and a proposal was put forward to open talks without delay on ending nuclear explosions altogether. Compromise proposals meeting the West halfway were put forward at the conferences in Vienna and Stockholm. In the 15 January 1986 statement by the CPSU Central Committee general secretary a specific and clear plan was set forth for the elimination of mass destruction weapons and the reduction of other arms to limits essential for defense, and large-scale proposals relating to other topical questions were also outlined. A compromise option relating to medium-range missiles and European-zone operational-tactical nuclear weapons was put forward. The withdrawal of the Soviet and U.S. navies from the Mediterranean was proposed.

All these measures were endorsed by the 27th CPSU Congress. The congress drew up principles for the creation of a comprehensive system of international security. The congress defined our party's strategy in the international sphere -- a strategy whose aim is abundantly clear, namely to ensure the opportunity of working in conditions of lasting peace and freedom for the Soviet people. In the current situation, implementing this paramount demand of the party and Soviet foreign policy means above all halting the material preparations for war.

But this is precisely what the U.S. ruling circles do not want. Their actions pursue a diametrically opposed aim; they are forcing on material preparations for war, and primarily nuclear war, in every way. It is becoming increasingly obvious that Washington continues to lay stress on implementing a militarist line and to gamble on strength so as to be able to dictate its will to other countries and peoples. And with this end in mind it refuses to give up its attempts to perpetuate the confrontation situation. Furthermore, it is not embarrassed to speak about this openly.

I would like to recall a recent article by the U.S. defense secretary published in the journal FOREIGN AFFAIRS [KRASNAYA ZVEZDA reported it earlier). It is in the nature of a program document. It defines the main spheres of U.S. military policy in the nineties, that is, for the period through the end of the 20th century. A simple enumeration speaks for itself.

First, the notorious "Strategic Defense Initiative" [SDI] -- in other words, the extension of the arms race to space, the deployment of strike arms in earth orbit, and U.S. acquisition of a first-strike nuclear capability (this is what the article says: SDI in conjuction with the nuclear "deterrent"). Second, the use of military force in conjunction with "deterrence" by means of conventional arms. Third -- and only third! -- "the strategy of arms reduction and control", but even here with the proviso that talks on these problems should be conducted from a "position of strength." And fourth, once again "the strategy of rivalry" based on the "introduction of new weapons systems or a radical modernization of existing systems" to acquire the same old "relative superiority" over the Soviet Union, pursuing the same old objective of confrontation and the undermining of military and strategic parity -- strategic chaos, that is, in all areas.

It is quite obvious that the Washington administration's real aim is not the reduction and elimination of nuclear arsenals but, on the contrary, their buildup and the creation of new, even more destructive types of weapons.

According to THE WASHINGTON POST, the Reagan administration is implementing the biggest nuclear arms production program in 20 years. And at the same time it is seeking the appropriation of additional funds for the expansion of production facilities in order to ensure that weapons of this kind are produced on an even bigger scale during the nineties. The entire U.S. nuclear weapon production complex, which comprises seven factories, three arms development [sozdaniye] research establishments, and the test site in Nevada will be subject to modernization and reconstruction.

Even now new nuclear warheads for the MX ICBM's, Pershing-2 medium-range ballistic missiles, air-, ground-, and sea-launched cruise missiles, 203.2-mm artillery shells, two modifications of tactical aviation bombs, and a new strategic aviation bomb are being manufactured. While 155-mm nuclear artillery shells, warheads for the Trident-2 nuclear submarine missiles, and warheads for ASW defense missiles and depth charges are either in the development stage or the production organization stage.

In the budget for fiscal 1987 the Reagan administration has requested $8.2 billion for nuclear weapons, which is approximately 150 percent more than was spent for the same purpose during the last year of the Carter administration. The plans for new construction and expansion of the U.S. nuclear weapon production complex, the newspaper notes, will make it possible to produce more than 2,000 of these weapons per year. While the creation of new research establishments will make it possible to conduct large-scale studies of the feasibility of using the energy of nuclear explosions in space strike-weapons under the "star wars" program.

However, even without this, U.S. rearmament is under way in all areas and is being implemented at a forced pace. In the last 3 years alone, THE NEW YORK TIMES wrote, 1,080 nuclear cruise missiles for B-52 bombers have been added to the U.S. arsenal, and in the near future their number will be brought up to 1,500. The U.S. Air Force has already received the new B-1B strategic bomber, and another -- the Stealth -- is in the pipeline. THE MX ICBM's are beginning to arrive ahead of schedule. The development [razrabotka] of another missile -- the Midgetman -- is nearly complete. The situation is similar in all branches of the U.S. Armed Forces.

Do people in the United States not understand where all this could lead? Well of course, they obviously do understand. But it is common knowledge that the rate of profit in the U.S. military industry is 50 percent, sometimes even 100 percent above the average for the country as a whole. This is the main incentive for capital to be channeled primarily into the production of instruments of death. And the government, the administration, which acts as the monopolies' executive committee, uses its policy to encourage and expand demand for these instruments. Every means is considered suitable, from "neoglobalism," the latest doctrine, through gambling on regional conflicts and efforts to exacerbate and expand them, demagogical arguments about the "need to protect U.S. national interests" in various parts of the world, to international terrorism elevated to the rank of Washington's state policy and intimidation with the notorious "Soviet military threat."

There is no need to repeat what serious implications all these facts have and what a threat to mankind is posed by the U.S. ruling circles' militarist course.

The Soviet Union assesses the prevailing situation realistically. Since, despite all the USSR's warnings, another nuclear test has been carried out in the United States, the Soviet Union has declared that it no longer considers itself bound by its unilateral pledge to refrain from carrying out nuclear explosions. The Soviet state cannot scarifice its own security and the security of its allies.

However, the prevailing situation will not prevent the USSR from continuing its quest for a way out of the confrontation situation and for a switch to peaceful, civilized relations. The Soviet Union is declaring its readinesss to return to the question of a mutual moratorium on nuclear explosions at any time, provided that the U.S. Government pledges to refrain from carrying out these explosions. After all, the problem of banning nuclear weapons tests is one of the most pressing problems and the USSR will continue to struggle persistently for its solution in the interests of ensuring international security and lasting peace without nuclear weapons.

However, Washington must know that in deciding its policy, the Soviet Union proceeds from a sober assessment of the whole range of real factors. We will not be caught unaware. The Soviet state has proved more than once that it is able to meet any challenge. Should it prove necessary, it will respond as appropriate this time too. Soviet people are well aware of the potential of modern science and their own potential. There is nothing that the United States can do that the Soviet Union cannot.

One would like to believe that Washington has not spoken its last word yet. One would like the United States too to take a step forward along the path of halting the arms race.

Reason must triumph over the nuclear madness.

REACTION AGAINST U.S. LIBYAN RAID NOTED

Gorbachev's Condemnation Meets With UN Approval

LD160543 Moscow TASS in English 0418 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 16 TASS -- The statement of the Soviet Government and the emphatic condemnation by the General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev of the U.S. aggression against Libya which was set forth at the session of the U.S. Security Council by the Soviet Ambassador to the U.N. Yu. Dubinin have met with broad response in the U.N.

Yu. Dubinin said at the session of the Security Council which continued to discuss the lawless and aggressive U.S. actions that the armed anti-Libyan action of the U.S. was obviously connected with the overall policy of Washington aimed at subordinating sovereign countries to U.S. diktat, kindling the existing seats of tension and creating new ones in various regions, and at destabilizing international situation.

It is the direct duty of the Security Council to strongly denounce the act of armed aggression against Libya and demand that the U.S. should immediately stop armed attacks on it and should not stage any such actions in the future.

At the moment the most important thing is to prevent a further aggravation of the threat to world peace, to alleviate the extremely dangerous situation and not to let it get out of control altogether.

Libya UN Envoy Urges Condemnation

LD152109 Moscow TASS in English 2005 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 15 TASS -- The United States bandit and brutal attack against Libya launched with the support of the British and Israeli Governments is an example of open banditry in the international arena, the Security Council was told by Rajab al-Zaruq, Libya's representative to the U.N. Security Council. The American Air Force specially selected residential neighbourhoods of the Libyan cities as the targets of attack and dropped the death-carrying load on peaceful civilians, both Libyans and foreign citizens. The American military received instructions on launching that bandit raid at the same time when the U.S. representative was expatiating at length at the U.S. Security Council on the USA's "commitment" to the U.N. Charter. Al-Zaruq urged the Security Council to condemn resolutely and unequivocally the Washington-sponsored state terrorism to prevent repetition of aggressions against any developing country disagreeable to the USA.

Arab League, AAPSO Decry Act

[Middle East correspondent Leonid Rassadin report; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Our correspondent in the Middle East, Leonid Rassadin, reports by telephone:

This new, criminal aggression against sovereign Libya by the United States has provoked an unprecedented wave of anger and indignation everywhere in the Arab world. Today, from very early in the morning, Arab states' radio and television have been broadcasting the details of the piratical attack made by U.S. aircraft on Libyan territory.

The United States criminal brigandage has been sharply condemned by the Arab League; AAPSO has distributed a statement in Cairo calling on all peace-loving, progressive forces and all people of goodwill in the world to confirm their support with renewed force for the valiant people of the Libyan Jamahiriyah, stolidly withstanding this barbaric aggression from U.S. imperialism.

Worldwide Reaction Noted

LD151951 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1445 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Report from "The World Today" program presented by Valeriy Korzin]

[Excerpt] Since early this morning, the teleprinters have been tapping out indignant reactions from all over the world. The U.S. actions were condemned -- literally in the first hours after the report on the attack on Libya -- by the foreign ministers of Sweden and the Netherlands, Andersson and Van den Broek. The Greens in the West German Bundestag came out against the attack, as well as Horst Ehmke, the deputy chairman of the Social Democratic Party group in the Bundestag; Miguel Porcell, executive secretary of the Central Committee of the People's Party of Panama; Senator Jorge Cruikshank, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Mexican Popular Socialist Party and Nasif Khiti, representative of the League of Arab States. Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, holding an urgent government meeting, voiced deep concern in connection with what occurred on Libyan territory. Al-'Attas, chairman of the presidium of the Supreme People's Council of the PDRY, urgently phoned Al-Qadhdhafi and said that the PDRY is on Libya's side.

Comrades, I have been enumerating these reactions in such detail in order to enable you to imagine what anger and indignation the U.S. actions are arousing in various corners of the globe. On behalf of millions of Soviet peace champions, the Soviet Peace Committee expressed anger and indignation at the unprecedented act of aggression perpetrated on President Reagan's personal orders.

Nonaligned Movement Deplores Action

LD151100 Moscow TASS in English 1002 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 15 TASS -- India and the entire Non-Aligned Movement today strongly deplored the U.S. bombings of Libya and called upon the United States and all others to exercise the utmost restraint and not to do anything to aggravate the tense situation in the region, reports PTI. "The U.S. attacks on Tripoli, the capital of Libya, including the Presidential Palace, are all the more unjustifiable and deserve condemnation on the part of the members of the Non-Aligned Movement", the prime minister, Mr Rajiv Gandhi, said in a statement. "As chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement, I earnestly call upon the U.S. and all others to exercise the utmost restraint and not to do anything to further aggravate the already tense situation in the region", he said. The Non-Aligned Movement also extended its firm support and solidarity to Libya at this critical hour.

Mr. Gandhi said "India and the entire Non-Aligned Movement are profoundly shocked and strongly deplore the U.S. bombings of some cities of Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah. These acts are sought to be justified as retaliation for terrorist acts, allegedly committed by Libya." He said "The Non-Aligned Movement has consistently condemned all forms of terrorism, whether committed by individuals or organised by states. In these particular cases Libya has declared that it had no relationship to terrorist attacks and has declared itself against all terrorist operation like hijacking of aeroplanes and the murder of innocents. In view of this, the U.S. attacks on the capital of Libya, including the Presidential Palace in Tripoli, are all the more unjustifiable and deserve condemnation on the part of all the members of the Non-Aligned Movement."

FURTHER REACTION TO U.S. BOMBING OF LIBYAN SITES

Gorbachev Comments

LD151731 Moscow TASS in English 1606 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- The general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev had a meeting today with Ingvar Carlsson, prime minister of Sweden and chairman of the Social-Democratic Labour Party of Sweden, who is in Moscow on an official visit.

When characterising in detail the socio-economic situation in the world and the international situation Mikhail Gorbachev firmly condemned the American Administration's lawlessness and arbitrary action against Libya. By its armed attack against a small country it exposed the essence of its approach to cardinal international problems. This action, which cannot be justified by any arguments, is a link in the chain of the challenging and provocative actions of the United States taken in response to the Soviet Union's peace initiatives and directed at frustrating the search of ways of improving international relations and stamping out the positive tendencies and hopes that have appeared as a result of the Geneva meeting. They signify a deliberate aggravation of Soviet-American relations.

The whole international community, the United Nations Organization and, in the first place, Western Europe, the NATO member countries are confronted with the serious choice: Passiveness, the more so connivance at or complicity in actions of this kind threatens turmoil in international relations with unpredictable consequences.

Civilisation is going through a turning point in its development. And the time has come for all, who can reason responsibly and sensibly, to take a clear-cut stand, irrespective of ideological and political differences. The mechanism of mankind's self-preservation should be committed to action. There is no time to be lost. Interaction between the Communists and Social Democrats can give much in this respect. Much will also depend on the conduct of Western Europe, which has great potentialities, but lacks political will.

The participants in the meeting pointed out that the meeting in Geneva had set in motion the potential of peace, and it is important to do everything necessary by common efforts to prevent the devaluation of the positive things that were started in international relations.

The similarity of stands on a number of major international problems was noted with satisfaction -- such problems as the need to eliminate nuclear weapons, and end to nuclear explosions, prevention of the transfer of arms to space, cooperation of states on an equal basis, the right to the choice in social development and complete independence, non-interference in internal affairs and so on.

Mikhail Gorbachev expressed unqualified respect for the traditional policy of neutrality conducted by Sweden, highly assessed Olof Palme's international activity in the Nonaligned Movement, as leader of the commission named after him, as one of the initiators of the "Delhi Six" which on behalf of hundreds of millions of people of four continents makes an important contribution to the cause of curbing the arms race.

He expressed readiness to cooperate with Ingvar Carlsson in further efforts to implement the idea of international and European security, including the European north.

Views were exchanged on fundamental questions of bilateral relations. The experience accumulated over many years, the atmosphere of equality and trust make it possible to advance in the development of the political dialogue of the two countries and of mutually advantageous economic ties with the emphasis on new forms of these ties dictated by scientific-technical progress. We want relations with Sweden to be immune to any transient fluctuations, Mikhail Gorbachev said. It was agreed that any problems that might arise will be discussed at various levels directly and frankly as it befits good neighbours, in a spirit of mutual understanding and with due account for the interests of both countries.

At Ingvar Carlsson's request Mikhail Gorbachev spoke about the CPSU's activity to implement the decisions of the 27th congress, the problems which have cropped up in the development of the Soviet society, the innovatory, far-reaching effort on an enormous scale to restructure the whole economy and raise the country to a qualitatively new level. He also said that the whole country has been set in motion and is determined and enthusiastic to make a better, fuller and more effective use of the enormous moral-political and social potential of socialism.

The meeting covered some regional problems and humanitarian issues.

In the common view, the meeting has made it possible to understand better each other's politions and views, has been a good basis for a further development of friendly, stable, Soviet-Swedish relations, intensification of contacts and exchanges of views, for broadening interaction in the international arena both along the state and party lines.

Ryzhkov Condemns Attack

LD151629 Moscow TASS in English 1617 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- The Soviet Government resolutely condemns this bandit action against Libya and demands an immediate end to it, said Nikolay Ryzhkov, member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR. He made a speech today at a dinner in honour of the Prime Minister of Sweden Ingvar Carlsson.

The head the Soviet Government stressed that this act of aggression, which cannot have any justification, is a manifestation of disregard for the interests of small states and peoples and flouts the United Nations Charter that prohibits the use of force in international relations.

USSR Government Statement

PM160957 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 16 Apr 86 Second Edition p 1

["Soviet Government statement"]

[Text] American imperialism has perpetrated a new criminal action fraught with a serious threat to universal peace and security.

On the night of April 14-15 carrier-borne aircraft of the 6th Fleet as well as U.S. planes based in Britain carried out an air attack on Libya and dealt a series of carefully planned strikes at the towns of Tripoli and Banghazi, including their residential areas. This barbarous raid has caused human casualties [chelovecheskiye zhervty] and considerable material damage.

The actual aggression by the United States against Libya, the disregard for the interests of small states and peoples displayed by the United States give rise to indignation in the whole world.

What we have, thus, is yet another patent confirmation of the essentially aggressive approach of the United States to independent developing countries, an approach that with every passing day is acquiring an increasingly warlike nature dangerous to the cause of peace. Contrary to common sense and ignoring present-day realities the American Administration is playing with fire. It should be clear that in the nuclear age all problems in relations between states should be solved by political means.

Not since the bandit attack on Grenada by the United States can one find such a flagrant mockery of international law and human morality in current history. The fact that once again after bombing Libya on 25 March this year the United States struck a blow at that sovereign Arab state irrefutably proves that the present American Administration is making violence, aggression, and belligerent chauvinism a standard of its policy.

Washington is trying hard to translate into practice its concept of "new globalism," which differs from its previous policies in that gunboat diplomacy has given way to aircraft carrier diplomacy.

The latest actions of the United States convince even the few in the West who still had some illusions about the true intentions of the White House that its present policy is a policy of aggression and provoking regional conflicts; a policy of perpetuating confrontation and balancing on the brink of war.

The American aggression is a brazen and open challenge to all world public opinion. No matter what "arguments" are now used in Washington, the fact remains that it is precisely the U.S. Administration that is mainly responsible for the aggravation of tension in the world and is irresponsibly playing with the fate of millions of people. The United States -- a great power, a permanent member of the United Nations Security Council bearing special responsibility for maintaining universal peace -- in practice most flagrantly violates the charter of this organization that prohibits the use of force in international relations.

The Soviet leadership has warned that such actions cannot but affect relations between the USSR and the United States. Unfortunately, as it is evidenced by the aggressive action against Libya, this warning was not heeded in Washington. In effect, the administration itself has made impossible at this stage the planned meeting on the level of the ministers of foreign affairs of our two countries.

The Soviet Government resolutely condemns the aggressive bandit action taken by the United States against Libya, a sovereign state and a member of the United Nations Organization, and demands an immediate end to it. Otherwise, more far-reaching conclusions will have to be drawn in the Soviet Union.

The policy of blackmail and threats, a policy that fundamentally contradicts the interests of peace and international security, should be discontinued once and for all.

'Piratical Actions' Criticized

PM161035 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 16 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Pavel Demchenko article under the general headline "The U.S. Act of Banditry": "Observer's Opinion"]

[Text] For the second time in a month American Armed Forces have inflicted a strike on a sovereign state.

This time the attack on Libya was, as expected, more powerful and on a larger scale than that carried out at the end of March. It involved carrier-borne aircraft from carriers of the U.S. 6th Fleet, which is in the Mediterranean, and also a squadron of bombers based in Britain.

The targets for the bombings and shelling were both military and purely civilian, in particular residential districts of the city of Tripoli. Many dozens of people died, including Libyans and foreigners. By all appearances the destruction was great, and the French and Japanese Embassy buildings also suffered.

Against this background U.S. President Reagan's words to the effect that "the attacks were carefully targeted" and that the American forces "succeeded in their mission" look very sinister. Evidently open aggression by the biggest Western power against a small Arab state (with a population of less than 4 million), the killing of civilians, and the destruction of urban districts is being passed off as a "success." Washington is trying with truly maniacal stubborness, as journalists note, to "teach Al-Qadhdhafi's government a lesson or bring about its fall."

Such piratical actions fit in entirely logically with the present "neoglobalist" course of the American Administration, where the diehard "hawks" are spreading their wings again. Let us recall the events of recent days: Washington's intention of increasing military aid to the Nicaraguan "contras," the sending of Stinger antiaircraft missiles to the Afghan dushmans and the UNITA [National Union for the Total Independence of Angola] gangs in Angola, and finally, the nuclear bomb explosion in Nevada, which caused indignation throughout the world and basically meant the rejection of the Soviet proposal to announce a moratorium on all nuclear explosions. And now the new strike against Libya. All these are links in the same chain, the same crazy policy.

The foreign press is noting today that some of the U.S. West European allies tried to prevent this military act and declared the need to show restraint. But this move was too irresolute and too late. Therefore the NATO states, and above all Britain, following in the wake of the adventurist U.S. course, bear a share of the responsibility for the unpredictable consequences to which Washington's terrorist act could lead. In the desire to impose its will on other countries and peoples, and in particular the peoples of the Near East, Washington presses on without reckoning either with the arguments of reason, or with international law, or with the desire of the planet's peoples for the lessening of tension and for lasting peace.

Bomb Attacks Reported

PM151537 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 16 Apr 86 Morning Edition pp 1, 4

[Report "Based on reports by IZVESTIYA correspondent, TASS, REUTER, and AFP": "U.S. Aircraft Attack on Libya; Reagan Doctrine in Action"]

[Text] On 15 April at 0000 GMT (0200 Libyan time) U.S. F-111 strategic fighter-bombers from bases in Britain and naval aircraft from the assault aircraft carriers of the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean twice bombed residential quarters of the Libyan capital and the city of Banghazi. There are dozens of dead and injured, including foreigners, among the civilian inhabitants. An airborne attack was carried out on the residence of M. al-Qadhdhafi, the leader of the Libyan revolution. Libyan radio has reported that several members of M. al-Qadhdhafi's family have been wounded.

The buildings of the Embassies of France, Greece, Iran, and other countries have suffered as a result of the bomb attack.

There were 16 F-111 aircraft taking part in the raid. Before dropping their lethal cargo on Tripoli they flew above the Atlantic and the Mediterranean over a distance of 5,000 km, refueling in midair.

U.S. Defense Secretary C. Weinberger has announced that France refused to allow the United States to use its airspace to fly the shortest route from Britain to Libya.

Some 15 carrier-based A-6 and A-7 bombers from the U.S. 6th Fleet aircraft carriers American and Coral Sea took part in the attack on Banghazi. AFP reports that fighters and E-2C aircraft equipped with radar apparatus were also involved in the operation.

"During the night," REUTER reports, "Tripoli, a city with a population of 1 million, was awoken by the whine of U.S. military aircraft and the soud of explosions." During the bombing 225-kg and 880-kg laser-guided smart bombs were used.

It has been announced in Tripoli that three U.S. aircraft have been shot down by Libyan air defense means.

According to a BBC correspondent's report from Tripoli, about 100 people wounded during the U.S. air attack have been taken to the Libyan capital's central hospital.

Speaking on television, President Reagan has reported that U.S. air and naval forces delivered a series of bomb strikes against Libyan territory. According to him, a whole series of "carefully" selected targets, mainly of a military nature, were subjected to bombing. He confirmed that the attack was undertaken on his personal orders. In an attempt to justify this act of aggression, he alleged that Libya is pursuing a policy that "threatens" U.S. national interests. That is why the United States acted exlusively with a view to "self-defense" and "prevention," the U.S. President said. The action that was undertaken, he said, "could make the world safer."

Reagan accused the Libyan Government of assisting "international terrorism." Here he cited an explosion several days ago at a West Berlin discotheque as a result of which 2 people died and 230, including 50 U.S. servicemen, were wounded. According to the President, the United States has proof of Libya's involvement in this explosion. Yet previously, virtually on the eve of the attack, administration spokesmen had repeatedly stated that they had no evidence on this score. As is well known, Libya has also stated that it was not involved in the explosion. Moreover, the special commission formed in West Berlin to investigate the circumstances of the discotheque incident has found no link between Libya and the explosion.

The White House incumbent has issued new threats against Libya, stressing that unless Tripoli modifies its behavior, the United States may use military force against that country again. "Today we did what we had to do and if necessary we will do it again," he said.

The President's statements thus leave no doubt that Washington was acting as it saw fit. This adventurist policy, as was to be expected, has failed to meet with support among the U.S. Western European allies. Secretary of State Shultz was obliged to admit that.

Addressing journalists in the White House he said that among Washington's allies "there are various opinions" regarding the military actions against Libya. "So far," the secretary of state said, "they do not share our conviction that these actions were necessary..."

Addressing journalists, White House Deputy Press Secretary Speakes pointed out that the operation undertaken on Reagan's personal instructions had ended successfully. "The U.S. forces," he said, "delivered strikes against command and control, intelligence, communications, and rear services systems and against training establishments," he said. In addition strikes were delivered against military targets in Tripoli and an air defense battery in Banghazi.

The statement issued by the White House states that the delivery of air strikes against Libya "has been completed and U.S. aricraft are returning." At the same time, Defens-Secretary Weinberger admitted that contact with one aircraft had been lost.

Pentagon spokesmen have announced that the aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America are moving toward Libya.

Attack 'Cannot Be Justified'

PM151605 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 16 April 86 Morning Edition p 4

[Political Observer A. Bovin article: "Crime"]

[Text] Frankly speaking, I did not think that the White House would bomb Libyan cities. Not because I had any illusions about R. Reagan's political philosophy or his attitude toward international law. Everything is clear here. However, it seemed to me that the characteristic pragmatism of Americans and their ability to weigh the pros and cons of a particular action would stop Washington at a dangerous line. But I was let down by ordinary logic, the logic I studied in school. Indeed, as the ancients used to say, he whom God wishes to destroy, he first drives mad... For, if they retain a healthy mind and a sound memory, even the Americans cannot reckon that peace will return in times of fist-law.

By all yardsticks, by all criteria -- except overtly, provocatively imperialist ones -- Washington has committed a crime. This means there must be punishment too. In saying this, I am certianly not calling for Washington or New York to be bombed. Criminal adventurism will become immeasurably more dangerous if it is able to shake and undermine political responsibility -- responsibility for mankind's destiny. The response to American piracy must be the effective solidarity of the Arab peoples, the solidarity of all peoples, all states, and public movements that resolutely uphold civilized forms of relations in the international arena.

I want to talk particularly about the U.S. Western European allies. They are now reaping what they themselves have sown. Not to mince words, the U.S. actions can be described as spitting in the face of West European politicians. These politicians have frequently grumbled, sometimes mildly reproved their "elder brother," more rarely protested, but, in the final analysis, they have always indulged American adventurism, found excuses for it, and talked of Atlantic mutual understanding and mutual support. Now they have left it too late [dozhdalis]...

This is not the first time that the American leaders have themselves put their country in the pillory.

And I would like to say: Let them do so, if it gives them so much pleasure. But I cannot confine myself to what I have said. The policy of the White House -- let us recall, for example, Vietnam, Grenada, Nicaragua -- brings death and unhappiness to people. And therefore people struggle and will struggle against relapses into imperial thinking and imperial politics that cannot be justified in any way.

Attack to 'Intimidate' Soviet Union

PM151511 Moscow SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA in Russian 16 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Article by A. Mozgovoy: "A Fit of Imperial Rage"]

[Text] It is evident from the White House spokesman's statement that the aggression against Libya was sanctioned by President Reagan personally. This decision was supported by Vice President Bush, Secretary of State Shultz, and other ranking officials. Thus the responsibility for the criminal act of state terrorism falls squarely on the U.S. Government.

The British Conservative Government has assumed the role of an accomplice in the brazen aggression. It gave permission for U.S. F-111 fighter-bombers to use British airfields to carry out the piratical raids against Libya. "Mrs Thatcher has paved the way for President Reagan to launch a massive air strike against Libya," the London MAIL ON SUNDAY writes.

The aggression against Libya is a glaring example of the implementation of the hegemonist "Reagan doctrine," which is referred to in Washington as the concept of "neoglobalism." I would recall that back at the end of March the United States carried out an armed attack against this Mediterranean country. The environs of Surt were subjected to a missile and bomb attack, while ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet hit several Libyan patrol boats and civilian vessels in the Gulf of Sidra. At that time the piratical actions were justified by the "need to protect the principle of the freedom of navigation." But it is the United States rather than Libya that is flouting the norms of international law, including the UN Charter. Now another false claim is being used as a pretext for aggression: the claim of "Tripoli's complicity" in terrorist attacks in Western Europe. But Libya, like all civilized countries, resolutely condemns all forms of terrorism and air piracy causing casualties among innocent people. This is indicated in a recent statement by the Libyan Jamahiriyah People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison.

However, it is not a question of causes, but of what is basically happening, which is as follows: The United States has set itself the task of bringing to its knees a young country that is pursuing an anti-imperialist course. When political pressure and economic sanctions failed to have the desired result, the missiles and bombs were brought in. In fact, the target of aggression is not just Libya but all independent states unwilling to submit to U.S. diktat. Uncle Sam is teaching a lesson: This is what happens to those who thwart him.

The White House plan is for the aggression in the Mediterranean to make an impression on Moscow. In what way? The recent nuclear explosion in Nevada, the supplies of new weapons to bandit formations in Afghanistan and Angola, and the attack on Libya are links in the same chain. They are a recurrence of the position of strength policy that the present Washington administration is reviving. The obvious intention is to intimidate the Soviet Union with U.S. military strength. But the latest militarist sortie against Libya is not a sign of strength, but a fit of imperial rage.

By sowing the wind of crimes against peace and security, the United States will reap the whirlwind of all the peoples' anger and contempt. All people of goodwill are expressing solidarity with Libya. It will certainly be given the necessary support.

U.S. Media Raises Concerns

LD161136 Moscow TASS in English 0942 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 16 TASS — The raid on Libya came as a violation not only of the norms of international law, but also of a special executive order prohibiting any attempt by U.S. officials to assassinate foreign leaders.

According to THE WASHINGTON POST that quoted well-informed sources, one of the primary targets of the bombing raid of U.S. Air Forces planes was the personal compound of the leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. The violation of the executive order was so obvious that it raised concerns even during a National Security Council meeting, THE WASHINGTON POST emphasized. In the end, however, the Post said, legal counselors of the administration advised that the strike could be justified as a self-defensive attack.

It follows from the article in THE WASHINGTON POST that the White House and President Reagan personally were simply misleading the American and world public when they said that they had irrefutable evidence of Libya's involvement in recent terrorist attacks in Europe. Quoting one high-level administration official, THE WASHINGTON POST made it plane that the evidence cited by President Reagan in his Monday night address to the nation were actually not substantiated by anything. Nonetheless, the White House considered it possible to order a bandit raid which killed and wounded scores of totally innocent civilians, including children.

Some time ago President Reagan described the dirty war waged by the United States in Vietnam as noble. He made an [as received] approximately the same assessment of what American airmen did to Libya. Speaking in the White House Tuesday, the President praised the murderers who, in his words, performed courageously. Reagan left no doubt that the United States would not stop at new raids if it considered them necessary.

In the meantime it is becoming clear that, in planning a raid on Libya, the United States breached yet another time its commitments before the partners in the North Atlantic Alliance. Consultations appropriate in such cases gave way to a simple demand that the allies unquestioningly support Washington. The demand was contained in messages from the president which special White House envoy Vernon Walters delivered to state and government leaders in a number of NATO countries. The demand was rejected by nearly all.

According to the CBS television company, only three countries -- Israel, Canada and Great Britain -- expressed support for what Washington did.

Evaluating the reaction of Mid-Eastern nations, THE WASHINGTON POST emphasized that even those among them that are usually pro-Western condemned the U.S. action against Libya.

Lomeyko on 'Gangster Actions'

LD151551 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1500 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, 15 Apr (TASS) — The Soviet Union has condemned the brutal actions of the U.S. Administration against Libya, a sovereign state, Vladimir Lomeyko, head of the Press Department of the USSR Foreign Ministry, said here today. He was addressing a briefing at the Press Center of the USSR Foreign Ministry for Soviet and Swedish newsmen accompanying Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson during his visit to the Soviet Union.

In the early hours of 15 April, carrier-based aircraft of the U.S. 6th Fleet and U.S. aircraft based in Britain launched an air raid against Libya and delivered a whole series of pre-planned strikes, including against residential blocks in the cities of Tripoli and Banghazi, inflicting great material damage.

There are civilian casualties.

The USSR considers these brutal actions, Vladimir Lomeyko stressed, a violation of international law and total disregard for common human ethics. The USSR has also evaluated these actions as a manifestation in practice of the "neoglobalism" doctrine advocating interference in the internal affairs of other states, including gangster actions.

The Soviet Union has expressed a most resolute protest, condemned these actions, and demanded an end to them. This viewpoint has been brought to the attention of the U.S. Administration, the head of the Press Department of the USSR Foreign Ministry said.

Replying to journalists' questions, V. Lomeyko said: We live in an interdependent world, where a deterioration of the situation in one region cannot fail to have an effect on the overall situation. What we have here is a criminal, vile attack by one state on another sovereign state. This cannot fail to complicate the situation both in the region itself and in the world as a whole.

No excuses can serve as justification for aggressive actions and military interference in the affairs of other states, head of a department of the USSR Foreign Ministry Vladimir Lomeyko stressed.

Kornilov Cites World Indignation

LD151507 Moscow TASS in English 1415 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- By TASS political news analyst Yuriy Kornilov.

The world is indignant, the world is exasperated -- the American aggression against Libya has demonstrated yet another time the extent of danger created by the policy of those quarters in Washington which have made their imperial objectives and hegemonistic ambitions paramount to international law and are clearly working toward maintaining and intensifying tensions in international relations.

The deliberate character of what has been done is beyond all doubt. For a long time now Washington has not bothered to conceal its hostile intentions toward Libya. U.S. naval and Air Force units have been staying off the Libyan coast on a virtually permanent basis. The effort to work up military tensions around Libya has been accompanied by concealed threats against it.

Trying to cover up and camouflage the fact that the aggression against sovereign Libya was a pre-planned bandit action Washington is sparing no effort in accusing Libya, absolutely groundlessly, of all mortal sins, passing off the United States as some kind of "fighter of international terrorism" which, as President Ronald Reagan said, was acting in -- "self defense". If one listens to the President, one may get the impression that it was not U.S. bombers that took off from military bases in Britain and the U.S. aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean to bring down their lethal cargo of bombs on the country thousands of miles from the American coasts, but that Libyan warplanes are flying over Texas and California.

This is where one may get in a bid to turn black into white.

The world knows full well what Washington-style "self defense" is. And not from Libya's example, too. It is, if one speaks of the comparatively recent past, is a U.S. aggression against Vietnam that Washington intended "to bomb back into the Stone Age", a bloody counter-revolutionary putsch in Chile, and a bandit attack on independent Grenada.

It is, if one speaks of today, undeclared wars started by the United States on the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan and on Nicaragua, Washington's alliance with Zionist storm-troopers from Tel Aviv, the teaming up of Washington geopoliticians with South African racists and Washinton's support for the criminals from the Pol Pot's clique.

It is difficult, in fact impossible, to find a region of the world where Washington adherents of hegemonistic concepts of "new globalism", who proclaim at the top of their voice almost the entire planet a "sphere of America's vital interests", are not intervening in a most unabashed manner in the affairs of independent countries, where in a heavy reliance on force they are not engaged in terror and banditry in a bid to restore the positions lost by the United States, to promote U.S. influence and dominate sovereign countries and peoples whose policies and the mode of life "do not suit" Washington.

The Reagan administration, THE WASHINGTON POST wrote recently, needs a good big mirror looking into which it would see a hyprocrite.

Architects of the U.S. foreign policy are unwilling to look into such a mirror themselves, and their hyprocritical and cynical attempts to justify the bandit character of their actions with the help of awkward propaganda tricks can deceive no one.

The U.S. attack on Libya is nothing less than an overt policy of state terrorism, contempt for the Charter of the United Nations, an effort to thrust its will on the people of a sovereign country with the force of arms and to destabilize the situation.

Washington has elevated aggression to the status of policy -- the factor which is causing growing indignation and concern of very broad sections of the international public.

U.S. Leaders 'Ignore' History

LD151617 Moscow TASS in English 1518 GMT 15 Apr 86

["Brazen Challenge to the Whole World" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- TASS Political News Analyst Boris Shabayev writes:

The United States has done it -- it has launched a series of "carefully planned air strikes" against Libya, as an official statement of the White House says. This has been done contrary to the voice of reason, in the teeth of the calls of manifest responsibility for the destinies of humanity, and warnings of the United States allies. Cynically, the President of the United States publicly admitted that the bombing of Tripoli and Banghazi had been executed on his personal order. That bombing caused numerous civilian casualties.

The version about "combatting terrorism" is as false from beginning to end. Aside from the fact that Washington cannot offer any proof of Libya's involvement in any terroristic actions and that the U.S. Administration stubbornly ignores all official Libyan denials to this effect, the very choice of targets. Even the building of the French Embassy was hit...

Without batting an eyelid, the President asserted that the strikes had been dealt as "self-defence", against targets that are part of "terrorist infrastructure". It is not for the first time that Washington resorts to such tricks to unleash an aggression. It is precisely in this way that an incident in the Gulf of Tonkin was provoked in 1964, the incident that was followed by the United States direct intervention into Vietnam. The invasion of Rangers into Grenada and the overthrow of the lawful government of that country was sought to justify by "self-defence" against the menace allegedly presented by a non-existent "military base".

Only one thing in the White House's statement is true: That the strike against Libya was planned carefully and for long. As soon as the present U.S. Administration came into power it assumed the course at overthrowing the Libyan leadership and replacing it with a regime that would be obedient to Washington. In 1981, the United States severed diplomatic relations with Libya, shot down two Libyan planes over the Gulf of Sidra and next year launched economic warfare against the Libyan Jamahiriyah. THE WASHINGTON POST then revealed that the CIA plans the assassination of the Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, while the French NOUVELLE magazine reported the Pentagon's plans of a series of military exercises off the Libyan coast to prepare its invasion under the pretext of "combatting terrorism". In the past five years the United States staged 18 military exercises near the Libyan boundaries, violating them crudely many times.

There have been revelations about the United States persistent attempts to provoke a conflict between Libya and some of its neighbours so as to crush the Libyan Jamahiriyah by the United States allies in the region. The fall of the Numayri regime in Sudan and Cairo's refusal to serve as a pawn in the implementation of the U.S. plans of attacking Libya compelled the White House to alter the means, but not at all the aims of its policy. Things went so far that U.S. officials joined publicly in the discussion of the residence of the Libyan leader was one of the main targets of the piratic raid on Tripoli? And after all these things they in Washington have the impudence to talk about "combatting terrorism".

Launching an outright aggression against Libya, the leaders of the present U.S. Administration, apparently, proceed from the view that the "Vietnam syndrome" is now a thing of the past and that U.S. imperialism, throwing caution to the wind, is now able to act arbitrarily on the international arena, to decide as it sees fit the destinies of sovereign states and peoples. But the memory of peoples is not so short-lived as that of official Washington. They remember not only how the rampage of chauvinistic passions starts but also in what it ends.

Openly banking on force, defying entire humanity, the U.S. ruling circles ignore the lessons of history. But such "forgetfulness", as history shows, is fraught with most serious consequences.

New U.S. Raid Reported

LD152218 Moscow TASS in English 2150 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 16 TASS -- Late in the evening yesterday, a new air raid was launched against the Libyan capital. The sound of explosions could be heard in the city, air defences were committed to action. The Libyan radio said that U.S. aircraft had again bombed Tripoli.

Washington April 16 TASS -- In an attempt at misleading world public, the White House denied the fresh act of aggression against the sovereign Arab country. A spokesman for the White House press service said that the United States was not waging military actions in or near Libya.

Madrid April 16 TASS -- The Spanish television confirmed a new raid against Tripoli. A spokesman for the Spanish Embassy in the Libyan capital, whom the anchorman of the Spanish television programme phoned, said that an air raid on Tripoli had started. He added that he could hear the sound of bombs falling on the city. A spokesman for the People's Bureau of the Libyan Jamahiriyah in Madrid told the Spanish radio that the U.S. planes launched a missile strike against Tripoli.

London April 16 TASS -- It has been learned in the British capital that fourteen American F-111 bombers took off shortly before the reports on a new raid against Tripoli from U.S. Air Force bases in Britain's territory. A spokesman for the U.S. Air Force confirmed that fact. He claimed that those planes were participating in NATO exercises and their mission was not linked with any operations against Libya.

New York April 16 TASS -- Commenting on the claim by the spokesman for the U.S. Air Force in Britain, the ASSOCIATED PRESS agency pointed out that a similar statement had been made the day before when a group of F-111 bombers and refueller planes took off from American bases in Britain. It was learned later that it is precisely those aircraft, which took part in the raid against Libyan cities.

U.S. Aircraft Reported Downed

U.S. Reserves 'Right' to 'Piracy'

PM151439 Moscow SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA in Russian 16 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[TASS report: "R. Reagan: The 'Right' to Piracy']

[Text] Washington, 15 Apr -- President R. Reagan has appeared on television to address the country, announcing that U.S. air and naval forces have made a series of strikes against Libyan territory.

The statement by the White House chief showed that the present U.S. Administration does not intend to reckon with the generally accepted norms of civilized behavior in the world, and reserves the "right" to continue its armed piracy, using military force against countries which inconvenience Washington. "Today we did what we had to do. If necessary, we will do it again," he stated.

Boasting that "our forces succeeded in fulfilling their mission," the President put forward the false story that the bombings were carried out in response to the 5 April explosion in a West Berlin nightclub frequented by U.S. servicemen. However, even the U.S. NATO allies did not take on trust Washington's assertions that the administration has "irrefutable evidence" of Libya's involvement in the terrorist act in West Berlin.

In any event, it remains the fact that long before the explosions at the West Berlin discotheque, the U.S. Administration had set a course of overthrowing the people's regime in Libya; back in 1981 the CIA embarked on the implementation of a plan, approved at the highest level, for the physical elimination of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution. The fact that in the course of the raids on the night of 14-15 April Al-Qadhdhafi's residence was chosen as one of the main targets for the U.S. Air Force is just one of the aspects confirming the existence of this plan of the U.S. special services, who have been given the "go-ahead" for terrorist acts by the present U.S. Administration. The other day the Newhouse information service reported, citing U.S. intelligence circles, that the CIA has elaborated its next "covert operation" with the aim of overthrowing M. al-Qadhdhafi's government. "The decision has been taken in principle that Al-Qadhdhafi must go," it wrote. "The President has ordered that effective means of organizing the fall of his government be sought.

More Raids Possible

LD160438 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0410 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Washington, 16 Apr (TASS) -- Speaking on Tuesday before members of the American Business Conference, President Reagan made it clearly understood that his administration is ready to undertake new raids against Libya and other sovereign countries. He cynically praised the U.S. warriors who carried out the barbaric raid on the territory of Libya, stating that the United States had so far won one engagement in the long battle against terrorism. As is known, official Washington hangs the label "terrorists" on those states, national liberation movements, or organizations which refuse to submit to U.S. diktat.

Weinberger on Bombing Accuracy

["About U.S. Aggression Against Libya" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Washington, April 15 TASS -- U.S. Secretary of Defence Caspar Weinberger when answering journalists' questions about the military actions against Libya, pointed out an unusual accuracy of bombing, emphasising that laser-guided weapons had been used during the bombing of Libyan territory.

Paris, April 15 TASS -- According to a FRANCE PRESSE report from Washington, U.S. Secretary of Defence Caspar Weinberger said that the Government of France had denied the USA a permission for F-111 bombers to fly across French airspace when the bombers were on their way to bomb the Libyan capital.

Paris, April 15 TASS -- As the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs has reported, the French Embassy was hit in a bomb attack during the U.S. air raid on the capital of Libya. The embassy building was damaged.

Dubinin, Walters Speeches Cited

LD161016 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0340 GMT 16 Apr 86

[By TASS correspondent Vyacheslav Chernyshev]

[Excerpts] New York, 16 Apr (TASS) -- "At the request of Libya, and also a large group of Arab and African states, the UN Security Council has begun urgent discussion of the U.S. bandit aggression against Libya."

"The statement by the Soviet Government and the pronouncements by M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee in connection with the U.S. aggression against Libya, brought a wide response from participants in the session. They were read by Y.V. Dubinin, USSR permanent representative at the United Nations. We are faced with a direct link between U.S. armed action against Libya and Washington's general line aimed at subjugating sovereign states to U.S. diktat, fanning existing hotspots and creating new hotspots of tension in various areas, and destabilizing the international situation, he declared. The clear duty of the Security Council is to decisively condemn this act of armed aggression against Libya, to demand that the United States immediately end its armed attacks on Libya, and to not tolerate such acts in the future. The main task now is to avert a further growth in the threat to international peace, to defuse the extremely dangerous situation that has arisen, and to prevent its finally getting out of control.

There was general condemnation of the speech made by V. Walters, U.S. permanent representative at the United Nations, who arrived at the UN Headquarters immediately on his return from a visit to Western Europe, during which he tried to gain the support of U.S. allies for the aggressive actions toward Libya. The U.S. representative made new verbal attacks on Libya, showing a total disdain for the international community and the norms of civilized behavior, an attitude so characteristic of the propagators and preachers of the notorious policies of "neoglogalism."

TV Reports Libyan Casualties

OW160313 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1040 GMT 15 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Igor Kudrin]

[Text] Hello comrades. I will begin this program with the news that was featured today in morning editions of foreign newspapers and radio and television programs. What the international public feared has occurred. The United States has carried out an air raid on Libya. Residential quarters of the capital, Tripoli, and of Banghazi were bombed. There are dozens of civilians killed and injured.

An air attack was also carried out against the residence of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution. According to reports, some members of his family were injured.

It is apparently no coincidence that in recent days many television companies have been showing these shots of strike aircraft carriers of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean sailing in direct proximity to the Libyan coast. Aircraft were ready to take off at any minute. [video shows U.S. aircraft carrier at sea, deck fighter aircraft, aerial refueling tankers and F-111's at air base] These were the very fighter-bombers from aircraft carriers and NATO bases in Britain that used their firepower against the independent and sovereign state.

More than 30 aircraft took part in this act of piracy. Libyan air defense forces shot down at least one American vulture.

Raid Worsens International Scene

LD151359 Moscow World Service in English 1310 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] American aircraft in the early morning of Tuesday made two bomb attacks on the Libyan capital Tripoli and the city of Banghazi. Aleksandr Pogodin comments:

This is open aggression by the United States against Libya. The Washington administration acted with appalling cruelty when it ordered attacks on peacefully sleeping residential areas. The bomb attacks led to casualties, including among foreigners. President Reagan has claimed that the attack on Libya was an act of retaliation in the struggle against international terrorism, with its monstrous cruelty. In reality it is Washington that has been reacting with monstrous cruelty. It has made terrorism standard practice in its foreign policy. What we have been witnessing is the worst and most dangerous type of terrorism, state sponsored terrorism, which has been condemned by the world community in United Nations resolutions.

International brigandage has become part and parcel of Washington's policy aimed at overthrowing governments that are not to its liking and at supressing national liberation movements. The Soviet national daily PRAVDA in a comment on the situation around Libya says this: The United States ruling quarters had been masking their international brigandage, which has become everyday practice, with ever new names; neo-globalism, the Reagan doctrine and others. However, whatever the name, the meaning of such actions would be the same, impudent interference in the affairs of sovereign nations in Asia, Africa and Latin America, aimed at reversing the march of history. Aggressive action by the United States on Tuesday were not simply an attack on Libya, they worsened the already charged international situation still further.

Arab World Reaction Reported

LD151708 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1500 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Reaction to U.S. attack on Libya presented by commentator Igor Charikov with report from station correspondent in Damascus Kazbek Basiyev]

[Text] The U.S. armed aggression against sovereign Libya has aroused a wave of angry condemnation and indignation among the international public. Here is commentator Igor Charikov:

[Charikov] Throughout the day we have been constantly receiving reports from the capitals of foreign states telling of protests against the latest act of brigandage by Washington. First of all listen to what we have been told about the reaction in Arab countries by our Damascus correspondent, Kazbek Basiyev:

[Begin Basiyev recording] The reports about the barbarous bombing by U.S. aircraft flew like lightning around the capitals of Arab countries today. Damascus radio interrupted its broadcasts to report in a special bulletin details of the raids that resulted in dozens of Libyans and also foreign citizens in Libya becoming victims of the U.S. aggressors.

Hafiz al-Asad, president of the Syrian Arab Republic, is maintaining constant telephone contact with Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, head of the Libyan state. In an official statement, the Syrian Government resolutely condemns the barbarous actions of the U.S. Administration and says that the Syrian Arab Republic expresses support for the Libyan Jamahiriyah and is putting at its disposal all the means that it has to rebuff the aggressor.

Reports from the capitals of other Arab countries tell of solidarity with the courageous Libyan people and of readiness to give Libya all-round help to rebuff the bandit actions of the U.S. aircraft. It is noted that the U.S. aggression is directed not only against the Libyan people but also against all Arabs who are the main target of Washington's neoglobalist policy in the Near Eastern region.

Currently in many towns of Arab countries, mass protests are being held whose participants are engrily condemning the anti-Libyan plot of the U.S. Administration. [end recording]

[Charikov] I would like to add, to what Kazbek Basiyev reported, one fragment from the statement that was made in Moscow today by Rami Muhammad al-Sha'ir, charge d'affaires of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

[Begin Al-Sha'ir recording in Arabic with superimposed Russian translation] In the face of the events and military provocations that have taken place we express the hope that Arab countries will undertake real efforts to achieve unity. We hope that any aggression against Libya will be regarded as aggression against all Arabs. We consider it very important that all politicians and also eminent public figures of the Arab countries should give a clear assessment of the situation in the Mediterranean. In our opinion, something should be said also by the leaders of those countries that are directly related to that region [end recording]

[Charikov] Here are some wire reports: The French public supports the decision of the country's government to ban U.S. bombers from using French airspace for making a strike against Libya. This decision, as is known was made on the evening of the strike by U.S. aircraft against Tripoli and Banghazi. AFP reports that the United States warned France about the raid that was being prepared but did not say when it would be carried out.

A representative of the Netherlands Foreign Ministry expressed disappointment at the U.S. refusal to listen to the opinion of their Western European partners and to refrain from carrying out armed actions against Libya. As you know, the previous day, the foreign ministers of the EEC member countries called on Washington to avoid such actions, which would lead to a further escalation of military tension.

A whole series of eminent politicians in the FRG have condemned the attack on Libya as a senseless step capable only of complicating the situation not only in the Mediterranean but also relations between East and West as a whole.

The Government of the People's Republic of China, XINHUA reports, has expressed deep concern and disquiet in connection with the U.S. actions vis-a-vis Libya. It condemns such actions as an attack on the territory of another country and as an encroachment on its sovereignty and as a violation of the norms of international relations.

In Delhi, the capital of India, today there was a mass demonstration at the U.S. Embassy. The participants demanded that machinations against the Libyan Jamahiriyah be stopped.

Out of all the United States NATO allies only the Conservative government of Great Britain has supported the piratical action. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gave permission for the use of U.S. bases in Britain for attacks on Libya. Her decision has aroused criticism from leading opposition parties' figures. Neil Kinnock, the Labour leader, called the U.S. attack on Libya a totally unjustified act and David Owen, head of the Social Democratic Party demanded that the government give an explanation why it allowed itself to be drawn into this adventure, why Great Britain became an accomplice in the U.S. policy of brigandage.

I would like to remind you that the decision by Margaret Thatcher's cabinet was unexpected for many because right up to the implementation of the actual attack, the Conservatives had talked of the unacceptability of any military actions.

Reports carrying condemnation of the bombing by U.S. aircraft of two Libyan cities continue to come in here to the editorial office.

Attack To Divert Public Attention

LD152213 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1850 GMT 15 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Valeriy Korzin]

[Text] Our forces succeeded in fulfilling their mission, Reagan announced proudly to the American people in his television speech on the attack on Libya. Today we did what we had to do, he said. It is known that even the U.S. allies in NATO did not accept Washington's affirmations that the administration holds some sort of irrefutable evidence of Libyan involvement in terrorist acts in West Berlin. The President is trying to convince his fellow citizens that the bandit raid was some sort of reprisal. But this is a lie; a lie which even if repeated a hundred times remains a lie.

It is known that even 5 years ago in 1981 the Central Intelligence Agency tried to carry out a plan to physically eliminate the leader of the Libyan revolution. This plan was endorsed at the highest levels of American power, and it is no accident that last night one of the main targets of the bombing selected was Al-Qadhdhafi's residence.

A few days ago the [word indistinct] news service reported that the President had managed to find effective means of organizing the fall of Al-Qadhdhafi. Obviously a raid by American bombers is one such effective means.

The explosion in a West German discotheque was merely a not very successful pretext. There needed to be another one. And it is not only that Libya, which conducts an independent policy and hinders American expansion in the Arab East, aroused irritation in Washington. Certain organs of the mass media in the West look deeper. American foreign policy, they believe, is arousing more and more distrust among world public opinion and in the United States itself. The continuing nuclear tests in Nevada, at a time when our country has kept to its declared moratorium for 8 months, discredit the present administration. A normal person finds it hard to explain why these tests continue. And whatever the arguments Washington ideologues have invented, protests against them continue.

The bombing of Libya is a convenient step to knock down the wave of protest and to divert public attention to something else. It is a well-worn approach, if discontent with the government grows, an enemy is needed, and an enemy was found in the person of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi.

At the same time a mood of chauvinism is being whipped up. The discontented are accused of lacking patriotism, hysteria over the threat of terrorism is being used to discredit progressive social organizations, a campaign of fear, surveillance and intimidation against campaigners for peace and civil and political rights is being conducted. Cynicism is the word found more frequently than others in the commentaries of many international observers. Recently the Pentagon gave the press a video recording that showed exactly the moment when the Harpoon rocket hit one of the Libyan patrol boats. This was in March. It turns out that everything that happened during that attack was filmed. [video shows a fighter plane flying over a flat object] Perhaps now one of these bombers had on board a camera that recorded how the bombs fell on residential areas, how the children cried, how the dead fell. If necessary we will do it again, Reagan declared in his television appearance.

Linked To Nevada Test

LD152127 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 15 Apr 86

[U.S. correspondent Vladimir Dunayev report; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Our correspondent in Washington, Vladimir Dunayev, has just reported by telephone:

After the nuclear blast in Nevada, an attack on Libya. The link between these actions was emphasized today by a local cab driver. He said that it was time to drop an atomic bomb on Libya. Those who have nurtured state chauvinism among the Americans, from their schooldays, in cinemas and theaters and on television, can be content. Today America is in an ecstasy of chauvinism. Today there are too many Ku Klux Klan-like smirks, not only on the television screens, but on the streets as well, although there are some who have not lost their natural sense of shame, who have not forgotten Vietnam and who went to the White House to protest a few minutes after President Reagan spoke on television.

Compared to Pretoria Policy

LD151942 Moscow in English to North America 1700 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Destroyed buildings, killed civilians and the grief that has come to many families: such are the consequences of the barbaric air raid carried out by American planes.

The picture is painfully familiar. South Africa's raids on Angola leave similar marks on Angolan territory. Following the example of its overseas partner, the racist Pretoria regime goes ahead with armed provocations against Angola. With the help of bandits from the UNITA [National Union for the Total Independence of Angola], Mozambique National Resistance, and other puppet groupings, it tries to overthrow the legitimate governments of the frontline African states. The pattern of the killers is similar, as is similar their total disregard for world public opinion and for the fate of peace as a whole.

The American act of aggression against Libya and Pretoria's undeclared war against its neighbors are, of course, events differing in scale, but they pursue one common aim -- to drprive the peoples of developing countries of the right to decide their own future and make them subservient to imperialist will. This is the policy on which the so-called constructive engagement between Washington and Pretoria rests. This policy is a policy of state-supported terrorism. It determines today all actions of United States and South Africa on the international scene.

U.S. Forgets Vietnam

LD160558 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0252 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Mikhail Beglov commentary]

[The White House's "Vietnamese Syndrome" and "Megalomania" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow, 16 Apr (TASS) -- The United States has finally recovered from the "Vietnamese syndrome," the White House decided recently, and without wasting time President Reagan informed Americans about this. So that no one would have any doubts left on this score, he ordered a U.S. naval squadron to Libyan coast. The U.S. naval armada that 2 weeks ago carried out "maneuvers" in the Gulf of Sidra -- the largest the United States has assembled in one place in recent years -- made the first aggressive sortie, subjecting Libyan territory to bombardment. This obviously appeared insufficient to Washington. So, on the night of 14-15 April, the United States launched a new large-scale bombardment of Libyan towns, using not only the force of the 6th Fleet, but also strategic aircraft based in Britain.

Similar events took place 22 years ago to the east of Libya -- in the Gulf of Tonkin off the Vietnamese coast. The Gulf of Tonkin and the Gulf of Sidra are different geographical regions, the times are different, but there is an obvious link between them. On the eve of the Vietnamese aggression, U.S. intelligence staged the shelling of two U.S. Navy destroyers. This criminal "dramatization" turned into the excruciating death throes of the United States in Vietnam, death throes that began with fine sounding reports of victories in the fight against the "partisans," and ended with an interminable rows of zinc coffins passing across the air bridge from Southeast Asia. This aggression lasted for nearly 11 years. It cost the United States 58,000 lives and left and indelible stain of shame on the United States forever.

It would seem that there is only one conclusion that could be drawn from the lesson taught to the United States in Vietnam -- to prevent the same thing from happening again. However, the present U.S. Administration has interpreted the "Vietnamese syndrome" in its own way.

It is time to "cure oneself" of the fear of using U.S. military force abroad, representatives of the White House, State Department, and Pentagon have been trying to convince Americans with all their might. And by way of "treatment" they have prescribed "shock therapy" -- in small, but continually increasing doses: first, the landing of Marines in Lebanon and artillery shelling of the Lebanese coast, then the seizure of defenseless Grenada, then the sharp expansion of the undeclared war against Nicaragua for the overthrow of the legal government of that country, and finally the bombardment of Libya.

In resorting to such "therapy," and also artificially fanning chauvinism and blind patriotism, the White House is step by step repeating the path that earlier had led the United States into the abyss of the Vietnam conflict. "Even now one is reminded of the Vietnamese variant of gradual escalation," reported the Newhouse news service citing the words of an unnamed specialist in Middle East affairs.

The war in Southeast Asia and the attack on Libya are links in a single chain stretching for several decades -- the striving of the United States to dictate its own will to other countries and peoples. It is not for the "Vietnamese syndrome" that the Washington quacks need to find medicine, but for the "megalomania" which Washington now prefers to give a different name -- neoglobalism. The new name, however, does not change the basic symptoms of this disease which has long been known to mankind. These are, first, the striving to play the role of "worldwide judge," who alone in the whole world knows what is good and what is bad, and takes it upon himself personally to decide the fate of others at his own discretion. To act in this way is to disregard the sad and clear lesons of the past. And this has never brought any good to anyone.

U.S. 'Anti-Libyan Campaign' Chronicled

LD151949 Moscow TASS in English 1757 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- The act of aggression launched by the USA against Libya in the early hours today is a fresh criminal action of the White House in its long anti-Libyan campaign.

In May 1981, the U.S. Administration acting on the strength of invented charges closed the Libyan Embassy in Washington and expelled the whole of its personnel from the country. Simultaneously a planned build-up was started of a campaign of slanders against Libya on a charge of her alleged involvement in so-called international terrorism.

In August 1981, two U.S. F-14 aircraft opened fire on two Libyan planes over the Gulf of Sidra.

In February 1983, two Libyan patrol fighter aircraft again came under fire of the U.S. planes on the plea that the "came close" to the aircraft carrier "Nimitz" plying off Libya's shores.

In May 1984, the CIA made an attempt to assassinate Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi with the assistance of mercenaries from the so-called Front for the National Liberation of Libya.

The Reagan administration's anti-Libyan campaign assumed a particularly dangerous character in 1985 and in the current year.

In January 1985, a squadron of U.S. naval ships of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, among them the aircraft carrier "Eisenhower", started provocative exercises close to Libya's territorial waters.

In the summer of 1985 Washington began drawing up various plans of armed actions and designated potential targets in Libya.

Late in November 1985, i.e. soon after the Soviet-American summit meeting in Geneva, the American troops in the NATO bases and the ships of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean were put on high alert, reconnaissance flights near Libya's borders were intensified. Simultaneously the U.S. Navy started "exercises" in the Gulf of Sidra in close proximity to the Libyan shores in November-December.

By January 1986, the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff had completed drawing up plans of military operations against Libya. The aircraft carrier "Coral Sea" with four squadrons of F-18 fighter-bombers on board, and together with it two cruisers, two destroyers, two frigates and an amphibious ship with eighteen hundred American Marines on board were dispatched to the Mediterranean.

Early in January 1986, the White House announced a series of discriminatory measures against Libya, including the arrest of its assets and deposits of the Government of Libya, its departments and of the Central Bank of Libya in the USA.

Late in January 1986, the bulk of the ships of the two carrier strike squadrons including the aircraft carriers "Coral Sea" and "Saratoga" dispatched from the Indian Ocean, came close to Libya's shores, thus forming a task force of 26 U.S. ships.

After a short pause in February 1986 Washington again sent the aircraft carriers "Coral Sea" and "Saratoga" to Libya's shores.

From January 24 to 31, 1986, the USA was carrying out large-scale exercises designed as a muscle flexing demonstration against Libya.

From February 12 to 15, 1986, U.S. naval exercises were held in the Mediterranean on a particularly large scale. They were accompanied with a provocative invasion of Libya's air space by U.S. aircraft.

From March 14 to 16, new, already the third, big exercises were held. The aircraft carrier "America" joined the Sixth Fleet.

From March 19 to 21, 1986, the fourth large-scale U.S. provocation was held in the guise of naval "exercises".

From March 23 to 28, 1986, the fifth military exercises, as a matter of fact, an armed operation was launched against Libya. In the small hours of March 25, the U.S. Air Force invaded Libya's air space and bombed the outskirts of the city of Sidra and a number of other objectives. The aircraft carriers "America", "Saratoga" and "Coral Sea" with nearly 240 planes on board and 40 escort ships were massed off Libya's shores. Several Libyan ships also came under fire.

On the whole since early 1981 the United States has 19 times carried out provocative "exercises" off Libya's shores. These exercises are a component part of Washington's policy of international banditry.

Taking part in the raids against Tripoli and Banghazi last night were twenty F-111, roughly 15 A-6 and A-7 aircraft, refueller and convoy aircraft.

U.S. Public Reacts

LD152231 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1800 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Correspondent Vladimir Dunayev report from Washington]

[Text] Last night, while the squadrons of the U.S. Navy and Air Force were committing piracy in Libya, it was early evening in the United States itself. The President had not yet appeared on television. The secretary of state and the head of the Pentagon had not yet been seen on the screen. It was exactly 1900 Washington time -- the time at which the main television news bulletin begins.

At that very moment, as though on purpose, bombs and rockets began to rain down on Tripoli and Banghazi. And special correspondents reported by telephone directly, live, how the ground was shuddering, fires were taking hold, and bombers were flying overhead.

What did Americans feel as they listened to this reportage on aggression perpetrated before their very eyes, although at night? Some went to the White House. Those living in the center of the capital went out a few minutes after the President's speech. "We are ashamed to be American! This terrorism, carried out by the United States, is dragging us into a new Vietnam!" These placards, freshly painted, were written by those who have not lost their sense of shame and retain the ability to think. This spontaneous demonstration of protest was shown on U.S. television for about 10 seconds. But then came reportage from a bar on what the man in the street thinks, showing in detail, with relish, how Americans young and old, wearing Ku Klux Klan-like smirks in front of the camera, safe behind their 6th Fleet and Rapid Deployment Force, were saying: That's just what those Libyans deserve! The President was right to hit them! We'll do it again! It will teach them to get in our way! It will show them!

Those who inculcated in Americans one of their most repellent qualities, chauvinism, have cause to be satisfied. The majority of Americans that evening were also terrorists, like their government, as in the days of the stifling of Grenada. How is it that they have succeeded in hypnotizing America? A pretext was found for international piracy. An explosion occurred in West Berlin, in a discotheque frequented by U.S. soldiers. One soldier and a girl were killed, and a few dozen people injured. President Reagan stated that, according to his information, the trail led to Libya. This was denied by the Libyan leadership. It was disbelieved by the United States' West European allies. Apart from Margaret Thatcher, not one West European government backed the aggression or gave permission for its airspace or territory to be used for banditry.

The evening of chauvinistic fervor passed quickly in the United States. This morning the first telegrams spoke of the angry, contemptuous, and censorious reaction of the entire world, including Western Europe. These cables evoked irritation and disappointment here.

Peace Committee Appeal

LD162329 Moscow in English to North America 2200 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Statement by Yuriy Zhukov, chairman of the Soviet Peace Committee]

[Text] Dear American friends: I appeal to you now as chairman of the Soviet Peace Committee, an organization that has millions of members in this country, who are as concerned about what has happened as you are.

American warships [as heard] took off from bases in Britain and from the Coral Sea and America aircraft carriers off Libya's coast to bomb residential areas of the Libyan capital. There are many casualties in Tripoli. I am aware that your press is telling you that this was an operation aimed against military targets alone, but I can assure you that this is not true. For instance, is the French Embassy in Tripoli a military target? But it was damaged by the bombs. Are the residential areas military targets? Civilians have died there. I received telephone calls from Soviet newsmen stationed in Libya and they told me that hospitals in Tripoli are running short of donor blood. The Soviet Peace Committee has just sent a telegram of protest to your President and to the United Nations. We also released a statement "Hands off Libya" calling on all peace forces around the world to launch a protest campaign over the U.S. military action in the Mediterranean, to demand an immediate end to this American aggression. Washington is playing with fire and this cannot lead to anything good. We are hoping very much that decent Americans will also protest against this barbarity.

Soviet Muslims Condemn Attack

LD152118 Moscow TASS in English 1958 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- Moslem leaders of the USSR sent a protest to President of the United States Ronald Reagan. It reflects their profound concern over the new United States barbarous aggression against Libya. "Peaceful people -- among them children, women, old people -- are killed by U.S. bombs. This vicious act by the USA shows that the U.S. Administration persists with terrorism elevated to state policy," the message says. "The United States has sinned against Allah, the Islamic world and entire humanity." "The [word indistinct] condemns those who commit an aggression against peaceful people."

"We condemn this [words indistinct] and express our solidarity with the Libyan people who has become these days the victim of imperialism's hostile policy," it is stressed in the message. The document ends with words: "May Allah punish the forces of evil encroaching on peaceful life." "On behalf of Moslems of the Soviet Union we declare: hands off Libya." The protest was signed by representatives of the [word indistinct] Moslem boards guiding religious activities of Moslems in the USSR.

Leningrad Citizens 'Incensed'

LD152059 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Interviews with unidentified persons in Leningrad on 15 April -- recorded; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] [First person] I am deeply incensed by this latest provocation by the U.S. Administration against sovereign Libya, and I demand an immediate end to this vandalism.

[Second person] The high level of those people's culture is now being put to a severe test. We all express our protest and our indignation at this barbaric action carried out by U.S. imperialism.

[Third person] I have lived in Libya for 3 years. During those 3 years, there has been a continual escalation of U.S. armed activities in the Mediterranean. We were constantly expecting something to happen similar to what has been taking place during the past months. Many of my friends remain in that country. I cannot but think about them now, and of course these events sadden me. All Soviet people deeply condemn, and decisively condemn, this provocative action by the United States, which was totally unprovoked by the Libyan side.

USSR-JAPAN ECONOMIC COOPERATION COMMITTEES MEET

Talks Open in Moscow

LD151922 Moscow TASS in English 1845 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS — "The common task of the two countries is to step up efforts to develop trade and economic relations between the USSR and Japan and to expand a search for new areas and forms of business cooperation," said Vladislav Malkevich, USSR deputy foreign trade minister. He spoke here today at an opening ceremony of the 10th joint conference of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees on economic cooperation as the head of the Soviet delegation.

In the two decades since the first joint economic conference in March 1966 in Moscow, he said, the countries have accumulated considerable experience in improving the content and forms of the entire broad system of bilateral trade and economic relations, including those in implementing major projects for developing natural resources in Siberia and the Far East. Vladislav Malkevich expressed the hope that the current joint conference attended by prominent representatives of the business communities of the two countries, would give a new impetus to the development of foreign economic ties between the USSR and Japan.

In his reply speech the head of the Japanese delegation, Ryoiti Kawai, board chairman of the major engineering company Komatsu, stated with satisfaction that at present a trend has emerged for a growth in goods turnover between the two countries. Japanese business quarters, he noted, display a great interest in the ongoing vigorous restructuring of the Soviet economy necessitated by the implementation of the new five-year plan approved by the 27th CPSU Congress. The Japanese side stands out for expanding trade, economic, scientific and technical cooperation with the USSR, in particular, for realizing major economic projects in the Far East, pointed out the head of the Japanese delegation.

A message of greetings from Mitio Watanabe, Japanese minister of international trade and industry, was read out at the opening ceremony of the joint conference. It says, inter alia, that today Japan and the USSR have an adequate potential for expanding further bilateral trade, economic, scientific and technical cooperation. To ensure a further stable development of Japanese-Soviet economic relations in future too, it is necessary to look beyond the implementation of the planned projects and to lend this cooperation an all-round character, notes the minister's message.

Today the first plenary meeting has been held at Moscow's International Trade Centre within the framework of the current negotiations. Tomorrow deliberations will be started by bilateral subcommittees where representatives of Soviet and Japanese business circles will examine prospects for cooperation on concrete areas and projects.

Ryzhkov Sends Message

LD150956 Moscow TASS in English 0838 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS — Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., addressed a message to the 10th anniversary joint meeting of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees for Economic Cooperation. The message said.

"Established 20 years ago, these committees played and continue playing a positive role in expanding trade and economic ties between the U.S.S.R. and Japan."

Their very founding reflected the mutual desire of our countries to develop trade and economic contacts, to promote goodneighborly relations between their people.

"Loyal to the policy of peaceful coexistence, the Soviet Union is in favor of widest possible trade and economic cooperation with all nations. This policy was reaffirmed by the 27th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. The decisions of the congress serve for our country as a principled foundation for the further development of economic, scientific and technical ties with other countries and for an increasing participation in the international division of labor. Business contacts and cooperation promote trust among nations with different social systems, which is especially important now when the nuclear threat looms dark over the world.

"The Soviet Union attaches great significance to strengthening genuine goodneighborliness and mutual trust with Japan, our Far Eastern neighbor. We positively appraise the shifts for the better that made themselves felt in the recent past in Soviet-Japanese relations, but this is only the beginning. Potentialities for the expansion of mutually beneficial trade and economic ties have not been used up, and it is our common task to put them to work.

"I wish the participants in the meeting success in their useful activities aimed at the further expansion of mutually beneficial cooperation and in the search for its new efficient forms.

"I would like to express the conviction that those activities will continue to deepen mutual understanding, build up trust and promote goodneighborliness between the people of our countries, to serve the cause of progress and peace."

Nakasone Greets Meeting

LD152246 Moscow TASS in English 2005 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- The message of greetings from Prime Minister of Japan Yasuhiro Nakasone to the tenth joint meeting of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet Committees for Economic Cooperation was read out at the opening ceremony today.

In his message the prime minister points to connection between development of bilateral long-term trade and economic relations and establishment of stable political relations between the USSR and Japan, the Japanese Government's support for cooperation between organizations of the two countries in joint realisation of mutually-beneficial projects of economic development.

The prime minister expressed the hope that the meeting between representatives of Soviet and Japanese business circles would help further deepen mutual understanding between the two countries and have a great practical significance.

DRA CONDEMNS U.S. 'ADVENTURIST ACTIONS' IN LIBYA

LD152217 Moscow TASS in English 1759 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Kabul April 15 TASS -- The whole world has been shocked to learn of a new criminal action by the American military committed against an independent and non-aligned state -- Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, runs a statement of the Government of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan, which has been issued here.

U.S. planes bombed residential quarters and civilian structures of Tripoli and Banghazi, killing dozens of civilians. Vast destructions were made.

Such insolent and adventurist actions of the U.S. military, the statement says, being made on the direct instruction of the U.S. President, could be qualified only as the U.S. challenge to the world community, and above all, the Muslim world.

The Government of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan calls upon the peoples of the governments of all Muslim countries to put up a united front and take the most urgent measures, both through the United Nations and outside it, to cut short the U.S. aggression against the Libyan people, to take retaliatory steps against the aggressor, by boycotting him politically and economically.

The U.S. policy of state terrorism, with the barbarous U.S. air raid on Libya being its fresh crying manifestation, shows for yet another time that the United States seeks hard to undermine the efforts of the peaceful countries, with the Soviet Union at the head, aimed at relaxation of tension and attaining universal disarmament.

Such actions on the part of the United States can be qualified only as an attempt to divert the attention of the world public from the Soviet peace initiatives in questions of destruction of nuclear weapons and complete termination of all nuclear tests.

U.S. military actions which are a very gross violation of international law and national sovereignty and independence of Libya, gravely imperial peace and international security of the Mediterranean area, and also the whole world.

The revolutionary Afghan people and the Government of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan call upon all peaceable countries and peoples to render all possible support and assistance to Libya in the face of U.S. aggression. The Afghan people, the statement stresses, pledges full solidarity with the courageous struggle waged by the Libyan people to uphold their freedom and independence, against designs of international imperialism.

SRV DENOUNCES 'BARBAROUS' U.S. BOMBING OF LIBYA

LD161040 Moscow TASS in English 0737 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Hanoi April 16 TASS -- The Vietnamese people emphatically denounce the barbarous bombing of Libyan cities by U.S. warplanes, says a statement of the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. The U.S. in word condemns terrorism, but actually pursues a policy of international terrorism and aggression, of interference in the internal affairs of other countries.

Socialist Vietnam expressed support for the just struggle of the LIbyan people against the encroachments of imperialism on their freedom and independence and demands that Washington immediately stop armed provocations against Libya.

WEINBERGER ASIAN TOUR SOUGHT 'MILITARIST LINKS'

LD120614 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0230 GMT 12 Apr 86

[Text] The trip by U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger to a number of Asian and Pacific countries has now ended. He is returning to the United States today after visiting Australia, the Philippines, Thailand, Japan and South Korea. Commenting on the Pentagon chief's trip, observers have been stressing that at every stage of his journey Weinberger was striving for a strengthening of militarist links with some countries in the region and for the establishment of such ties with others. The final stage on the journey of the head of the U.S. war department was Australia. Speaking at the Press Club in Canberra, Weinberger had to admit that Australia has declined to participate in the Reagan administration's notorious Strategic Defense Initiative, which is known as the star wars program. In the course of the talks the Australian Government called on the United States to join in the treaty on a nuclear-free zone in the South Pacific.

GDR FOREIGN MINISTRY CONDEMNS U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

LD152152 Moscow TASS in English 1250 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin 15/4/TASS -- The GDR News Agency ADN reports: A spokesman for the Foreign Ministry of the German Democratic Republic has termed the bombing of the Libyan towns of Tripoli and Banghazi by U.S. warplanes a criminal attack not to be justified by anything.

This act of violence was a flagrant violation of the most elementary norms of international coexistence, a gross contempt of the U.N. Charter and came in defiance of world public opinion. "It is more than an act of state terrorism, it is aggression," the spokesman declared.

The German Democratic Republic has condemned the bombing of the Libyan towns of Tripoli and Benghazi by U.S. warplanes.

A statement by a Foreign Ministry spokesman says, "whatever pretext the Reagan administration has cited for this criminal attack, it cannot be justified by anything. This act of violence is a flagrant violation of the most elementary norms of international coexistence, a gross contempt of the U.N. Charter and has come in defiance of world public opinion. It is more than an act of state terrorism, it is aggression.

"Peace and security in the region and the world are threatened to a dangerous extent. Not irresponsible military action but transforming the Mediterranean into a zone of stable peace and international security are stringent."

In this situation everything had to be done to prevent further acts of aggression bound to lead to military escalation, the GDR Foreign Ministry spokesman said. Statesmanship and circumspection on the part of all bearing responsibility were necessary.

The statement went on to say, "the GDR most emphatically condemns the use of military force. It firmly sides with the Libyan people. Nobody must violate the sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence of others -- in this case the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah. It expresses deep-felt sympathy with the innocent victims of the criminal raid."

Honecker on U.S. Attack

LD152237 Moscow TASS in English 1905 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 15 TASS -- The situation in the Middle East, which had been tense over a few years, threatens to entail uncontrolled consequences, following the U.S. bombing of Libya's territory, said here today Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, chairman of the Council of State of the GDR.

Speaking at the Ernest Thaelmann Park-and monument-opening ceremony, he noted that not only the whole of the Arab world but also all mankind call upon the American Administration to display reason. Ill-considered actions might lead to consequences that would imperil all mankind, said the GDR leader.

PZPR POLITBURO EXPRESSES 'INDIGNATION' OVER U.S. RAID

LD152305 Moscow TASS in English 2222 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Warsaw April 16 TASS -- A session of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Polish United Workers' Party held here today has expressed profound indignation and concern over the raids of U.S. planes against the Libyan territory. A statement circulated here says that the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Polish United Workers' Party voices all-out solidarity with the Libyan people and demands the termination of the aggression.

Polish Spokesman Remarks

LD152241 Moscow TASS in English 1407 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Warsaw, April 15 TASS -- The U.S. aggression against Libya is defiance to the entire international community and a striking example of the U.S. Government's contempt for and disregard of the world public opinion, spokesman for the Government of the Polish People's Republic Jerzy Urban said at a press conference here today. He read out the statement of the Government of the Polish People's Republic in connection with the United States armed aggression against Libya. It is pointed out in the document that the aggression had been launched on personal order from President Reagan, contrary to the fundamental norms of international law and the principles of the United Nations Charter.

This was an unprovoked and absolutely unjustifiable act of gross piracy, another manifestation of state terrorism by the present U.S. Administration, an act of the use of force by a great power against a sovereign Arab state, member of the United Nations Organisation and the Nonaligned Movement.

The Government of the Polish People's Republic, the statemment says, condemns resolutely the U.S. aggression which poses a threat to European security and universal peace and demands that it immediately be ended, demands that the United States respect Libya's sovereignty and the Libyan people's right to independent development.

CSSR FOREIGN MINISTRY DENOUNCES U.S. ATTACK ON LIBYA

LD152251 Moscow TASS in English 2041 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Prague April 15 TASS -- The United States Administration perpetrated a preplanned act of state terrorism against sovereign Libya despite protests of the world public and ignoring the views of realistically thinking politicians in Western Europe, it is said in a statement issued by Czechoslovakia's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

This armed attack on a sovereign state is a violation of the basic norms of international law and the United Nations Charter. There can be no justification for the American aggressive action. It jeopardises peace not only in the Mediterranean but also in other parts of the world. The United States aggression is a manifestation of the essence of the imperialist course pursued by the present American Administration that is implementing in practice its proclaimed policy of neoglobalism.

The United States Administration has committed an act of aggression at a time when the Soviet Union has come out with far-reaching peace initiatives, the statement stresses.

The people and Government of Czechoslovakia, which have traditional and long-established bonds of close friendship with the Libyan people, firmly denounce the barbarous American air raids against Libyan cities.

Czechoslovakia expresses full support for the struggle of the Libyan people which has risen to the defence of its country, it is stressed in the statement of the Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry.

ROMANIA 'INDIGNANT' OVER U.S. AIR STRIKES

Ceausescu Sends Reagan Message

LD152244 Moscow TASS in English 1411 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Bucharest, April 15 TASS -- The Romanian people are indignant at the barbarous bombing by U.S. Air Force of the capital of the Libyan Jamahiriyah, a free and independent country, member of the United Nations Organisation, and condemns resolutely the United States actions, says the message that President of the Socialist Republic of Romania Nicolae Ceausescu sent to President of the United States Ronald Reagan today.

The Socialist Republic of Romania views this bombing as an act of unjustified aggression against the free and sovereign Libyan people, as a gross violation of norms of international life, principles of relations among states and the United Nations Charter. The problems existing between the United States and Libya should be decided through talks, not by military force. The message urges the President of the United States to take the necessary measures to stop bombings and aggressive actions by the United States against Libya.

[Text] Bucharest April 16 TASS -- According to AGERPRES news agency, the Foreign Affairs Ministry of Romania has stated the position of the government of the Socialist Republic of Romania in connection with the U.S. attack on Libya. The document expresses grave concern of the Romanian people over this act of aggression against an independent and sovereign state and stresses the need to defuse the extremely dangerour situation in the Mediterranean and put an end to the U.S. military actions.

BULGARIA CRITICIZES 'UNPROVOKED' U.S. ATTACKS

LD152248 Moscow TASS in English 2026 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Sofia April 15 TASS -- The Bulgarian people has learned with indignation and profound concern about the totally unprovoked United States attack on Libya, it is said in a statement of the Bulgarian Government distributed here today. This aggressive act against a sovereign state clearly reveals the essence of the policy of "neoglobalism" pursued by the American Administration and expressing itself in the flagrant use of force, in disregard for the sovereignty of peoples, the United Nations Charter and generally recognised norms of international law and morality. Bulgaria firmly condemns the new act of state terrorism by the United States against the friendly Libyan Jamahiriyah and insists that the American Administration stop the aggressive actions threatening peace not only in the Mediterranean but also in the whole world, the statement stresses.

SFRY PRESIDENCY: U.S. RAID 'VIOLATION OF SOVEREIGNTY'

LD151426 Moscow TASS in English 1403 GMT 15 Apr 86

["Yugoslavia Denounces US Aggression Against Libya" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Belgrade April 15 TASS — The collective Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia has denounced the U.S. armed aggression against Libya. A statement issued here stresses that the act is a gross violation of sovereignty and territorial integrity of an independent and non-aligned state, it poses a grave threat to security and stability in that region and the whole world. The policy from the position of strength and military intervention cannot be the means of solution of any problem whatsoever in international relations.

The collective presidency stressed the need of immediate termination of U.S. aggressive military operations and participation of the international community, the non-aligned countries, the United Nations Organization and the Security Council in the efforts to bring back peace and stability to that region with the observance of the principle of independence and territorial integrity of Libyan Jamahiriyah.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON CARLSSON'S USSR VISIT

Holds Talks With Ryzhkev

[Report from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Talks took place today between Comrade Ryzhkov, chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, and Carlsson, prime minister of Sweden. During the talks, the coincidence of the positions of the USSR and Sweden on a number of important international problems, providing an objective basis for cooperation between the two countries in the interests of peace and security, was noted with satisfaction.

During a discussion of questions in bilateral relations, Comrade Ryzhkov stressed that considerable significance is attached in the USSR to the further activation of mutually advantageous Soviet-Swedish cooperation, which would fully meet with the peace-loving aspirations of the two countries and would be part of the general prospects for strengthening trust in the world.

During the visit, an exchange of letters took place regarding the extension of the long-term agreement on trade up to the year 1995. The signing of a Soviet-Swedish intergovernmental agreement on mutual protection of copyright took place. On the eve of the visit, an exchange of letters took place on extending the term of the cooperation program in the fields of culture, science, and education. [Video shows documents being signed. Soviet signatory is not identified. Among those standing are Ryzhkov, Talyzin, Aliyev,. and Arkhipov]

Talks Summarized

LD151903 Moscow TASS in English 1836 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- Talks were held today between the Chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers Nikolay Ryzhkov and the Prime Minister of Sweden Ingvar Carlsson, who is staying in the Soviet Union on an official visit.

It was noted with satisfaction during the talks that the positions of the USSR and Sweden on a number of important international problems coincide and that this creates an objective basis for interaction by the two countries in the interests of peace and security. Much attention was devoted from both sides to the American air attack against Libya which is a most flagrant violation of the United Nations Charter and creates a serious threat to universal peace and security.

Nikolay Ryzhkov noted Sweden's active role as a participant in international agreements in the field of disarmament, its place in the group of countries of the "Delhi six" coming out with initiatives to scale down the nuclear arms race and also the positive Swedish position on questions of scaling down military confrontation on a regional basis, a position that enhances the strengthening of peace and security in Europe.

When views on international problems were exchanged Ingvar Carlsson confirmed Sweden's striving further to contribute to the attainment of the aims of peace and disarmament, to exert every effort to scale down and remove the threat of a nuclear war. On behalf of the Swedish Government Ingvar Carlsson positively assessed the Soviet programme of the stage-by-stage liquidation of nuclear arms by the year 2000. He also reiterated that Sweden comes out for a peaceful outer space, for preventing it from becoming a sphere of military confrontation. The Swedish prime minister noted that the ending of all nuclear tests can and must become an important step along the road to ridding mankind of nulcear arms.

When questions of bilateral relations were discussed Nikolay Ryzhkov stressed that the USSR attaches much importance to the further invigoration of mutually advantageous Soviet-Swedish cooperation that would fully accord with the peaceful strivings of the two countries and would fit in the overall perspective of strengthening trust in the world.

During the visit letters on extending the long-term trade agreement to the year 1995 were exchanged and a Soviet-Swedish inter-governmental agreement was signed on the mutual protection of copyrights.

On the eve of the visit letters were exchanged on extending the term of the programme of cooperation in the field of culture, science and education.

Lomeyko on Swedish Policy

LD151628 Moscow TASS in English 1611 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- The visit of Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson is an important event in the Soviet-Swedish relations. It will contribute to a further development of goodneighbourly relations between our two states, Vladimir Lomeyko, head of the Press Department of the USSR Foreign Ministry, said today. He was addressing a briefing for Soviet and foreign newsmen here.

The determination of both countries to preserve and strengthen peace, to curb the arms race and prevent nuclear war, to develop comprehensive mutually beneficial ties in various fields make the firm basis of the Soviet-Swedish relations of goodneighbourliness.

The Soviet Union respects Sweden's independence and territorial integrity, and gives due credit to Sweden's neutrality policy, which is viewed, with good reason, as an important factor of stability and peace in Nordic Europe.

Sweden is making an essential contribution to the holding in Stockholm of the Conference on Confidence and Security Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe, and consistently adheres to the idea of creating a nuclear-free zone in Nordic Europe.

Sweden's proposal that a zone free from nuclear tactical battlefield weapons be created in Europe has attracted much attention and is broadly known.

This initiative of Sweden was supported by the Soviet Union and other countries, which believe that the creation of nuclear-free zones in various parts of Europe is one of the ways to rid the whole continent of nuclear weapons, both of tactical and medium-range ones.

The closeness and at times concurrence of the stands of our states on a number of international issues, the common interest in trade, economic and cultural exchanges make a reliable basis for strengthening relations, Vladimir Lomeyko stressed.

Answering the questions of newsmen, Yevgeniy Rymko, deputy head of the department of the Scandinavian countries of the USSR Foreign Ministry, pointed out the great significance of the all-round development of mutually beneficial Soviet-Swedish relations in various fields. In the course of the Swedish prime minister's visit to the USSR contracts in various economic fields worth a total of 500 million Swedish kronor are to be signed, Yevgeniy Rymko emphasised.

Shevardnadze Attends Dinner

Ryzhkov Dinner Speech

LD151643 Moscow TASS in English 1627 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS — A dinner in honour of the Prime Minister of Sweden Ingvar Carlsson and Mrs. Carlsson was held today on behalf of the USSR Government in the Grand Kremlin Palace. Together with Ingvar Carlsson the dinner was attended by the officials accompanying him in his visit. Present from the Soviet side were Nikolay Ryzhkov and his wife, Geydar Aliyev, Eduard Shevardnadze, Nikolay Talyzin and other officials.

A speech was made at the dinner by Nikolay Ryzhkov, member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR:

Esteemed Minister Prime Minister and Mrs. Carlsson.

Esteemed Swedish guests.

Comrades.

It is with much satisfaction that we note the important event in Soviet-Swedish relations - the visit by the prime minister of Sweden to the Soviet Union. I extend heartfelt greetings again to the head of the Swedish Government, to Mrs. Carlsson and also to the Swedish statesmen and politicians who have come with them and to the personages accompanying them.

We are neighbours and no disputes or outstanding problems exist between us that would prevent us from basing our relations on the firm foundation of equality, mutual respect of sovereignty and non-interference in each other's internal affairs. Every reason exists for Soviet-Swedish relations always to be an example of goodneighbourhood.

Soviet people have friendly feelings for the people of Sweden, respect them for their great industriousness and skills, for their considerable achievements in developing the national economy, science and culture, for their peaceableness.

The Soviet Union and Sweden have accumulated extensive and useful experience of cooperation in various fields. The traditions of the goodneighbourly intercourse of our peoples are an emobodiment of the efforts of many politicians and statesmen, representatives of the public and the business community, of people of various professions. Vivid pages of the activity of the founder of our socialist state - Vladimir Ilich Lenin - are linked with Sweden.

Of course, we represent two different social systems, two ways of life, but we are living on a single planet and must coexist in a single world - such is reality and there is no escaping it.

The great common aim - the prevention of nuclear catastrophe and preservation of human civilisation - is now bringing nations and states closer together than ever before. Any actions contradicting this aim are fraught with tremendous danger for the peoples.

It was thus that the whole world reacted to today's criminal attack by American aviation against Libya. This act of aggression, which cannot have any justification, is a manifestation of disregard for the interests of small states and peoples and flouts the United Nations Charter that prohibits the use of force in international relations. The Soviet Government resolutely condemns this bandit action against Libya and demands an immediate end to it.

The peoples of our countries are united by striving for peace, for the ending of the arms race, for the creation of normal conditions for international cooperation. And it was with satisfaction that we noted the statements by representatives of the Swedish state leadership that your country wants to have good and stable relations with the Soviet Union and that the visit by the prime minister of Sweden to the USSR is taking place in accordance with the desire of the broad majority of the Swedish people to have friendly relations with all of its neighbours.

During the meeting that you have just had with the General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev and also during the Soviet-Swedish talks in the Kremlin, Mr. Prime Minister, you could have seen for yourself that the Soviet Union sincerely wants goodneighbourly relations with Sweden on the basis of the immutable and fair principles of peaceful coexistence.

As it was stressed in the Political Report of the CPSU Central Committee to the 27th party congress, for us peaceful coexistence is a political course that the Soviet Union intends undeviatingly to pursue further. This policy presupposes an extensive development of economic, scientific-technical and cultural cooperation with other countries regardless of their social system. Naturally, this fully applies to Sweden as well.

Our trade and economic ties have a sound basis. It was laid by the long-term programme of developing economic, industrial and scientific-technical cooperation in the period till the year 1990 and the long-term agreement on trade. We have just exchanged letters on extending the latter for ten years. We regard the accords on the expansion and enrichment of our ties in various fields that we have reached in the course of the talks as one of the important results of the Swedish prime minister's visit to the Soviet Union.

Overall, the content of the Soviet Union's external economic ties is determined by the guidelines for its economic and social development in the new five-year-plan period and the period till the year 2000 and by the strategy of accelerating the country's social and economic development incorporated in these guidelines. We think that Sweden, its business circles which are prepared to cooperate with us on the basis of mutual advantage and equality have every possibility to strengthen their positions in the trade with our country.

We welcome the arrival in Moscow siumltaneously with the head of the Swedish Government of a group of Swedish industrialists and businessmen with many of whom we have had the opportunity to become acquainted in Stockholm recently. I have had the opportunity already to say that as it solves the tasks of raising the efficiency of production and accelerating scientific and technological progress the Soviet Union makes serious demands of the quality and technical standard of the products it purchases on the foreign market. This is the main bearing for our trade partners who count on success in doing business with Soviet organisations.

Esteemed Mister Prime Minister,

It appears to us that the Soviet Union and Sweden have good possibilities for developing cooperation both in the economic sphere and in international affairs, first of all in questions of strengthening peace and achieving a radical improvement of the international situation.

We hold that the thoughts expressed in the messages of the leaders of six countries to the leaders of the Soviet Union and the United States echo in many ways the theses of the Soviet concept of security through disarmament, the major foreign policy initiatives outlined in the January 15 statement by the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and at the 27th Congress of the CPSU. Olof Palme, a champion of peace, disarmament and extensive international cooperation of world renown who has done much for the development of goodneighbourly relations between Sweden and the Soviet Union, was one of the authors of these messages.

The prohibition of nuclear weapon tests is one of the most urgent tasks to which the world public's attention is attracted these days. As you know, it was already last summer that the Soviet Union announced a unilateral ending of all nuclear explosions till the end of the year and persistently called on the United States Administration to join this initiative. Twice, including once in response to an appeal of the leaders of the six countries, we extended our moratorium although for understandable reasons this was not a simple matter for us. And all this time we were giving the American side a chance to confirm in deeds and not in words its statements about its striving for a nuclear-free world.

But this did not happen. Despite worldwide protests and contrary to the will of peoples a new nuclear explosion was carried out and became an open challenge not only to the Soviet Union but also to the world as a whole.

This compelled the Soviet union to consider itself free of the unilateral moratorium. But, as before, we express readiness to return at any moment to the question of a mutual moratorium on nuclear explosions if the United States Government declares that it will refrain from the conduct of such explosions.

The Soviet Union is ready for an immediate commencement of talks -- bilateral, tripartite or multilateral -- on the prohibition of nuclear tests. My country will not slacken its efforts in this question in the interests of the cause of peace.

Tribute is paid in the Soviet Union to Sweden's active stand, to its initiatives with which it comes out both on its own and together with other countries of the "Delhi six", as well as in the group of neutral and nonaligned countries with the aims of preserving peace, curbing the arms race and stopping nuclear tests. This applies also to the proposals to create nuclear-free zones in the north of Europe and in central Europe. It is clear that it is impossilbe to achieve greater stability on the European Continent by stepping up the militaristic bloc policy pursued by NATO. The Soviet Union has always come out and continues to come out for an expansion of peaceful cooperation with the countries of northern Europe and for a joint search of such solutions that would accord with the interests of mutual security.

In conclusion I would like to express confidence that the visit by the prime minister of Sweden to the Soviet Union, his conversations and talks covering a broad range of international problems and bilateral ties will help make a better use of the existing possibilities to invigorate relations of trust and goodneighbourhood between the USSR and Sweden. This will accord with the fundamental interests of both countries, the cause of peace and international cooperation.

I wish the very best to you, Mister Prime Minister, to Mrs Carlsson, to all our Swedish guests, and prosperity and progress to the friendly people of Sweden.

Carlsson Address Noted

LD152143 Moscow TASS in English 2116 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- Sweden has a big interest in maintaining good relations with all countries, especially with its neighbours, including with the Soviet Union. This was stated by the Prime Minister of Sweden Ingvar Carlsson. He spoke tonight at a dinner held in his honour by the Soviet Government in the Kremlin. We want to develop these relations on the sound basis of mutual respect of each other's sovereignty and territorial integrity, he said.

Noting the growth in recent years of the strategic importance of northern Europe and saying that for this reason that region has become more directly affected by the contradictions between the blocs of the great powers, the head of the Swedish Government stressed that all countries should be interested in this region remaining an area of low tension.

Sweden wishes to facilitate the lessening of international tension and disarmament by coming out with initiatives at the United Nations Organisation and the disarmament conference in Geneva, Ingvar Carlsson said. He also stated Sweden's striving to take part actively and constructively in the process of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe and in the work of the Conference on Confidence and Security-Building Measures and Disarmament, that has been held in Stockholm since 1984 within the CSCE framework.

"The initiative with which Olof Palme came out together with the leaders of five other countries from various continents is yet another example of our will to facilitate disarmament in the world", Ingvar Carlsson stated. He stressed that no task was more important today than that of averting a nuclear catastrophe.

The head of the Swedish Government declared for the further development of bilateral relations with the Soviet Union in many fields.

He said that in the field of science and technology bilateral ties could be more extensively developed by expanding direct contacts between academies, scientific institutions and scientists of the two countries.

Ingvar Carlsson also pointed to the possibilities for widening and deepening ties in the sphere of culture. He stressed that yesterday's exchange of letters between appropriate instances of Sweden and the USSR was a heartening and concrete manifestation of these possibilities.

New agreements on coastal trade and crediting for the stimulation of economic cooperation between the two countries were concluded last year. "This has already influenced the statistics of commerce", Ingvar Carlsson said. "We have just extended the operation of the agreement on trade that has been signed here ten years ago. Alongside bilateral agreements on economic, scientific and technical cooperation it laid down a good foundation to count on the construction of large dairy plants, enterprises for the manufacture of cellulose, building materials, and other large Swedish deliveries for the Soviet industry. In the recent years the Soviet Union has risen to third place among the suppliers of oil to Sweden, Ingvar Carlsson said. "We would also welcome the widening of the list of our imports from the USSR", he said.

The principles of cooperation among European states recorded in the Final Act of the Helsinki Conference should be not viewed in the European context alone and discussed only at international conferences, the speaker said. They should also be consistently applied in daily bilateral communication between governments, institutions, enterprises and particularly in human contacts. "Despite all the distinction between our political, economic and social systems, these principles offer a concerted guiding line for the development of our bilateral ties to mutual benefit", Ingvar Carlsson said.

In this connection he emphasized particularly the importance that the Swedish Government, Riksdag and the Swedish public attach to matters of cooperation in the humanitarian sphere and declared for the facilitation of human contacts across the borders of the two countries, which would be an important contribution to the strengthening of friendship between the Soviet and Swedish peoples.

Ingvar Carlsson expressed the hope that the USSR and Sweden will soon reach through talks the decision on the question of the delimination of their economic zones in the Baltic on the basis of the principles of international law. He emphasized that this agreement would help improve the potentialities of the two countries in environmental protection and conservation of fish stocks in the given sea area.

"Present-day technology brought neighbours closer together and offered an opportunity to create such a dense network of contacts and exchanges which the previous generations did not deem possible", Ingvar Carlsson said in conclusion. "Our duty is to use the existing possibilities correctly to the benefit of the peoples of our countries, to ensure by means of wise statemanship and diplomacy that the closeness should lead to contacts, not to frictions. This applies to all countries, large and small. This applies also to our two countries".

W. EUROPEANS REACT TO U.S. ACTIONS AGAINST LIBYA

FRG Greens 'Condemn' Attack

LD151759 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1700 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Andrey Andreyevich Gromyko, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, today received a delegation of the FRG Green Party in the Kremlin. The delegation includes the party's co-chairmen, Lukas Beckmann, Jutta Dithfurth, Rainer Tampert, and Norbert Kostede a member of the party's leadership.

During the conversation, most of the attention was devoted to questions of the international situation and discussion of prospects for improving it. Both sides severely condemned the U.S. aggression against independent Libya, a sovereign Arab state situated thousands of miles from the shores of America.

The participants in the conversation were unanimous that the situation which has arisen demands that all political and public forces should act tangibly and speedily to curb the arms race, in the name of the preservation of life.

The sides delcared themselves in favor of the development of mutually beneficial cooperation between the USSR and the FRG on the basis of the Moscow Agreement, and that the security interests of both countries should be taken into account. The conversation took place in constructive and friendly atmosphere.

Bundestag Deputies Denounce Attack

LD151953 Moscow TASS in English 1721 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Bonn April 15 TASS — The U.S. armed attack on Libya provides evidence of how little the Reagan administration heeds the opinion of its West European allies, said Hans-Jochen Vogel, chairman of the faction of the Social Democratic Party of Germany in the Bundestag.

No sooner the EEC foreign ministers warned Washington against military interference, than the United States hit a strike on Libya, the state situated at the very threshold of Europe [sentence as received].

The raid of U.S. bombers on Tripoli and Banghazi is an act of international terrorism which cannot be justified, said Anne-Marie Borgmann, a representative of the parliamentary faction of the "Greens" party.

Under the pretext of "struggle against terrorism" the U.S. Administration itself commits terrorist acts against other countries, she said. Anne-Marie Borgmann called upon the FRG Government to denounce without delay the U.S. actions as steps imperilling peace and place a ban on any use of military and civilian structures on the FRG territory for military actions against third countries.

Bundestag deputy from the "Greens" party Roland Vogt described the U.S. aggression against Libya as an act of "unprecedented barbarity". The parliamentary faction of that party called upon the West German peace champions to hold demonstrations in all big cities of the country today in protest against the U.S. interventionist policy. The "Greens" demanded that the question be submitted to the Bundestag for discussion.

Austria Expresses Concern

LD152249 Moscow TASS in English 2002 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Vienna, April 15 TASS -- The Austrian Federal Government has already expressed in the past its profound concern over the heightening of tension in the western Mediterranean and the threat of the escalation stemming from this, says a statement of the Austrian Government, published here. U.S. military actions against targets in Tripoli and Banghazi show in a horrifying way how justifiable this concern has been. The Federal Government is convinced that settlement of contradictions should be sought in other ways than the use of military force. Experience shows that such methods lead not to the settlement of problems and to tranquility but to new tension and danger.

While categorically condemning any terrorism, the Federal Government waits for a return to peaceful means of ending disputes for only in this way can the use of force be avoided, the statement says.

Sweden Circulates Statement

LD152245 Moscow TASS in English 2028 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Stockholm April 15 TASS -- A statement of the Swedish Government in connection with the United States armed attack against Libya has been distributed here.

The American action, the document says, contradicts international law which is reflected, in particular, in the United Nations Charter. All conflicts should be solved by peaceful means. Attacking the territory of another state at a time of peace runs counter to the norms regulating relations between countries.

The Swedish Government, the statement points out, regards the above-mentioned American action with all seriousness. Recent events have created a dangerous situation in the Mediterranean area, this being fraught with the danger of far-reaching international consequences.

France's Raimond Cited

LD151344 Moscow TASS in English 1213 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Paris April 15 TASS -- The American operation against Libya will result in an escalation of violence, says a statement by Jean-Bernard Raimond, France's minister for external relations, published here today. At the same time he expressed the opinion that the U.S. action was prompted by growing terrorism.

The minister said that the U.S. intervention against Libya was carried out in accordance with the American Administration's decision. He recalled that the U.S. Air Force planes were not allowed to use French air space to fly towards Libya.

Danish Minister Regrets Attack

LD152247 Moscow TASS in English 2030 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Copenhagen April 15 TASS -- The Danish Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen has condemned the United States aggression against Libya. In an interview to Danish radio he stated that Denmark should dissociate itself from this armed attack. International problems should be solved by peaceful means, the minister stressed. He expressed regret that instead of a political solution Washington had resorted to military means.

Belgian Minister Expresses 'Surprise'

LD151323 Moscow TASS in English 1110 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Brussels April 15 TASS -- Belgium condemned today the U.S. piratic actions against Libya. Belgium's foreign affairs minister, Leo Tindemans, speaking in an interview with a radio and TV company expressed surprise and profound regret over the bombing of Tripoli and Banghazi, carried out last night by U.S. military planes.

Leo Tindemans said that EEC member countries were holding urgent consultations at present in order to issue a protest to Washington against the act of aggression against sovereign Libya. The head of the Belgian Foreign Affairs Ministry regretted that the Reagan administration had failed to heed the call to refrain from armed actions in the Mediterranean, made by Common Market foreign affairs ministers at their urgent meeting in the Hague on Monday.

Leo Tindemans branded Britain's position in the U.S. conflict against Libya as double game.

COMMENTS ON BRITISH INVOLVEMENT IN U.S. ATTACK

Called 'Third Aircraft Carrier'

LD151332 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1151 GMT 15 Apr 86

["The Third Aircraft Carrier Off the Coast of Libya" -- TASS headline]

[Text] Moscow, 15 Apr (TASS) -- TASS Political Observer Aleksey Grigoryev writes: The armada of the U.S. 6th Fleet, which has embarked on armed aggression against sovereign Libya, includes the aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America. In fact, there are not two aircraft carriers, but three. A direct part in Washington's bandit venture in the Mediterranean has been played by the "unsinkable aircraft carrier" -- Britain -- which gave permission for the U.S. air bases situated on its territory to be used for the attack on Libya.

Several hours before the aggression, the Pentagon transferred to British soil KC-10 refuelling aircraft to enable the F-111 bombers, also based in Britain, to carry out their piratical raid on Libya. Given that it was precisely these aircraft, and not the slower Intruder bombers based on the U.S. aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean that delivered the strike on Libyan civilian targets, Britain cannot be considered nothing other than a direct accomplice in the U.S. aggression.

The Conservatives in power in Britain have thus become the only government in Western Europe to give not only political backing to the Reagan administration's barbaric actions in the Mediterranean but also direct assistance. At first, London tried to make the best of a bad job; contradictory reports appeared in the press about Whitehall's position in the situation of alarm created by Washington concerning Libya. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher blatantly gave the appearance of not being completely convinced by the exhortations of Vernon Walters. The White House emissary and the United States' permanent UN representative and former deputy director of the CIA, who had made a tour of West European capitals on the eve of the aggression to drum up support.

But when it came to the crunch, the masks were cast aside. "Did Prime Minister Thatcher give approval for the F-111's to take off from British territory?", U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was asked at a White House press conference on 14 April, immediately after the start of the U.S. aggression. "Yes, permission was given," he replied. "Mrs Thatcher cleared the way for President Reagan to use the British bases to deliver another large-scale air strike against Libya," said the London paper THE SUNDAY MAIL.

But the dangerous decision by Margaret Thatcher's cabinet, which became the bombing of Libyan cities, has caused a bombshell in British political life. "Shadow" Foreign Secretary Denis Healey has called the actions of the Conservative Government "a scandalous betrayal of Thatcher's pledges to the British people and fresh example of the fact that she is obediently following every zigzag and twist in President Reagan's policies.

And so in the British Isles the actions of Margaret Thatcher and her cabinet have been exactly and fully summed up as dangerous complicity in Washington's military ventures and an ever more blatant refusal to take an independent line on the international scene.

Nation in 'Total Isolation'

LD152257 Moscow in English to Great Britain and Ireland 1900 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Nikolay Gorshkov commentary]

[Text] London's consent to the use of British territory as a springboard for United States attacks against Libya made Britain an accomplice in American aggression.

London's partners in the European Community have every reason to be shocked. Just a day earlier at The Hague, the British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe (?had claimed) to fully share the views of his West European allies who were unanimous in calling on Washington to refrain from military action and look for a political settlement of the dispute with Libya.

It has now transpired, however, that at the very same time, American F-111 strategic bombers at their bases in Lakenheath, Mildenhall and Upper Heyford were being prepared for combat sorties on Libyan targets. None of President Reagan's European allies knew about (?this move), with the exception of Prime Minister Thatcher. It is hardly surprising, therefore, that Sir Geoffrey's Berlin colleague now suspects London of having played a double game. And the West German opposition has demanded an explanation of [words indistinct]. It took Bonn completely unaware, just as it did other West European capitals.

As a result, as the French news agency says, Britain has found herself in total isolation in Western Europe. (?Britain diplomacy's) only consolation is the unqualified support that this aggressive act has received from Israel. But whereas that sworn enemy of the Arabs could hardly be expected to display any other attitude, it would seem London should have been guided at least by the security interests of the 5,000 British nationals working in Libya.

True, it's hard to tell if Britain had any chance at all or preventing the use of British territory for Washington's act of aggression. American military bases in British territory receive their orders directly from the Pentagon, which has never minced words about the destiny of British attempts to secure a dual key arrangement.

The logic of what is termed the Angola-American special relationship has thus led the United Kingdom into the aggressors' camp. The question is why Washington decided to use its British bases after rejecting all the arguments of the allies on the pretext that it was carrying out a purely national operation. These bases are thousands of miles away from the target, whereas off the Libyan coast Washington had an armada of warships.

The BBC speculated the other day that Washington was desperately looking for a partner to give its aggression the respectable image of a collective action. When Paris and Madrid, for example, understood what Washington was up to, they flatly forbade the British-based American bombers to pass over French and Spanish territory.

We don't want to see Rambo in Libya! This is what Americans chanted in front of the White House on Tuesday. But Rambo seems to have decided to break through and ignore West European public opinion. This is food for thought to the Britons first of all, because in addition to F-111's there are United States nuclear missiles based in their country. And these have no dual key either.

Parliament Reaction Noted

LD152055 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Sorokin report from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] As is known, the Libyan towns of Tripoli and Banghazi underwent an air strike from U.S. military bases on Great Britain territory. Here above all, we are talking about the bases at Lakenheath and Upper Heyford, where 150 F-111 aircraft of the U.S. Air Force are based [map on screen showing bases marked with arrows].

It was reported that yesterday evening Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gave her agreement to these bases being used to carry out this bandit action. At the same time, it became known here that France did not give the U.S. aircraft permission to fly over its country's territory. They had to take a longer route. The attention of virtually everyone in Britain is focussed on that moment. What has been the reaction in the country? The leader of the Labour Party, Neil Kinnock, said that the U.S. actions were totally unjustified. [Social Democratic Party] leader, David Owen, demanded an explanation of why the head of the British Government allowed her country to be dragged into this U.S. action.

Cyprus on Use of Bases

[Text] Nicosia April 15 TASS -- TASS correspondent Vsevolod Polonskiy reports:

The Government of Cyprus has warned Britain that the British military bases on the island should not be used against other countries.

The Government of Cyprus made this warning after a report that the British bases in Cyprus will be used by U.S. military aircraft to conduct a strike against Libya. A government spokesman confirmed that Foreign Minister Yeoryios Iakovou met with the British high commissioner in Cyprus and brought to his knowledge the stand of his government that the British military bases in Cyprus cannot be used against friendly neighbouring countries and also for the purposes which may jeopardize security, life or interests of the people of Cyprus, the Republic of Cyprus or the region as a whole.

Correspondent's Report

LD152216 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1317 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, 15 Apr (TASS) -- TASS correspondent Georgiy Shelenkov reports: The population of the Libyan capital, numbering almost 1 million, were peacefully asleep when, at exactly 0200, the silence was broken by deafening explosions, both far away and very near, and the piercing scream of aircraft. The sky was lit up with the tracks of many rockets. Of course, the oncoming attack was known about, as the White House had made no attempt to conceal its warlike plans. Nonetheless, such acts of banditry always come as a surpise, especially for civilians who have not heard bombs exploding for over 40 years.

The first raid lasted 10 minutes, which seemed immensely long... The city, which was immediately plunged into impenetrable darkness, did not go back to sleep that night. Half-dressed people, who had still not fully taken in the horror of what had happened, ran into the streets. Vehicles rushed through the streets, lighting their paths with occasional flashes of their headlights. Nevertheless, there was no panic, although the inhabitants of Tripoli now understand very well what that terrible rumble means. An hour passed, and another. The first burst of activity had time to die down; then it started all over again. Somewhere near the TASS office, a deafening, dry blast rang out. Again the sky was bright with rocket fire.

The same night, Western radio stations reported that the raid on the Libyan capital was carried out on the personal instructions of Reagan, who stated at the same time that meticulous aim was taken at the targets in order, supposedly, to "avoid civilian casualties." The results of this "careful aim" could be seen here in the morning, although the sites of the bomb and rocket strikes were cordoned off. Rescue work was under way, the dead were being brought out, and the injured were receiving treatment among the ruins. One could judge the "accuracy" of the U.S. attackers even by the state of the adjacent areas: Only a roofless shell remained of a 2-story villa in a quiet side street, only a few paces from Ibn Ashur, one of the capital's main streets. Neighboring houses displayed smashed windows and jaggedly torn wooden venetian blinds. Nearby stood shattered, windowless cars. In their piratical fervor, the Americans struck the French Embassy, which suffered considerable damage.

A car stopped by a villa opposite the Soviet embassy, screeching its brakes. The young man who leaped out of it despairingly repeated to his relatives who had spilled out onto the balcony just two phrases: "They are not there any more! They are all under the rubble, all of them!"

After the first raid, Libyan radio reported that dozens of innocent inhabitants had perished, that members of the family of M. al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, had been injured and his residence was struck by a precision hit. You can now see armed people on the streets of the town. Appeals for calm and vigilance are being broadcast on the radio. The inhabitants are advised not to gather in large groups, in order to reduce the number of victims in the case of new bombings. Yet life in the town is going on in the normal way: Establishments and shops opened in the morning, the children went to school.

Now the Libyans are asking themselves the question: "What next?" After all, the transatlantic initiator of this flagrant act of state terrorism has threatened without beating about the bush that "if necessary," everything will be repeated from the beginning, a blatant, insolent attempt to frighten the Libyan people, to break their will. But Reagan gains nothing from this venture. The people of the Jamahiriyah -- and this was said to me by every passerby with whom I talked this morning on the streets of Tripoli -- are filled with a resolve to defend their freedom and independence. The new, bloody action by the U.S. military clique will become simply one more page in the black book of crimes committed by U.S. imperialism against mankind.

Damage in Tripoli

LD151626 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1445 GMT 15 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Valeriy Korzin]

[Text] All the same, they have brought themselves to this, despite public opinion, despite the fact that many states voiced serious warnings, and finally, despite the fact that there is no substantial proof of Libya's complicity in terrorist acts.

U.S. aircraft have made an air strike against its territory. Having taken off from U.S. Air Force bases in Britain and from aircraft carriers lying off Libya's shores -- by the way, on President Reagan's personal orders -- the bombers dropped their lethal cargo on the residential districts of the Libyan capital. There are numerous casualties among Tripoli's civilian population. Members of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi's family have been injured. The French Embassy and, as a few agencies report, the embassies of Iran and Switzerland found themselves in the bombing zone. It is difficult to find words in order to fully describe this act of piracy and undisguised banditism.

Here you can see where true terrorism resides -- not a crime by some individual criminal who takes a hidden bomb in his briefcase, but state terrorism shrouded in the uniform of state policy and backed by newspaper hullabaloo and addresses by state figures. It is cynical and brutal, as an attack by someone strong on someone weak is always cynical and brutal. Libya's population is only slightly over 3 million, only 3 million. It is a developing country. These 3 million do not want to submit to U.S. diktat. They are like a bone in the throat of U.S. imperialism. It is precisely for this reason that the command to take off was given to the U.S. bombers.

Raid Described

LD152044 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Report by correspondent Parkhomenko; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Last night, a group of U.S. F-111 bombers, based at military air bases in Great Britain, were put into the air on military alert.

Buzzing the coasts of France and Spain, the air squadron of no less than 35 combat machines, went out into the central Mediterranean Sea area. Here they were joined by escort fighter planes from the aircraft carriers America and Coral Sea. After refuelling and reforming, the pilots received an order from the U.S. President to attack Libyan territory. In two waves, the bombers passed over the Libyan capital and the town of Banghazi, dropping heavy bombs and missiles on the heads of the sleeping people. Three hours later, the bombing was repeated. It is reported that three U.S. planes were shot down by the anti-aircraft defences.

The main blow was directed at the residence of the leader of the Libyan revolution, Al-Qadhdhafi, at port installations and military targets. However, it was the residential areas which suffered most. There are killed and injured among the inhabitants. Dozens of houses have been destroyed, and damage has been done to the buildings of the French Embassy and the missions of certain other countries. Our country's embassy was unharmed and, by lucky chance, no Soviet person was injured. Rescue work continued into the morning. Volunteers pulled injured people and the bodies of the dead from the ruins. The radio is broadcasting appeals for calm, vigilance, and the organization of worthy resistance to the aggressor.

Libyan People's Bureau Statement

LD152139 Moscow TASS in English 1709 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 15 TASS -- TASS correspondent Georgiy Shelenkov reports: The People's Bureau for External Relations of Libya has qualified the U.S. barbarous aggression against Libyan Jamahiriyah, which led to deaths of dozens of civilians as an outright act of state terrorism. The bandit attack by the American military on peaceable quarters of Libya's capital shows that the White House exceeded the limits of elementary international law norms, grossly flouting all moral principles, says the statement of the People's Bureau for External Relations of Libya. The aggression was staged with full support and participation of a number of West European countries, above all Britain.

The People's Bureau for External Relations of Libya has called upon all Arab and Muslim nations to rise up to repel the American aggression which is levelled against all Arabs, and to declare political and economic boycott of the USA. Libyan Jamahiriyah, it is stressed in the statement, declares to the United States and all who are behind it, that it is firmly determined to put up resistance until an end be put to the aggression and its organisers are punished.

Search for Missing F-111

LD160551 Moscow TASS in English 0545 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 16 TASS -- According to an official Pentagon spokesman, American carrier-based planes yesterday were intensively searching for an F-111 bomber in the area of Tripoli, that was unaccounted for following the U.S. air raid on Libya. The spokesman said there were no signs so far that the crew were still alive.

He confirmed that U.S. Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger was actively and directly involved in planning the air strike and selecting the targets. The Pentagon spokesman pointed out that the decision to use F-111 bombers in the raid was prompted by the U.S. striving to hit simultaneously all the targets planned.

PLO Envoy Urges Arab Support

LD151329 Moscow TASS in English 1041 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- The United States started overt military operations against the Arab countries, choosing Libya, the country that adheres to a firm anti-imperialist position on the issue of Middle East settlement, as its first target, Rami al-Sha'ir, charge d'affaires of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in the U.S.S.R. said at a news conference today. The Palestinian diplomat urged all political and public fugures in Arab countries and the entire Mediterranean region to side with the Libyan Jamahiriyah and take measures to put an end to Washington's military provocations against sovereign Libya. The policy of state terrorism pursued by the American Administration, Rami al-Sha'ir went on to say, is undermining efforts to lessen international tensions.

The PLO representative condemned the actions of the White House which had not only failed to respond to the Soviet Union's proposal on turning the Mediterranean into a zone of stable peace and cooperation, but had also launched aggressive actions that jeopardized security in the region and the world over.

Arab Communist Parties' Remarks

LD152154 Moscow TASS in English 1555 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus Arpil 15 TASS -- The U.S. attack on Libyan Jamahiriyah is an aggression against all Arab nations and the Arab national liberation movement, a prelude to a new broad-scale war venture in the Middle East, says a statement of communist and workers parties of the Arab east. The aim of that barbarous action is to make Arab states and peoples, fighting for freedom independence and social progress, to capitulate to American-Israeli diktat.

Gratitude for Soviet Support

LD152324 Moscow TASS in English 0312 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 16 TASS -- TASS correspondent Vyacheslav Chernyshev reports: On behalf of the Libyan people who fell victim to the U.S. bandit aggression, Rajab al-Zaruq, Libya's ambassador at the U.N., has expressed profound gratitude to the Soviet Union for solidarity and support for his country. Rajab al-Zaruq said Tuesday [15 April] in a TASS interview that the Libyan people highly appreciated the statement of the General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev and the statement of the Soviet Government which would become a factor of the consolidation of moral endurance of the Libyan people, of their resolve to worthily repulse the U.S. aggression.

The Libyan ambassador said that the policy of the Soviet leadership was of principled nature and was invariably aimed at the consolidation of the principles recorded in the U.N. Charter and norms of international law in whose complete implementation all the Arab nations were interested.

This policy firmly counters the U.S. imperialist approach to all the developing countries, especially small ones, as well as the policy of neoglobalism aimed at extending U.S. domination to the whole world.

The assessment made by Mikhail Gorbachev of the choice faced today by the world community in general, by the U.N., primarily Western Europe and NATO member countries -- namely, the fact that the passivity, connivance and complicity in such actions as the aggression against Libya are fraught with a disarray of international relations with unpredictable consequences -- are of special importance to Libya. Rajab al-Zaruq stressed that the voice of reason and their own national interests forced European countries to refuse to yield to the U.S. diktat.

According to R. al-Zaruq, Washington refused to heed the warnings of the Soviet leadership that its policy of violation of the norms of international law and the U.N. Charter could not but affect the Soviet-American relations. As a result of it, the U.S. Administration itself made it impossible at the present stage the planned meeting on the level of foreign ministries of the two countries. R. al-Zaruq said that Libya highly appreciated this stand.

Libyan People's Bureau Briefings

LD161109 Moscow TASS in English 0927 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 16 TASS -- The JANA news agency reports that heads of the diplomatic missions accredited in the Libyan Jamahiriyah were invited to the People's Bureau for External Relations where they were informed of the results of the U.S. aggression against sovereign Libya.

According to a representative of the bureau, this bandit act of the U.S. aggressions whcih claimed the lives of many people, Libyans and foreigners alike, was directed against peace and security of the whole of the Mediterranean region and the Arab world, and crated a serious threat to peace on earth. By implementing this act of piracy, Washington seeks to physically destroy the Libyan people and their progressive transformation which is a manifestation of state terrorism.

The Libyan people stand for the establishment of durable peace in the region and the world in general and urge all the freedom-loving forces of the planet to take necessary measures for putting an end to the aggression. The representative of the People's Bureau for External Relations pointed out that the people of Jamahiriyah sought to maintain normal relations with all the countries and peoples of the world. However, it will depend on the position of this or that country with regard to the U.S. aggression.

Ambassadors of Arab countries were invited separately to the bureau. It was pointed out to them that it was necessary to take concrete steps for repulsing the U.S. aggression -- to break political relations with the U.S., to discontinue oil deliveries to the U.S., to withdraw Arab assets from American banks and to denounce agreements with the U.S. Similar actions should be taken also against the Western countries, for example Britain, which supported the aggression. The representative of the bureau suggested the convocation of an emergency session of foreign and defense ministers of Arab countries for working out concrete ways of repulsing the U.S. aggression.

CUBAN GOVERNMENT CONDEMNS U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

LD160340 Moscow TASS in English 0325 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Havana April 16 TASS -- The Government of Cuba has described the pirate raid of Libya staged by the U.S. as a gross disrespect for the basic norms of international law and principles of peaceful coexistence among countries. A statement of the Cuban Government circulated here Tuesday emphatically rejects the clumsy attempts of President Reagan to justify this dirty act by reference to the provisions of the U.N. Charter concerning the right to self-defense.

By his actions President Reagan confirmed once again that it is he who is the initiator of the policy of state terrorism which found its expression in the support for Somozista gangs and in Washington's attitude to developments in South Africa.

The Cuban Government strongly denounces the U.S. aggression against Libya and voices its solidarity with the people of that country.

USSR CONGRATULATES CUBAN PARTY ON 25TH ANNIVERSARY

LD151423 Moscow TASS in English 1352 GMT 15 Apr 86

[quotation marks as received]

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- The CPSU Central Committee has cordially congratulated the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Cuba with the 25th anniversary of the foundation of the party.

"The time that has passed since the historic days of April 1961," said the message, out today, "convincingly proved the correctness of the political course of the Communist Party of Cuba which is confidently in charge of the process of establishing the Western Hemisphere's first socialist society.

Cuba's undeniable achievements in developing economy and culture and resolving major social problems, and the growth of the Republic's international prestige are inseparably linked with the activity of the Cuban people's political vanguard.

"In the present-day conditions of keen confrontation between the forces of progress and reaction," the message said, "the Soviet Union and the Republic of Cuba, together with the other socialist countries and all peace-loving forces on earth favour the prevention of the threat of nuclear war and press for a turn for the better in international relations.

Our parties and states are unanimous in their aspiration to oppose the imperialist policy of blackmail and aggression. Heightening international tension and suppressing the liberation struggle of the peoples."

The CPSU Central Committee wished the Cuban Communists new successes in building socialism, in strengthening the country's defence capability and in the joint struggle for peace and peoples' well-being.

WEINBERGER REVEALS U.S. TESTS ON SPACE SYSTEMS

LD170835 Moscow TASS in English 0742 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 17 TASS -- Speaking in Medford, Massachusetts, the U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has said that the U.S. Air Force conducted a series of tests of technical novelties due to be used in the arms system of "star wars". He described as successful the tests in the course of which the technology of accelerator missiles was tested, among other things.

It is worth recalling that the Soviet-American Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty signed in 1972 prohibits the testing of such systems or space-based components.

REAGAN, ADVISERS TO DECIDE ON SALT II ADHERENCE

LD162326 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1850 GMT 15 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Valeriy Korzin]

[Excerpts] THE WASHINGTON POST has reported that tomorrow President Reagan and his high-ranking advisers are preparing to hold a conference where they must decide whether to observe the SALT II agreement or not.

We are now witnessing a new upsurge in anti-agreement hysteria. What is involved is that a new American nuclear submarine, Trident, is due to go to sea in May. It is equipped with 24 missiles, and these missiles are already beyond the limits agreed in 1979.

In order not to go beyond the established ceiling, the United States needs to decommission two old Poseidon submarines. This is what the present dispute is about -- whether to dismantle the Poseidons or not.

Since last summer the situation has changed slightly, in fact. The Senate majority leader, Robert Dole, who previously supported observance of the agreement has crossed into the camp of its opponents and has even sent Reagan a letter with an appeal to keep all the available submarines. Also, the President's adviser, Robert McFarlane, was thought to have had quite a positive influence on Reagan, his replacement, Rear-Admiral John Poindexter is said to be more conservatively inclined.

However, it should not be forgotten that an end will be put to the arms race. In a word, we can say that SALT II is now a sort of touchstone of the U.S. foreign policy course.

LIBYA ACTION 'COULD SERIOUSLY HARM' CDE

PM161657 [Editorial Report] Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 17 April 1986 Morning Edition carries on page 5 an undated Stockholm dispatch by correspondent A. Sychev entitled "Time Is Pressing" on the resumption of the Conference on Confidence- and Security-Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe. After citing Polish Foreign Minister Orzechowski on the U.S. action against Libya, Sychev continues:

"Soviet delegation head O.A. Grinevskiy, special envoy, who addressed the session, expressed the fear that the U.S. action, which turned the 1st day of the session into a 'black day,' could seriously harm the course of the Stockholm Conference. He stressed the insistent need for the United States to confirm by specific actions the words it has spoken here about peace, confidence and security measures, and the lowering of the level of military confrontation."

MORE REACTION TO CONTINUED U.S. NUCLEAR TESTS

'Anti-Geneva Syndrome' Hit

PM161405 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 16 Apr 86 Second Edition p 3

[Lieutenant Colonel Yu. Borin article under the rubric "Imperialism Is the Generator of Aggression and Adventurism": "Anti-Geneva Syndrome"]

[Text] It is no longer just days or weeks but months since the Soviet-American summit meeting in Geneva -- that portentous meeting at which the Soviet Union and the United States, in the persons of their leaders, announced the inadmissibility of nuclear war and the impossibility of winning such a war and said that the sides would not seek military superiority. The world public had a right to expect that weighty steps would now be taken to prevent an arms race in space and end it on earth, to limit and reduce nuclear arms, and to strengthen strategic stability.

The Soviet Union justifies the peoples' expectations.

The progressive public perceived as a large-scale peace program the CPSU Central Committee general secretary's statement of 15 January this year, which advanced specific, realistic initiatives with a definite time scale for the elimination of nuclear and other types of mass destruction weapons. The desire to preserve and strengthen peace dictated the proposal advanced at the 27th CPSU Congress to create a comprehensive international security system. At a complex time in world relations the Soviet Union is displaying high responsibility and political will.

But what of the United States? How and to what extent has it confirmed in practice the statements which it made jointly with the Soviet Union in Geneva? In the recently published CONGRESSIONAL RECORD G. Studds, member of the House of Representatives for Massachusetts, suggested that any unbiased person should look at the Washington administration's actions from the vantage point of the Geneva accords.

And you will see, the U.S. congressman points out, the continuation of nuclear tests, the development of work under the "star wars" program, a new "juridical interpretation" of the ABM Treaty which renders it meaningless, and a number of other sinister actions. And now an act of direct piracy against sovereign Libya is added to this.

All these facts irrefutably attest that the U.S. ruling group has placed the narrow mercenary interests of the military-industrial complex above the interests of all mankind and of its own people. Emphasis continues to be placed on pursuing a militarist policy and gambling on force in order to dictate its will to other countries and peoples.

Washington has succeeded in doing much to further exacerbate international tension since Geneva. And these actions have been and are of a manifestly demonstrative and arrogant nature and attest to a scornful attitude to the generally accepted norms of relations among states.

Take, for example, the provocative sailing of American spy ships close to Soviet shores. Some of the most zealous Western journalists even nicknamed that impudent action some kind of "test of self-control." Well, once again the Soviet Union really displayed coolness and patience. But this is in no way a sign of its weakness. Our country is ready to deal a decisive rebuff to any adventurer, and it has sufficient, appropriate means for this. However, we are well aware what this could lead to. Unlike the transatlantic politicians, who have neither a sense of reality nor a sense of responsibility.

Or another example -- nuclear tests. It is obvious to every sober-minded person that ending them would be a real and effective step on the way to the total elimination of nuclear weapons. Without such tests it is impossible to either improve or create new kinds of nuclear arms. But the U.S Administration rejected outright the Soviet proposal for a moratorium on all nuclear explosions and for summit-level talks on questions of a total ban on nuclear weapon tests. Instead, it carried out further explosions of nuclear devices. One after another.

Washington has loudly declared that nuclear weapons tests are really "vitally necessary" for U.S. defense. But is that is so? "Forget the propaganda statements that the United States needs to conduct tests in order to be convinced of the efficiency of nuclear charges," THE NEW YORK TIMES writes. "The real reason for continuing the tests, concealed behind a propaganda smoke screen, is that nuclear tests could help in the future to create [sozdat] new, more sophisticated kinds of weapons, such as nuclear-pumped lasers for the 'star wars' program."

The new explosions are pushing mankind toward a nuclear catastrophe. However, this is of concern to few people in official Washington. People there are seeking to satisfy as far as possible the needs of those who have already received orders to produce MX, Midgetman, and Trident 2 ICMB's, who are building B-1B and Stealth strategic bombers, and who are creating [sozdat] space-strike arms.

"The SDI project," Pentagon chief C. Weinberger declared, "is among Americans' top priorities and cannot be haggled over." Indeed, the United States is the champion (for the umpteenth time!) at acquiring sophisticated new weapons. However, a perfectly reasonable question arises: What haggling can there be? We are talking about the planet's future. It is an open secret that the implementation of the "star wars" plan will give a new twist to the arms race spiral, which could take on an uncontrolled and irreversible nature.

I could cite other facts which prove that the United States is not only seeking to eliminate the preconditions for preserving the "spirit of Geneva" but also endeavoring to increase confrontation in the international arena. The method chosen by the U.S. Administration to cover up its provocative actions is also obvious -- to lay the blame at someone else's door. All you ever hear from the White House is verbiage about a "Soviet military threat." People there repeat the same old thesis in every possible way: Despite the ending of nuclear tests, the unilateral reduction of medium-range missiles, and other practical steps by the USSR, still "the threat posed by Soviet forces, conventional and strategic.... remain great."

However regrettable, the anti-Geneva syndrome in the White House is intensifying. Of course, this creates considerable difficulties in the development of Soviet-American relations and exacerbates the already complex situation in the world arena.

Test Shows 'Arrogance'

PM151832 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 12 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[Yu. Bandura article: "Challenge to the World's Peoples" -- first paragraph is TASS report]

[Text] Washington -- The United States held another nuclear explosion 10 April at the Nevada test site. An official U.S. Department of Energy spokesman reported that the test, held under the code name "Mighty Oak," was the second officially announced test this year.

... The Soviet moratorium on nuclear explosions was already into its 9th month. There was expectation of a U.S. response. Strictly speaking, Washington did respond. It responded arrogantly and provocatively. It responded with nuclear tests. On average one test for each month.

Each explosion in Nevada generated alarm around the world. But hope was maintained. It was maintained because it was carefully preserved by Moscow. It preserved its restraint, its courage, and its faith in Washington's ability to heed the voice of reason.

This hope was not justified.

The explosion, judging by preliminary data, was not a very powerful one: U.S. experts estimate its yield at 1.3 kilotons -- approximately 10 times weaker than the explosion that destroyed Hiroshima some 40 years ago. By any standards it was a small explosion. But it was nuclear. And although many people in Las Vegas, just 150 km from the site of the explosion, did not even feel the earth shake, the explosions shook the entire planet. It was shaken by the White House's criminal indifference to mankind's demands. It was shaken by the hypocrisy of the administration, which along with the nuclear device exploded in Nevada the vestiges of faith in its love of peace. It was shaken by Washington's overt reluctance to conduct an honest dialogue with Moscow on an equal footing.

Relatively little time has passed since the U.S. President approved the joint Soviet-U.S. statement in Geneva, which stated: "... The sides, recognizing the special responsibility of the USSR and the United States in the cause of maintaining peace, state that nuclear war must never be unleashed; there can be no winners in one." In this document the head of the Washington administration shared with the Soviet leader the pledge not to strive to achieve military supremacy.

Approved by R. Reagan, this statement remains in force today. But it has been clouded by the haze of continuing nuclear explosions. Explosions, of which each is a step away from the Geneva accords and a step toward the mirage of military superiority over the USSR.

It is worth noting that each of these steps concludes with the evident intention to challenge the Soviet Union. The conviction is formed that Washington is entirely consciously and extremely overtly avoiding any of Moscow's constructive proposals and answering each of our initiatives, each good-will gesture, each attempt to bring positions closer together with a leap in the diametrically opposite direction. It is going as far away as it can from the accords which the peoples expect from the Soviet Union and the United States.

Through these actions Washington not only reveals itself as a dialogue partner whose word cannot be relied upon and whose peace-loving assertions can in no way be trusted. The question arises: Is it possible to deal with Washington at all? The 10 April explosion denotes an arrogant attitude toward world public opinion. It is an invitation to everybody else to continue the arms race. But are the peoples really demanding that?

The world's fate is not in the nuclear tunnels of Nevada. For the moment it is in the hands of mankind itself. And mankind must have enough courage and strength to defend itself and its descendants from adventurism aimed at achieving thermonuclear hegemony over our fragile planet. There is no alternative to continuing the struggle for peace and to stepping up the struggle for survival.

U.S. PRESSURING ALLIES TO ACCEPT CHEMICAL WEAPONS

LD112144 Moscow TASS in English 1631 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 11 TASS -- TASS military news analyst Vladimir Bogachev reports.

Washington is again twisting the arms of its West European allies in a bid to introduce new chemical weapons in new binary ammunition in their territories. A senior Pentagon official, Thomas Welch, recently admitted that talks to this effect were conducted in the European capitals.

The task of the emissaries of the Reagan administration in Western Europe is compounded by the fact that the U.S. Congress, yielding to the pressure of the American public, promises funds on the production of binary weapons only if these dangerous chemicals are stored outside U.S. territory.

The congressmen have decided to block money for the development of new binary weapons until West European governments officially ask Washington to deploy such weapons in West Germany, Britain, Italy and other NATO countries.

At the same time the European NATO Governments, fearing, and with good reason, stormy protests from the population of their countries, refuse officially to ask the USA to store these chemicals in their territories.

Moreover, the Pentagon is afraid that the refusal of the NATO allies can create an unwelcome precedent: If West Germany rejects new chemicals today, it may well keep away components of space weapons or additional Pershing-2 missiles tomorrow.

That is why spokesmen for the administration are bending over backwards in a bid to prove to the European public that binary ammunition is safe to people around and that if it is stored in Europe, talks on the prohibition of chemical weapons will be given an impetus. American General Bernard Rogers once admitted that American chemical weapons were intended for purposeful use in European territory.

The history of the war in Indo-China illustrates how the Americans are going "purposefully" to employ chemical weapons in Europe. Most of the 91,000 tons of chemicals and herbicides sprayed in that war were used by the Pentagon against the population of South Vietnam, at that time a "loyal ally of the USA" and "a bulwark of Western democracy." During the 1970s, the U.S. Army devastated and poisoned 10 per cent of the territory of South Vietnam with chemical weapons. Even today cancer incidence and inborn deformities are very high in South Vietnam.

There is no reason to believe that if a chemical war is unleashed in Europe, the Pentagon would show greater deference for the population of the "allied countries" than it had for the South Vietnamese 15 years ago.

Offering nerve gas to its allies, the Pentagon faces the Europeans with the gloomy prospect of their continent becoming a gigantic "gas chamber." It is the duty of all the sensible people in the world to thwart Washington's sinister plans to introduce chemical weapons in Europe and to contribute towards the conclusion of a mutually acceptable agreement on the complete prohibition of the production, testing and storage of chemical agents.

ARBATOV INTERVIEWED ON FUTURE OF PALME COMMISSION

AU101501 Budapest NEPSZABADSAG in Hungarian 4 Apr 86 p 10

[Report on interviews granted by Soviet Academician Georgiy Arbatov, FRG Social Democrat Egon Bahr, and former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance -- all members of the Palme Commission on security and disarmament -- to NEPSZABADSAG correspondents: "Moscow, Bonn, and New York interviews to NEPSZABADSAG -- Members of the Palme Commission on Palme's Legacy" -- dates not given]

[Excerpts] What will happen to the Palme Commission, the independent, international body dealing with the issues of security and disarmament, without Olof Palme? What memories do you cherish about the murdered Swedish premier and what do you find most important in his political legacy? We put these questions to three members of the Palme Commission: Soviet Academician Georgiy Arbatov; FRG Social Democrat politician Egon Bahr; and former U.S. Secretary of State Cyprus Vance. Here are the answers:

Arbatov: We Will Continue His Work

Academician Georgiy Arbatov, director of the United States of America and Canada Institute in Moscow, remembers Olof Palme as follows:

One of the strange phenomena of recent years is that the small countries gave great personalities and outstanding leaders to the world, and certain big countries did exactly the opposite. Palme was an important political personality in the international history of our period. Born in a small country in favorable circumstances, he was able to measure the problems and sufferings of others, of the entire world. It often shocked the United States and Western Europe when he took a stand for solving these problems and sufferings. As Swedish minister of education and religion, Palme marched in the front line of the people demonstrating in front of the U.S. Embassy in Stockholm against the war in Vietnam, and he fought not only with words but also with deeds against apartheid, racist policy, and against other injustices in our current world.

Palme is an example of a politician who understood the new reality of our century and recognized that there was a need for new ways of thinking. This developed from his position concerning war and the arms race. This was reflected in his activity carried out as deputy chairman of the Socialist International, prime minister of his country, head of his party, and chairman of the commission named after him. He played a really active role in the New Delhi initiatives of the "six" for disarmament and against the danger of nuclear war.

I consider it an organic part of his political heritage that, although Palme rejected the communist ideology, although he argued with the communists and took a stand against them, he recognized that the ideological differences in the views of East and West must not block cooperation in solving the most fundamental problems, first of all in eliminating the danger of nuclear war. Therefore, one of the determining elements of his political heritage is the strengthening of the principle of peaceful coexistence.

As to the Palme Commission, it was established in 1980 as a politically independent body following the example of the Brandt committee which deals with North-South problems. The Palme Commission's main task is to promote disarmament and international security. Although many social democratic politicians are participating in this commission, it can still not be regarded as solely their committee -- all the more so as its members are also representatives of capitalist parties, like Cyrus Vance and others. Also active in the committee's activity are politicians of developing countries like Nigeria, Tanzania, India, Indonesia, and Guyana. There are also two communist members, Cyrankiewicz and myself.

Our task is to work out the concept of international security and disarmament at the present time, in the nuclear age. The activity of the commission is embodied in a report entitled: "Security For All." As a result of debates, supplements, and modification, we finally came to a uniform conclusion: The system of international security cannot be directed against certain states, cannot assert itself at the detriment of certain states, and can be implemented only as a result of common efforts.

The Palme commission concluded its activity following the publication of the report in May 1982. In the meantime, its activity was internationally recognized. Then, as the world situation became more complex, the Palme Commission was convened again in 1984. We decided to hold three meetings, and we carried out the first meeting of the new round in New Delhi in January of this year, and the third and last meeting will be held in Vienna at the beginning of 1987. As part of the preparation for the meeting in Budapest, Egon Bahr, David Owen, and myself will meet in Moscow in June. The commission is planning to publish several reports about the halting of nuclear tests, among other things. We are talking about publishing again the above-mentioned 1982 report of the Palme Commission.

We decided on all this in New Delhi. Hardly a month passed by, an we learned with shock about the murder of Olof Palme. At the request of the Swedish Social Democratic Party and of the widow, the committee took part in the funeral. We agreed to continue our activity just as we had agreed in New Delhi. This would have also been Palme's wish. In Stockholm, both the representatives of the Socialist International and of the "six" of New Delhi, as well as the members of the Palme Commission, came to the conclusion that we owe it to Palme's memory to regard it as our obligation to continue the struggle for the noble goals for which he sacrificed his life.

FASCELL CRITICIZES EFFORTS TO UNDERMINE ABM PACT

PM140920 Moscow SELSKAYA ZHIZN in Russian 8 Apr 86 p 3

[TASS report: "Sharp Criticism"]

[Text] Washington, 7 Apr -- Congressman D. Fascell, the well-known U.S. politician and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, has sharply criticized the attempts by certain U.S. circles to torpedo the 1972 Soviet-U.S. ABM Treaty.

The Reagan administration must reaffirm its adherence to this treaty rather than seek loopholes in it for continuing research within the framework of the "star wars" program, says a statement published here today by the congressman.

Fascell recalled the numerous statements by Reagan administration spokesmen on the so-called "new interpretation" of the treaty, which would in practice give the United States a free hand in deploying a large-scale ABM system with space-based elements. In this connection he points out with alarm that "this new 'interpretation' is spreading the arms race to space without any legal restrictions and undermines the ABM Treaty as such."

U.S. SENATORS URGE COMPLIANCE WITH SALT II

LD110826 Moscow TASS in English 0743 GMT 11 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 11 TASS -- Fifty-two senators sent a letter to President Reagan, in which they draw the President's attention to the inadmissibility of "discarding" the limits set by the SALT-2 Treaty.

The letter, which was released here Thursday, says that the summit meeting in Geneva laid down a solid foundation for improving Soviet-U.S. relations. The senators emphasize that despite essential differences existing between the two countries, they are united by many common interests, of which the foremost is to avoid a nuclear war.

The lawmakers urged the administration to continue complying with the provisions of the Salt-2 Treaty until a new Soviet-U.S. arms control agreement is concluded.

At a press conference in the arms control association the senators expressed concern over the administration's plans to abandon compliance with the restraints imposed by the treaty. Senator John Heinz, Republican, Pennsylvania, said that the decision to cancel the limits set by the SALT-2 treaty, if made by the President, would complicate efforts to reach a future agreement on reducing nuclear weapon arsenals and would lead to a new round in the arms race. Senator John Chafee, Republican, Rhode Island, said that in the light of the accord reached in Geneva to hold the second Soviet-U.S. summit meeting, the U.S. observance with the basic provisions of the SALT-2 Treaty would bolster the chances for working out a new arms limitation agreement.

LIBYA REQUESTS SECURITY COUNCIL EMERGENCY SESSION

U.S. Attack Denounced

PM161535 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 17 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Own correspondent A. Tolkunov report: "Emergency Session of the Security Council"]

[Text] New York, 16 Apr -- Here at UN headquarters, an emergency session of the Security Council has begun. It was convened at the request of Libya and a large group of Arab countries.

No subterfuges or justifications, Libyan representative R. al-Zaruq stated, can cover up this monstrous act of aggression and terror -- bomb strikes against peaceful districts of Tripoli and Banghazi, against housing, schools, and foreign embassies. One speaker follows another. The international community angrily condemns the U.S. aggression against sovereign Libya, the violence, the bellicose chauvinism which has recently become the norm in official Washington's policy.

The Arab countries express solidarity with the Libyan people at this difficult time, the Omani representative says, addressing the international community on behalf of the Arab states. He calls on the Security Council immediately to censure Washington's piratical act and to call it to international order.

India, that country's representative tells the Security Council, is profoundly indignant at the flagrant act of aggression against Libya's sovereignty and territorial integrity. Such actions are a threat to the security not only of one country or region but of the whole world. The White House, the Cuban representative stated, committed this act of brigandage by night, like a criminal. The United States pursues a similar policy with regard to Nicaragua, Angola, Cuba, and other countries which come out against American diktat. And the world today, Bulgarian delegate I. Garvalov says, is not some small town in the Wild West where it was customary to shoot indiscriminately. The international community stigmatizes the White House, which is still trying to assume the role of world gendarme.

Reading the text of the Soviet Government statement, Yu.V. Dubinin, the Soviet Union's permanent representative to the United Nations, stated:

It is quite obvious that the new U.S. act of aggression against Libya creates a real threat to international peace and security. A direct link is apparent between the armed anti-Libyan act by the United States and Washington's general course of subjugating sovereign states to American diktat, fanning existing hotbeds and creating new ones in various parts of the world, and destablizing the international situation. The groundless and illegal nature of U.S. attempts to justify its act of aggression by any pretexts whatever -- and that includes references to the struggle against international terrorism -- is equally obvious. It is the Security Council's direct duty, the Soviet representative noted, resolutely to condemn the act of armed aggression committed by the United States against Libya. It should also demand that the United States immediately stop the armed attack on Libya and commit no such acts in future. The main task now is to prevent the further growth of the threat to international peace, to ease the highly dangerous situation which has arisen, and to prevent its finally getting out of control. A statement issued by UN Secretary General J. Perez de Cuellar condemns "military actions by one member of the organization against another." He appealed urgently to the participants in the conflict provoked by the United States to refrain from the use of force, which can only lead to the further escalation of tension and military actions. The Security Council session will continue.

U.S. 'Lawlessness' Scored

LD161842 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1444 GMT 16 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Igor Kudrin]

[Text] The Soviet Government's statement and Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev's resolute condemnation of U.S. aggression against Libya, which was set out at a session of the Security Council by Dubinin, the USSR's permanent ambassador to the United Nations has received broad response at the United Nations. There is evidence of a direct link between the armed U.S. anti-Libyan action and Washington's overall policy to submit sovereign states to America's diktat, he said in the council continuing the debate on the u.s. lawlessness and tyranny.

Libya's UN representative, Rajab al-Zaruq, on behalf of the Libyan people, expressed profound gratitude to the Soviet Union for its solidarity and support for Libya. The Libyan people highly appraise the resolute condemnation by the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee of the U.S. Administration's lawlessness and tyranny in relation to Libya, and the Soviet Government's statement. They will become a factor for strengthening the Libyan people's moral steadfastness and their determination to deal a fitting rebuff to U.S. aggression, the Libyan representative said.

Perez de Cuellar Condemns Attack

LD162343 Moscow TASS in English 1806 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 15 TASS -- The U.N. secretary-general has condemned the bandit attack of the U.S. Air Force against Libya's territory. In a statement issued at the U.N. headquarters, Perez de Cuellar expressed conviction that the use of force is no effective method to settle disputes between states and will lead only to further violence. The U.N. secretary-general urged the sides involved in the conflict to refrain from a further escalation of tensions, to show restraint, and search for ways to resolve the critical situation, which has shaped by the methods envisaged by the U.N. Charter. [as received]

WORLD DECRIES U.S. 'AGGRESSION' AGAINST LIBYA

LD170330 Moscow TASS in English 0306 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Addis Ababa April 17 TASS -- There can be no justification of the U.S. aggression against Libya. It is in contravention with the international laws and the U.N. Charter, says a statement by the Council of Ambassadors of Arab states.

New York April 17 TASS -- It is inadmissible that the biggest imperialist power make the use of military force against small non-aligned states a state policy, stated Rashid Fakhuri, permanent representative of Lebanon to the United Nations.

Kuwait April 17 TASS -- Time has come for the Arabs to unite and give a rebuff to all direct aggressions against Arab countries and their peoples, says a statement issued here by the official source of the Kuwaiti Foreign ministry.

Sana April 17 TASS -- The Yemen Arab Republic sides with the fraternal Libyan people in the defence of the territory and national sovereignty of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah in face of the U.S. aggression, President 'Ali 'Abdallah Salih of the Yemen Arab Republic, said.

Khartoum April 17 TASS -- Sudan is ready to make all the existing means available to the fraternal Arab Libyan people to repel the U.S. aggression, Al-Jazuli Daf'allah, chairman of the Council of Ministers of Sudan, stressed.

Rabat April 17 TASS -- The Socialist Union of the People's Forces denounces the U.S. aggression against Libya and states its full solidarity with the Libyan Jamahiriyah, says a statement by this biggest left party of Morocco. The U.S. attack on Libya constitutes a threat to the cause of peace and security in the Mediterranean, a threat to all Arab and Moslem countries.

Beirut April 17 TASS -- The U.S. raid on Libya represents the U.S. Administration's continued course of escalating international tensions and its moves to thwart the positive initiatives aimed at ridding mankind of the threat of world thermonuclear war, says a joint statement by the Progressive-Socialist, Communist and a number of other parties of Lebanon.

Algiers April 17 TASS -- The United States creates a situation of perpetual instability by provoking conflicts in various parts of the world, says a statement by the Algerian Friendship and Solidarity Council.

Cairo April 17 TASS -- There can be no justification of the bombing by U.S. fighter-bombers of Libyan peaceful cities, a statement by the Federal National Council of the United Arab Emirates emphasizes.

Amman April 17 TASS -- The United States places peace in jeopardy. The aggression against Libya, a sovereign state, endangers peace in the Mediterranean, said Akif al-Faiz, president of the House of Representatives of Jordan's Parliament.

Nicosia April 17 TASS -- A mass demonstration by the progressively-minded public to protest the U.S. attack on Libya, held here, was keynoted by the slogans "Hands off Libya" and "Americans out of the Mediterranean Sea".

Valletta April 17 TASS -- The Labour Party of Malta expresses solidarity with the Libyan people in their struggle against the foreign aggression, says a statement issued by the leadership of this organization.

London April 17 TASS -- Rashid 'Abdallah 'Ali al-Nu'aymi, state minister of foreign affairs of the United Arab Emirates, staying here, cancelled the planned meeting with Timothy Renton, British minister of state for Foreign and Commonwealth Office. An official of the United Arab Emirates' Embassy said that this step was taken in view of the U.S. flagrant aggression against the Libyan Jamahiriyah and Britain's involvement in it.

GLOBAL NONGOVERNMENT GROUP ISSUES STATEMENT ON ATTACK

LD162142 Moscow TASS in English 2041 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Helsinki April 16 TASS -- Follows press release by the World Peace Council Information Service:

An emergency international meeting was held in Geneva on April 15 by non-governmental organizations participating in the international conference to stop Iran-Iraq war to express their strong condemnation of U.S. aggression against Libya Jamahiriyah. The meeting was presided by Romesh Chandra, president of World Peace Council, and attended by around one hundred and sixty representatives of organizations from countries of all continents including USSR, USA, Iraq, Islamic Republic in Iran, Britain, France, India, Egypt, PLO, Senegal, FRG, Argentina, Peru and others expressed full solidarity with Libya. The following statement signed by representatives of fifty-nine international and national organizations and political parties together with 18 personalities condemning U.S. aggressions. We, the undersigned, representatives of international and national non-governmental organizations participating in the international conference to stop the Iran-Iraq war being held in Geneva, strongly condemn the savage bombing of Libyan cities by the U.S. Administration and reject the cynical claim that it was justified under Article 51 of the U.N. Charter.

This new act of state terrorism committed by the Reagan administration has revealed once more its aggressive policy and its global design to destroy the freedom and independence of all countries whose policies it does not approve.

The Reagan administration has shown its total contempt for the most fundamental rules of international law. This is another aspect of its officially stated policy of establishing worldwide hegemony.

This criminal aggression against Libya is a continuation of previous aggressions against the Arab people in Lebanon, against the HQ's of the PLO in Tunis as well as against Grenada and Nicaragua.

We therefore call upon all peace-loving people in the world to unite against this U.S. policy of neocolonialism and permanent suppression of national liberation movements.

We strongly condemn the British Government's complicity in this act of warfare which will have grave consequences for countries bordering on the Mediterranean, in Europe and in the whole world.

The non-governmental organizations presently meeting in Geneva deeply deplore the massive losses of lives caused by the U.S. aggression and call upon all NGO's [nongovernment organizations] to:

1. Mount public activities to protest at this U.S. action.

2. Urge their governments to seek the immediate reference of this action to the U.N. Security Council.

We express our hope that all people in the world will unite against this threat to international peace and security and we declare our firm solidarity with the Libyan Arab people in their just struggle in defence of their freedom and independence.

FURTHER REACTION TO U.S. BOMBING OF LIBYAN SITES

Comparison of Gorbachev Remarks

Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian on 16 April carries in its Second Edition on page 1 a TASS report on the meeting between Mikhail Gorbachev, CPSU Central Committee general secretary, and Ingvar Carlsson, prime minister of Sweden and chairman of the Social Democratic Party of Sweden, in Moscow on 15 April. The KRASNAYA ZVEZDA report, entitled "M.S. Gorbachev's Meeting With I. Carlsson," has been compared with the Moscow TASS English version published in the 16 April Soviet Union DAILY REPORT, PAGE A 1, revealing the following variations:

Paragraph one, line two reads in KRASNAYA ZVEZDA: meeting was held 15 April between the general (substituting "15 April" for "today")

Paragraph five, line three reads in KRASNAYA ZVEZDA: positive factors that were starting to take shape in international relations (rewording)

Zhukov on U.S. 'Brigandage'

PM161601 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 16 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[PRAVDA Political Observer Yuriy Zhukov article: "Brigandage in the International Arena"]

[Text] The truly savage U.S. aggression against Libya, undertaken on the personal instructions of the American President, is regarded throughout the world as brigandage in the international arena.

Reading the reports about the world public's reaction to this aggression, you cannot help remembering an analysis, published in the American magazine NEWSWEEK as long ago as the summer of 1983, of assessments of U.S. policy based on a public opinion poll in six countries -- the FRG, Britain, France, Japan, Brazil, and Mexico.

"The United States Is a Gorilla Mask"

In an article summing up these assessments under the eloquent headline "The United States Is a Gorilla Mask," NEWSWEEK noted with bitter irony: "You can't get away from America. It is a huge gorilla in the modern world...It forces its way through the undergrowth, dominates the landscape, changes the political scenery with its presence. Its whims affect the entire globe, and the brandishing of missile weapons inspires fears in its allies."

Since this assessment was made, nearly 3 years have passed but Washington does not appear to have realized the implications for itself of the ever increasing condemnation of this policy not only from those whom "America in a gorilla mask" tries to intimidate by brandishing and using its weapons, but even from many of its own allies. On the contrary, the United States is now vigorously extolling the so-called "Reagan doctrine," which proclaims some kind of U.S. "right" to overthrow the inconvenient governments of states which it calls "procommunist."

President Reagan officially expounded this doctrine of brigandage -- that is all you can call it -- not so long ago in his "State of the Union" message to Congress. In this address, as the American newspaper NEWSDAY wrote 7 February, R. Reagan openly called for an "escalation of U.S. interference in other countries' affairs, in regional conflicts everywhere -- from South Africa to Central America."

The subsequent thundering speeches by the U.S. President demanding that Congress not stint the money for arming the hired gangs of Somozists, with whose help Washington dreams of overthrowing the Nicaraguan Government; the lavish reception in the White House for the bloody ringleaders of mercenary dushmans and for Savimbi, the South African racists' hireling; the sinister whir of American helicopters shipping soldiers to the Nicaraguan borders; and, lastly, the large-scale aggression against Libya -- all this shows convincingly that the "Reagan doctrine" is being steadily implemented by the present U.S. Administration.

"All these actions put together -- in relation to Libya and Nicaragua, plus such efforts as the stepping up of covert aid to the Afghan rebels," the well-known American observer Leslie Gelb wrote in THE NEW YORK TIMES 27 March, "characterize the new American foreign policy, which seems to be turning into a permanent feature of Reagan's presidency."

A very spirited and at the same time accurate assessment of this policy was given in the British weekly NEW STATESMAN by the prominent American scientist Noam Chomsky, professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in an article headed "For Thugs and Loonytunes Look to Washington": "It is merely a crime, for which people were hanged at Nuremberg and Tokyo" (The reference is to the trials of the war criminals of Hitler's Germany and militarist Japan -- Yu. Zh.).

What Was Secret Becomes Open

Justice requires us to recall that the "Reagan doctrine" is not original -- the United States tried to pursue the same policy, under the name of "rolling back communism," even earlier, beginning with the military intervention against Soviet Russia immediately after the October Revolution, which failed ignominiously. The same method of "rolling back communism" by military means was used by the United States, as is well known, in Vietnam in the sixties, where its intervention also failed ignominiously.

After that, Washington set a course of covert subversive activity using hired gangs which, in the language of American leaders, are called "freedom fighters."

What these "fredom fighters" really are is very well known to the peoples whose freedom and independence are encroached upon by those who fund these "fighters." "Guards" whose bayonets maintained the dictator Somoza's regime and who were driven out of the country have been rearmed by the Pentagon and the CIA and are acting against Nicaragua. Gangs of brigands trained in camps on the territory of neighboring states are acting against Afghanistan. Similar gangs trained and armed by the racist South African regime are acting against Angola; the ringleader of these gangs, Savimbi, has been branded as a monster so many times that there is no room for another brand mark.

But all this does not in the least worry the U.S. Administration, which generously finances that repulsive rabble -- yesterday covertly, today overtly.

As the same newspaper, NEWSDAY, recently recalled, in the last 5 years alone, through CIA channels, "aid" was granted to the Afghan dushmans to the tune of half a billion dollars, to the Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries to the tune of $150 million, and so forth. Now Washington has decided to make itself at home, and is openly incorporating in the U.S. state budget expenditure on overthrowing other states' governments. This is what they are now calling the policy of "open support for anticommunist forces throughout the world."

Whereas comparatively recently the United States tried to create the appearance that the rebel gangs that it arms receive their weapons through some kind of "private" channels, also claiming that the weapons are not American-made, now the mask has been discarded. In early April their was a great deal of noise about reports of deliveries to the Afghan dushmans and Savimbi's bandits of several hundred sophisticated American Stinger missiles -- shoulder-launched, heat-seeking missiles that are used against planes and helicopters.

In this connection some observers in the United States expressed justified fears that terrorists would use Stingers against civil aircraft, but the Washington politicians paid no heed. "White House staffers," THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER wrote on 7 April, "are privately willing to acknowledge the fact of such deliveries. Some people even raise the subject on their own initiative and speak of it with pride" (!). "'It is remarkable, simply astounding, that we are acting in this way,' declared an official who is...in rapture over the administration's decision" the newspaper wrote.

I will note in passing that while going over to open -- I would call it ostentatious -- aid to the hired gangs that oppose legitimate governments, the U.S. leaders are keeping inviolate the channels for secret subversive activity. This was stated unequivocally, with truly cynical frankness, by U.S. Secretary of State G. Shultz. I quote his statement in THE INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE for 11 December 1985: "Covert operations have been part of the arsenal of states from time immemorial and offer the opportunity to exercise influence without direct confrontation."

As is reported in the pamphlet "Reagan's Secret Wars," published in November 1985 by the Center for National Security Studies: "In the United States, during the present American Administration's rule the number of CIA operations abroad has increased at least fivefold, and when this pamphlet went to press more than 50 major covert operations were in progress against the Governments of Afghanistan, Nicaragua, Cambodia, Libya, and other states."

Acts of Direct Aggression

However, since all these actions fail to yield the results desired by the U.S. leadership, Washington increasingly frequently resorts to the direct use of its own armed forces to "impose American order" in the world. The criminal aggression carries out against Libya on the night of 14-15 April is a graphic example.

True, the U.S. people, who have not yet forgotten the terrible lessons of the failure of the aggression in Vietnam, react with pain to such acts. But Washington does not reckon with this. Quite recently C. Weinberger stated with cynical frankness in the journal FOREIGN AFFAIRS that "the people choose a president to lead them, not to lag behind them." And later: "A government force to await the support of its people will be paralyzed in international policy..."

In other words, as you elected the President, sit still and hold your tongue - he does not have to listen to your opinion! And if he decides that troops must be sent into combat somewhere or other for the sake of defending "national interests," so be it. The only concern is to ensure a crushing superiority in strength. "If combat forces are required," Weinberger states in his article, "they must be brought into combat operations rapidly and in the numbers necessary to fulfill our task at the least possible cost."

It is for this purpose that the United States devotes such great attention to the creation of the "special purpose forces," which are intended for use in "low-intensity conflicts," as they call actions like the U.S. aggression in Vietnam. As NEWSDAY wrote on 7 April, the budget now submitted to Congress by the administration for 1987 provides for appropriations of $1.7 billion for these forces. It is envisaged that by 1992 the numbers of the "special purpose forces" will increase by 80 percent compared with 1980, while the means of transferring these forces by sea will increase by 70 percent and by air by 90 percent.

"All this," NEWSDAY writes, "will considerably strengthen the U.S. potential in the sphere of participation in low-intensity conflicts in Libya, the Arabian peninsula, South Korea -- in a word, everywhere."

"Look," the American military leaders triumphantly tell the citizens of the United States and the allied countries, "look how powerful we are, nothing matters to us, we do what we like, and we get away with everything!"

Is there any need to demonstrate the shortsightedness of these calculations? Does Washington really not realize what an unenviable position the Pentagon is putting its own country in by trying to represent as great military victories the seizure of an unarmed island in the Caribbean, the shelling of defenseless Lebanese cities by the battleship New Jersey's big guns, or the bombing of Libya?

It is possible that such primitive methods may still have the effect the American Administration wants on many ordinary Americans, who have long been deprived of access to truthful information and who are crammed with false reports of the imaginary victories of omnipotent America. But in Western Europe there are clear signs of sobering up.

Only the British Government took on the role of U.S. accomplice in the aggression in Libya by consenting to the participation of American F-111 bombers stationed on British territory in the attack on Libya. The French Government banned then from overflying its territory, and the American airmen had to take their planes around France, refueling in the air over the Atlantic.

The governments of the vast majority of the U.S. NATO allies refused to support the U.S. military operations against Libya, which did not, however, prevent Washington from disregarding their opinion.

I have not even mentioned the resolute condemnation of the piratical U.S. actions on the part of the developing countries. "It is becoming obvious," the Indian newspaper PATRIOT wrote with concern on 31 March, "that the 'hawks' in the Pentagon at this stage control the situation, and that they are fully determined to push the world to the brink of the abyss." A few days later the report that the Pentagon had made sophisticated missile armaments available to Savimbi, the racists' henchman, caused a real explosion of indignation at U.S. tyranny in the African countries. A storm of anger and indignation has been aroused by the U.S. aggression against Libya in all the developing countries, and above all, naturally, in the Arab countries.

So in the end, as the saying goes, if you push your luck too hard, it will run out. Will Washington draw the right conclusions from this? Will it change its mind? Will it realize that in the nuclear age the strategy of adventures and violence is doomed to failure? It seems that the answers to these questions will be defined by the strength and unanimity of the rebuttal of this crazy strategy by peace-loving forces throughout the world.

Raid's Implications Viewed

PM161609 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 17 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Article by Vitaliy Korionov: "In the Pillory"]

[Text] The flames of the conflagrations kindled by U.S. bombs and missiles in Libya also illuminated the bared teeth of the Washington politicians who gave the order for armed aggression against Libya cold-bloodedly and without compunction. Their efforts to take evasive action and find a mask of decency are in vain. People who have made state terrorism the foundation of their foreign policy masquerade as "fighters against terrorism" -- is this not blasphemy!

The new criminal act, for which there can be no justification, is a link in the chain of provocative U.S. acts carried out in response to the Soviet Union's peace-loving initiatives and aimed at wrecking the quest to improve international relations and extinguishing the positive trends and hopes that emerged as a result of the Geneva meeting. They signify a deliberate exacerbation of Soviet-American relations.

Following the piratical raid by a U.S. armada on Libya last month the White House called its 6th Fleet the "spear and shield of U.S. policy." "Well done, thanks, we are proud of you!" -- that was the message from the White House Oval Office to the warriors of the 6th Fleet.

Yes, the name of America and its "national security" are being used as a cover for new and even more dangerous actions against world peace and against the peoples' freedom and independence.

The major peace initiatives that have been the distinctive feature of the CPSU and Soviet state's actions in the international arena since the CPSU Central Committee April (1985) Plenum and especially since the 27th forum of Lenin's party have offered mankind and real prospect of relaxation of international tension and -- as a result of the implementation of the specific, realistic program formulated in the CPSU Central Committee general secretary's 15 January statement -- of ridding the world of nuclear, chemical, and other types of mass destruction weapons by the end of the century.

But this prospect is by no means to the liking of the circles who determine Washington's course -- above all, the arms manufacturers, and in particular the military-industrial complex. In order to prevent a resolute shift toward the strengthening of peace, the United States has decided to utilize the most subversive and provocative methods.

The world has witnessed a whole series of actions aimed at artificially stoking international tension. Such a historic opportunity to reverse the nuclear arms race as the Soviet Union's unilateral moratorium on all nuclear explosions was deliberately missed.

Adventurist circles in Washington are making increasingly extensive use of regional conflicts as a catalyst of local and international tension. How this is done in practice is clearly to be seen in the example of Washington's policy with regard to Libya.

This country has long been a White House target. The memoirs of former U.S. Secretary of State A. Haig contain interesting evidence: It would appear that Libya was one of the "most topical issues" on the agenda of the very first session of the U.S. National Security Council held 21 January 1981 under the chairmanship of R. Reagan. Why?

It is absurd, of course, to say that a small state with a population of less than 4 million, situated thousands of kilometres from American shores, can constituties a threat to U.S. "national security." And, of course, the struggle against terrorism, is by no means the concern of those conducting armed brigandage in Libyan skies and waters. Washington's basic plan is that, having "taught" Libya a "lesson," it will "teach a lesson" to all young national states that dare to pursue an independent, anti-imperialist course.

Imperialism is still unwilling to forgive Libya for eliminating the American and British bases on its territory in 1970, particularly Wheelus Field -- the largest base outside the United States, from which imperialist interventionist troops were airlifted more than once to be used against the struggling peoples of Africa and the Near East. The imperialists also cannot forget that Libya either totally or partially nationalized foreign oil companies.

After the March piracy in the Gulf of Sidra a Pentagon official declared with straightforward candor: "It was a provocation, if you like...We had no intention of missing an opportunity to inflict a strike." That provocation did not produce all the planned results. But its instigators did not back down. They began careful preparations for a new, still greater act of piracy. Spy satellites took new pictures of Libyan territory, a revised list of targets for strikes was drawn up, and the latest military-technical means were employed.

The haste with which Washington decided to undertake "military action" is accounted for, in particular, by a desire to divert world public attention from Washington's obstructionist policy with regard to the USSR's proposal to end nuclear tests. The White House is also motivated by a desire to drown out the strengthening voices of protest against the Nevada nuclear explosion with the beating of drums.

In undertaking armed aggression against a small sovereign country in Africa, the American clique was clearly putting its trust in the impunity of its actions. It was reckoning on intimidating other countries and peoples with bombs and missiles and making them meekly bow their heads before the American diktat. Vain hopes! The world's peoples demand an end to the policy of blackmail and threats!

The Soviet Government has declared that it "resolutely condemns the aggressive, piratical U.S. action against Libya -- a sovereign UN member state -- and demands that it be ended without delay. Otherwise the Soviet Union will be forced to draw more far-reaching conclusions."

'Anti-Libyan Paranoia' Examined

PM161630 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 17 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Own correspondent V. Gan report: "Dangerous Recklessness"]

[Text] Washington, 16 Apr -- In the U.S. capital the extremely bellicose tone of the leaders of the U.S. Administration has been noted, leaders whose fists are itching to get even with Libya.

Speaking in the White House, President Reagan described the piratic raid "as only one action in a long battle." Representatives of the U.S. Administration continue to whip up anti-Libyan paranoia in the country. The "courage" and "heroism" of the U.S. pilots who dropped their lethal payloads on peaceful Libyan cities is being extolled. Reactionaries are demanding that the bombings be continued in order "to bring Libya to its knees." At the same time abuse has come from the banks of the Potomac directed at America's allies who, with the exception of the British Government, thought it preferable to dissociate themselves from the U.S. aggression either by expressing regret at the escalation of violence or condemning it outright. The CBS television network was forced to acknowledge that Europeans are full of anger at the U.S. bombings of Libya.

Increasing numbers of Americans are coming to share this feeling as they come to grips with the facts and discard false emotions. A White House spokesman admitted today that after Reagan's address on national television more than 1,000 Americans telephoned his residence to protest the Pentagon operation. For the 2d day in succession mass demonstrations of antiwar organization activists are in progress in front of the White House. Those whose conscience does not allow them to pass over in silence the brigandage perpetrated by Washington are demanding "Hands off Libya!."

Disapproving voices have been heard even on Capitol Hill. R. Dellums, member of the House of Representatives for California, said in particular that the President has exceeded his constitutional powers in effectively declaring war on Libya. Congressman L. Stokes from Ohio described the raid on Libya as an "act of war." According to press reports, many lawmakers are openly expressing dissatisfaction that the White House informed them about the prepared attack literally on the eve of the operation, that it essentially presented them with a fait accompli.

Well-informed observers believe that the airborne intrusion into Libya makes it possible to draw a sinister conclusion, namely that the administration's appetite for using military force in the international arena is growing. THE WASHINGTON POST writes: "The strike against Libya marks a turning point in the administration's policy after 5 years on internal debate." "For the first time we have been discussing not whether or not to use military force, but how best to do it," the newspaper cites an official who took part in the elaboration of the plan to attack Libya as saying.

U.S. 'Vying in Rashness'

PM161611 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 17 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[Article by Political Observer Stanislav Kondrashov: "Brainless Brawn"]

[Text] The 5 April bombing of West Berlin's "La Belle" disco killed two people -- one of whom was American serviceman Kenneth Ford -- and wounded around 200 -- of whom around 50 were U.S. servicemen. This happened thousands and thousands of kilometers away from U.S. territory. It happened to soldiers of the U.S. occupying troops who, from draft to draft and even from generation to generation, have been based in central Europe for more than 40 years.

In response to orders issued thousands and thousands of kilometers away by Washington the military forces of the U.S. empire, which have been both in northern Europe, in the British Isles, for decades and in the south, in the Mediterranean between Europe and Africa, stirred themselves and prepared for action.

What a terrible and fantastic reality of our time! Although thousands and thousands of kilometers away from the site of events, the U.S. President ordered that Libya's two main cities -- Tripoli and Banghazi -- be bombed on the night of 14-15 April without seeing, knowing, or wishing to know the people, entirely innocent of the West Berlin disco bombing, who died that night from U.S. bombs at the hands of the man who signed the order. The U.S. empire, roaring over Libyan cities, crushed Libyan lives on Libyan soil under its iron heel.

The U.S. President stated to American citizens that Libyans were involved in the West Berlin bombing. Libya has officially stated that it "rejects all U.S. attempts to accuse it of participating in recent acts." Washington haughtily rejected these words. Many Americans, driven into a chauvinist frenzy by the rhetoric of their President and his aides, welcomed the bombing of Libya. Congress -- the constitutional check that ought to restrain the President from hasty actions -- was informed 2-3 hours before the attack. "There was no opposition," Robert Dole, majority leader in the Senate, told correspondents, "even though a wish was expressed that consultations had been held before," That was all the check there was! With such checks further raids could be carried out, preferably at night, in order to minimize U.S. losses -- Libyan pilots, U.S. intelligence claims, are poor night flyers. The U.S. President also threatened new armed action, if... If he should ascribe some other act of terrorism to Libya. Such an act could even be concocted (is not the CIA qualified in that area?), but preferably without American casualties. It could be concocted when the desire arose to "punish" Libya once again, or... Or, let us suppose, Nicaragua. But the list of casualties is not necessarily restricted to those two countries -- appetite comes with eating, and it seems that the reagan administration has gotten a taste for the so-called "new globalism" or Reagan doctrine.

Yes, it was piracy and a blant act of aggression. Yes, it was a crime. Yes, once again the UN Charter and international law have been left in tatters. The trouble, however, is that for the Washington people who made the decision other people's blood is like water off a duck's back. They do not have to answer for it to the empire's feverishly chauvinist citizens or to the U.S. electorate.

Yes, Western Europe is indignant: Washington failed to heed its appeals to refrain from military action. The vaults of the British Parliament, where opposition is rising against Mrs Thatcher's line, and West German city squares, which are seething with anti-U.S. demonstrations, are being shaken with protest. France did not allow the U.S. bombers to overfly its territory. Italy, Greece, the Netherlands, and so forth are protesting. The trouble, however, is that in heated moments such as the one we have experienced the U.S. empire on the other side of the Atlantic takes note not so much of its loyal allies as of its own legions, and it may be added, it sets even greater store by the opinion of Israel, the only ally from which the senior partner is prepared to learn something -- was it not the junior partner that blazed the U.S. trail in Libya through its piratical air raid on Tunis 1 October last year?!

Brainless brawn -- let us dwell on this, virtually the mildest definition. The incumbent U.S. President has long been depicted as a cowboy with a Colt at his side. He has had nothing against that. This image rather flattered him. Now more than ever it looks like not a caricature but a sinister image. Ronald Reagan's presidency is in its 6th year and it looks as though he has again entered an active phase of acting out the role of cowboy on the state of world politics. He is aiming his Colt menacingly even against U.S. Congress when the latter is restive and will not give $100 million in aid to the "contras." And now he is firing with the Colt of his jet aircraft on Libyan leader Al-Qadhdhafi. For the cowboy who divides the world into good guys and bad guys, Al-Qadhdhafi is now the number one enemy -- and the prime target.

Resorting to common abuse, the U.S. President called him a mad dog. Milder terms have included madman and barbarian. Interstate relations are relegated to the plane of what amounts almost to personal enmity. That is dangerous. Brainless brawn is dangerous if it is the brawn of a very powerful empire that has impudently arrogated the right to presence everywhere in the world, and a ruling presence at that.

Instead of the utmost responsibility, which should be inherent in a world power in the nuclear age and under the conditions of a fragile peace, we can observe Washington vying with groupings and individuals, with mysterious unidentified and uncaptured terrorists. Vying in rashness. At the end of last December some people shot passengers at Rome and Vienna airports. Blaming its "favorite enemy," Washington embarked in late March on an act of armed provocation in the Gulf of Sidra -- risking a trial of armed strength against another sovereign state. The explosion in the West Berlin discotheque. What was to be done? The stakes are increasing in the contest between the nameless terrorists and the state terrorists known to the whole world. Brainless brawn dictates the escalation of adventurism once its former level has failed to justify itself. Aircraft carriers are again moving toward Libyan shores but in addition, with Margaret Thatcher's permission, they are taking their supersonic F-111 aircraft from their bases on British soil and again sending them against Libya. The range of targets subject to bombing is expanding and the number of casualties is growing.

But everything indicates that the age of modern group and individual terrorism is a long one. It will hardly end tomorrow. After all, it was born (let's not forget sources!) above all of Israel's seizure of Arab lands -- with U.S. aid. The Palestinians nurtured by oppression and despair will take revenge one way or another for their desecrated dream of their restored fatherland. What will Washington do if somewhere someone wreaks blind revenge on the ubiquitous citizens of the U.S. empire? A further escalation of adventurism? New targets for even more massive bomb attacks? B-52 strategic bombers with a multi-ton cargo of bombs sent in against Libya as they once were against Vietnam?

Thinking for Washington is not part of our duties. But it is worth recalling a fundamental truth of our day -- any problems between states must be resolved by political means. This truth was emphasized again in the Statement by the Soviet Government, which resolutely denounced the U.S. aggressive, piratical action.

The strikes against Libya are cynically described as surgery across the ocean. But these surgeons are not curing but killing. And they are thereby bringing down on their heads all the ferocity and force of the laws of retribution. Calculations on remaining unpunished will not be realized, sooner or later they will have to pay a heavy price. Does it not occur to the U.S. political strategists that, in climbing their present ladder of adventurism, their country may end up in something like that "long, dark tunnel" for light at the end of which their predecessors, having gotten bogged down in the Vietnam war, vainly waited for over 10 years?!

Lomeyko Links Libya, Nevada Test

LD161757 Moscow TASS in English 1750 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- The nuclear blast in Nevada and the aggressive actions of the American Administration against Libya are links of the same chain leading to growth of tension in the world, said Vladimir Lomeyko, head of the Press Department of the USSR Foreign Ministry. He addressed today Soviet and foreign journalists at a briefing at the USSR Foreign Ministry.

U.S. continuation of nuclear tests stands in the way of solution of the fundamental problem of mankind -- removal of the threat of a nuclear war. U.S. aggressive actions against Libya are an attempt on the part of Washington to divert the attention of the world public from its nuclear testes in Nevada.

U.S. Justification 'Absurd'

LD161901 Moscow TASS in English 1805 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- "Tens of civilians, among them children, women and old men, were killed or wounded, embassies were damaged, and citizens of foreign states were injured in Libya during the bombings", said Vladimir Lomeyko, head of the Press Department of the USSR Ministry of Foreign Affairs, when answering journalists' questions in the ministry's Press Centre today. "Washington, in an attempt to qualify the bandit raid as an act of fighting international terrorism, loses any common sense and in practice demonstrates the doctrine of neoglobalism the essence of which is an undisguised military interference in the affairs of sovereign states. There can be no justification for such actions. The attempts by the White House to explain the attack on Libya on self-defence considerations are absurd. It is a question of the most flagrant violation of the U.N. Charter which directly bans the use of force in international relations".

'Bandit Action' Condemned

LD161909 Moscow TASS in English 1803 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- The latest actions of the United States in the Mediterranean region are added proof that the present policy of the White House is a policy of aggression, provoking regional conflicts and balancing on the brink of war, it was stated by Vladimir Lomeyko, head of the USSR Foreign Ministry's Press Department. He spoke today at a briefing for Soviet and foreign journalists at the Press Centre of the USSR Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The Soviet leadership had warned, the Foreign Ministry spokesman stressed, that such actions could not but affect relations between the USSR and the United States. In fact the administration itself had made impossible at this stage the planned meeting on the level of the ministers of foreign affairs of the two countries.

The Soviet Governmnt strongly condemns the aggressive bandit action against Libya, a sovereign state and a member of the United Nations Organisation, and demands an immediate end to it. Otherwise the Soviet Union will be forced to draw more far-reaching conclusions. Other steps too have also been taken from the Soviet side in connection with the United States aggressive action, Vladimir Lomeyko stressed.

The United States Ambassador Hartman was summoned to the Foreign Ministry on April 15 and was told that the Soviet leadership is seriously considering the situation that has formed in the Mediterranean area and especially around Libya, and that the actions of the United States Administration are a direct challenge to the world community. While warning the United States of responsibility for whipping up tension the Soviet Union would like to hope that Washington will refrain from further actions leading to an aggravation of the already extremely complex situation.

Cancellation of Talks Lamented

LD162249 Moscow in English to North America 2200 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Vladislav Kozyakov commentary]

[Text] Soviet-American relations cannot but be affected by the American bombing of Libya, a sovereign state and member of the United Nations. The administration has made it impossible for the Soviet foreign minister to meet the United States secretary of state as planned in the middle of May. Our commentary is by Vladislav Kozyakov:

When the White House prepared this military operation and then ordered it, it knew very well of course what the consequences would be. It knew this would be a blow at the spirit of Geneva and aggravate relations with the Soviet Union. Nevertheless, it went ahead with it. Why? The answer would seem to be obvious: The administration is not ready for a constructive development of what was agreed at the Geneva summit last fall; it has no wish to respond to any of the Soviet Union's proposals, either on nuclear disarmament or on the adjustment of regional problems. Its actions have quite a different direction.

Just recall the nuclear explosions in Nevada at the time when the Soviet Union was observing a unilateral moratorium, the incursion of United States warships into Soviet territorial waters in the Black Sea, the demand to reduce the Soviet staff at the United Nations in New York, and the extension of the undeclared wars against Nicaragua, Angola, and Afghanistan, to name only a few of Washington's recent acts. So, the American bombing of Libyan cities with the resultant loss of human life is simply another link in the chain of defiant and provocative acts.

This is how Washington has responded to the efforts of the Soviet Union to find a way to better international relations and promote the process begun at Geneva. The administration itself has made it impossible for the present for the Soviet foreign minister, Eduard Shevardnadze, to meet his American counterpart George Shultz. But American politicians are making a mistake if they think that in this nuclear age international problems can be settled by bombing other nations and playing with fire. Judging by reactions to the latest events, nearly all governments are opposed to such an attitude. The dominant mood remains what it was: The world community wants preserved all the constructive trends in international relations that seemed to be shaping up after the Geneva summit.

Raid Equated With Grenada

LD161316 Moscow TASS in English 1131 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Geneva April 16 TASS -- The U.S. act of aggression against Libya and Washington's disregard for the interests of small states and nations are causing outrage all over the world, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vadim Loginov said.

Addressing a session of the U.N. Economic Commission for Europe today, he said that there had never been such an outrageous act of violation of international law and common human morality since the U.S. bandit attack on Grenada.

Loginov drew the attention of the participants in the session to the Soviet Government's statement on Thursday denouncing the U.S. act of aggression against Libya.

'Aircraft-Carrier Diplomacy' Scored

LD161516 Moscow TASS in English 1308 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 16 TASS -- By TASS correspondent Nikolay Turkatenko

The American bombs and missiles that hit Libya by order of the White House have not only brought death and destruction to Libyan soil, but also dashed the re-emerged hope that numerous international problems, starting with the settlement of regional conflicts and ending with the lessening of world tension, might be resolved.

The local press and television had to admit that the majority of Western European governments, including France, Italy and even the usually obedient American ally, West Germany, opposed the U.S. attack on Libya.

The U.S. permanent ambassador to the United Nations, Vernon Walters, while in Western Europe was rather unsuccessful in Washington's usual practice of "arms-twisting." The only thing which he did accomplish was the British Government's permission to use the American bases on British territory for the assault on Libya. The Tory cabinet thus became an accomplice in the bloody action, for which President Reagan publicly expressed his cordial gratitude.

President Reagan and the heads of the State was prepared to act again should need be.

One should mention in this connection that the escalation of the United States' militarist course, manifested in the attack against Libya, was in no way limited to that country alone. "Gunboat diplomacy" shaped as a major part of the doctrine of "neoglobalism" directed at establishing American domination worldwide. This was frankly admitted by TIME magazine which wrote that the administration's impatient desire to use force was relying on the enhanced self-confidence of its foreign plicy due to the military buildup.

The U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT, a journal close to the administration, was even more frank in its assessments. After the U.S. first attack against Libya in March, the magazine boasted that the administration was thus sending a signal not only to Libya, but also to Nicaragua...and even to the Soviet Union. It wrote that the United States "overcame the Vietnam syndrome" and was again ready to use military force to back up its "diplomacy."

None other than secretary of State Shultz quite openly launched "aircraft-carrier diplomacy". "What is clear tonight," he told a press conference immediately after the attack on Libya, "is that the United States will take military action under certain circumstances." Shultz even proclaimed the beginning of a new epoch in U.S. "Diplomacy".

But there is nothing new in the "epoch". The practice of "gunboat diplomacy" on several occasions brought the United States into dangerous impasses. In today's world, "aircraft-carrier diplomacy" is endangering even more the security of all, including, not in the last turn, of the United States.

REAGAN, GENSCHER MEET, DISCUSS LIBYA ATTACK

LD170851 Moscow TASS in English 0738 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 17 TASS -- President Reagan met in the White House on Wednesday Hans-Dietrich Genscher, foreign minister of the Federal Republic of Germany, who arrived here.

They discussed chiefly the situation that developed following the U.S. Air Force raid on Libya. The administration tried to present this meeting in a maximum favourable light, contending that it did not reveal any disagreements. Obvservers emphasize, however, that Washington has actually found itself in isolation -- the bandit action against Libya was fully supported only by Britain. Addressing journalists after Reagan's meeting with Genscher, a top-placed administration official admitted that there was broad opposition in Western Europe to the aggression against Libya staged by the United States.

FURTHER REPORTS ON USSR-JAPAN ECONOMIC MEETING

Marchuk Receives Delegation

LD151058 Moscow TASS in English 0937 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- On Monday Guriy Marchuk, deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, chairman of the USSR State Committee for Science and Technology, received representatives of Japan's business circles, who arrived in the USSR to attend the tenth meeting of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees for economic cooperation.

Matters aimed at further developing scientific and technological cooperation between the USSR and Japan were discussed during the conversation.

Malkevich Gives Keynote Speech

OW151321 Tokyo KYODO in English 1306 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 15 KYODO -- Soviet Deputy Foreign Trade Minister V.L. Malkevich Tuesday asked Japanese business leaders to cooperate in the saving of resources and energy in all sectors of the Soviet economy. He also proposed for the first time that Soviet rockets be used to launch Japan's large-sized artificial satellites.

Malkevich was speaking at the first plenary session of a three-day 10th joint meeting of the private Japan-Soviet business cooperation committee and its Soviet counterpart, which started here Tuesday. He is the leader of the Soviet delegation. The conference is attended by about 380 representatives from the two committees -- the largest number so far. The high-powered delegation of the Japanese business community is headed by Ryoichi Kawai, board chairman of Komatsu Ltd.

In a keynote speech, Malkevich said that economic, technical and scientific exchanges with other countries are indispensable for implementation of the Soviet Union's 12th Five-Year Plan (1986-1990) and its long-term economic plan until the year 2000. In this context, he said the Soviet Union wants to introduce Japan's techniques for saving resources and energy in all fields, including the automobile, electric machinery, steel, chemical and energy industries, as well as agriculture. He also proposed that Japan launch its large-sized satellites with Soviet rockets on a commercial basis.

Kawai, representing the Japanese side, expressed a readiness to cooperate in the Soviet Union's new five-year plan, and asked for its detailed explanation for purposes of exploring possible fields of cooperation.

In a message read at the outset of the conference, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone voiced Japan's readiness to promote cooperative economic projects with the Soviet Union on the principle of reciprocity.

Soviet Premier Nikolay Ryzhkov said in his message to the meeting that the Soviet Union will participate positively in international division of labor through stepped-up economic, scientific and technical exchanges with other countries.

Malkevich reemphasized the Soviet proposal for conclusion of a long-term economic cooperation agreement with Japan, saying a long-term intergovernmental agreement is necessary for economic, commercial and technical exchanges with a capitalist state. He also charged the Paris-based coordinating committee for export control (COCOM) with restricting trade between Japan and the Soviet Union. COCOM, consisting of Western nations and Japan, is designed to check exports of strategic goods to communist states.

Referring to specific economic projects between the two countries, Malkevich proposed talks be continued on a joint project for development of natural gas on the continental shelf off Sakhalin Island north of Japan because its profitability needs to be reviewed. He also said that negotiations connected with the fourth project for development of forest resources in Siberia, scheduled to start next year, should be completed by the end of this year. The planned chemical complex project will be scaled down.

Delegation Received in Kremlin

LD161829 Moscow TASS in English 1646 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, received in the Kremlin today the leadership of the delegation of Japanese business circles staying in Moscow in connection with the holding of the 10th joint conference of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees on economic cooperation.

During the conversation there was a detailed exchange of views on questions of Soviet-Japanese relations.

Nikolay Ryzhkov told the Japanese representatives that in the field of foreign policy, as it was confirmed by the 27th Congress of the CPSU, the Soviet Union intends further to pursue undeviatingly the course of the peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems. In accordance with this course my country is doing everything possible to put an end to the arms race, to stop the material preparations for nuclear war, to preserve and strengthen world peace, he said.

Since in the world of today security can only be universal security it is necessary for the actions of each state in the international arena to proceed from the premise of the impermissibility of wars and armed conflicts, of interference in the internal affairs of other peoples, Nikolay Ryzhkov said further.

But such an approach dictated by the realities of the present-day world has not yet become a universal norm of the behaviour of states. The United States armed attack against Libya, that creates a serious threat to universal peace and security, the brazen and provocative actions taken by the American Administration in response to the Soviet Union's peace initiatives -- all this increases tension in the world and leads to unpredictable consequences, Nikolay Ryzhkov said.

In the same context mention was made of the danger of the actual or planned drawing of the business circles of some countries, including in Japan, into the American programme of creating space strike weapons. Its implementation would inevitably entail a serious destabilisation of the strategic situation, a drastic intensification of the arms race and make the reduction and liquidation of nuclear arms impossible, he went on.

It is the duty of every country and also of business circles that are aware of their responsibility for the cause of peace to make their contribution to the strengthening of trust between countries, to facilitate in every way the transition from confrontation to extensive international cooperation.

When questions of Soviet-Japanese relations were discussed both sides voiced satisfaction with the positive changes that have appeared lately and confirmed intention to work for their further improvement.

Nikolay Ryzhkov characterised the directions of the USSR's social and economic policy determined by the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress, the prospects of the development of the productive forces in Siberia and the Far East and the resultant favourable possibilities for expanding trade and economic relations between the USSR and Japan. In the light of this views were exchanged on the usefulness of vigorous efforts to deepen ties in industry, to prepare agreements on co-production and scientific-technical cooperation. Note was made of the important role that business ties in the trade and economic field can and must play in deepening understanding and trust between the USSR and Japan, given that there should be no place in these ties for discrimination or restrictions in any whatsoever form.

Both sides positively assessed the activity of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees on economic cooperation and the results of their joint meeting that are called upon to give a new impetus to the perfection of mutually advantageous business ties between the Soviet Union and Japan. Taking part in the conversation from the Soviet side was Foreign Trade Minister B.I. Aristov and from the Japanese side -- head of delegation R. Kawai, Japanese Ambassador in the USSR Y. Katori, presidents of Japanese companies I. Mimura, H. Watanabe and K. Matsuo.

Comparison of Ryzhkov Message

Moscow PRAVDA in Russian on 16 April carries in its First Edition on page 1 a report on a message by Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, to the USSR-Japan Cooperation Committees meeting in Moscow. [Text] Today the CPSU delegation led by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev acquainted itself with the sights of the GDR capital. The first stop was at the monument to Vladimir Ilich Lenin, in the square bearing the name of the founder of the Soviet state. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev laid flowers at the foot of the monument.

Accompanying the CPSU delegation were Comrade Erich Honecker and other leaders of the SED.

Today marks 100 years since the birth of Ernst Thaelmann, the outstanding figure of the German international workers movement. On the eve of this important date, a monumental to the ardent internationalist revolutionary was unveiled in a solemn atmosphere in the GDR capital. Flowers are placed at the foot of the monument.

Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev had a conversation with Kerbel, the well-known Soviet sculptor and creator of the design for this monument.

[Begin recording][Gorbachev] I think that Thaelmann's appearance is as we had imagined it to be.

[Correspondent] There was a conversation here too with young Berlin builders who had taken part in the construction of the monument and the residential district that has come into being nearby.

[Female student] Esteemed Comrade Gorbachev, it is a great honor for me to meet you and welcome you to this place as [words indistinct]. We are all very pleased that you have come here...

[Gorbachev] Thank you.

[Female student continues] ...in order to take part in the congress of our party.

[Gorbachev] Thank you

[Female student] Permit me to hand you this letter from our school collective, which contains a photograph. [words indistinct]

[Gorbachev] You speak well, you speak well. I am very glad to hear words of great meaning from you, because these words are being uttered by a new generation entering upon life. Here, close to the monument to Thaelmann I would like to say that much has been given up for the GDR to be like this today. The friendship and the joint struggle are continuing. The step that you are taking today in applying to be accepted for candidate membership of the party is to my mind precisely a step in this direction. Continue Thaelmann's struggle in the present generation. You know, if society did not raise up a worthy generation as replacements it would not cope with its task. But when indeed we see such representatives, who are purposeful and understand their task, it is pleasant.

[Gorbachev] Good day. Thank you, thank you. Oh, how nice they are. [video shows girl presenting flowers]

[Gorbachev] Good day. Good day.

[Male student] We are very glad [words indistinct]. Continue to [word indistinct]. We are absolutely delighted by you.

[Gorbachev] For young people [words indistinct] wishes. You must add to what the older generation has achieved.

[Male student] We will try to do so.

[Gorbachev] It is good to see a healthy, strong, and good attitude of mind in young people. Thank you. Convey greetings to all your friends. [end recording]

[Correspondent] Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev and Erich Honecker viewed housing and children's playgrounds. The members of the CPSU delegation were cordially greeted by the inhabitants of a new district.

Afterward the CPSU delegation visited the Brandenburg Gate, which is the site of the GDR's state border with West Berlin. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev was given an explanation by Lieutenant General (Drews), the Berlin military commandant. The head of the CPSU delegation made an entry in the honored visitors' book.

From the Unter den Linden Avenue the CPSU delegation went to Academy Square. A wonderful architectural monument that suffered during the war years is being restored there. The Schauspielhaus Concert Hall is already open. The CPSU delegation was familiarized with it.

Restoration work is also being finished in the historic center of Berlin, which is now called Marx and Engels Forum. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev laid red carnations at the monument to the founders of scientific communism.

The CPSU delegation also visited Berlin's new residential districts of Marzahn and Hohenschoenhausen. Over 100,000 people reside there, while altogether over the past 5-year period over 320,000 Berliners received new or modernized apartments. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev was given a cordial welcome by the builders and new residents.

SED Congress Opens

LD171038 Moscow TASS in English 1006 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 17 TASS -- The 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED) has opened in the GDR capital today.

Attending the congress in the Palace of the Republic in Berlin are its delegates, representatives of the fraternal parties of the socialist countries, of other communist and workers' parties and national liberation movements. Opening the congress Horst Sindermann, member of the Political Bureau of the SED Central Committee, cordially welcomed the foreign guests. He said that 140 parties from 104 countries attended the congress.

The congress is to sum up the results of the work done over the past five years after the tenth party congress, outline prospects for the republic's further advancement on the way of building developed socialism, elect a new composition of the party bodies.

Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee, is addressing a congress with a report of the party Central Committee.

FURTHER CRITICISM OF U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

Hungary Expresses 'Concern'

LD162114 Moscow TASS in English 1859 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Budapest April 15 TASS -- The Government of the Hungarian People's Republic expresses profound concern over new U.S. military actions against Libya, says a statement of the Hungarian Government circulated here by the MTI news agency.

Numerous armed attacks on the Libyan territory indicate that the United States ignores the norms of international law and the United Nations Charter. Such actions threaten stability in the Mediterranean and also international peace and security.

The Government and people of the Hungarian People's Republic express their solidarity with the people and Government of Libya, demand the earliest and to aggressive actions and call for respect for Libya's sovereignty, the statement says.

Ceausescu Sends Reagan Message

LD170605 Moscow TASS in English 0538 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Bucharest April 17 TASS -- PRAVDA today carries the text of a message sent by Nicolae Ceausescu to President Reagan. Follows the summary of the message. Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, speaking on behalf of the government and people of Romania, sent a message to U.S. President Reagan. It reads that the Romanian people are badly worried by the bomb raid of the U.S. Air Force on Libya, an independent country and a member of the United Nations. Romania considers that attack an unjustified act of aggression against a free and sovereign state. These military operations inflicted heavy damage on property and there are victims among the population of the Libyan capital and foreign nationals. The Romanian Embassy was damaged and four embassy officials wounded. Romania holds the USA responsible for the damage caused to the Romanian Embassy.

The Socialist Republic of Romania considers the bombing of Libya to be a gross violation of the norms of international law, relations among states and the principles of the U.N. Charter. The problems between the USA and Libya should be settled through negotiations rather than by use of armed force.

The message points out the need to take every measures to stop the bombing and armed actions against Libya and expresses the hope that the U.S. Administration will understand the deep worry of Romania and all the other nations of the world over the grave tension caused by the American bomb raids, and also the need to work for the settlement of the problems in the Mediterrean, Europe and all over the world through peaceful negotiations.

As for the attempts of the U.S. ambassador to Romania, who was handed the message, to justify military action against Libya, Ceausescu said that the right to self-defence could not be invoked to attack an independent sovereign state. The bombing can by no means be justified by the pretext of war on terrorism. Romania has resolutely stated and continues to state its opposition to any act of terrorism and, moreover, deplores state terrorism.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON CARLSSON'S ACTIVITIES

Views Relations With USSR

LD162040 Moscow TASS in English 1557 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- Speaking at a press conference here today, prime minister of Sweden, chairman of the Social Democratic Party of Sweden Ingvar Carlsson noted that his negotiations in Moscow had been very constructive and useful and promoted further development of bilateral relations between Sweden and the Soviet Union.

The political course conducted by Olof Palme is also my political course, said the prime minister. We shall continue conducting this policy in the future. Such a policy meets Sweden's national interests, the interests of peace and justice as a whole. We believe that Sweden's policy of neutrality is making a considerable contribution to consolidation of stability and relaxation of tension in the north of Europe.

The Swedish Government, said Ingvar Carlsson, comes out for stable friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

Notes Territorial Violations

LD161651 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1030 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Interview with Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson by journalists Lars Adaktusson and Kerstin Brunnberg in Moscow on "Eko" program, date not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Carlsson] Concerning the established Soviet border violations, I maintained that the Swedish view is unchanged; we have not changed our minds in any respect. Concerning the violations, in which the country of origin has not been determined, I said that we will utilize our defense in order to uphold our territorial integrity. We will develop our capacity to forcefully repel all efforts to enter our territory.

[Adaktusson] This has been said before by the Swedish side. What reactions have you recently received on this?

[Carlsson] I have made these declarations unilaterally; we will not submit our foreign and neutrality policy to any other country. On the contrary, I have established that the Soviet side has a great respect for the Swedish policy of neutrality and it is important that the surrounding world has this respect.

[Adaktusson] But is this respect and understanding greater now, according to your view, then it was before?

[Carlsson] I think that we have been able to further increase the knowledge of the Swedish foreign policy and its foundations. This is not news for the Soviet leaders, but in connection with the change of leadership in Moscow, after all, I deem it to be important that we have been able to explain the viewpoints of the Swedish Government.

[Adaktusson] Is the view of Swedish neutrality identical between Sweden and the Soviet Union?

[Carlsson] I have declared the Swedish point of view, and we will follow it strictly. Apart from this, it would be good if the surrounding world agreed as much as possible with the Swedish judgments. But it is we who form our foreign policy.

[Brunnberg] Have you now normalized relations between the Soviet Union and Sweden?

[Carlsson] To normalize is a question of definition. I would like to say that after strained years in the beginning of the 1980's, our relations have improved gradually; they have stabilized. This has been my ambition, and I think that we have succeeded. Without making concessions from the Swedish side, we can say that we are developing and improving our relations with the Soviet Union. This is in my view a strong Swedish interest.

[Brunnberg] What results do you expect from this visit?

[Carlsson] There are two important matters going on in Moscow. One is the ice-hockey championship. There, the results can be determined after each game. And when you arrive home, you have also a gold, silver or bronze medal. This is what I am hoping for the Swedish ice-hockey team.

When I go home, the results can be monitored gradually. I have emphasized the long-term improvement in relations with the Soviet Union.

Comparison of Ryzhkov-Carlsson Talks

Moscow PRAVDA in Russian on 17 April carries in its First Edition on page 4 a report on the talks between Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson of Sweden and Soviet Premier Ryzhkov. Page G 6, paragraph one, line two reads in IZVESTIYA reads: of nuclear tests. Our country will not (subbing "our" for "my")

WHITEHEAD IN W. EUROPE TO GAIN SUPPORT FOR RAID

LD171011 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0800 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] John Whitehead, first deputy U.S. secretary of state, has been hastily sent on a tour of Western Europe. In Paris, Whitehead is to meet ministers from West European OECD countries. The annual meeting of foreign and finance ministers of OECD member-states opens in the French capital today.

In announcing Whitehead's tour, the spokesman for the U.S. State Department made no secret of the fact that it represents another attempt to gain support from the United States' European allies for Washington's anti-Libyan policies.

The majority of the West European governments have publicly distanced themselves from the piratical raid by U.S. aircraft on Libya and have criticized the U.S. aggression.

EEC DIFFERENCES NOTED ON U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

LD170952 Moscow TASS in English 0826 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Paris April 17 TASS -- TASS correspondent Nikita Yermakov reports:

An emergency conference of ministers of foreign affairs of the EEC member countries opened here today to discuss the situation in the Mediterranean, which has deteriorated as a result of the U.S. aggression against Libya.

According to AGENCE FRANCE PRESSE, foreign ministers of 12 EEC member states are not unanimous in their approach to this problem. Specifically, many EEC members denounce the decision of Britain to allow U.S. warplanes to take off from the airfields stationed in Britain for delivering a blow at Libya.

Thus, Leo Tindemans, minister of foreign affairs of Belgium, described these actions as a double play, for they run counter to the stand coordinated by foreign ministers of EEC member countries before the U.S. raid on Libya.

UK 'RECONNAISSANCE' FLIGHT AIDED U.S. RAID

LD161324 Moscow TASS in English 1230 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Kuwait April 16 TASS -- U.S. British-based spy planes have been making reconnaissance flights over Libya over recent days in preparation for a U.S. air strike on that country, KUNA news agency reported from London.

It said this followed from a report issued by the news service press association, which said that a U.S. blackbird spy plane had been taking off from Mildenhall, East England, every morning. Authorities had not given any details about its missions.

Although the bulk of information needed by Americans for their attacks on Libya had bene gathered by satellites, the report said, spy planes had also played an important role in preparing it.

The British Government and personally Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher permitted Washington to use British-based F-111 bombers against Libya.

COMMENTATORS VIEW REPERCUSSIONS OF UK AID

Ponomarev on 'Debt' Repayment

LD170959 Moscow TASS in English 0848 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- By TASS commentator Leonid Ponomarev:

"The British Government, by its unqualified public support for the U.S. action (against Libya), has compromised its position in ways which are logically and politically untenable," the London-based FINANCIAL TIMES observed Wednesday.

The U.S. television network CBS said in a report from London that in Britain today all were only asking one question, namely why Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had allowed Britain to become the base from which the United States had struck at Libya.

Some people are voicing the opinion that Thatcher has only "repaid the debt" to the Reagan administration for its backing to Britain at the time the latter launched military activities against Argentina over the Falkland (Malvinas) Islands.

The price for this kind of support, however, may prove very dear. Britain is taking the risk of being involved in a U.S. venture that can become uncontrolled.

This has been demonstrated graphically by London's support for U.S. aggression against Libya, which has also shown that U.S. and British militarists have made violence, aggression and crusading chauvinism a standard of their policies.

Conflict breeding, international banditry and brinkmanship are especially manifest in the policy of the present U.S. Administration, a policy shared and backed by London.

The seeming impunity, with which the Washington administration has been staging aggresions one after another in different parts of the world and which it is flaunting in its jingoist intoxiation, is by no means an indication of either America's strength or the wisdom of its accomplice in aggression, Britain.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH and THE TIMES have published the findings of public opinion polls over the U.S. bombing of Libya and the Conservative government's decision on U.S. bases. The vast majority of the respondents (65 and more percent) have denounced both the air raid and the use of bases in Britain for the purpose.

A total of 66 percent of the polled said they believed the U.S. action a mistake, while seven in ten voiced opposition to the British Government's decision on the bases.

People are coming to realize ever more clearly that Washington's present policy is a way to violence and war. It is provoking a grave threat to universal peace and security.

Vasilyev on BBC 'Lies'

LD162051 Moscow TASS in English 1945 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- Commentator Georgiy Vasilyev writes:

The British Tory government, having actively joined the runaway anti-Libyan campaign unleashed by the United States and having provided bases for American fighter-bombers from which to launch bandit raids against Libyan cities, is also vigorously participating in the dissemination of deliberately false information about the situation in Libya. Today, for instance, a correspondent of the British BBC reported "firefights" and an attempted "mutiny" in the Bab al-'Azziyah district of the Libyan capital. This report was emphatically refuted by the Libyan official JANA agency and qualified as "a lie that has nothing in common with the actual state of affairs".

In reality, the agency said, Libyan anti-aircraft defences had opened fire at an American reconnaissance plane that had intruded into Libyan air space.

The BBC correspondent's report is clearly of a malicious nature. It fits well into the unbridled anti-Libyan propaganda outcry raised by the CIA and the American mass media and directed at destabilising the situation in Libya and, ultimately, at toppling the present Libyan leadership. As we see, the Thatcher government is ever more actively appearing in the unseemly role of an accomplice in the dirty military venture undertaken by the United States against an independent Arab state, a member of the United Nations Organisation, and which is giving rise to a wave of wrath and indignation throughout the world.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON EVENTS AFTER U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

Gorbachev Sends Message

LD161847 Moscow TASS in English 1835 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 16 TASS -- On Tuesday the General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee Mikhail Gorbachev sent the following message to the leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi:

"Dear Comrade Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi:

During these difficult days for the Libyan Jamahiriyah I want to express on behalf of the Soviet leadership and all Soviet people to you personally and to the friendly Libyan people feelings of solidarity in face of American imperialism's bandit crime. Also please accept our sincere condolences in connection with the tragic death of Libyans who fell victim to the American aviation's barbarous raid.

Our principled position in connection with the new armed aggression of the United States is outlined with utmost clarity in the just published statement of the Soviet Government. I find it necessary to add the following.

The USSR had taken numerous steps to prevent the threatening development of events around Libya. Along with moral, political, diplomatic and military support for friendly Libya and also other measures in this direction which are well known to you we had repeatedly made serious warnings to the American Administration about the dangerous consequences of the continuation of its anti-Libyan policy not only for the situation in the Mediterranean region but also for the entire international situation. We also declare that such a development of events cannot but have a negative impact on Soviet-American relations as well.

Washington did not heed our calls dictated by a striving to avoid a new worsening of the political climate in the world. The United States again stands for all to see as the main culprit of the escalation of international tension irresponsibly playing with the fate of millions of people for the sake of satisfying its imperial ambitions. While declaring that they are fighters against "international terrorism" the United States leaders in reality only confirmed once again their adherence to the policy of state terrorism and the aggressive doctrine of "neoglobalism".

When they made their armed attack on Libya the Americans did not achieve their aims. On the contrary, this aggression has still further rallied the Libyan people behind its revolutionary leadership and further increased its resolve to continue upholding the progressive gains of the September 1 Revolution and to pursue an independent anti-imperialist course in the international arena. Washington's hopes to break the freedomloving Jamahiriyah and force it to its knees have been dashed while the United States has suffered a new moral and political defeat.

The American aviation's bandit raids against peaceful Libyan cities have caused the anger and indignation of Soviet people who are demanding an end to the aggressive designs of the United States against that sovereign Arab state.

We are making vigorous efforts in the international arena as well. We have stated a strong protest to the American Administration and again demanded an immediate end to its adventuristic anti-Libyan policy. An appropriate representation was made by us to the Government of the United Kingdom which permitted the use of the American bases located on its territory for the raids against Libya.

In addition to this we have called on the leading Arab and non-aligned countries to give the Libyan Jamahiriyah active support.

It goes without saying that all our actions in this direction we coordinate with the fraternal socialist states.

Confirming our effective solidarity again to you. Comrade al-Qadhdhafi, and to the entire Libyan people, I would like to assure you that the Soviet Union firmly intends further to fulfill its commitments in terms of further strengthening Libya's defence capability. And this, as we see it, is of special importance for your country in the present situation.

With sincere respects, M. Gorbachev"

Libyan Official Voices Gratitude

LD170710 Moscow TASS in English 0655 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi January 17 TASS -- We are infinitely grateful for the message of Mikhail Gorbachev, the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, to Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, the leader of the Libyan revolution, expressing the Soviet Union's full support for the struggle waged by the Libyan people against the barbarous U.S. aggression, said Kamil Hasan al-Mansur, the head of the Libyan delegation at the New Delhi meeting of the Coordination Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement, secretary of the Libyan General People's Committee for Foreign Liaison.

In this difficult hour for Libya when U.S. aircraft are sowing death and destruction, killing peaceful civilians, including children, this message of support from the Soviet leader infuses our people with fresh strength in the struggle against the U.S. aggression, Kamil Hasan al-Mansur told TASS correspondent Vladimir Baydashin. The Soviet Union has always sided with the peoples fighting against imperialism, for freedom and independence, the Libyan minister emphasized.

Sudanese Official Briefed

[Text] Kuwait, April 16 (KUNA) -- Foreign Undersecretary Sulayman Majid al-Shahin received the Soviet ambassador in Kuwait, Pogos Akopov, Wednesday. KUNA learnt that Akopov briefed Al-Shahin on the text of a Soviet Government communique issued yesterday in condemnation of the American air strikes on Libya.

Al-Qadhdhafi Appears on TV

LD170418 Moscow TASS in English 0407 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 17 TASS -- The leader of the Libyan revolution, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, spoke on Libyan television this night. He strongly condemned the act of aggression unleashed by the U.S. Administration against the Libyan Jamahiriyah and the complicity of the British conservative government in the organization of the piratic raids of the U.S. Air Force on Libyan cities. Al-Qadhdhafi said that the leaders of Arab countries had contacted him on their own initiative and suggested that an emergency conference of the heads of state and government of Arab countries be convened to discuss assistance to the Libyan people in repulsing the U.S. bandit aggression. The leader of the Libyan revolution said that the conference could take place within a day or two.

He called upon the Arab states and peoples to display at this crucial moment of struggle against imperialism and Zionism a sense of unity. "As a consequence of the gross act of aggression perpetrated by the USA, we have a historical opportunity to understand wherein our strength lies," Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi said. "Our strength lies in unity. The Arab countries must break off economic and political relations with the USA. I want to say that the Arab peoples should seek a boycott of the United States because that country has gone beyond all limits and committed the murder of our children."

Al-Qadhdhafi stressed that the U.S. Administration and the British Government should be put on trial as "child killers." He said that altogether 33 U.S. warplanes had raided his residences and that their task was physically to eliminate him.

Al-Qadhdhafi's adopted daughter was killed in the raids and two of his sons were critically wounded.

Having stressed in his address that Libya would give a befitting rebuff to the aggressors, Al-Qadhdhafi at the same time pointed out that it would never stoop to barbarity against children or the civilian population. "We do not bomb cities," he said.

The Arab countries, African states, non-aligned countries, all the forces of progress have voiced readiness to fight on our side, the leader of the Libyan revolution said. If new attacks are committed, we will offer a resolute rebuff and inflict heavy losses on the aggressors. We are ready to die in defence of our country.

Saudi Arabia Condemns U.S. Attack

LD162117 Moscow TASS in English 1252 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Kuwait April 16 TASS -- Saudi Arabia has condemned the American attack against Libya. A statement by the government's official spokesman pointed out that such methods were in violation of the generally recognized norms of international law.

Violence, he said, was not only complicating a peace settlement in the region, but also was facilitating the heightening of tension in the Mediterranean and the Middle East.

The statement reaffirmed solidarity with the people of the Libyan Jamahiriyah and emphasised that Saudi Arabia would side with any Arab country subject to attack.

Syrian Party Denounces 'Banditry'

LD162124 Moscow TASS in English 0810 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus April 16 TASS -- The Progressive National Front of Syria has denounced the acts of banditry of the U.S. forces against sovereign Libya. An emergency meeting of the Front's leadership here said in an address to the Syrians and other Arab peoples that the U.S. armed attack fully exposed the hegemonistic plans of U.S. imperialism in the region, aimed at establishing U.S. dominance in the Middle East.

The dangerous action of the USA, the address pointed out, is graphic evidence of the violation by the U.S. Administration of international norms, the U.N. Charter and basic principles of relations among states. It is a new step in the escalation of U.S. state terrorism, institutionalized by Washington as official policy and projected onto the whole world. The United States is challenging by its aggressive policy and organized terror the peoples endeavoring for progress and national liberation.

The address stresses the need for the unity and cohesion of the Arab peoples as a major factor in countering the conspiracies of imperialism and Zionism.

PDRY Leader Expresses Support

LD162145 Moscow TASS in English 0909 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Aden April 16 TASS -- The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen [PDRY] sides with the Government and people of Libya in the struggle against American imperialism which is perpetrating direct armed aggression agaisnt the Libyan revolution, 'Ali Salim al-Baydh, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Yemen Socialist Party, has declared.

In a telephone conversation with 'Abd al-Salim Jallud, member of the revolutionary leadership of Libya, Al-Baydh condemned the America's military action against the fraternal Arab country.

The U.S. barbaric action, he said, was against all international laws and norms.

Al-Mansur Seeks U.S. Isolation

LD162139 Moscow TASS in English 1912 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 16 TASS -- Secretary of the People's Bureau for External Relations of the General People's Committee of Libya Kamil Hasan al-Mansur has called for international isolation of the United States for acts of aggression against smaller states.

Speaking today at a plenary meeting of the Coordinating Bureau of non-aligned states, which is under way here, he said that there can (?be no) justification for the U.S. insolent aggression. The way the United States acts is an outright policy of state terrorism, said Al-Mansur.

Though Libya is experiencing hard times, and bombings inflicted economic damage upon it, it shall never agree to pressure and will put up resistance to the end. Libya shall never yield to U.S. attempts to intimidate Mediterranean countries and will continue resolutely fighting against Washington's hegemonistic designs by all means at its disposal, stressed Kamal Hasan al-Mansur.

U.S. Attacks Tripoli Airport

Atmosphere Tense in Tripoli

LD161941 Moscow TASS in English 1905 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 16 TASS -- TASS correspondent Georgiy Shelenkov reports: The Libyan capital had an anxious morning today. Last night the sounds of explosions announced that U.S. aircraft appeared in the skies over Tripoli again. Several hours later the city which had grown quiet, awoke once again to the screech of aircraft, the firing of Libyan air defense systems, and the resonant echo of a distant explosion.

The clumsy attempts by U.S. Administration spokesman to "deny" the fact of a new raid seem simply ridiculous here in Tripoli because any of Western journalists who arrived here can disprove them. The JANA news agency issued a report on yet another raid during which, according to JANA, another four U.S. fighters were shot down. In the evening newsreel, the Libya television showed the fragments of one of such aircraft. The world should know that, although the largest imperialist power throws huge forces against the small people, the Armed Forces of the Libyan Jamahiriyah issue a fitting rebuff to them.

Rescue operations have already been completed in Ben Ashur area which suffered perhaps most of all from the barbarous air raid. The bulldozers are removing the remains of the houses where only two days ago people had lived peacefully and many of whom are no more. When going there in the morning I literally at the doorstep met a neighbour from a lower floor. Usually a sociable and cheerful person, he looked terrible today: His wife's sister quite a young girl, lived not far from the French Embassy. Today she will be buried. Her life was severed as a result of an order issued by the occupant of the White House where there is unceasing talk of "directed strikes" against military facilities. This is a lie! The strikes are really directed but not at all against military targets but against civilians women, children and old men. Today's edition of the newspaper AL-FAJR AL-JADID carries three pages of photographs, the pictures of maimed people and destroyed buildings.

Those of the neighbours who survived -- I rode up to the remains of those buildings -- were not too communicative at first. And one can understand them -- so fresh are their memories of the terrible night. They related that Nabil 'Abd al-Fattah and his family lived on the site. He is now in hospital but his family is no more. Muhammad Sahl, another resident of the neighbourhood, was killed.

Foreigners who had arrived here to help the Libyan people in their peaceful construction also found their death under the ruins of the multi-storey building. There are scores of people, Libyans and citizens of other countries, who became victims of the "frenzy of force", as the doings of the "avengers" from across the ocean are called here.

The question arises: On whom and what for those "zealots of freedom" take revenge? They take revenge on the Libyan people because they did not want to live as Washington would like them to, and because the independent anti-imperialist course of the Jamahiriyah and its consistent struggle for a just settlement of the Middle East conflict, for the ensurance of peace and stability in the Mediterranean area do not accord with the concept of U.S. "vital interests". This is why U.S. aircraft fly in here to sow death and destruction on Libyan soil. They fly in and it seems that Washington, despite the storm of indignation among all the peoples of the world, does not so far intend to stop and think better of it.

This was confirmed again by the new cannonade which made the city start exactly at 2 p.m. today.

It seems this time Libyan anti-aircraft gunners opened fire on reconnaissance planes and drove them away. But bombers furtively prefer to commit their black deeds under the cover of darkness, and civilians of the Libyan capital are awaiting the approaching night with alarm.

Widespread Casualties

LD162035 Moscow TASS in English 2002 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 16 TASS -- TASS correspondent Nikolay Turkatenko reports:

As a result of the U.S. piratic attack on Libya, a considerable destruction has been inflicted upon Tripoli, the capital of Libya, tens of civilians were killed or heavily wounded, correspondents of U.S. television and newspapers report. Thereby they disprove the mendacious statements by U.S. Administration spokesmen that the strike was ostensibly delivered exclusively against military targets. A WASHINGTON POST correspondent, describing in detail the situation in Tripoli, reports that the hospitals of the city are filled with heavily wounded residents. Among them there are many children and women. A physician of one of the hospitals has told journalists that among those killed is year-old Hanna, the adopted baby daughter of Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. Two of his teen-age sons have been injured. The correspondent saw the dead bodies of civilians in the ruins of houses.

One of the tenement houses was fully razed to the ground by a direct bomb hit.

Not only residents of the Libyan capital but many foreign citizens, suffered as a result of the raid. Among them is the wife of an Italian consul, and a West German technical specialist who were injured. Large destruction was inflicted upon the Embassy of France, the residences of the ambassadors of Switzerland, Finland, and Austria, and on the Romanian cultural centre. In reply to journalists' questions how should one regard in the light of such reports the administration spokesmen's assurances that the strike was delivered ostensibly only against military targets, the shifting and dodging officials went to the lengths of asserting that the Libyans themselves had caused the destructions and casualties. A State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb cynically stated that the USA was sorry if something had gone wrong and that it did not want casualties among civilian population.

U.S. Raids Tripoli Again

U.S. 'HAWKS' URGE RENUNCIATION OF SALT II

LD172211 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1900 GMT 17 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Boris Kalyagin]

[Text] Many observers note that the attack on Libya is not some kind of isolated bellicose step by the present U.S. Administration, but the latest indication of its general aggressive approach to foreign policy. Let us recall Washington's provocative actions of just the recent period: the violation by U.S. ships of Soviet territorial waters off the Crimean coast, the shipment of the latest Stinger antiaircraft missiles to the Afghan dushmans and UNITA gangs in Angola, the nuclear bomb blast in Nevada, and the attempts to increase military aid for the Nicaraguan contras. And now Washington is duscussing whether it should perform another reckless action and renounce observance of the SALT II treaty, which, as everyone knows, was not ratified by the United States. U.S. President Reagan has held a special conference on this issue with his leading foreign policy advisers in the White House. At the end of May, sea trials of the eighth American atomic Trident-class missile-carrying submarine will begin. Here you see a previous test of a submarine of this class. It is fitted with 24 multiple-warhead ballistic missiles. [video shows submarine at sea, missile being launched from submerged vessel]

As a result of the commissioning of the latest missile-carrying submarine, named the Nevada, the United States will exceed the limit for missiles with multiple warheads fixed in the SALT II treaty, if they do not dismantle two old Poseidon-class atomic submarines at the same time. At the White House conference, contradictory views were expressed as to whether the United States should continue to adhere to the provisions of the SALT II treaty. Such Washington hawks as Secretary of Defense Weinberger, CIA Director Casey, and director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency Adelman are demanding that observance of the agreement be renounced.

It is typical that, as THE WASHINGTON POST reports, even the U.S. naval command does not in principle object to the dismantling of two Poseidon submarines, since they have been in service for more than 22 years; they are obsolete and in need of major overhaul, and even after overhaul their service life will only be very brief. The supporters of a hard line, however, are insisting that these atomic submarines be kept in order to challenge the Soviet Union and to undermine the possibility of achieving any agreement limiting the arms race. And in order to justify this position, Washington has again started to talk about alleged violations of the SALT II treaty by the Soviet Union. These conjectures have already repeatedly been rebutted by Soviet representatives at the most authoritative level.

It is not surprising that the plans to wreck one of the few Soviet-American agreements remaining in force have aroused alarm even in the U.S. Congress: Fifty-two U.S. senators have sent President Reagan a message in which they insist that the treaty be observed. A similar letter has also been sent to the White House by more than 150 members of the House of Representatives. As UPI reports, the U.S. President will make a final decision in a few days, after the United States has consulted its allies.

WARSAW PACT DECLARATION REJECTS U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

PM171128 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 17 Apr 86 Second Edition p 1

[Text] The allied socialist states are expressing profound concern over the sharp aggravation of the international situation that has been provoked by the U.S. hostile actions against Libya. The barbarous bombing of peaceful Libyan cities by U.S. aircraft, in which innocent people became victims, is an act of direct aggression and gives rise to legitimate anger and indignation.

The piratic attack on the sovereign Arab state poses a real threat to peace not only in the southern Mediterranean. It is fraught with an uncontrolled escalation of international tension, which will inevitably have an adverse effect on the situation in Europe and throughout the world.

The Warsaw Treaty member-states resolutely reject the methods of conducting foreign policy by force, still less with weapons. It is precisely such methods along with the imperialist policy of aggression and diktat that breed violence and bring about favorable conditions for international terrorism, of which the socialist world is a principled opponent.

The interests of everyone and the interests of international security require an immediate end to any aggressive actions against Libya and the elimination of the dangerous seat of tension in the southern Mediterranean as soon as possible. The international community must raise its voice in defense of the Libyan people and of its inalienable right to tranquil life and independent development.

The governments and people of the People's Republic of Bulgaria, the Hungarian People's Republic, the German Democratic Republic, the Polish People's Republic, the Socialist Republic of Romania, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic are stating their solidarity with the people of Libya in its efforts to repulse the imperialist aggression.

At the same time the Warsaw Treaty member-states consider it necessary to emphasize that the current complex period in international relations demands of all states a particularly responsible approach, a display of restraint in politics, and active efforts aimed at keeping universal peace. It is precisely these goals that the fraternal socialist countries have been and will be guided by in their practical actions.

CEMA COOPERATION COMMITTEE MEETS IN MOSCOW

[Text] Moscow, 15 Apr (TASS) -- The 38th sitting of the CEMA committee for cooperation in the field of planned activity opened today in Moscow.

The results of the coordination of the CEMA countries' national economic plans and of the capital investments for 1986-1990, the design of a coordinated plan of multilateral international measures for the same period, and the issues of ensuring the implementation of the Comprehensive Program of Scientific-Technical Progress of the CEMA Countries up to the Year 2000, as well as of cooperation in the field of big national economic problems are being discussed.

FURTHER REACTION TO U.S. ATTACK AGAINST LIBYA

Shevardnadze Message to UN

LD171705 Moscow TASS in English 1655 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Quotation marks as received]

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- Follows a full text of the address of Eduard Shevardnadze, USSR minister of foreign affairs, to the U.N. secretary general.

"Dear Mr. Secretary General,

I am addressing you on an especially important matter.

The situation in the south Mediterranean region has sharply deteriorated following the U.S. air attack on Libya and a threat has been created for universal peace and security. No matter what reasons the U.S. puts forward in an attempt to explain its actions, it is clear to us and to the world in general that it was a direct aggression against a sovereign state, a case of flagrant violation of the generally recognized norms of international relations, as well as of the U.N. Charter which directly prohibits the use of force against any country. This is how those actions are regarded by the Soviet Union.

These extremely dangerous actions can bring about a complete disarray in international relations. A very serious situation has taken shape".

"At present the problem is as follows: If urgent measures are not taken today for stopping the aggression against Libya, tomorrow any sovereign country can become the target of armed violence with all the consequences involved for world peace and security.

The Soviet leadership believes that in the present-day situation which is dangerous for the cause of peace it is important to take advantage of all the opportunities with a view to stopping the aggression and bringing back to normal the situation in the south Mediterranean region.

The United Nations Organization should make its contribution to it. You are certainly aware, Mr. Secretary General, of the steps taken by us, including at the Security Council. We should like to count on your taking advantage, on your part, of all the means that are at your disposal, of your personal authority and influence in order to prevent the deterioration of the situation and to immediately stop the use of armed force by the United States against Libya. You, Mr. Secretary General, can count in this respect on the complete support of the Soviet Union.

[Signed] Respectfully, Eduard Shevardnadze, USSR Minister of Foreign Affairs."

OAU Denounces Attack

LD162219 Moscow TASS in English 0901 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 16 TASS -- The Organization of African Unity has strongly denounced the bandit air attack of the U.S. on Libya.

A statement of the OAU Executive Secretariat published here Tuesday emphasized that by its barbarous actions the U.S. Administration had again demonstrated that it violated the norms of international law and the U.N. Charter. The OAU voiced its all-out support for and solidarity with the Libyan people and demanded that the U.S. stop acts of aggression.

LOMEYKO STRESSES SOVIET OPPOSITION TO TERRORISM

LD171643 Moscow TASS in English 1627 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- "The Soviet Union has been and is on principle against terrorism, both individual and state terrorism, which is particularly dangerous since whole peoples fall victim to it," Chief of the Press Department of the USSR Foreign Ministry Vladimir Lomeyko said at a briefing for Soviet and foreign reporters today. "The USSR has declared more than once that this disgraceful phenomenon poses danger to entire humanity, and that the USSR is ready to cooperate with all countries in eradicating this menace", he said.

"Acts of terrorism should not be viewed separately, without their interrelationship", Vladimir Lomeyko went on to say. "Violence breeds more violence. So this problem can be tackled only in a political way. The United States tries to present socialist countries as a side that has no wish to participate in combating terrorism", the spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said. "Attempts are even made as was the case with regard to the Libyan Jamahiriyah, to place the blame at the wrong door. It should not be forgotten that the beginning to the policy of international terrorism in the Middle East, for instance, was set by forcible occupation of Arab lands by Israel and by depriving the Arab people of Palestine of its national home", Vladimir Lomeyko said. "The aggressive actions of the U.S. Administration confirmed again that the United States continues the policy of state terrorism".

NATO NAVAL EXERCISES BEGIN IN DANISH WATERS

LD172111 Moscow TASS in English 1612 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Copenhagen April 17 TASS -- NATO naval exercises code-named "Blue Harrier-86" have started in Danish territorial waters in the Kattegat, Great and Little Belt straits, and will last till April 30. Taking part in them are 65 combat ships belonging to Denmark, the FRG, Norway, Britain, Belgium and Holland, including ships from the permanent NATO trawler squadron in the channel zone. Air support is provided by Danish and West German aircraft and NATO electronic reconnaissance planes. In all, the exercises involve 2,500 servicemen. NATO military spokesmen have said that the purpose of the exercise is to practice the interaction of ships when solving a number of tactical tasks, the Danish RITZAUS BUREAU news agency reports.

NONALIGNED FOREIGN MINISTERS CONFERENCE HELD

Conference Previewed

NC151104 Moscow in Persian to Iran 1600 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Unattributed commentary: "The Friends and Foes of Iran and of Other Nonaligned Nations"]

[Text] Foreign ministers of nonaligned countries will meet in New Delhi, from 16 to 19 April, and the participants, including Iran, will study ways to confront U.S. foreign policy.

As you know, this policy has different aspects, among which are the nuclear blackmailing of nonaligned nations, the use of state terrorism, and, specifically, the policy of deploying aircraft carriers and imposing economic and commercial sanctions on nonaligned countries.

Iran has been the target of all aspects of U.S. foreign policy. After the victory of the 11 February revolution, a plan to inflict a nuclear blow on Iran, code-named "Thread Wire," was prepared by the Pentagon. The helicopters that landed U.S. commandos near Tabas took off from the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz, which was patrolling near Iranian territorial waters. Iran became a target of economic and commercial sanctions imposed by the United States, and most of these sanctions continue to be in force. The United States is resorting to the same methods against Libya and Nicaragua today.

All these prompt the nonaligned countries to seek a collective way to defend their independence and sovereignty. However, there are difficulties in this, too. Definitely, the so-called regional clashes in various parts of the world are a source of concern for the Nonaligned Movement since these hotbeds can spark off world clashes and create a suitable pretext for provocations and plots by the initiators of nuclear war. This fully applies to the Iran-Iraq war as well. This war that has been continuing for 6 years now, splits the ranks of the nonaligned nations, and grants a suitable pretext to the U.S. and its NATO allies to interfere in regional affairs and prepare for aggression in this region. It should be noted that there are forces in the U.S. Administration that primarily want to continue and to escalate the arms race in the future on the pretext of the need to control conflict between countries. As pointed out in the 15 March message by Mikhail Gorbachev, CPSU Central Committee general secretary, the Soviet Union opposes the linking of disarmament and regional clashes. Behind this act one can see both an unwillingness to move toward disarmament and a willingness to impose foreign wills on independent nations, as well as a willingness to impose systems and norms that can lead to the unjust existence of one group of nations through another and the exploitation of these nations' natural, human, and intellectual resources for the selfish and high-handed objectives of some countries or aggressive groups. Mikhail Gorbachev declared that the Soviet Union has always opposed this method. The Soviet Union is the persistent supporter of the freedom of nations, of peace and security, and of the consolidation of international rights. The Soviet Union's objective is not to escalate regional conflicts but to stop them through joint efforts and on the basis of just principles. The sooner these conflicts end, the better.

These ideas show that the interests of the Soviet Union, and of all the socialist nations, are fundamentally the same as that of the nonaligned nations. Consideration for the security and the peaceful future of nations are common principles to all the world and the invigoration of the international situation has become the pressing duty of all those who respect and cherish the fate of mankind.

Gandhi Addresses Opening Session

LD161744 Moscow TASS in English 1050 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 16 TASS -- By TASS correspondents Vladimir Baydashin and Stanislav Sychev.

"The Non-Aligned Movement extends its firm support and solidarity to Libya in this critical hour," Rajiv Gandhi, prime minister of India and chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement, told the opening of the Coordinating Bureau's session here today.

The Non-Aligned Movement, he said, was based on the principles of peace and peaceful co-existence, national sovereignty, abstention from the use of force, and respect for international order.

Adherence to these principles was expanding the prospects of peace and international cooperation and strengthening the unity of the movement, Gandhi pointed out.

The chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement denounced the continuing race of arms, above all nuclear ones.

He said it was madness to spend annually trillions of dollars on arms. The nuclear arms race was leading towards the threat of nuclear war that would destroy human civilization.

The world was expecting that statesmen display wisdom and striving for peace in this dangerous situation, Gandhi pointed out.

In this connection, he welcomed the Soviet-American summit in Geneva and the joint statement on holding talks with a view to preventing the arms race in space and ending it on earth, and ultimately eliminating all nuclear weapons.

A moratorium on all nuclear testing should become a first element of disarmament, as urged in the initiative of six countries of five continents.

The Soviet Union positively responded to the appeal by suspending unilaterally all nuclear explosions and extending its moratorium twice. But the United States was going ahead with nuclear testing, Gandhi said.

He criticised the white-minority racist regime in South Africa and Western countries which back it, and called for compliance with the U.N. decisions on South Africa and Namibia.

The chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement came out in favour of the exercise of the inalienable right of the Arab people of Palestine and an end to the Israeli occupation of Arab territories.

He backed the Central American countries' right to choose the form of social, political and economic development without outside interference, and called for the solution of Central American problems within the framework of the Contadora agreement.

The chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement called on the West's industrialised nations to listen to the voice of reason and agree to a new international economic order on a fair and equitable basis.

He favoured the consolidation of the U.N. role and stressed the need for ending pressure on it that was being exerted by several Western nations.

The first-day speakers representing all regional groups and national liberation movements denounced the U.S. barbaric aggression against Libya and demanded that it be immediately stopped.

PRAVDA REVIEWS 6-12 APR INTERNATIONAL EVENTS

PM141521 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 13 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[Nikolay Kurdyumov "International Review"]

[Text] The past week demonstrated vividly and convincingly the two lines in international relations: the difference between the Soviet Union's peace-loving course, which was once again confirmed in M.S. Gorbacheav's speech in Tolyatti, and the militarist policy of the United States.

The week began in conditions where the Soviet moratorium on nuclear explosions was in operation, as it had been for more than 8 months. The Soviet Union had prolonged the moratorium and stated that it would refrain from nuclear tests until the first nuclear explosion in the United States. The world and American public called on President R. Reagan to follow the Soviet example and thereby lay the foundations for an important stage in international relations and pave the way for curbing the arms race. But Washington did not heed the voice of reason: on 10 April, the United States carried out a nuclear explosion at the Nevada test range.

It was a challenge to all mankind, in pursuit of the crazy idea of achieving military-stratgegic superiority over the Soviet Union. Naturally, in this situation our government could not remain unconcerned. It stated that from now on it is free of the self-imposed unilateral commitment to refrain from carrying out nuclear blasts. In conditions of Washington's continuing nuclear explosions, the Soviet state cannot forego its security or that of its allies.

The statement says: "It is the Soviet Government's profound conviction that the problem of banning nuclear weapon tests is one of the most urgent tasks of today, and the Soviet Union will continue to struggle persistently for its resolution in the interests of ensuring international security and a reliable peace without nuclear weapons."

A Path of Recklessness

On the eve of this year, reflecting on the subject of "How can the atmosphere of Geneva be preserved?" one of the editors of U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT, a weekly which is very well disposed toward the Republican administration's policy, noted reasonably that one practical measure which the President could have taken even before Christmas would have been the decision to join in the moratorium on nuclear explosions declared unilaterally by the Soviet Union. Such a step "in the interests of mankind," he noted, would be greeted with approval throughout the world. As for the "arguments" of the moratorium's opponents, such as the assertions that the Soviet Union cannot be trusted, these, the article points out, are refuted by more than 20 years of experience of the Soviet Union's observance of the 1963 treaty banning nuclear tests in the three environments. The author also asks, why not "jump at" the Soviet Union's readiness for on-site verification?

Indeed, if we are guided by the accords reached in Geneva and the joint statement that there will be no winners in a nuclear war, it would appear natural for the U.S. Administration to support the Soviet moratorium and go halfway to meet the peoples' expectations. After all, it is quite obvious that the conclusion of an agreement between the USSR and the United States on ending nuclear explosions would be of truly tremendous significance. It would place a barrier in the path of the improvement of nuclear weapons and make it possible to get the entire nuclear disarmament process moving, besides doing an enormous amount to promote the creation and strengthening of mutual trust and the normalization of the political climate.

The United States thus had a truly historic opportunity to follow the USSR's example and renounce the holding of tests last year and this, and even after 31 March. But people in the American capital preferred to follow a different path. Trampling on the shoots of hope that many millions of people were nurturing in every corner of the planet, they gave the order for the next nuclear explosion to be carried out.

Washington's crazy actions and imperial disregard for the aspirations of the people, including their own, demonstrated graphically who is who in world politics. Who really pursues a line of strengthening universal security, and who undermines it in every way. It is no accident that throughout the world people of the most diverse views and social positions are today coming together in the opinion expressed by the Indian newspaper PATRIOT. "By carrying out a nuclear test in the Nevada desert, President Reagan not only demonstrated the gulf existing between the U.S. President's statements on the desire to end the arms race and his actual deeds, but also showed that he did not pay the least attention to world public opinion."

It is no secret -- and many American observers point to this -- that the reason for the challenging obstructionist U.S. position on the question of tests lies in the Pentagon's desire to create new, improved types of weapons, including nuclear-excited laser weapons, for the implementation of the program of preparation for "star wars." This is confirmed by the latest request to Congress to allocate $1.9 billion for the modernization of the nuclear testing range in Nevada. Thus the United States is carrying out an unprecedented buildup of its strike missile potential. Military expert Rear Admiral (Yu. Karrol), retired, believes that in refusing to stop tests, Washington is hoping to achieve military superiority. Moreover this is also noted by Defense Secretary C. Weinberger, as is clear from an article he published in the journal FOREIGN AFFAIRS, which formulates the directions of U.S. military policy for the nineties. Calling for the "introduction of new arms systems of the radical modification of existing ones," the Pentagon chief claims that the aim of this program of accelerated rearmament is for the United States to acquire superiority over the Soviet Union.

However, U.S. strategists are profoundly mistaken if they believe that the Soviet Union opposes the militarization of space and insists resolutely on the prohibition of space-strike weapons because of a fear of lagging behind. As the CPSU Central Committee general secretary stated at a meeting with workers in Tolyatti, it is time to stop building relations with the USSR on the basis of mistaken impressions and illusions. "One of the most dangerous of these illusions is that the Soviet Union's peaceful intentions and appeals are regarded as a sign of weakness. So this is how it is: You cannot exhaust us with the arms race, take us out of space, or outflank us in technology. No good will come of these attempts."

The Soviet Union will not allow itself to be caught unaware, and if necessary it will know how to find a convincing answer to the challenge issued to it, and not necessarily in space. But it is against that choice, against the absurd American logic of armaments. The Soviet Union is convinced that the road to peace and universal security lies not through building up arsenals of weapons, but through the quest for a way out of confrontation and the strengthening of trust. That is why it is in favor of a revival of the atmosphere of Geneva, in favor of a new summit meeting being a step forward and bringing practical results in the cause of ending the arms race.

Concern for Peace

In the great cause of the struggle against the nuclear threat, the Soviet Union invariably stands shoulder to shoulder with its true friends, the socialist countries. A concrete manifestation of this is the new initiative of the allied socialist countries -- the proposal on creating nuclear-free zones in Europe.

As is noted in the appeal of the Warsaw Pact states to the European states, the United States, and Canada which was published the other day, resolute actions are now more necessary than ever in order to stop the arms race, go over to disarmament, and eliminate the nuclear threat.

The total elimination of the medium-range missiles of the USSR and the United States in Europe would be an exceptionally important initial step in the cause of ridding the European Continent of nuclear weapons. Equally topical at present is the creation of nuclear-free zones on the continent where the level of nuclear confrontation is higher and the risk of the accidental outbreak of nuclear war is greater than anywhere else.

Noting that the governments of a number of other European states also advocate the creation of nuclear-free zones in various parts of Europe, the Warsaw Pact states proceed on the basis that the implementation of proposals on the creation of such zones and their effectiveness depend to a great degree on the attitude of other states, above all nuclear states, and their commitment to strictly respect the status of nuclear-free zones. They note that the USSR expresses readiness to grant appropriate guarantees to the nuclear-free zones, and they expect the same attitude from the United States, as well as Britain and France.

The allied states, the document notes, welcome the efforts of the states concerned to create a nuclear-free zone in northern Europe, come out in support of the creation of a zone free of nuclear weapons in the Balkans. The states also support Sweden's proposals to create a corridor free of nuclear battlefield weapons in Europe along the line where the Warsaw Pact and NATO states meet. In this connection, they believe that with a view to increasing the effectiveness of the corridor, it should be extended on both sides to take into account the tactical and technical characteristics of these weapons. The creation of such a corridor could begin with central Europe. Appealing to the states of Europe, the United States, and Canada to undertake energetic actions to implement proposals on creasting zones free of nuclear weapons, the Warsaw Pact states expressed the conviction that the creation of such zones would be an important step along the path toward ensuring the peoples' security and delivering Europe from nuclear weapons.

The world press is now widely discussing the USSR's proposal on the mutual withdrawal of the Soviet and U.S. naval fleets from the Mediterranean. This problem has become particularly topical now that the United States has started its latest campaign of threats against Libya and U.S. ships are being brought up to that country's shores.

Washington's Undeclared War

Alarming reports are constantly coming in from Central America where the situation is again becoming tense. The United States is expanding its military presence there and seeking to involve the Honduran Armed Forces in direct confrontation with Nicaragua.

Judging from press reports, the Pentagon is sending new contingents of troops to the Nicaraguan borders to take part in the latest military maneuvers. At the same time, Washington has officially confirmed the administration's decision to exercise military leadership of the activity of Nicaraguan "contra" gangs. A State Department spokesman admitted that servicemen from "Green Beret" subunits belonging to the special-purpose forces will be sent "as instructors" to the "contra" bases set up by the CIA and the Pentagon on Honduran territory.

This militarist activeness on the part of the Pentagon coincides with the debate in the U.S. Congress scheduled for the middle of the month, in the course of which the administration counts on pushing through the House of Representatives appropriations of many millions of dollars for military aid to the Somozist cutthroats and thereby "legitimizing" the further escalation of criminal aggression against Nicaragua. As is known, the House recently refused the White House demand for $100 million to be granted to the "contras;" however, the Senate supported the President's plan.

Congressman David Bonior (Democrat, from Michigan) noted that the "contra" gangs have already been granted a total near $100 million. Some $220 million was spent on military maneuvers by the United States and Honduras near Nicaragua's borders with the aim of intimidating that country. And a further $672 million has been paid out since 1981 in the form of military-economic aid to Honduras, which the Pentagon has turned into a bridgehead for provocations against the neighboring country. All these funds, the congressman warned, are a "subscription to a policy which will lead the United States to disaster." "Americans remember," D. Bonior said, "how we became involved in the Vietnam war step by step and dollar by dollar. We remember how advisers were followed by troops, and how 57,000 Americans then died. Now history is repeating itself."

THE NEW YORK TIMES observer T. (Shultz), for his part, points out, in his newspaper, the "sinister similarity of the premises" forming the basis of the U.S. interference in Cuba's affairs 25 years ago to Nicaragua's affairs today. "The 1979 Nicaraguan revolution," he writes, "brought broad social justice and concern for the Nicaraguan people, who had been reduced to poverty. The United States cannot ignore that fact, any more than it can ignore the profound patriotic sentiments of the Nicaraguan people, brought about, in particular, by former military interventions by the U.S. Marines."

The aggressive U.S. policy in Central America and the Washington administration's hostile acts against Nicaragua are causing profound concern and resolute condemnation among Latin Americans. This was confirmed, in particular, by a conference held in Panama recently of the foreign ministers of the Contadora Group countries and the Support Group, with the participation of representatives of five Latin American states. The ministers came out unanimously against foreign interference in the affairs of Central American countries and in favor of continuing talks with a view to achieving a comprehensive agreement on a peaceful settlement of the situation in the region.

The results of the Panama Conference show that the efforts of Washington, which gambles on military interference in the region, to torpedo the Contadora process are meeting with unswerving resistance from the Latin American states, who know from bitter experience about the imperialist habits of their northern neighbor. The facts show that the Nicaraguan people are fully determined to defend to the end their country's independence. They cannot be intimidated.

FURTHER REACTION TO U.S. BOMBING OF LIBYAN SITES

Sturua Assails U.S. Leaders

PM171704 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 18 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[Melor Sturua article: "Washington 'Discotheque'"]

[Text] Pentagon chief Caspar Weinberger was clearly in an elated mood. He ordered another diagram to be hung up and confidently commented on it:

"This was the route taken by the F-111's from the Mildenhall, Lakenheath, and Upper Heyford bases in Britain; tanker aircraft followed this route, and they covered a total distance of 2,800 nautical miles..."

This was in the Oval Office of the White House. The defense secretary, assisted by Secretary of State Shultz, was telling newsmen about the barbaric, aggressive act just undertaken against Libya by Washington. One of the newspapermen remarked, "2,800 nautical miles is a hell of a long flight."

Weinberger agreed, but added: "The F-111's were refueled in flight. They have virtually unlimited range so long as they can be refueled. And they were refueled several times..."

As recent events in Libya have shown, there are also virtually no bounds to American imperialism's vandalism and hypocrisy.

Weinberger paid tribute the the air pirates' "great navigational skill." "All the targets were related to terrorist activity, and the criterion for selecting them was that they were wholly and completely linked with terrorists." According to preliminary figures, around 1,000 people have fallen victim to the aggression. They include children, women, and old people. The "nests of terrorism" turned out to be residential areas and even the embassies of countries harnessed to Washington by NATO. Criteria, Mr Weinberger? Your criteria are the "Reagan doctrine" and state terrorism carried out by Air Force and Navy Rambos. And after all you have done you contrived to answer correspondent Helen Thomas' question: "How many people do you believe were killed?" with a phrase of unimaginable scandalousness:

"It is not our understanding that we killed anybody."

Could the 500- and 2,000-pound bombs have been filled with Parma violets and Netherlands tulips?

The Pentagon chief, who has been christened "Cap the knife," although he brandishes much more terrifying weapons, even became lyrical, describing "good night targets with clearly defined outlines." Criminals always prefer to operate under cover of night. But no pitch-black night can hide the outlines -- clear as the Nuremburg tribunal -- of Washington's adventurist course.

Chauvinist fever is currently gripping the Washington "discotheque." Noisy instruments are thundering, laser illuminations flash. The blood of innocent victims drums in the head, sets it spinning, and pumps the adrenalin. And in the back rooms of the "discotheque" is a political casino where the roulette wheel of death spins and the stakes are systematically "hiked."

"Do you believe that we have settled the score with Libya, Sir?"

Sir -- George Shultz, this time -- replies: "It is not a question of settling the score." But here his glance fell on Weinberger's diagram, on these roulette wheels of death, and, contradicting himself, he continued: "They will have to pay....If the price has to be raised..."

There is more. When Shultz was describing the "success" of the piratical raid on Libya on the USIA's Worldnet program he was asked, or rather interrupted: "Is it really possible to describe as a success an operation resulting in the killing of women and children?" But this question did not disconcert the head of the U.S. foreign policy department in the least. Shultz "did not lose his cool." (He only lost his sense of conscience.) It transpires, according to his -- diplomatic or cannibalistic? -- logic that the Libyan children and women were to blame for their own deaths since -- listen to this -- they were in the vicinity of military facilities! Thus, according to Mr Shultz, the Libyan people are not masters in their own home. They evidently have to check with the Pentagon where to settle, where to "register themselves," in order, for God's sake, to avoid having the bombs of American vultures fall on them!

Monstrous! Of course. But when giving an interview to the CBS television company Shultz tried to outdo himself. To the question: "Has the raid really brought us closer to peace?" he replied without hesitation:

"Of course."

This, it transpires, is how they bring peace closer: with aggression against Libya, provocations against Nicaragua, subversive actions against Angola, aircraft carrier diplomacy and nuclear explosions in Nevada, "Stingers" in Afghanistan, and "star wars" in space. If this is bringing peace closer, what then is brinkmanship?

U.S. Vice President Bush, who has just returned from a visit to the Near East, also joined without delay in the Washington "discotheque" orgy. Admittedly he dwelt more on the La Belle discotheque in West Berlin, the explosion at which was used as the pretext for the aggression against Libya. Speaking on NBC television, Bush went on about proof of "the Libya connection." Roger Mudd, who was interviewing him, could not restrain himself:

"But you can't stir up the country by saying you have proof and not show it this proof!?"

Bush started to backtrack:

"I haven't done that. I haven't mentioned any proof in connection with this incident."

They have no proof, but they do have aircraft carriers. They have no proof, but they do have bombers. They have no proof, but they do have imperial ambitions. They have no proof, but they do have the CIA, which fabricates such proof. Finally, they have no proof, as they have no conscience or truth.

In his interview Bush tried to make himself out to be a reasonable person, if not a humanist. He said that he is opposed to an "indiscriminate approach" and favors "surgically precise measures." A butcher's cleaver? Come on! Why use that when there is a scalpel or even a laser scalpel? The laser-guided bombs have clearly lulled Mr Bush to sleep. What matter that they roused Tripoli and Banghazi and sent many of their inhabitants to eternal rest?

And, finally, there is the star of the Washington "discotheque" himself -- President Reagan. In his nationwide television address the President said: "We are not in conflict with the Libyan population." Who, then, was killed by the bombs dropped by the F-111's? People from another planet?

Not only was the President "not in conflict" with the Libyans in his speech, he even dared to say on their behalf: "The majority of Libyans now feel a sense of shame and revulsion" toward their leadership, he said. And this is said at a time when the entire Libyan people, united around their leadership, are feeling a sense of righteous anger and revulsion against the aggressors!

The boasting was accompanied by threats: "Today we did what had to be done. If necessary we will do it again." Necessary for whom -- for the neocolonialists, the aggressors, the military-industrial complex? The sentence cited above was followed by these words: "It gives me no pleasure at all to say that." No pleasure at all? What is going on then in the Washington "discotheque" if not an orgy by gentlemen of fortune on a state scale reveling in their actions?

In justification of the aggression against Libya, President Reagan cited the UN Charter and Article 51 of it on the right to self-defense. But what happened that day was a gross flouting of the UN Charter, international law, and common human morality. How symbolic it is that Vernon Walters, the chief American representative in the United Nations, was chosen by Reagan as his envoy for the talks with Thatcher on carrying out the strike against Libya from British air bases. Not for nothing was Walters a general and deputy director of the CIA.

"God bless you" is how President Reagan ended his speech. Today all mankind is cursing the aggressors. The Washington "discotheque" resembles paradise about as much as do the ruins of the bombed Libyan residential districts.

Reagan Cited on New Strike

PM171605 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 18 Apr 86 First Edition p 6

[TASS report under general headline "Blinded by Chauvinism"]

[Text] Washington, 17 Apr -- Speaking at the White House on Wednesday, President Reagan extolled in every possible way the totally unprovoked gangsterlike attack on Libya. Presenting this action of state terrorism as a demonstration of U.S. determination "to fight for freedom and legality," he declared Washington's readiness to use force against Libya or any other country that may find itself on the list of those displeasing to the White House. "This speech was yet another warning to Libya," CBS-TV stressed.

On the same day the President sent Congress a message saying that the United States "could possibly have to strike against Libya again."

ADVANCE KNOWLEDGE OF DISCO BOMBING DENIED

LD171620 Moscow TASS in English 1606 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- "The United States bandit attack against Libya has clearly demonstrated the source of the danger to universal peace and security", a briefing was told today by Vladimir Lomeyko, head of the Press Department of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the USSR.

"It is the United States Administration that is responsible most of all for the whipping up of tension in the world", he told foreign and Soviet journalists at the Press Centre of the USSR Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

At the present time, in a bid to mislead world public opinion, the aggressor is trying to wriggle out, resorting to lies and slander. For instance, in the April 16, 1986 statement a spokesman for the U .S. Department of State alleged that the United States had urged the U.S.S.R. to cooperate in foiling the terrorist act committed in West Berlin April 5 and that if the Soviet side had reacted to that appeal the events would have developed differently and there would have been no need for the United States to resort to military action against Libya.

Such allegations are a cynical lie, Vladimir Lomeyko emphasized.

The Soviet side knew nothing of the contemplated terrorist act. "We posssessed no concrete information on this matter. If we had obtained it, we would have shared the information," the Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

The April 7 statement by the Soviet Embassy in Washington stressed that the Soviet Union resolutely denounced the terrorist act in West Berlin and reaffirmed that the Soviet Union remained a principled opponent of terrorism in all its forms and was prepared to act vigorously jointly with other nations in order to eliminate this repulsive phenomenon.

Simultaneously, the Soviet side warned most seriously against the use of the fact of the terrorist act as a pretext for heightening tension around Libya, Lomeyko pointed out.

Regrettably, he said, the latest developments showed that the United States did not listen to the voice of reason and the Soviet warnings.

'Hysteria' Meant To 'Dupe' Public

LD172040 Moscow TASS in English 1940 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- TASS News Analyst Leonid Ponomarov writes:

U.S. Defence Secretary Weinberger who had taken part in planning the perfidious bombing of Libya said in an interview to the C.B.S. television network that the U.S. air strikes had the purpose to teach a lesson. The wording by the Pentagon's chief is nothing new. It is used quite often by those who think only in categories of force and aggression. And who has been taught a "lesson" by the armada of U.S. bombers and planes basing on aircraft carriers? It is mainly peaceful people, among them tens of children, who fell victim to the raids on Tripoli and Banghazi. Unlike Weinberger, television cameras do not lie: As they are rotating, they show ruins of houses, huge shell-holes, fragments of U.S. bombs and rows of stretchers with bodies of women and children.

The bombs that were dropped on peaceful people in the dead of night weighed nearly one ton. Dozens of rockets were also fired. Such were the instruments used by the White House to teach a "lesson".

Holding a press conference jointly with the U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz in the Oval Office on April 14, Weinberter boasted that "the attack was carried out precisely as planned, and was, as the President said, evidence of very great skill". The skill of what? Of how to kill innocent peaceful people by raiding a foreign country?

The head of the White House himself admitted on the same day that the air strikes on Libya "were concentrated and carefully targeted". What is "skill" according to Reagan, can be defined more precisely as cold-blooded murder.

Is this cruelty accidental in the policy of the present U.S. Administration? Not at all. It resorts to bloody reprisals even against Americans themselves.

One can recall the brutalities of the U.S. authorities in Philadelphia last May against members of the "MOVE" black organization. Eleven people, among them women and children, were burnt alive in a house on which the police dropped bombs from a helicopter. And the quarter adjoining the house was gutted by fire so that no one could return there. This brutality was perpetrated in the eyes of Philadelphia people. And the victims were American citizens whom the Washington administration claims to "protect" when resorting to outright violence and aggression in the international arena.

If the Pentagon's terminology is to be used, the Washington leaders, first of all, have taught themselves a lesson. And whether they want it or not, they will have to learn that lesson: The whole world is stigmatising those who dropped bombs on peaceful Libyan people, asleep at night, and those who ordered that horrible crime.

A chauvinistic hysteria is now deliberately whipped up in the USA so as to dupe the public and justify the crime. But nothing can erase that crime from the memory of people.

U.S. Envoy to UK Chides France

LD161642 Moscow TASS in English 1412 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] London April 16 TASS -- TASS correspondent Viktor Borodin reports:

Washington's ambassador to London, Charles Price, criticized here the French Government, which had refused to become an accomplice in the act of aggression against Libya. Price said in an interview to the BBC radio service that the Americans' displeasure was caused by the refusal of the French Government to give U.S. war planes the right of passage over French territory, thus forcing them to make a long detour.

TV Shows Libyan Victims

LD162017 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1444 GMT 16 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Igor Kudrin]

[Text] Comrades, there is one subject which is a feature of the pages of the world's press. It is in every news bulletin on television and radio. That subject is the American Air Force's piratical raids on Libya. The U.S. President, speaking on television just 2 hours after the barbarous attack, spoke of the complete success of the operation as though it was another victory like that in Grenada. But up to then he had carefully concealed the premeditated act of aggression, hid it from his compatriots and congressmen -- to whom he reported secretly about the decision he had made to bomb, literally at precisely the time the aircraft with their deadly cargoes had already flown towards the Libyan shores.

The operation has been concluded for the moment, Reagan said, after the first bombardments, the first destruction and the first victims -- and again he was not speaking the truth. For, as is being reported, late yesterday evening the U.S. carrion crows carried out another raid on Tripoli. America lies officially not only to its compatriots and its own legislators, but also to its NATO allies, who have found themselves in an absolutely absurd position.

While General Vernon Walters was visiting West European capitals and having high-flown talks on the subject of -- what is your attitude toward our military action -- the actual action and terms of its execution had already been worked out to the last detail. So, it was a vain attempt by the NATO partners to persuade their colleague across the ocean of the possibility of refraining from aggression. The United States went ahead without their advice, without their good wishes and without their consent.

True, it is difficult to establish today who knew -- and what they knew -- in London, Brussels, Paris, and Rome. Judging by the fact that NATO bases on British territory were used for the raids, Thatcher knew what was going on.

It is not by chance that today the whole of the U.S. press and politicians, active and retired like Kissinger, are profuse in their compliments towards her. Here is a true ally, they are saying. Meanwhile, the heads of many governments on all continents, in one form or another, are condemning the barbarity, although in some cases they avoid the use of the word. U.S. F-111 planes did not get permission to fly to Libya over the territory of France, Spain, and Portugal. They had to make a detour and refuel in midair in order to drop their bombs on peaceful targets. Our people worked carefully and selectively, pursuing only military targets, only concentrations of terrorists, the President explained to the American people: We have tried to spare the peaceful population of Libya whom we have nothing against.

But these terrible pictures refute in the best possible way the words of the leader of a great power. It was precisely peaceful citizens, including women and children, who turned out to be the first victims of that terrible night raid. But, once the pilots had finished their dirty deed, the reactionary propaganda machine was brought into operation: We are protecting ourselves and the whole world against terrorism; the citizens of the United States support the President; the retribution was deserved; we will not be afraid to repeat the lesson. These are just some of the arguments of bourgeois scribblers who couldn't care less about the tragedy of the dead, injured, and mutilated. This was nothing more than a small surgical operation, one American politician called the act of brigandage. But surgeons are still working in Libyan hospitals, saving people who have suffered from the actions of a true, major terrorist on a state scale -- United States imperialism. [video shows bodies laid out in a row in a hospital; people feeling their way over ruined buildings; women and children sitting on grass; burned-out vehicles; injured being wheeled into a hospital, a close-up of injured woman on bed, long shot of hospital ward]

U.S. 'Military Actions' Recounted

LD161644 Moscow TASS in English 1452 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- After the Reagan administration took office the United States has undertaken a number of overt military actions against sovereign states located in various regions of the world.

On August 19, 1981 two U.S. F-14 aircraft shot down two Libyan planes during U.S. naval exercises in the Gulf of Sidra.

On August 28, 1983, the U.S. Marines stationed in Lebanon opened fire on the positions of Shi'ite militia detachments which are part of the national-patriotic forces of Lebanon.

On September 8, 1983, U.S. warships, among them the battleship Iowa bombarded a mountain area near Beirut -- the site of the positions of Druze militia detachments which are part of the national-patriotic forces of Lebanon.

On October 25, 1983, the USA barbarously occupied Grenada. Involved in the attack were U.S. ships and aircraft as well as more than two thousand Marines. Part of the American soldiers remain on the island up to this date.

On December 4, 1984, two U.S. combatant ships bombarded the outskirts of Beirut shortly before the withdrawal of the U.S. Marines from Lebanon.

On March 24, 1986, U.S. planes based on the aircraft carriers Saratoga, Coral Sea and America, which were taking part in the exercises in the Gulf of Sidra, attacked one of the air defence bases in Libya.

On March 25, 1986, the same combatant ships and aircraft of the USA fired "Harpoon" missiles on Libyan torpedo boats and a number of facilities of that country.

On April 15, 1986, U.S. F-111 bombers brought from U.S. bases from Britain and A-6 and A-7 planes taking off from the aircraft carriers Coral Sea and America delivered a strike at a number of military and civilian facilities in Libya, as a result of which civilians were killed or wounded.

The White House is also conducting an undeclared war against the peoples of Afghanistan, Angola, Mozambique, Nicaragua, and El Salvador. Washington's undeclared war is resulting in tragedy for the peoples of those countries: tens of thousands of civilians have been killed, and hundreds of important industrial facilities have been destroyed.

'Act of Banditry' Deplored

LD161652 Moscow TASS in English 1458 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- By TASS commentator Grigoriy Vasilyev: The United States has committed an act of international banditry against the sovereign Libyan Jamahiriyah.

The Libyan capital has come under three barbarous bombing runs by U.S. aircraft. An aerial attack has been staged also on the city of Banghazi. The bombardments have left dozens of civilians killed or wounded and caused considerable destruction.

Washington has used a recent blast in a West Berlin disco, in which U.S. servicemen have been among the casualties, as the pretext for its armed aggression against Libya.

The U.S. Administration has imputed that act of terrorism to Libya immediately, although it does not have any proof to back up the accusation.

Washington has also ignored the Libyan leadership's public denials of that charge and its strong condemnation of all forms of terrorism.

No matter how hard the White House is trying to justify its banditry with far-fetched and false charges, this effort is clearly in vain.

It is enough to take even a cursory look at Washington's actions to realize that armed aggression against the Libyan Jamahiriyah has been a direct consequence of a vicious anti-Libyan campaign the Reagan administration has maintained for a long time.

The U.S. press has published repeated reports about plans to strike at Libya and U.S. officials have been calling for the elimination of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution.

The independent course steered by the Libyan Jamahiriyah, which refused to obey U.S.-Zionist dictates, rejects separate-deal options for a Middle Easte settlement, which would be to the detriment of the Arabs, and stands for a just and enduring peace in the region, is obviously not to the liking of U.S. imperialists quarters.

Blinded by hatred to Tripoli, Washington is trying to enlist its NATO allies in the anti-Libyan campaign and set other Arab nations on Libya.

The influential Cairo-based newspaper AL-AHRAM reported that the United States has pressed Egypt to join its anti-Libyan sanctions for long but Egypt has thrice refused to take part in military action against Libya.

The criminal attack on the Libyan Jamahiriyah has been a carefully planned act of aggression in keeping with the U.S. "neoglobalist" doctrine aimed at subordinating whole countries and regions to Washington's imperial ambitions.

The Soviet Union and broad sections of people elsewhere in the world condemn the latest crime by U.S. imperialists. The Soviet Government said in a statement:

"American aggression is a brazen and open challenge to the entire world public opinion. No matter what 'arguments' are now being used in Washington, the fact remains that it is exactly the administration of the United States that is mainly responsible for the aggravation of tension in the world and is irresponsibly playing with the fate of millions of people."

Demichev Reproves 'New Globalism'

LD161913 Moscow TASS in English 1600 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- The U.S. barbarous bombing of Libya's capital, Tripoli, and the city of Banghazi has stemmed from the American concept of "new globalism", Petr Demichev, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee and minister for culture of the USSR, has stated. He today spoke at the opening of the 42nd session of the Soviet Academy of Arts in Moscow.

"The reactionary forces will not succeed, however, in reversing the principal trend of mankind's progressive development, which is determined in the 20th century by liberation revolutions and the advancement of world socialism," the minister said.

'True Character' of U.S. Policy Shown

LD162152 Moscow World Servdice in English 1610 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Observer Mikhail Glebov report]

[Excerpts] The American bombing of Libyan cities has demonstrated to the whole world the true character of Washington's foreign policy. Here's what our observer, Mikhail Glebov, writes:

The administration claimed the raids were an act of self-defense, but defense against whom? Was the Libyan Army threatening the United States or had Libyan warships massed in the Gulf of Mexico ready for an assault? The raids were ostensibly carried out to punish the Libyans for the recent bomb explosion at a West Berlin discotheque, for which, according to the American version, they were responsible. However, a spokesman for the West Berlin police stated there was no evidence of any Libyan involvement. Indeed Libya itself has officially denounced such terrorist acts. And a caller who phoned REUTERS news agency claimed the bomb had been planged by the so-called Holger-Meins squad, an organization with neo-Nazi connections.

But the American response to these hard facts was the same hackneyed set of vague insinuations and verbal attacks against Libya. And this time too, just as on previous occasions, no proof was forthcoming. So all the American assertions about self-defense and fighting terrorism do not hold water. What we are seeing is American aggression against Libya: aggression that has a long history.

Today of course the methods have changed but the essence of the plans remains. Last year details were leaked to the American press of a secret memorandum that envisaged military strikes at Libya designed to destabilize and eventually topple its government. These are vivid examples of terrorism and a terrorism not on the part of some organization, but on the part of the major Western power. According to the American logic, Libya ought simply to accept its dependent role and then everything would be okay. And since the Libyans refuse, they should be forced to do so and their government should be removed. This latest attack on Libya might be seen as a lesson to the whole world. This is how we are going to deal with those who don't obey us. It was the President himself who said in one of his global over-views that there would be no war so long as everything went as the Americans wanted it to. Now these words have been translated into the language of bombs.

The raids on Libya reveal the sinister shape of American global strategy. The whole world should live according to rules that are to Washington's liking. And as to those who do not wish to toe the American line, well, any measures are good against them, for aid to antigovernment rebels as in Nicaragua and Angola, to direct strikes as was the case with Grenada and now with Libya. During World War II the fascists devised a terrible thing. In a bid to intimidate the population and break resistance to aggression, they staged so-called exemplary punishments. They chose any settlement and destroyed it with all its inhabitants. But isn't the bombing by American warplanes of Libyan cities in which dozens of civilians died, isn't this that some old tactic? The only difference is perhaps that today we're seeing an attempt to intimidate entire nations and even the whole world. It's hard to imagine a more primitive and at the same time, more arrogant, position in the world of today when the greatest value is considered that to be that of independence.

Lies Accompany 'Piratic' Act

LD161908 Moscow TASS in English 1649 GMT 16 Apr 86

["USA: Piracy Hand-in-Hand With Lies" -- TASS identifier]

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- TASS Political News Analyst Vladimir Goncharov writes:

As was usually the case in the past, the new U.S. aggression, piratic air strikes against Libya, is accompanied with lies -- lies by various U.S. governmental news agencies by high Washington officials. There is a spate of examples. We shall dwell on only some of them.

Following the White House, all U.S. official propaganda bodies without exception assert that air strikes were dealt at "military facilities -- bases of terrorism. U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger even boasted that as a result of the use of laser-guided weapons the air strikes were highly accurate. But was it so? It is residential areas of the Libyan capital that actually become targets of U.S. bombing, and this is reported by many media of various countries.

Japan's ambassador to Libya, for instance, described the bombing by U.S. planes of the residential area where he himself resides. He said that he had seen numerous victims -- civilians. The buildings of the embassies of several countries, including Romania, France, FRG, Greece, Switzerland were damaged as a result of the U.S. piratic action (so, by Washington's logic, these diplomatic missions are "bases of terrorism").

And what about the loss of life caused by the U.S. raids? The governmental radio station "Voice of America" this morning tried to convince the world that it was just over 10-15 people. Meanwhile, according to reports of many foreign agencies, over 100 people were killed. And the actual number might be several hundred, since U.S. bombs destroyed up to 100 houses.

There are women and children among the casualties -- "terrorists", indeed. And the total number of victims reaches a thousand, not only Libyans but also foreigners among them. Two young children of the leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi are among the victims.. His 16-month-old adopted daughter was killed.

And one more lie by the White House, the Pentagon and U.S. propagandists. They assert that there was no raid of U.S. planes on Tripoli in the evening of April 15. Meanwhile, the raid was reported not only by the Libyan sources but also by many others, for instance, a spokesman for the Spanish Embassy to Libya, who gave an interview to Madrid television. The same is shown by reports that came from London.

Brazen U.S. lies bespeak above all Washington's striving to play down the scope of U.S. crimes, Washington's striving to misrepresent their real aims in order to whitewash the U.S. policy of aggression that is dangerous for the whole world, the policy aimed at a gross aggravation of international tension. But these are futile efforts. Despite the tricks and manoeuvres of U.S. propaganda, the world public will not be misled. Anger and indignation over the United States piratic actions are growing in all countries, just as contempt for the liars.

'Operation of Intimidation'

LD170142 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Gennadiy Gerasimov report; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Hello, comrades. The crime was announced in advance. We saw on television the aircraft carriers warming up. Those pictures became almost a matter of course. And look at this banner headline in a U.S. magazine: "America to World: Have Power, Will Use." It is an original sort of cause-and-effect link: If I can, then I want to. The doctrine: that everything is permitted.

And yet one could not quite believe that the attack would happen. Kate Adie, a BBC correspondent who visited the ruins, bodies, and wounded in Tripoli, reported that even after the bombing people were still refusing to believe what had happened. Why such piracy? -- they, and the world, are asking.

The U.S. has to answer that question. After all, in the international community it is not the law of the jungle, not the right of the mighty, but international law that reigns. Accordingly, the U.S. President appeared on television with his explanations. He again accused Libya of terrorism, of the explosion in the West Berlin discotheque, as though the threads lead back to Tripoli, although Tripoli has condemned both that explosion and terrorism in general. At any rate, in civilized society, people do not take the law into their own hands, they do not resort to lynch law. It is in cowboy films that arguments are resolved by drawing Colts from belts.

If everyone starts deciding, like a sheriff in the Wild West, whom to execute, whom to pardon, international relations will be ruled by chaos and lawlessness.

The President referred to the right to self-defense in Article 51 of the UN Charter. But it speaks of such a right in the event of an armed attack on a UN member. Libya has not attacked the United States. And nor could it -- Libya is far away from the United States. But it is not far from the U.S. aircraft carriers to Libya. We are speaking about an act of state terrorism.

Among the targets of the raid was the area where the head of state was supposed to be. And what the White House called carefully planned air strikes turned out to be the bombing of residential areas by brave warriors. They used an axe, and called it a surgical operation.

The American moralists have brought about a second Guernica. It was an operation of intimidation, so that the world should know that the United States has a strong fist. It may be a strong fist, but whereas they used to speak of America's arrogance and self-sufficiency of strength, now it is time to speak of madness of strength. This is the Reagan doctrine in action, the notorious neoglobalism in practice.

Even Washington's close allies consider that bombing is no answer to the problem of terrorism -- that is, apart from Britain, which kindly allowed the U.S. bombers to set off on their mission from bases on British territory, and became an accomplice in the crime.

The world is deeply outraged. The world is seized with justified anger.

Spirit of Geneva Undermined

LD162108 Moscow TASS in English 2034 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- TASS political news analyst Igor Orlov writes:

The events of the latest days showed clearly to the world community who it is that bears the responsibility for the extremely dangerous heightening of international tension which is frought with serious threat to universal peace and security. A thoroughly planned piratic attack of the USA on Libya that entailed loss of life and caused considerable material damage to that independent sovereign Arab state evoked justifiable indignation in the world. The aggression against Libya showed Washington's disregard for the interests of smaller peoples and states, particularly those who prefer to take the chosen road and who refuses to yield to the diktat of U.S. monopolies.

The events off the Libyan coasts showed clearly how Washington, implementing the imperial doctrine of "new globalism", replaced gunboat diplomacy with aircraft carrier diplomacy. There are many other facts of the United States heightening international tension. They attest to Washington's persistent course at the aggravation of existing regional conflicts and provoking new ones, at the perpetuation of confrontation and balancing on the brink of war.

By its attack on Libya Washington showed its approach to cardinal international problems of the present.

This is why in many statements of the world press this attack is qualified as a link in the chain of the United States arrogant and provocative actions taken in reply to the well-known peace initiative of the Soviet Union. These actions are aimed at frustrating the quest of the ways to improve international relations, at rolling back the positive trends and dashing the hopes that were kindled by the Geneva meeting.

Indeed, suffice it to recall such an important problem as a ban on nuclear weapon tests, the problem to which the attention of the world public is riveted. The Soviet Union twice extended the operation of its moratorium, though it was not easy for understandable reasons. Washington deliberately disregarded the opportunities offered to it to confirm by deeds its statements about the striving for a world without nuclear arms.

Despite the avalanch of protests, the United States conducted a fresh nuclear explosion in Nevada which is assessed everywhere as outright defiance not only to the Soviet Union but also to the whole world. This compelled the USSR to regard itself no longer bound by the unilateral moratorium. At the same time, Moscow, as before, expressed the readiness to return to the question of mutual moratorium on nuclear explosions anytime, if the U.S. Government declares that it will keep from conducting such explosions.

The aggression against Libya has not left the slightest doubt that it is precisely the U.S. Administration that is chiefly to blame for whipping up tension on the globe, that is irresponsibly playing with the destinies of millions of people. It has ignored the numerous Soviet warnings against this. As many observers justly note, it is precisely Washington that deliberately undermines the spirit of Geneva.

U.S. Flouts 'Moral Norms'

LD162359 Moscow TASS in English 2159 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- TASS Political News Analyst Askold Biryukov writes:

When U.S. Defence Secretary Casper Weinberger was asked by reporters about the results of "carefully planned air strikes against five terrorist-related targets in Libya" (the wording of the U.S. Administration), he said: We have no idea that we killed anybody. He said that nothing is known about the damage to civilian facilities, that there are reports that an insignificant damage was caused, that someone got burns, that windows were shattered.

The U.S. defence secretary is lying, just as other U.S. officials are. During the broadcast of the ABC television company that interviewed Weinberger, it was stated directly that large damage had been inflicted on one of residential areas in Tripoli. There is more information about the consequences of that piratic action by the USA. More than 100 houses were destroyed. The buildings of the French Embassy and a number of other embassies were damaged by the bombing. Many peaceful people, including children, were killed or wounded.

A photograph shows the horrible consequences of the "carefully planned air strikes" of U.S. pirates at the Libyan capital. Bodies of children in blood-soaked nighties and pajamas innocent victims of the "self-defence" act, taken by Washington aware of its power, against the small freedom-loving people of the Libyan Jamahiriyah, victims of another unprovoked aggression by the United States against a sovereign country. Director of the Central Hospital in Tripoli, Mohammed Mouafa, accompanying reporters inspecting victims of the bombing called their attention to horribly maimed bodies.

The 30-year-old killers who piloted F-111 strategic fighter bombers to targets in Tripoli, Captains Fernando Ribes-Dominicci and Paul Lorence, should have seen the handiwork. Among the victims is the killed 15-month old adopted daughter of the leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, his sons Hamis, aged three and Seifoul-Arab, aged four, who were gravely wounded. A reportage from the hospital transmitted by the Japanese N.H.K. television company showed one of the women staying there. With tears in her eyes she was saying: "We have never harmed anyone why is Reagan killing our children?"

Soviet people whose families were scorched by the past war understand the grief of Libyan mothers and not their grief only. The grief of Vietnamese mothers whose children were destroyed by "Carpet bombings", by pellet bombs, napalm and chemical weapons does not abate. We remember the recent events in Lebanon where hundreds of children were burned by the fire of U.S. phosphorous bombs, burst to pieces by direct hits of heavy shells fired from the U.S. battleship "New Jersey". We remember Afghan children killed or injured by explosions of body-traps camouflaged as toys, the horrible invention of arms manufacturers for the U.S. CIA. We remember numerous schoolgirls from the Kabul lycee, victims of the use of another barbarous weapon invented by the same department -- potent toxic agents. We remember children killed in the United States' undeclared wars against Nicaragua, Angola, Kampuchea.

What has been done against Libya is presented in Washington as another victory by the USA. But it is clear that this is not a victory but another crime of the U.S. Administration. It is seen now that the blood of innocent people and those who are mankind's future -- children, is split through the fault of the United States leaders.

They in Washington keep hammering away that they are "protecting morality and democracy". But everybody sees that the USA is flouting not only fundamental moral norms but also human rights, including the most important of them, the right to live. They in Washington assert that the United States is "combatting terrorism". But everyone sees that the USA is killing children. And this is not only the crime of the United States leaders but also a disgrace for the Americans.

Policy 'Unacceptable, Monstrous'

LD162312 Moscow TASS in English 2249 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- TASS commentator Valentin Vasilets writes:

A BBC correspondent reports from Tripoli that he had seen bodies of eleven people killed in an American raid on Libya, among them two children. It would be naive to suggest that somebody at the White House or the Pentagon would think just for a moment of the two children killed in the raid. Meanwhile, if this is not terrorism in its most naked, undisguised form, then how one could qualify the killing of children? Nobody should be under delusion to that score: When Defence Secretary Weinberger, his deputy Taft and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Crowe were detailing the operation, they couldn't but "put" into their plan deaths of innocent people, they planned a bloody crime.

The bandit raid on Libya reaffirmed once again that under the pretext of struggle against terrorism, the United States resorts to undisguised terror institutionalizing it. That policy is as unacceptable and monstrous as it would be unacceptable and monstrous for police to open fire at random on a crowd in the hope to hit the criminal, being not even sure that he is amid that crowd.

Washington has committed a crime both from the viewpoint of simple human notions of justice and morale and from the viewpoint of international law. The United States wants to make other states to conduct a course suitable to Washington. Any country, which is not as strong as the United States, might fall victim to such lawlessness. Seemingly in Washington they recognise in real earnest only the language of force. This is what they bring their diplomacy to in the relations with their real of imaginary enemies.

On the very day when rescue teams in Tripoli extracted dead bodies from debris, U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz made public his speech at Kansas University. He briefly expressed the foreign policy philosophy of the United States Administration, saying that negotiations are euphemism for capitulation if force is not felt at the table of negotiations. In other words, a small country needn't even go to the table of negotiations, but should capitulate right away. Washington itself least of all things of negotiations if it hopes to further its aims by force.

Guided by the same bandit logic, the United States sends weapons to its flunkeys terrorists in Angola, counter-revolutionary units in Afghanistan, connives at surviving Pol Pot terroristic regime men. As different from an ordinary terrorist with a submachine gun or a grenade, the United States uses for terrorist activity a far wider choice -- up to aircraft carriers and bombers. But this does not change the essence. Therefore one could hardly consider as exaggeration the conclusion that Washington now is the main source of international terrorism. Such terrorism is a threat not to individual citizens, but to the whole world, the whole system of international relations. Seemingly in Washington they do not realize that we live in a nuclear age, when the states, above all great ones, should display a special feeling of responsibility and to most attentively weigh the consequences of their actions in the international scene.

U.S. Steps Up Covert Acts in Libya

LD170843 Moscow TASS in English 0813 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Acts of Subversion Against Libya" -- TASS item identifier]

[Text] New York April 17 TASS -- The barbarous bombing of Libya by the U.S. Air Force is an aspect of the strategy of the Reagan administration aimed at subverting and overthrowing by all means the revolutionary government of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, whose anti-imperialist course infuriates Washington.

The Newhouse news service reports, quoting "informed sources," that under the cover of air strikes at Libya on Monday [as received], the U.S. secret services went ahead with a series of "covert operations" to overthrow the Al-Qadhdhafi regime. The bomb raid is not the only action to have taken place on Monday, the news service quotes unidentified officials as saying. A night air strike is a marvellous cover for many other things, according to them. In the past weeks, the news service reports, the USA has stepped up covert operations to destabilise the Al-Qadhdhafi regime, including a campaign of misinformation and attempts to provoke rioting and a coup d'etat in the country.

Mass Organizations Condemn Strike

LD161715 Moscow TASS in English 1316 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 16 TASS -- The Union of Soviet Societies for Friendship and Cultural Relations With Foreign Countries, the Soviet Society for Friendship and Cultural Relations With Arab Countries and the USSR-Libya Friendship Society have issued a statement denouncing the U.S. provocation against Libya as an unprecedented act of state-backed terrorism.

Acting on personal orders from President Ronald Reagan, they said, U.S. aircraft have carried out a series of carefully planned attacks on Libyan cities. The barbarous bombings have led to numerous civilian casualties, including deaths among women and children.

The bandit action was preceded by a ferocious campaign of blackmail and threats against Libya, explained by Washington's extreme animosity towards Libya's anti-imperialist, independent foreign policy and the process of progressive change in that country.

Defying world demands, the United States continues escalating aggression against the Libyan people and using brutal force as the sole method of conducting international policy.

Aggression against Libya is fraught with a direct threat to peace and security in the region, the statement said. The latest U.S. bandit-style attack on Libya has caused anger among Soviet people. "We strongly demand an end to U.S. aggression against Libya and to the escalation of tension in the Mediterranean. We express solidarity with the struggle by the Libyan people upholding their independence," the statement said.

AUCCTU Condemns 'Barbarous' Raid

LD161810 Moscow TASS in English 1437 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- Profound indignation of the Soviet working people was evoked by the United States piratic armed aggression against the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, says a statement issued by the Central Council of Soviet Trade Unions. Ignoring the peoples' wish to live in peace, their striving for the easing of international tension, the U.S. Administration issued an order to bomb Tripoli and Banghazi. That barbarous raid in which innocent peaceful people were killed confirmed again the dangerous militaristic nature of the policy of the U.S. ruling circles that are imposing on the world the imperial policy of "neoglobalism" and power pressure.

The aggression against Libya shows that U.S. imperialism does not stop at using any means against states whose independent policy is not to its liking. The course of state terrorism conducted by the USA means cynical defiance to peace-loving humanity and represents a serious threat to the cause of peace and security of peoples.

The Central Council of Soviet Trade Unions on behalf of 137 million Soviet working people condemns resolutely the glaring act of the United States aggression against the Libyan Jamahiriyah, demands an end to the heightening of tension in the Mediterranean and urges the international working class, the world trade union movement to come out against the criminal actions of U.S. militarists.

Solidarity Committee Condemns Act

LD161722 Moscow TASS in English 1002 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- On behalf of the Soviet public the Soviet Afro-Asian Solidarity Committee voiced a strong protest against the U.S. policy of state terrorism with respect to sovereign Libya, and demanded that military provocations against that country be immediately stopped.

The Soviet public calls upon all peaceful and progressive forces in Asia and Africa, all those who cherish the ideals of freedom and independence to raise their voice in protest against acts of arbitrariness and lawlessness perpetrated by the U.S. military against the Libyan Jamahiriyah, said the committee's statement issued today.

There is no and can be no justification for the aggressive actions and banditry of the U.S. military. For almost six months now the Libyan Jamahiriyah and its leadership have been a target of a rabid, chauvinistic campaign.

Washington's objective is obvious -- it is to intimidate the freedom loving Libyan people, to destroy the progressive regime of that country and subordinate it to the American diktat, the statement said.

The policy of state terrorism pursued by the United States today threatens peace and security not only of Libya and the Arab countries neighboring on it, but also generates an explosive situation in the entire region of the Mediterranean and southern Europe, the statement emphasized.

Each day, each passing hour are bringing in fresh convincing proof that Washington's policy is condemned by diverse political forces and social groups, irrespective of their persuasions, of their racial and religious affiliation.

United Nations member-countries, including the developing nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America, censured the bandit actions of the U.S. military.

Even U.S. allies failed to support it and urged the United States in no uncertain terms to refrain from military action fraught with a threat to world peace.

Few people have any doubt today, the statement said, that there is a direct connection between the policy and practical actions of the United States with respect to Libya, Nicaragua, Angola and Afghanistan, as well as other sovereign nations pursuing independent anti-imperialist policies.

Komsomol Denounces Attack

LD170504 Moscow TASS in English 0456 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- Soviet youth angrily denounces the U.S. aggression against the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, which caused heavy damage to the country and civilian casualties, says a statement by the Central Committee of the Young Communist League and the Committee of Youth Organisations of the U.S.S.R.

The bandit U.S. attack on Libya was meticulously planned and prepared with undisguised cynicism. It became a culmination of the frenzied campaign of blackmail, threats and military provocations against that sovereign Arab country pursuing the anti-imperialist policy on the international scene.

Washington has dramatically intensified lately, within the framework of its "neo-globalist" doctrine, the encroachments on people's sacred right to determine independently their social system and steer an independent course in international affairs. Today's "globalism" of Washington in the area of the Mediterranean and its open policy of state terrorism rest on the ramified network of NATO, first and foremost American, military bases -- the strongholds of militarism and violence.

In flouting most grossly the U.N. Charter and the norms of international law, the United States pursues the policy of aggression, provoking of regional conflicts and brinkmanship, which is at variance with the interests of peace and international security.

SHULTZ CALL FOR CONTRA SUPPORT CRITICIZED

PM170759 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 16 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Text] Washington, 15 Apr -- The Reagan administration is continuing its tough pressure on Congress to make it appropriate an additional $100 million for military aid to the gangs of Nicaraguan "contras," through whom the United States is trying to overthrow the Nicaraguan Government.

Addressing members of the Associated General Contractors of America, President Reagan again called for granting aid to the Somozist cutthroats, whom he describes as nothing less than "fighters for freedom and democracy."

U.S. Secretary of State Shultz also spoke in support of the "contra" gangs. In a speech at Kansas University he cynically claimed that support for the "contras" is "America's moral duty." After his speech Shultz agreed to answer questions. Discomfiture ensued. Someone in the audience asked him this question: Nicaragua seeks democracy. Its people overthrew the dictator Somoza. How can aid to the "contras" be compatible with your declared principles of freedom and democracy? Moreover, both you and President Reagan condemn terrorism. Yet in supporting the "contras" the United States has unleashed terror against the peaceful population of Nicaragua. As a result, thousands of peaceful citizens have died. How can you justify such hypocrisy?

In reply the secretary of state stated: "Nicaragua is a cancer and must be destroyed."

During Shultz' lecture thousands of balloons carrying the slogan "No aid to the contras!" were released into the air above the university building. Hundreds of people had come to the educational establishment to express their indignation over the escalation of U.S. interference in Nicaragua's affairs and the attempts to overthrow the country's legitimate government.

There was also a protest demonstration against aid to the "contras" outside the U.S. Congress building. "Stop American interference in Central America!" "United States -- out of Nicaragua!" -- placards bearing these slogans were carried by many participants in the demonstration on the Capitol steps. Police arrested more than 50 people.

More than 130 participants in a demonstration against American policy in Central America were arrested by the New York police. More than 500 people carrying placards saying "Contras kill children," "The International Court has condemned U.S. actions," and "No aid to the contras!" began to picket outside the federal courthouse building and other state institutions.

In the last 3 days alone there have been protest demonstrations in 250 U.S. citites.

PRAVDA REPORTS OPENING OF REAGAN-NAKASONE TALKS

PM161441 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 15 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[TASS report under general headline: "Washington Steps up Pressure on Tokyo"]

[Text] Washington, 14 Apr -- The first round of talks between Ronald Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Y. Nakasone, who is here on a working visit, was held at the President's country retreat Sunday.

According to a high-ranking State Department spokesman, the talks "paid considerable attention to questions of East-West relations and questions of arms control and U.S.-Japanese cooperation in the defense sphere." The spokesman stressed that the Japanese Prime Minister "supported the stance adopted by President Reagan" on these questions.

However, on the question of the so-called "Strategic Defense Initiative" the talks clearly did not bring the results counted on by Washington. Despite the pressure put on him, the Japanese Prime Minister declined to make any official commitment regarding Japanese participation in the implementation of SDI. The State Department spokesman acknowledged that Nakasone stated only that Japan "will continue to study the question carefully."

Judging by the administration spokesman's statements, the first round of t0lks was marked by keen debate on the question of U.S.-Japanese trade and economic relations. The American side peremptorily demanded that Tokyo take the speediest measures to fully open up Japanese markets to American goods. It is clear from the spokesman's statements that this essentially involved the complete reorientation of the Japanese economy from the export to the import of manufactured goods so that the United States can somewhat improve its truly catastrophic position in the foreign trade sphere, which shows a record deficit.

Biryukov Views Talks

LD162334 Moscow TASS in English 2231 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS -- Follows commentary by TASS Political News Analyst Askold Biryukov:

Describing the atmosphere, in which the latest visit of Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone to the USA was held, the Japanese KYODO TSUSHIN agency pointed out that both countries had tried to create a friendly atmosphere for that event. Yet such an atmosphere can exist only on the surface of it.

It has turned out that the American side was disappointed by the "gifts", which were brought to Washington by the Japanese prime minister. No, the point at issue is not the brand new miniature colour TV set presented to Reagan, who was pleased by that toy. They in Washington were disappointed by the package of "new radical measures" brought by the Japanese premier thre. According to Tokyo's claims, the measures are designed to contribute to a reduction of the deficit of the United States in its trade with Japan, which has reached 50 billion dollars.

They in Washington were disappointed because, as was the case more than once in the past, this package of measures is not concrete. Despite the optimism of the final statement, the Japanese side can hardly be satisfied with the results of the visit either. The Japanese prime minister wished to ensure in Camp David full support from the U.S. President for the meeting of the leaders of the seven major capitalist powers scheduled to be held in May. Yet, the KYODO TSUSHIN points out, Reagan's reaction to his efforts was a "cool" one, in the obvious attempt at wresting more concessions from the Japanese side.

As the newspaper ASAHI SHIMBUN said, Nakasone could have agreed to pay that visit in order to score new points for himself by his showy diplomatic action for achieving internal political aims, in particular, in holding simultaneous elections to both chambers of the parliament (with the aim of prolonging his stay in power). Yet, the newspaper said, it is easy to see that in return he has put an enormous burden on Japan's shoulders.

Speaking of the burden to be shouldered by Japan as a result of that visit, the point at issue will, apparently, be, in the first place, a further transformation of Japan's stand on participation in the SDI. The Japanese premier promised the U.S. President that this question would be carefully discussed by the government, which is unanimously regarded as a manifestation of a positive approach of the government to participation in the "star wars" programme. It can be said, Tezima, a correspondent of the NKH television company in Washington, said, commenting on that statement, that Nakasone had made if not a whole step in that direction, than at least half a step ahead.

None other than Japan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs spelled out the government's stand already last week and declared for the country's participation in "research work" on SDI. The same is advocated by Tokyo's military department. To all appearances, they in Tokyo light-mindedly neglect all the possible adverse consequences of Japan's joining in the programme, which as Carl Sagan, a prominent American scientist, said: Will draw mankind into an abyss, jeopardise outer space and increase the threat of nuclear war.

WEINBERGER CALLS FOR MILITARY BUILDUP AMONG ALLIES

LD171026 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0259 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Washington, 17 Apr (TASS) -- TASS correspondent V. Legantsov report: U.S. Defense Secretary C. Weinberger delivered a report at the Boston Council for International Affairs on the results of his recent trip to Japan, South Korea, the Philippines, Thailand, and Australia. Virtually the whole of his speech boiled down to intimidating the American people with the mythical "Soviet threat" and calling for a continued buildup of the military might of the United States and its allies.

Weinberger was full of praise for the wide-scale program of strengthening Japan's military potential, which is being conducted by that country's government on instructions from Washington. He noted, among other thins, that Japan's implementation of its 5-year program to modernize its armed forces will enable it to have at the disposal of its navy by the beginning of 1990 more destroyers and antisubmarine aircraft than there are currently in the US 7th Fleet operating in the Pacific.

The Pentagon chief did not conceal his satisfaction with the policy of the South Korean dictator, Chun Doo Hwan, which by force of arms is suppressing the movement for the restoration of democracy. Weinberger reaffirmed the administration's intention to maintain the U.S. military presence in South Korea. At the same time he went so far as to claim that the presence on the Korean peninsula of a powerful group of American troops somehow testified to America's "adherence to the cause of peace."

Regarding his brief visit to the Philippines, on whose territory are deployed two of the largest U.S. military bases abroad, Weinberger made perfectly clear the U.S. intention to use the lever of assistance to the Philippines Government in order to maintain its military presence in the country.

Speaking about his trip to Thailand, Weinberger once again repeated the administration's worn-out thesis about the existence of a "communist threat" to that country. It is precisely under this pretext that ther U.S. is expanding its military aid to Thailand, in the hope of drawing the country ever deeper into its own militaristic plans.

It is clear from his speech that the defense secretary saw the existence of the same sort of "threat" to Australia, with whom Washington is seeking a considerable strengthening of military ties, and with particular persistence in the light of a perceptible split in the ANZUS bloc. Weinberger gave a very clear hint that Washington expects from its allies extra efforts in enhancing the combat readiness of their armed forces. He said that the United States considers the "contribution of the nonnuclear countries" to the defense of the West to be extremely important.

The U.S. defense secretary's speech clearly demonstrated that the Reagan administration intends to continue to push ahead with its militarist preparations in the Asian-Pacific region, a policy which is fraught with dangerous consequences for the peoples of the states situated there.

REPORTAGE ON GORBACHEV VISIT TO GDR

Lays Wreath in Berlin

LD180836 Moscow TASS in English 0821 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 18 TASS - The delegates to the 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, the delegations of the communist and workers' parties, national liberation movements attending the congress have paid tribute of profound respect to the memory of the Soviet soldiers, who saved humanity from Hitler fascism. The delegates and the guests laid wreaths today to the monument of the Soviet soldier-liberator in Berlin's Treptow Park.

A wreath was laid on behalf of the CPSU delegation by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central committee.

Taking part in the official ceremony were Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, chairman of the GDR Council of State, and other Party leaders and statesmen of the republic.

The GDR leaders and foreign guests observed a minute of silence in tribute to the memory of the Soviet soldiers, who fell in battles against the fascist plague.

Addresses SED Congress

LD181102 Moscow TASS in English 1039 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 18 TASS -- Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, made the following address to the 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED) here today:

Esteemed Comrade Chairman,

Dear comrades, friends,

On behalf of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union I cordially greet the 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany.

The attention of the numerous friends of the GDR and broad international public circles is these days riveted to Berlin. The Soviet people are showing keen interest in your congress, in how the theory of scientific socialism is being translated into practice in the heart of Europe, in the homeland of the founders of our teaching -- Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels.

From this rostrum I would like to convey wholehearted greetings from the Soviet people to the fraternal people of the German Democratic Republic.

It is with close attention that we have listened to the SED Central Committee's progress report delivered by Comrade Erich Honecker and familiarized ourselves with directives on the plan for the GDR's national economic development in 1986 through 1990. They are convincing evidence that the cause of socialism on German soil is making confident headway.

Your plans are challenging but realistic because they are based on the tangible results achieved both throughout the history of this republic and over recent years. Intensive methods have made it possible to ensure a steady pace of national economic advancement. Your experience of merging science with production, making rational use of material and manpower resources, and applying the achievements of scientific and technological progress widely deserves praise.

Your party can take pride in what has been done and is being done in the GDR for the full-blooded life of urban and rural workers, public amenities, environmental protection, and the promotion of social activity by citizens. The considerate hand of an efficient master, and the people in a socialist state do feel they are the master, shows everywhere in the GDR.

These days that the SED is celebrating its 40th anniversary it is especially appropriate to stress its outstanding role in forging the GDR as it is today. Faithful to the traditions of Karl Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemburg and Ernest Thaelmann and led by such remarkable figures of the working-class movement as Wilhelm Pieck, Otto Grotewohl and Walter Ulbricht, the party has boldly advanced along the trail blazed by the Great October Revolution. It has gone a long way from post-war devastation to a modern dynamic economy, from crushed Nazism to a socialist state of workers and peasants, from spiritual bankruptcy to a triumph of the most humane ideology and culture -- all this thanks to the party having invariably been guided by the ideas of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism.

Let me, dear friends, congratulate from the bottom of my heart the delegates to the congress and all members of your party on the signal anniversary and wish you further success in building a developed socialist society.

You know well that throughout the post-war years our party and people have been near you, always ready to help the young state of working people. We have been loyal friends and allies of the SED and of the German Democratic Republic and will continue to be such for ever.

Comrades, the socialist world is living through a special, one might say, crucial period. History has confronted us squarely with the need to make fuller use of the advantages of a new social system in order to accelerate scientific, technological, economic and social progress and enrich the socialist way of life with new facets. The attractive power of socialism and the enhancement of its international positions will depend on this decisively. The task of fending off the nuclear threat, checking the aggressive ambitions of imperialism, and preserving and strengthening peace is more urgent than ever before.

The decisions of our party congresses are together providing socialism's response to the challenge of the times. Understandably enough, in its concrete manifestations this response will be multifarious, reflecting the fraternal countries' specific features of development. But it will be one and the same in terms of principle because we have common goals and the same, communist, world outlook.

The decisions of the 27th Congress of the CPSU have evoked broad positive response in the fraternal parties and countries, including the GDR. We are very grateful to you for it. This reaction from friends, associates in a common cause, is for us both a confirmation that the chosen path is right and an inspiring stimulus.

It is, of course, up to history to give an exhaustive evaluation of this or that event. But it is clear even now that the Congress has not been an ordinary event for our country. It has completed the work of charting a further political course for the CPSU, work started by the April plenary meeting of the CPSU Central Committee, and armed the party and the people with a clear idea of what should be done and how at this turning point in history.

The congress has passed in an atmosphere of high exactingness. There has been frank talking from its rostrum both about our problems and about our shortcomings, but mostly about the ways of fundamentally improving work.

By virtue of a number of objective and subjective reasons, our movement forward at the previous stage began to slow down and negative trends showed. Speaking about this, we are far from downplaying our own achievements. Seen in broad historical perspective, our country's successes in economic, social and cultural fields are a generally recognized fact. The point being made is different. It is that, by relying on what has already been achieved, we can and should move forward much faster, get rid of our weaknesses and bottlenecks, and overcome whatever stagnation there is.

We are sometimes asked: Haven't we gone too far in our criticisms, aren't we thus giving food for anti-communist propaganda? We are positive that we haven't gone too far in this. Both Karl Marx and Vladimir Lenin taught that an indispensable condition for a revolutionary party's success is its critical attitude to its performance. We have sought to follow this behest and won the unreserved backing of the communists and all people.

A realistic assessment of what has been achieved has provided the point of departure for advancing a constructive program. Its pivot is a policy of speeding up the country's social and economic development, which has been grounded in every way in the decisions of the congress and in the new edition of the Party program.

I would like to stress that the idea of acceleration is not a whim. It proceeds from a sober evaluation of the possibilities of socialism. We believe that we can and should increase the efficiency of the socialist system and we shall achieve this aim by all means.

Having started with strengthening labor and production discipline, the party has embarked on drafting and effecting far-reaching reforms to lend Soviet society a new, more mature quality.

The decisions of the congress provide for a new technical reconstruction of the national economy, a serious reshaping of structural and investment policies, and a shift of emphasis on the qualitative factors of economic growth. We have drawn up programs for overhauling the entire mechanical engineering sector and reaching advanced positions in such fields as computer facilities, production automation and robotization, biotechnology, and new structural materials.

We have set the task to the scientists, designers and inventors in so many words: Stop looking at average levels as the guidepost, abandon the positions of imitation, and direct your efforts at developing and producing fundamentally new products that will be the best in the world.

Wide use will be made of Soviet-developed rotary lines and rotary line-conveyer belt combinations helping raise labor productivity up to ten times. It is envisages by the end of this five-year plan period to put into operation some 2,000 robotized integrated manufacturing systems, the same number of flexible automated systems, and tens of thousands of up-to-date manufacturing centers and other advanced machines. Plans for the next five years provide for outfitting 3,000 research and development organizations with computer-aided design systems, which will save the national economy a total of more than five billion roubles. We expect much from the introduction of technology for producing materials by self-spreading high-temperature synthesis, which does not have analogues in world practice, as well as such priority technologies as powder metallurgy, membrane technology, lasers and light-guide technology.

In order to expedite their adoption major inter-sectoral science-and-technology complexes have a been set as a basically new form of integrating science with production.

The decisive issue of acccelerating social and economic development is that of upgrading administration. We have been looking for effective forms and methods of economic management for several years and staged experiments in individual regions and industries. Now all this has formed an integral concept.

What is it all about? Basically, the idea is to raise the authority of the center in solving the key issues of economic and social development and delegate the other issues for resolution at local level. It is to switch the factories, collective farms and state farms to a real pay-your-own-way basis, encouraging them in this way to show greater independence, responsibility and socialist enterprise. It is to involve the broadest masses of people, every work collective and every person, in the process of accelerating our development.

People of the elder generations remember our spisited slogans of the '30s: "Equipment is the all-decisive factor" and "Personnel are the all-decisive factor". They helped a better understanding of the tasks of building socialism in those years and mobilized people to accomplish them. Now all our experience prompts a pithier formula, which is a kind of blend of both these approaches. It is: "The creative endeavour of the masses is the decisive power for acceleration".

There is also another important area of our work. The political system of socialism offers the working people broad possibilities to take part in administering public affairs. It should be admitted, however, that it is not always that these possibilities are used to the full. The reason why they are the manifestations of formalism, a propensity to ostentation, red tape, and smug complacency. The party has adopted a course of doing decisively away with them, further upgrading Soviet democracy, and promoting the people's socialist self-government.

We link all these processes with a serious re-organization of the party's own work. Vigorous quest, innovation, the overcoming of the infallibility complex, close touch with the masses, broad publicity, and the unity of word and deed - these are the demands made today on the style of work of the Party organizations and on every communist, irrespective of his post.

In short, comrades, the 27th congress has really marked a turning point in the activities of our party and in the life of the country. It has given rise to great political enthusiasm. We are now working to make certain that the energy of our plans will be translated into the energy of practical action. We are convinced of the rightness of the chosen path and shall not leave it.

It is all this, the things uppermost on the minds of the party and the people, that we wanted to tell you, our close friends.

Comrades,

The future of the Soviet Union is inconceivable without close interaction with the GDR and with the other fraternal countries. This is not only because the complex tasks set by the times cannot be performed without it.

I think we will feel that the socialist countries are entering a period where cooperation among them should be raised to a still higher level, not just by a point or two but as mathematicians say, by a whole order.

In the four postwar decades the fraternal countries, blazing new trails, have carried out deep-going socio-economic changes. Advanced industries have been developed, personnel raised, and socialist state structures established and consolidated, and the communist and workers' parties have grown richer with the experience of governing society and become mature. The international positions of the socialist countries have grown stronger.

All this is broadening opportunities for international cooperation between socialist countries and giving rise to the need to work out new approaches to the development of their relationships. As Friedrich Engels farsightedly noted, "an international union is possible only between nations whose existence, autonomy and independence in internal affairs are integrated... into the very concept of internationalism."

Economic relations seem to be calling for special attention. A good and sound foundation has been laid for these relations in previous years. The Council for Mutual Economic Assistance has accumulated a good deal of experience in integration. But the question today should be formulated as follows: Do the level and forms of cooperation match the new tasks facing all of us at the current stage? Are all the oppportunities for cooperation between the fraternal countries used to accelerate our development and to ensure our economic invulnerability to the capitalist market? I think you will agree that these opportunities are not used in full and it is in our common interest to redress this situation.

The paramount task of the current stage of economic cooperation has already been defined by the leadership of the fraternal parties and states. It is scientific and technological progress and co-production, primarily in engineering. The comprehensive program for the scientific and technological progress of the CMEA member countries through the year 2000 is a sound document, setting targets which are up to the highest world standards, but immense efforts will be needed to achieve them.

The main thing is broadly to develop direct contacts between research organizations, plants and amalgamations, to establish joint firms and to resolve a number of legal and financial problems. What all this amounts to actually is a new economic mechanism of our cooperation. We will need here to launch bold experiments, to tear down bureaucratic and departmental barriers and to do away with outdated stereotypes of thinking and with the underestimation of the importance and efficiency of cooperation by some economic managers. Naturally, this cooperation should necessarily be mutually beneficial and take account of the interests of all participants.

The work of the CMEA needs to be drastically improved as well. It would be good to relieve that organization of day-to-day managerial functions that are not its task and to concentrate its attention on major, strategic problems of economic integration and state-to-state regulation of this process.

Naturally, comrades, all these are not simple problems. But they can and must be resolved because this meets the vital interests of each fraternal country and of all of us put together. Political will is needed here and all of us have such will, as the latest meetings and conversations of the leaders of the socialist community countries have shown.

I will add that there is a possibility for the further expansion of our ties not only in the economy but also in every other area of social activity. What I mean is the development of mutual exchanges of information and experience in every way as well as of contacts at every level along party, state and public lines. It is important to meet the need of the fraternal peoples to gain more thorough and substantive knowledge of each other's affairs, considerably to expand cooperation in culture, and to broden direct human communication. We are heart and soul for this, as the saying goes.

Comrades,

Problems of war and peace feature prominently at your congress, and with good reason. The international situation remains tense and acute. And we communists consider it our paramount duty to do everything possible to stop the world from sliding toward nuclear catastrophe.

It is exactly the striving for these aims that had dictated also our trip to Geneva, the moratorium on nuclear explosions and the concrete programme of fully liquidating nuclear arms which was set forth in January. These major initiatives accorded with the interests of all nations and were energetically supported by the allied socialist countries, by many countries of the world. People began to hope for a change in the political atmosphere for the better.

But alas, today this hope is being subjected to serious trials. The military-industrial complex that rules in the United States is clearly not suited by a turn towards a normalisation of the international situation. The arms merchants shudder at the mere thought that the Soviet Union and the United States might reach agreement on disarmament. Contrary to the pressing interests and aspirations of all peoples, including its own people, Washington has taken to the road of actually undermining the Geneva accords, the road of actions that only further complicate the already tense situation in the world arena.

I refer first of all to the two sinister nuclear explosions in Nevada which destroyed a unique chance to give the process of disarmament a real start. I also refer to the impudent action taken by the United States against Libya that is fraught with the danger of a serious worsening of the situation in the world.

Everything shows that Washington has decided in its usual manner to teach the Arab countries a lesson, to force them to give up their struggle for a just settlement of the conflict in the Middle East. But this is also evidence of the bankruptcy of the American policy in the region - a policy of maneouvres and separate deals in favour of Israel, a policy profoundly hostile to the interests of the Arab peoples.

No reference to terrorism give the American Administration the right to play the role of an "international judge" and self-appointed chastiser, to replace the principles of international intercourse with jungle law. The more so that the matter is not in acts of terrorism that are firmly condemned by the entire international community.

It is for many years now that U.S. imperialists have been keeping up pressure on Libya and other Arab countries upholding their sovereign rights and defending the just cause of the Arab people of Palestine.

The USSR and other socialist countries have been demonstrating their solidarity with Libya in words and in deeds. They have warned about grave responsibility the United States is shouldering by engaging in armed aggression against an independent country which is a U.N. member.

Set against a broad international context, the crime against Libya as well as the stubborn continuation of nuclear testing and the escalation of threats against Nicaragua cannot be viewed as isolated developments. They all are manifestations of the general policy of Washington whose militarist, aggressive nature has revealed itself most visually these days.

I would like to stress that in Washington and in the European capitals they should realize that such actions are doing direct harm also to dialogue between the USSR and the United States and between East and West in general. There should be no pretending that the U.S. Administration is not aware that Soviet-U.S. relations cannot develop independently of how the United States is behaving on the international scene and what kind of situation is taking shape as a result.

It should be clear to every sensible person now who is really working for peace and who is pushing nations into the nuclear precipice. One can imagine what would be left of the human race and its civilization were the Soviet Union behaving in the world like the United States.

Such short-sighted, egoistic and adventurist policy is, however, in principle alien to socialism.

At this moment of responsibility no-one may dodge discharging one's duty to the present and succeeding generations. The destiny of peace must not be left at the mercy of U.S. militarists.

As far as the Soviet Union and the other countries of the socialist community are concerned, they have acted and will continue to act being fully aware of their responsibility.

Today we declare with utter certainty: Our proposals for eliminating nuclear weapons and bridling the arms race hold good. If the governments of Western countries are really concerned about the fate of peace, it is high time they began matching their words with deeds.

This is yet to happen. Let us take Europe. We can point out that the Soviet Union made a big concession by suggesting that the Soviet and American medium-range nuclear missiles be removed from the whole territory of Europe on the condition that the other NATO countries, Britain and France, would not build up their missile potentials. But now the very same governments that only recently regarded the Soviet SS-20 missiles as the main threat to Western Europe declare that this is not enough, that the road to the further buildup of missiles and nuclear warheads by Britain and France should not be blocked.

Where is logic here, may I ask, where is the principle of equality and equal security? There is no trace of them.

There is no logic in the policy of West Germany as well. Its government keeps talking about its commitment to peace and its desire to develop cooperation with socialist countries and pledging that war will never be launched from the territory of the country. But what do we have in reality? It is in West German territory that Pershings and cruise missiles targeted eastwards are lurking. No other West European government, it seems, has given such a wholehearted support to the American militarist SDI program. Moreover, Bonn has complemented it with a European "star wars" plan. All this is all the more alarming since the ruling class of West Germany continues to claim that there is an "open German question," has not given up revanchist plans.

The Soviet Union attaches much importance to the development of relations with West Germany as a major European state. What is more, we are prepared to develop these relations on an equal basis and to mutual benefit. But this calls first and foremost for Bonn's policy to meet in practice the interests of peace and security. We want to stress in the context that we unconditionally support the legitimate demand of the GDR to West Germany that relations between them be fully brought into accordance with the commonly recognized norms of international law.

Discussing the situation in Europe, we see another major problem, namely, the confrontation in the continent of powerful forces armed with conventional weapons.

Two groupings of troops, each three million strong and possessing the most advanced tanks, missiles and planes, let alone small arms of all types, face each other in Europe. Moreover, what is called conventional weapons are constantly being improved and made more sophisticated and powerful, their effects becoming more and more like those of weapons of mass destruction.

There is one more aspect to this problem. We are told that Western Europe cannot give up nuclear weapons, including American ones, because in this case it would allegedly feel less secure in the face of the conventional armed forces and armaments of the Warsaw Treaty Organization. And the rightist press is trying to back this false argument and to scare people with fantastic scenarios of the invasion of the West by a horde of Soviet tanks.

What do we think necessary to say in this context?

To begin with, the elimination of nuclear weapons in Europe would create a new situation in Europe not only for the West but also for ourselves. We should not forget that invasions of our territory in the pre-nuclear age were mounted from the West, and more than once.

One more thing. I would like to appeal to all the West Europeans from here, from the capital of the socialist GDR: Do not believe allegations about the aggressiveness of the Soviet Union. Our country will never and under no circumstances begin armed operations against Western Europe unless we or our allies become targets of a NATO attack! I repeat, never!

We would like to back this position with a new initiative, now applying to the conventional armaments and armed forces. The USSR suggests that agreement be reached on substantial reductions in all the components of the land forces and tactical air forces of the European states and the relevant forces of the USA and Canada deployed in Europe. The formations and units to be reduced should be disbanded and their weaponry either destroyed or stored in national territories. Geographically, reductions, obviously, should cover the entire European territory from the Atlantic to the Urals. Operational-tactical nuclear weapons could be reduced simultaneously with conventional weapons.

The question of dependable verification at every stage of this progress offers itself. Both national technical means and international forms of verification, including, if need be, on-site inspection, are possible.

In short, this is a subject for serious negotiations. We believe that the formulation of the question in a broader context will make it possible to cut the knot which has been growing tighter at the Vienna talks over so many years now.

We attach no less importance to deliverance from chemical weapons. Seeking to expedite the conclusion of a relevant international convention, the Soviet Union will table at the disarmament conference within the next few days a number of new proposals making it possible to remove the differences which have so far remained.

We consider all the constructive initiatives, such as the idea to establish a chemical weapon-free zone in Europe, produced jointly by the SED and the Social Democratic Party of Germany, valuable and are prepared to examine them.

There are no traps in our policy. We stretch out a hand, not a fist to the West. I want to stress that we are looking for ways to mutual understanding and to the limitation of the arms race not out of weakness. We need peace but everyone else needs it. Our policy is prompted by our concern about the survival of mankind, perhaps, the only civilization in the starry expanses of our galaxy.

Comrades,

The strength of the communists lies in their ideological conviction and readiness to fight dedicatedly for the ideals of peace and justice and for happiness for the working people. Your congress, like the congresses of the other ruling communist parties, reaffirms our common resolve tirelessly to perfect socialist society and to set a forceful example to enhance the appeal of the new social system.

We wish you, dear comrades, the communists and all the other working people of the GDR, every success in the accomplishment of the tasks which will be set by the 11th congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany.

May unbreakable fraternal friendship between the CPSU and the SED, between the peoples of the USSR and the GDR grow stronger!

Long live socialism!

Long live peace!

CSSR'S STROUGAL HOSTS POLAND'S MESSNER

LD142118 Moscow TASS in English 2036 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Text] Prague April 14 TASS -- Responsibility for the aggravation of the international situation, for the continued nuclear arms race, for the plans to project it into outer space, and for acts of hegemonism and state terrorism is borne by the imperialist forces and the U.S. Administration, Lubomir Strougal, chairman of the Government of Czechoslovakia, said in his speech at the dinner given today in honour of Zbigniew Messner, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of Poland, who is paying an official visit of friendship to Czechoslovakia.

The historical proposals of the Soviet Union, the initiatives of Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, are irresponsibly rejected in total defiance of reason, Strougal said. Meanwhile, they could help to put an end to nuclear tests and to rid the world of nuclear weapons by the end of this millennium.

This is the state of affairs, Strougal continued, and we should proceed from it as we discuss our defence needs within the Warsaw Treaty Organisation. We will not allow superiority over ourselves and will never agree to inferior security. We will also make every effort in diplomacy, at international conferences and in the United Nations, to carry on the struggle for peace, disarmament, negotiations and peaceful coexistense. There is no alternative.

Messner said in his reply speech that in the current complex international situation the paramount task of all the peoples of the world was to remove the threat of nuclear war and to look for ways to world peace and disarmament. We Poles welcomed and supported with satisfaction the constructive peace proposals of the Soviet Union and its programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons and all other types of weapons of mass destruction. Poland, jointly with all the other nations of the world, will continue to oppose the policy pushing the world towards the abyss and energetically to contribute to every action for stronger peace and security for the peoples, Messner said.

EUROPEAN LEADERS VOICE REACTIONS TO LIBYAN RAID

Craxi Notes 'Difficulties'

LD171446 Moscow TASS in English 1401 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Rome April 17 TASS -- Bettino Craxi, the prime minister of Italy, has met with a group of Soviet journalists, who are currently on an official visit here at the invitation of the national council of the Italian journalists' union. The conversation focused on the situation in the Mediterranean after the U.S. military action against Libya. A situation has shaped, whose development it is difficult to foresee and which may prove to be very dangerous, Bettino Craxi said.

The Italian prime minister criticized the United States for disregarding the opinion of the West European countries. There was talk for many years about American-European partnership. But what has happened is directly opposite. In other words, it creates considerable difficulties in our relations, he pointed out. At the same time the Italian prime minister dropped a courtesy to Atlantic solidarity by saying that because of the events around Libya his country will not sharply redraw its alliances and its friendly relations with the United States.

Natta Protests 'Piratic' Action

LD162339 Moscow TASS in English 1232 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Rome April 15 TASS -- Alessandro Natta, general secretary of the Italian Communist Party, has made a protest against the U.S. piratic action against Libya. The American Administration's aggression against Libya was an act of war, he told newsmen today. Natta said that the Reagan government launched the hostilities despite the opinion of Western European countries made known by representatives of the EEC countries, who opposed the use of force.

Italy should in no way be involved in the military action or allow the use of its military facilities and the NATO and American bases on its territory by the U.S. military, the PCI general secretary pointed out. He demanded an immediate end to the American aggression.

Action 'Broadly Condemned' in Greece

LD162115 Moscow TASS in English 0718 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Athens April 16 TASS -- The aggressive actions of the United States against the sovereign Libyan state have been broadly condemned in Greece. Greek Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias expressed on behalf of the Greek Government profound disappointment over the bandit attack of the U.S. Air Force against Libyan cities and said that the actions of the USA were conducive to a further deterioration of the situation in the Mediterranean. All the political parties and public organizations of Greece have strongly condemned the brutal action of the United States.

Prominent political leaders made statements to the effect that the presence of the U.S. bases on the Greek soil constituted a great threat to the country. Mammoth demonstrations and rallies of protest were held in Athens and Thessaloniki yesterday. In the Greek capital the demonstrators marched through the central streets to the U.S. Embassy chanting slogans: "Americans, get out of the Mediterranean", "Down with the U.S. bases", "Hands off Libya". The demonstrators handed in to a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy a resolution of protest against Washington's foreign policy which creates a threat to peace on earth.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT REBUKED FOR 'COMPLICITY' IN RAID

PM181125 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 18 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[TASS report: "At the USSR Foreign Ministry"]

[Text] A representation was made on 16 April to the British ambassador to the USSR at the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs in connection with Britain's complicity in the U.S. acts of armed aggression against Libya.

A.G. Kovalev, Soviet deputy minister of foreign affairs, told the ambassador that U.S. Air Force bases in British territory are known to have been used by U.S. Air Force planes, with the full consent of the British Government, for the barbarous bombing of Libyan cities, which resulted in human casualties. This makes the British leadership a direct accomplice in the aggressive U.S. action against Libya. So, the British Government shares responsibility for the casualties suffered by the civilian population of Libya, for the heightening of tension in the Mediterranean, and for the negative consequences to the cause of peace and security of the peoples of the area and the world as a whole.

It was pointed out that the stand taken by the British Government obviously contradicts the basic norms of international law. Even more, it does not accord with the fact that Britain, as a permanent member of the UN Security Council, is called upon to bear special responsibility for the maintenance of universal peace and security.

The above-mentioned action against Libya cannot be justified by any reasons. This is a link in the chain of defiant and provocative U.S. actions aimed at frustrating the search for ways to improve international relations and at stifling the positive tendencies and hopes that appeared as a result of the Geneva meeting. The British Government cannot but realize this.

Hope was expressed that the British Government would draw appropriate conclusions from the current situation and would take all measures necessary for an immediate end to aggressive actions against Libya and for the normalization of the situation in the Mediterranean and in international affairs as a whole, as is required by a responsible approach to the present military and political situation in the world.

AUSTRIAN MINISTER DENIES LIBYAN STRIKE 'RUMORS'

LD171007 Moscow TASS in English 0927 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Vienna April 17 TASS -- Austrian Interior Minister Karl Blecha has protested rumors, floated by U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Vernon Walters, that the Libyan Embassy in Vienna is planning to strike at a target in the Austrian capital. He said the Federal Government of Austria "condemns in the most resolute way" the disseminating of such rumors. The Libyan Embassy in Vienna also refuted the rumors, saying they are part of the anti-Libyan smear campaign.

Soviet Ships Reported Near Libya

AU171302 Vienna ORF Teletext in German 1244 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow - One day after Soviet party chief Gorbachev promised Libya help in "consolidating its defense capability," all embassies in Moscow were informed yesterday that the USSR will fully utilize its right to free movement on the sea and in the air. This was reported by well-informed Western circles in Moscow. A part of the USSR fleet is said to already be off the Libyan coast. The Soviet fleet in the Mediterranean does not have any aircraft carriers. Most likely this is why the right to free movement in airspace was obviously stressed.

Al-Qadhdhafi Visits Hospital

LD180910 Moscow TASS in English 0836 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 18 TASS -- Libyan television today showed a report on a visit by Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, to Tripoli's Central Hospital which took in the wounded victims of the U.S. Air Force raid of Tripoli's residential districts. As the Libyan leader went round the wards, people told him that their will had not been broken and that the killers would never bring the Libyan people to their knees. Al-Qadhdhafi was greeted by people, who chanted "Long live Arab unity" and "Reagan is child murderer."

Kuwait Accepts Invitation to Summit

LD171543 Moscow TASS in English 1458 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Kuwait April 17 TASS -- Kuwait has accepted Libya's invitation to take part in an extraordinary Arab summit to consider measures of counter-acting the American aggression against Libya, KUNA agency reports. The country's Foreign Minister Shaykh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jabir al-Sabah has announced that the Secretariat of the League of Arab countries had already been informed of this decision. He expressed the desire for this meeting to be held as soon as possible.

Libyan Leadership Issues Statement

LD171235 Moscow TASS in English 1208 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 17 TASS -- The Libyan people courageously repelling an aggression is countering a crusade of the NATO bloc with the USA at its head, says the statement issued by the revolutionary leadership of the Libyan Jamahiriyah. Libya, it says, has become subject of aggression because of its patriotic positions, because of which the crusade against it by NATO and Israel can be regarded as an aggression against the whole Arab nation.

The statement stresses that the raids from British territory and American aircraft carriers have failed to achieve any aim. Jamahiriyah has not surrendered, has not given up and will not give up its revolutionary principles. The statement urges the Arab states to end all oil supplies to America and those who support it, to announce an economic boycott on them and withdraw Arab deposits from the U.S. banks.

The revolutionary leadership has welcomed the idea of an urgent convocation of an Arab summit meeting, which is to take concrete measures to organise general Arab rebuff to the aggressors.

TOLKUNOV-LED DELEGATION ARRIVES IN TUNISIA

LD171958 Moscow TASS in English 1630 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Tunis April 16 TASS -- A delegation of the USSR Supreme Soviet led by Lev Tolkunov, chairman of the Soviet of the Union of the USSR Supreme Soviet, arrived on an official visit of friendship here today at the invitation of the Chamber of Representatives (Tunisia's parliament). The delegation includes Timofey Guzhenko, a deputy to the Soviet of Nationalities and minister of merchant marine of the USSR, Aleksandr Kishlar, a member of the Commission for Environmental Protection and Rational Use of Natural Resources of the Soviet of Nationalities and minister of land improvement and water conservancy of Moldavia, and Composer Arif Melikov, a member of the Commission for Public Education and Culture of the Soviet of the Union.

Working Meeting Held

LD172012 Moscow TASS in English 1915 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Tunis April 21 TASS -- A Soviet parliamentary delegation led by Lev Tolkunov, chairman of the Soviet of the Union of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., is staying on a visit in Tunisia. A joint working meeting of the Soviet delegation and members of the National Assembly of Tunisia was held here today. The sides examined the state of parliamentary contacts between the two countries and expressed the desire to develop them further and expand cooperation in different fields.

Lev Tolkunov shared his impressions from the 27th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU) with Tunisian MPs. The forum of Soviet Communists, he emphasized, reaffirmed the course of the CPSU toward safeguarding and strengthening peace. This is the aim of the January 15, 1986 Soviet proposals formulating a program for the stage-by-stage elimination of nuclear weapons everywhere in the world till the end of the current century.

The significance and timeliness of the foreign policy principles and peace initiatives taken by the Soviet Union is reaffirmed by the recent aggravation of international tensions caused by the barbaric U.S. raid on Libya, Lev Tolkunov said. The American aggression is an overt challenge to the entire international community. The Soviet Union strongly condemned the piratic U.S. action against that sovereign Arab country and demanded an immediate termination of such action, the head of the Soviet delegation emphasized.

Addressing the Soviet delegation, Mahmoud Messadi, president of the National Assembly of Tunisia, expressed satisfaction at Soviet-Tunisian cooperation which, as he said, "continues to grow stronger and gain scope in the interests of both countries." The exchange of visits of Soviet and Tunisian statesmen and political figures, including the visit of a Tunisian parliamentary delegation to Moscow and the presence of a PSD (Tunisia's Parti Socialist Destourien) delegation at the 27th Congress of the CPSU had a positive impact on the development of cooperation. Tunisia, Mahmoud Messadi emphasized, highly values the stand of the Soviet Union which consistently supports Arab countries and the just cause of the Palestinian people.

On the same day the delegation of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. had a meeting with Mahmoud Mestiri, secretary of the state at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Tunisia. The delegation also visited the national school of engineering built with the Soviet Union's assistance.

IRAQ'S RAMADAN ARRIVES IN MOSCOW, MET BY ARKHIPOV

LD172026 Moscow TASS in English 1926 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- Taha Yasin Ramadan, member of the Revolutionary Command Council, first deputy prime minister of the Republic of Iraq, arrived in Moscow today for an official visit. At the airport he was met by Ivan Arkhipov, first deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, Konstantin Katushev, chairman of the USSR State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations, and by other officials. Among the welcoming party was Sa'd 'Abd al-Majid al-Faysal, the ambassador of Iraq to the USSR. Talks between Ivan Arkhipov and Taha Yasin Ramadan began on the same day. Under discussion are matters aimed at further widening economic cooperation between the two countries.

SOVIET PARTY, GOVERNMENT GREET SYRIAN LEADER

[Text] To Comrade Hafiz al-Asad, secretary general of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party and president of the Syrian Arab Republic:

The CPSU Central Committee and the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium cordially congratulate you, Comrade President, and the friendly Syrian people on the national holiday -- the 40th anniversary of the evacuation of foreign forces. It can be confidently said that the 4 decades of independent development in Syria, which cast off the oppression by colonialism and put an end to foreign military presence, have transformed the country's appearance, led it to positions of prestige in the world, and enabled the Syrian people to make a considerable contribution to the Arabs' anti-imperialist struggle.

People in the Soviet Union highly value the policy implemented by the leadership of the Syrian Arab Republic, a policy aimed at the implementation of important socioeconomic transformations and the cohesion of the country's progressive and patriotic forces. Syria's consistent anti-imperialist course and its efforts to strengthen the solidarity of Arab peoples in the struggle to attain a fair Near East settlement, against the U.S. and Israeli attempts to impose capitulationist separate deals on the Arabs, have earned it deserved respect and support.

The Soviet Union will continue to stand firmly on the side of the peoples of Syria and the other Arab countries which are resisting Israeli aggression and imperialist interference and struggling to consolidate their national independence. We express confidence that the progressive development of Soviet-Syrian friendship and cooperation on the basis of the 19890 treaty will serve the benefit of our peoples, the cause of strengthening international security, and the establishment of a lasting and fair peace in the Near East.

We wish you, Comrade Hafiz al-Asad, good health and happiness, and progress and prosperity to the friendly Syrian people.

U.S. PLANS NUCLEAR EXPLOSION IN NEVADA; COMMENTARY

LD211021 Moscow TASS in English 1014 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 21 TASS -- The UPI news agency reported today quoting Jim Boyer, U.S. Department of Energy spokesman, that the second nuclear explosion planned by the Pentagon was to be conducted tomorrow, Tuesday morning [22 April] at a test site in Nevada.

The new test is codenames "Jefferson." A nuclear device with a capacity 20-150 kilotons is buried at a depth of 600 m at a test site in Nevada, 167 km north-west of Las Vegas.

U.S. Seeks Military Superiority

LD192111 Moscow TASS in English 2055 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 19 TASS - Follows commentary by Leonid Ponomarev, a TASS political news analyst:

The U.S. Administration is preparing to conduct another three test of new types of nuclear weapons in Nevada state, the newspaper SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER said. All of these tests are to be conducted before the end of this month. On March 22 and April 10 two sinister nuclear tests were held in the same proving range, despite the fact that the Soviet Union has refrained from any nuclear explosions for more than eight months now.

The actions of the U.S. Administration clearly show that it continues to be guided by selfish, imperial ambitions, in its striving to ensure military superiority over the Soviet Union. Addressing the local Republican Party activists in New York yesterday, President Reagan said that the United States needed a powerful and unexcelled force. In other words, the USA is out to ensure for itself military superiority over the rest of the world in order to be able to pursue the policy of hegemonism and state-sponsored terrorism with impunity.

But this statement in New York is in conflict with the stand taken by the U.S. President at Geneva. At the Soviet-American summit meeting he put his signature under a joint statement, saying, among other things, that the USSR and the USA will not seek to achieve military superiority. As we see, what was proclaimed at Geneva and what President Reagan declared in New York yesterday are mutually exclusive things. One cannot help asking in this connection in what measure one can trust the international commitments of the United States.

The continued nuclear testing by the United States, in whose course new types of mass destruction weapons are practised and perfected, is not only an open challenge to the Soviet Union, but also to the peoples of all continents, the world as a whole.

The Soviet Union has repeatedly given the U.S. Administration a chance to confirm by practical actions its statement on the striving for a nuclear-free world, and join in the Soviet moratorium on nuclear explosions. They in Washington are disregarding this opportunity.

Contrary to the vital interests and aspirations of all people, including the American people, the United States leaders have embarked on actually undermining the Geneva Agreement. Their actions further complicate the tense as it is international situation.

U.S. MILITARISM 'POSES HEIGHTENED THREAT TO PEACE'

PM141600 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 6 Apr 86 Second Edition p 3

[A. Leontyev article under the "Publicist's Comment" rubric: "Ordering Explosions"]

[Text] Some time ago a millionaire senator, known for his links with the Pentagon, said in reply to a journalist's question on whether the testing of new weapons would affect the Soviet-U.S. talks in Geneva: "I do not care what effect it has. The main thing is that it meets the basic aims of the United States." Millionaires are primarily interested in profits. For the sake of profits they are prepared to play with fire in the most dangerous ways, even though the nuclear arms race now threatens to destroy all life on earth. War will not spare even those with the fattest checkbooks. Why, then, do many people in Washington show a truly casual attitude (it cannot be called anything else) toward the nuclear danger? After all, Americans need peace as much as anybody else.

It is still not too late to halt the nuclear race. How is this to be done? The first step could be to end nuclear explosions. That would create a barrier to the improvement of nuclear weapons and the creation of new types. This move would also be of tremendous political and, indeed, moral significance as an example of joint actions by two great powers -- the USSR and the United States -- on whom a special responsibility rests.

In trying to achieve that goal more quickly, on 6 August last year the Soviet Union imposed a unilateral moratorium on all nuclear explosions until the end of 1985. We proposed that the Americans accept the moratorium and make it permanent. Their answer was to invite us to a routine nuclear test in Nevada. Before the New Year we extend our moratorium for an additional 3 months. They answered with new explosions. Finally, and quite recently, the USSR decided to abide by that moratorium after March 31, also -- until the U.S. side's first explosion. Washington was offered a another chance to take a responsible decision -- that is, to end nuclear explosions. Otherwise, as M.S. Gorbachev warned, the Soviet Union would resume its tests. That point must be absolutely clear. We shall be forced to do that because we cannot forgo our security or the security of our allies.

At the same time, M.S. Gorbachev sent an appeal to President Reagan not to delay but to meet in the near future in a European capital with the aim of urgently discussing the question of ending nuclear tests. However, the White House hastily rejected even that proposal, saying that "summit meetings should examine the whole range of important questions between the two countries."

How much arrogance and conceit there is in those words and how little reason! But why not discuss at least one major, present-day question, which all the peoples are demanding be resolved most rapidly? As for the moratorium on nuclear explosions, the White House believes that those explosions should continue in order "to ensure the reliability, security, and effectiveness of the nuclear deterrent." For how long, one wonders? Until those explosions turn into a universal explosion, after which there will be no one left to deter any more?

When rejecting the Soviet proposal the White House stated, as it has stated in the past, that U.S. policy's ultimate goal is the complete elimination of nuclear weapons. However, as THE WASHINGTON POST reports, many of the 16 tests planned for this year are connected with the development [razrabotka] of new types of weapons, primarily for "star wars." What kind of "elimination" is that?

There is every evidence, NBC TV reports, that "an increasing number of people, including Americans, and, possibly, primarily Americans, want steps to be taken to control nuclear arms. But the U.S. Administration is now stockpiling nuclear armaments faster than at any time in the past 20 years."

Recently, Washington launched a series of deliberate acts of provocation aimed at complicating the the international situation and arousing chauvinist hysteria in the United States. Aggression against the heroic Nicaraguan people was increased to howls about the Soviet and Cuban "threat." U.S. aircraft carriers were dispatched to Libya's shores. Modern weapons are being supplied to counterrevolutionary gangs in Afghanistan and Angola. To justify the aggressive actions they rapidly devised the doctrine of "neoglobalism" -- a doctrine of interference, strong-arm pressure, military adventures, and banditry. It is now particularly clear just who is who in world politics and who needs acts of provocation and nuclear explosions. Militarism, whose ideology prevails in the leading imperialist countries, has completely unmasked itself. It poses a heightened threat to peace. This proves once again that you must struggle for peace and know how to defend it.

ISRAELYAN CRITICIZES U.S. STAND ON NUCLEAR TEST BAN

PM181459 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 17 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 5

[TASS report: "At the Disarmament Conference"]

[Text] Geneva, 16 Apr -- The Soviet delegation at the Geneva disarmament conference has issued as an official document the Soviet Government statement in connection with the new nuclear explosion carried out by the United States on 10 April. Speaking at a plenary session, V.L. Israelyan, head of the Soviet delegation, stated that the Soviet Union, by twice extending its moratorium despite provocative U.S. challenges, has demonstrated in practice its sincere desire to use any opportunity to turn the unilateral morotorium into a bilateral moratorium and thereby begin a move toward the conclusion of a treaty on banning nuclear tests. Clearly, he went on to say, aware of the reaction they would have to encounter, U.S. officials have recently been bending over backward to prove the unprovable to their people and the entire world -- namely the need and even the "usefulness" of continuing tests. Nonetheless, it is clear to all sober-minded people that the United States needs nuclear tests in order to guarantee itself a position of strength and a position of deterrence, that is what the U.S. Administration's practical actions are aimed at. The Soviet representative also noted that the falsehood of the widely trumpeted U.S. adherence to peace has been seen in the U.S. Armed Forces' barbarous attack on Libya.

The Soviet Union will not give up the struggle to end nuclear weapons tests, V.L. Israelyan said. We reaffirm our proposal to immediately start talks on the complete prohibition of nuclear weapons tests. The Soviet Union's position in favor of starting multilateral talks within the framework of the disarmament conference remains unchanged.

CONGRESSMEN URGE REAGAN TO OBSERVE SALT II

LD200342 Moscow TASS in English 2247 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 20 TASS -- More than a half of members of the U.S. House of Representatives have urged President Reagan to observe the quantitative limitations on strategic weapons imposed by the SALT-2 treaty. The appeal has been signed by 221 out of 435 members of the House of Representatives, including 22 Republicans and 199 Democrats. Earlier a similar call to the U.S. President was addressed by 55 senators.

MORE ON CEMA PLANNING COMMITTEE MEETING IN MOSCOW

LD190415 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Report from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] From 15 to 16 April, the 38th Session of the CEMA Committee on Cooperation in the Sphere of Planning Activity was held in Moscow. The session was chaired by Comrade Talyzin. The committee approved for submission to a session of the Council a report on results of coordination of national economic plans of the CEMA member-countries for 1986-90 and a draft coordinated plan of multilateral integration measures by the member-countries of CEMA for the same period. The committee examined questions concerning the construction of the gas pipeline from Yamburg to the western border of the USSR. A report of the session of the CEMA Committee on Cooperation in the Sphere of Planning Activity is published in the press.

CEMA EUROPEAN COMMITTEE DELEGATE ADDRESSES MEETING

LD190407 Moscow TASS in English 2224 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Geneva April 17 TASS -- TASS correspondent Yevgeniy Korzhev reports:

"The efforts of the countries of the socialist community aimed at relieving the international situation constitute an important factor in an improvement of the political climate in Europe and throughout the world", stated Zdislaw Kurowski, the leader of the delegation of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA). Speaking today at a session of the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE), he pointed out as major initiatives taken in this direction the Soviet programme for complete elimination of weapons of mass destruction, the programme supported by the other CMEA countries, as well as the address of the Warsaw Treaty member-states on the establishment of nuclear-free zones in Europe.

With a view to ensuring international economic security, the speaker pointed out, CMEA countries come out against the use of methods of force, and are in favour of a constructive dialogue and joint actions in the solution of international economic and social matters. CMEA countries have already set about implementing programmes based on a long-term strategy for economic development and deeper cooperation.

The tasks set by the congresses of the communist and workers' parties of these countries envisage higher rates and efficiency of economic development through the acceleration of scientific and technological progress, through refinement of societal relations and management systems, deeper cooperation and socialist economic integration. It is also suggested that greater scope be given to versatile mutually beneficial cooperation with other countries in the world.

CEMA TALKS WITH LATIN AMERICAN NATIONS ON COOPERATION

LD190734 Moscow TASS in English 1232 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS -- More than 300 industrial and other projects have been built or are under construction in Latin American countries today with the assistance of the countries of the socialist community. These include power plants in Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Peru, Mexico and Uruguay with an aggregate capacity of 8,700 megawatts.

Talks are under way on building new power plants with a capacity of 5,800 megawatt, TASS has been told by the CMEA Secretariat in connection with the 21st Session of the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, which opened in Mexico City on April 17.

Agreements on cooepration between CMEA and Mexico and Nicaragua are being effectively fulfilled. Work is now under way in Nicaragua on about 30 major projects in geologic survey, power engineering, mining, the agri-industry, fishing, transport and training of national personnel. Almost 13,000 Nicaraguans will study in socialist community countries in 1986-1990, with 460 of them granted CMEA scholarships.

Cooperation is being developed between CMEA countries' organizations and Latin American companies on the markets of third countries. This cooperation was ushered in by Soviet-Brazilian partnership in building the Clanda hydro-power station in Angola.

The comprehensive program for the scientific and technological progress of the CMEA member-countries is opening broad prospects for the development of cooperation. Its implementation will make it possible to increase aid to Latin American countries in getting new technology and processes and in accelerating scientific and technological progress. Brazilian companies have bought from the USSR licenses for continuous steel casting processes, a unit for dry coke quenching, underground coal gasification and the production of ball mills.

The CMEA member-countries for their part are displaying an increasing interest in technology and processes offered by Latin American countries.

ECONOMIC COOPERATION BANK COUNCIL MEETS IN MOSCOW

PM151834 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 13 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[TASS report under general headline "Official Reports"]

[Text] A routine session of the International Bank for Economic Cooperation Council was held in Moscow 10-11 April. Delegations of countries belonging to the bank council -- Bulgaria, Hungary, Vietnam, the GDR, Cuba, Mongolia, Poland, Romania, the USSR, the CSSR -- and representatives of the CEMA Secretariat, the International Investment Bank, the National Bank of Yugoslavia, the (DA) Afghanistan Bank, the State Bank of Laos, the Bank of Finland, the National Bank of Ethiopia, the African Development Bank, the Bank of Ethiopia, and the Bank for International Settlements took part in it.

The council approved the activity of the International Bank for Economic Cooperation in 1985, which had energetically helped to systematically develop member-countries' national economies, deepen socialist economic integration, and expand member-countries' foreign economic ties with other states. A report on the bank's activity in 1985, the balance as of 1 January 1986, and the bank's profit in 1985 were confirmed, and the International Bank for Economic Cooperation's credit plan for the current year was examined. The council appointed the bank's auditing commission for the next 2-year period and took decisions on other questions concerning the bank's current and future activity.

The session proceeded in an atmosphere of friendship, comradely cooperation, and complete mutual understanding.

LIBYAN PRESENTS EVIDENCE OF U.S. 'BANDIT ATTACK' AT UN

LD200844 Moscow TASS in English 0626 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 19 [date as received] TASS -- Evidence of the American banditry in Libya has been presented to the members of the U.N. Security Council. One cannot look without pain and anger at the photographs of children villainously killed by the U.S. air pirates on the orders of the White House. The photographs were brought to the meeting of the Security Council discussing the U.S. bandit attack against Libya by 'Ali al-Turayki, Libya's permanent representative to the U.N. On Friday, he said, Libya buried the victims of the raid launched by the American barbarians. They were old people, women and children, a lot of children. Washington is lying, when claiming that the bombs were dropped on "military targets". They aimed at residential neighbourhoods. The killed children is what they in Washington implied by "successful accomplishment of the combat mission".

The Washington representatives were trying to use as a cover for their fresh crime slanders against...the Soviet Union. To this end the U.S. permanent mission to the U.N. went so far as to spread a faked report on "sufferings" of thousands of Afghan children through the fault of the Soviet Union.

There is no denying that Afghan children are suffering, but as a result of the dirty war waged by the U.S. imperialism against our people, a TASS correspondent was told by Ebrahim Nengrahary, DRA's charge d'affaires to the U.N. The Soviet friends assist us in building schools, hospitals and kindergartens. Meanwhile, bandits armed to the teeth, who are sent by the CIA, kill children, slaughter teachers and physicians. Over the years after the victory of the April Revolution, they have destroyed more than a half of all the medical institutions, 2,700 schools and killed 2,000 teachers. The American barbarians and their hired butchers kill Afghan children in an attempt at destroying the country's future. They will never evade responsibility for these crimes, he stressed.

Denies U.S. Charge

LD210903 Moscow TASS in English 0648 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 21 TASS — Libya's permanent representative to the United Nations, 'Ali A. al-Turayki, has denied the provocative charges of the Reagan administration that his country is involved in international terrorism. We are resolutely against acts of terrorism and are prepared to cooperate with other countries to put an end to this menance, he said in a CNN programme. But Libya will never give up its support for the just struggle of the Palestinian people for their inalienable rights or for the struggle of the oppressed peoples of South Africa against apartheid, he stressed.

IZVESTIYA ON IMPLICATIONS OF LIBYA RAID FOR NATO

PM181259 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 18 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 6

[Political Observer Vikentiy Matveyev article: "When Sovereignty Is a Hindrance..."]

[Text] Death rained down on Libyans not only from U.S. carrier-based aircraft but also from bombers stationed at U.S. bases on British soil.

These bases are part of the NATO command structure. And General Rogers, as commander in chief of NATO's armed forces in Europe, sanctioned those Pentagon orders. Thus, the Atlantic bloc has been used as a weapon against the sovereignty of an Arab country with a small population.

What is happening here? NATO has been drawn into the "Reagan doctrine." By its banditry the U.S. military has "involved" that bloc in the aggression against Libya at a time when the majority of bloc member-countries have dissociated themselves from those U.S. actions and some governments have even gone so far as to condemn Washington's operations.

But the M.Thatcher cabinet went behind the nation's back when it agreed to allow the F-111 aircraft to fly out of bases in Britain. Parliament was not informed in advance. Its opinion was not sought. With the exception of the Conservatives, members of all the parties represented there expressed their indignation. And even among Conservative ranks there is no particular solidarity. Former Prime Minister E. Heath and some other prominent Conservatives openly opposed the government's decisions.

You do not have to explore the subtleties of international law to see how the U.S. ruling circles are flouting the elementary norms of that law. If you consider NATO's functions, even from the formal viewpoint, it is obvious how this bloc is being used against a country in a region outside its sphere of operations. A sinister precedent is thus being created...

The circumstances occurring before the U.S. aggression against Libya began are also indicative. As the British press writes, U.S. warplanes brought across the Atlantic "unexpectedly" began landing at the U.S. bases in Britain. That was in addition to those already stationed at the U.S. bases in the British Isles. When Washington's special envoy arrived in London to secure agreement for the use of the U.S. bases, the relevant Pentagon strike force was already in Britain. There was no mention of Britain's sovereign rights.

That was how the NATO mechanism, activated by the U.S. key, operated with regard to Britain. But the matter does not concern Britain alone. There are U.S. bases in other West European countries. And they include nuclear missiles bases.

Washington officials are now looking at the Persian Gulf, for example, hinting at the possibility of "activating" the U.S. Armed Forces based there. What new U.S. ally in Western Europe will have to face pressure from the transatlantic military if the latter dreams up new adventures? And what will be the consequences?

These are not abstract questions.

TITAN ROCKET EXPLODES 'SECONDS AFTER LAUNCH'

'Launch Zone' Damaged

LD182320 Moscow TASS in English 2130 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 19 TASS -- An official spokesman for the Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, has confirmed by telephone to a TASS correspondent that a Titan-34 D booster rocket exploded in air several seconds after launch on Friday.

The Air Force spokesman claimed that the blast damaged an area limited by the "launch zone."

According to an ASSOCIATED PRESS report, however, an order was issued that children from the adjoining region be held inside the safety's sake.

The Vandenberg Base spokesman told TASS that an investigation was launched to determine the causes of the blast.

The launch was conducted within the framework of the Pentagon's space programme. According to UPI, the rocket was to have placed in orbit one more spy satellite.

60 Injured

LD191553 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1330 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] We have already reported the explosion at an Air Force base in the United States of a "Titan-34" carrier rocket, which was launched in compliance with the Pentagon's space program.

According to UPI, the rocket had to orbit yet another spy satellite. News agencies report that a fire broke out at the launching pad; about 60 people have been treated for skin and eye irritation and three have been hospitalized. The curious thing is, many of the victims were approximately 5 km from the launching site. After the Challenger disaster, the U.S. Defense Department has been expanding use of single-use carrier rockets for space-lifting its cargoes.

This explosion points out again the danger of putting human lives into direct dependence on technology, no matter how safe the latter might be.

FURTHER REACTION TO U.S. ATTACK AGAINST LIBYA

PRAVDA Editorial Article

PM210839 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 21 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[Editorial article: " A Telling Blow to the Aggressor"]

[Text] Another act of international banditry -- aggressive actions against sovereign Libya -- has been added to the list of the bloody crimes perpetrated by the U.S. military.

Bombing and missile attacks of the U.S. Air Force were directed against the residential neighborhoods of Tripoli, Banghazi, and other Libyan cities. Among the casualties are hundreds of people.

The world wrathfully condemns these brutal bombing raids. Mass protest rallies are being held in many countries. Many participants in the scheduled session of the Stockholm Conference have strongly condemned the U.S. brigand attack. The world stigmatizes those in the United States who are responsible for that massacre and their assistants in Britain, who oblingingly allowed the use of their territory for the take-off of the piratic armada of F-111 fighter-bombers.

The action, which no arguments can justify, is one of the links inthe impudent provocative actions by the United States taken in response to the Soviet Union's peace initiatives. These actions are aimed at frustrating the search of ways to improve international relations. The U.S. attack against a sovereign Arab state is an act of terrorism, of flouting the basic norms of international law and international relations.

On these troubled days the leaders of the United States and Britain -- of the aggressor and its assistant -- allow themselves to put forward cynical arguments to substantiate "the lawfulness" of their actions. They have the insolence to quote Article 51 of the UN Charter, providing for the right to self-defence in the event of an armed attack against a member-country of the organization.

Indeed, there is no limit to the hypocrisy of the advocates of aggression.

U.S. officials arrogantly say that the administration does not intend to reconsider its current policy vis-a-vis Libya, notwithstanding the protests of European public and governments of dozens of countries.

Washington's political leaders have embarked on openly deceiving American public and international public opinion as a whole. In kindling chauvinistic passions and preaching the idea that the U.S. military machines is allowed to do everything it wishes, they are trying to picture things as if the attack against Libya is proceeding without impunity.

Both George Shultz, U.S. secretary of state, and Caspar Weinberger, U.S. secretary of defense, claim that the United States lost only one aircraft.

Meanwhile, according to the data of objective control of the Libyan air defenses, over the 2 days -- 15 and 16 April, the American air pirates launched several bombing raids on Libyan cities with the participation of dozens of F-111 aircraft from air bases in Britain and carrier-borne fighter-bombers from the aircraft carriers America and Coral Sea. Despite the sudden missile and bomb attack, which was launched in a brigand manner from around the corner, the Libyan Armed Forces succeeded in effectively using their organic weapons to down during the first American raid one F-111 and several carrier-borne aircraft. In the course of the subsequent raids, several more carrier-borne aircraft were brought down. The wreckage of two American aircraft was found on the ground. The fall into the sea of another two aircraft was registered by radio engine ring equipment and by visual observation.

Thus, the American losses on 15 and 16 April are not quite that "insignificant," as the U.S. propaganda machinery is trying to claim.

In these difficult days for Libya, the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries gave important moral and political support.

Our stand has been explicitly expressed in the message of Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, saying theat "the Soviet Union firmly intends to continue to meet its commitments regarding a fruther strengthening of Libya's defensive capacity."

While speaking about a peaceful settlement of conflicts in Asia, Africa, and Central America, official Washington is practising in action crude violence, aggression, and belligerent chauvinism. The administration is now doing its utmost to whip up anti-Libyan hysteria in the United States. The actions of American pilots, who killed women, old people, and children, are pictured as lofty "courage" and "heroism." They are also advertising the strength and superiority of American weapons and praising to the skies the American men, who covered more than 5,000 km in their advanced aircraft, who used with high accuracy 225 kg and 800 kg laser guided smart bombs and HARM and Shrike missiles.

Yet, the White House is concealing the truth from its people and the world community, which is that the task set to the American military to "teach" Libya a lesson, has failed. The aggressor itself has been punished, including in political terms, and got its deserts.

Irresponsibility and adventurism have always been dangerous, especially in this day.

Hysteria Grips Washington

PM181605 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 19 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[Own correspondent O. Vasilyev report: "The Recklessness of Strength: Raging Chauvinism and Militarism in the United States"]

[Text] New York, Apr -- The air smelled of gunpowder. Reports from the television companies' correspondents in Tripoli brought the echoes of exploding bombs and antiaircraft gunfire. A White House correspondent, appearing against the background of the floodlit residence, reported that at precisely that moment, on the order of the master of the house, American bombers were dropping their lethal cargo on Libyan settlements. Following the terminology which has become established here, the correspondent called them "terrorist bases." It became clear that among these "nests of international terrorism" which were bombed were the French Embassy and the Japanese ambassador's residence, located in densely populated districts of Tripoli. Reports began to come in that American bombs had fallen on multistory apartment blocks and that many peaceful inhabitants had been killed or wounded.

Soon the "heroes of the day" appeared on the screens -- U.S. Defense Secretary C. Weinberger and Secretary of State G. Shultz. Then the television cameras were switched on in the Oval Office of the White House, and President Reagan appeared before millions of worried American. Like his closest advisers, the country's head of state and government, also commander in chief of its Armed Forces, spoke of the "struggle against terrorism, and the fact that the massive bomb strikes by the American military machine against that Arab country were carried out by the United States "in self-defense." He also cited Article 51 of the UN Charter on every state's right to self-defense. You would have thought that instead of American planes invading Libya's airspace like thieves in the night, Libyan subunits had crossed the U.S. border.

The records set for hypocrisy by the U.S. Administration during these hours marked the apex of the chauvinist hysteria which has gripped official Washington and the mass media here in recent days, making even those who usually display sobriety and common sense keep quiet. The U.S. Congress, that public herald of "human rights," "democracy" and "law," was a pitiful spectacle. Only a few of the legislators dared timidly to voice fears about the possible negative consequences of the Pentagon's acts of brigandage.

The majority decided not to risk their careers, and took the usual course, at times of military crisis, of "rallying round the commander in chief."

Moreover, immediately after the piratical acts against Libya a group of senators and congressmen submitted for consideration by the two chambers a draft law which would give the President the right, without any consultations and without informing Congress, on the pretext of the "struggle against terrorism," to give the order for punitive acts, including military strikes, against any country. AP stresses that this draft law, if adopted, "would enable the President to sanction military actions, including political assassinations" of other states' leaders.

The massive offensive against the Americans' common sense is nothing new. The bravura presentation of aggressive acts of interference in other countries' affairs as "heroic" deeds in the name of "America the Great" and of "freedom" has acquired an unusually stupefying force, especially since the invasion of Grenada. And that force is increasingly suppressing people's sense of justice and is knocking into many people's heads the pernicious ideas of U.S. "superiority," of its "right" to commit any lawless act in the world as long as it is justified in terms of the "defense of U.S. interests."

Now, after the acts of aggression against Libya, terrorism at state level has shown itself to the world in its most overt and repulsive form -- terrorism backed by the might of the military machine of a great power (how absurd those words sound in the context of what has just been perpetrated!), of a country which has taken no account of the provisions of international law or the elementary norms of civilized relations between peoples. "The arrogance of power" -- an expression forged by former senator W. Fulbright during the United States' war against Vietnam -- was manifested in the actions of that country's government as though it were not the 20th century outside but the end of the 19th century when, launching warships and marines into battle, America asserted itself in the role of the young capitalist power which had entered the world arena.

In undertaking acts of aggression against liberated countries Washington disregards not only the norms accepted in relations between civilized peoples but also the ability of Americans themselves to compare the facts and comprehend them. Some 3 weeks ago, when the U.S. 6th Fleet undertook its piratical military actions against Libya in the Gulf of Sidra, this was allegedly motivated by the U.S. desire "to defend the right of peaceful navigation" in international waters. Now the U.S. military's bloody crime is being presented as a "response to the actions of international terrorists" who organized the blowing up of the discotheque in West Berlin. (The Government of the Libyan Jamahiriyah has resolutely denied involvement in this senseless crime). In reality the Pentagon's anti-Libyan bandit actions are the result of plans elaborated on the banks of the Potomac whose main aim is to subjugate and re-enslave the peoples of the developing countries and to undermine and suppress the national liberation movements and regimes inconvenient to U.S. imperialism.

The forces of imperialism, U.S. imperialism above all, are trying everything to crush and destroy the liberated countries and to halt the march of history: economic sabotage, political provocations, and direct strong-arm pressure. This course has been underpinned by the hastily elaborated "new globalism doctrine" which in general terms contains nothing new but attempts to return to the old, classic system of piracy.

What was undertaken against Libya is by no means an impulsive act, not a spontaneous reaction to "the onslaughts of international terrorists," as people here are trying to portray it. THE WASHINGTON POST correspondents G. Wilson and D. Hoffman report that "the joint bomb strikes by U.S. naval and air forces were planned over several months," long before the explosion at the West Berlin discotheque.

American and foreign newspapers have recently been writing a lot about the debate deep within the Washington administration, in which chauvinism has increasingly been gaining the upper hand and the most reactionary and most aggressive elements have the last word. During these closed meetings -- one was held in mid-January with the participation of Weinberger, Shultz, Jeane Kirkpatrick, former U.S. representative at the United Nations well known for her extremist views, and CIA representatives -- the outlines of the so-called "Reagan doctrine" or the "doctrine of neoglobalism" were defined. Describing the sentiments prevailing in "theoreticians" and practitioners of reviving the old concepts of imperialist piracy in a new guise, the French newspaper LE FIGARO writes that these people believe that, after the recent decades of America's failures and climb-downs -- in Korea, in Vietnam, and even in Iran -- "the time has come to win back the lost territory."

The bombs dropped on Libyan cities and settlements were directed not only at that country's people and the peoples of the Near East as a whole, where the United States is endeavoring by all means to establish its military-strategic and economic supremacy. Their blast wave was addressed to the peoples of the whole world, including the American people. On a narrow, specific plane the storm of chauvinism currently being fanned in the United States is to help the administration to get through Congress multibillion-dollar military appropriations which have been under threat of a certain reduction and to force through Congress a $100 million "gift" to the Nicaraguan "contras" waging a criminal war against Sandino's country under the leadership of CIA and Pentagon instructors (the House of Representatives voted against this bill, while the Senate voted for it, and a new, decisive vote is to be held).

On the broad plane, the frightening actions against Libya, according to the plans of their initiators, are meant to reverse the process of improvement in the international situation, which is so not to their liking, and to halt the growth of peace-loving sentiments among the American and the foreign public.

U.S. imperialism's bloody new crimes against Libya rank with other actions by Washington, such as the intensification of military pressure on Nicaragua, the continuation of nuclear weapon tests, the incursion into USSR territorial waters by American warships, and the unlawful actions against the UN missions of the USSR, the Ukrainian SSR, and the Belorussian SSR. Alarmed that the summit meeting has partially opened the door to the world of hope, the servants of the U.S. military-industrial complex are in a hurry to slam it shut as quickly as possible.

Turbid streams of chauvinism are flowing from the pages of bourgeois newspapers. "United States delivers crushing blow against Libya!" proclaim the huge letters filling the entire front page of New York's DAILY NEWS. "Take that, Al-Qadhdhafi!" the the NEW YORK POST says in militarist, jingoistic hysteria. Gangster terminology fills the articles in the most popular U.S. newspapers, extolling the U.S. military's "exploit." Just as with the intervention on Grenada, the aggressive operations by the U.S. Navy and Air Force against Libya have aroused a wave of jingoistic feelings in the country, whipped up by the press.

Against the backdrop of this wave of unbridled chauvinism, various right-wing and extreme right-wing organizations have reared their heads, reasserting their existence and influence within the country. Having taken the bait of a propaganda campaign inspired by official Washington, the politically ill-informed and reactionaries of all types are thirsting for fresh blood, demanding that the bombing of Libyan cities continue, and urging that "Libya be brought to its knees."

Nevertheless, to the Americans' honor they are by no means all exulting these days. This is how USA TODAY characterizes Americans' reaction to the recent events: "Shock, Fear, Pride." Let us note that the authors of the report placed "pride" last as USA TODAY writes, many people in the country fear that the expansion of the Pentagon's actions in the Near East will involve the country in a new Vietnam.

But the press and television continue to describe in glowing terms the results of the U.S. military's "professional actions" (C. Weinberger's expression) against the Libyan people. When Americans open their newspaper or switch on their television sets they see ruins of houses in Triploi, the dead or wounded being carried away on stretchers, the suffering eyes of children, and the tearstained faces of adults. "Our boys carried out their mission successfully," a TV program anchorman announced without a shadow of embarrassment or shame.

The newspapers report that the various explosives dropped on the Libyans included laser-guided "smart bombs," as they are called. "Smart bombs!" Can there be anything more blasphemous or monstrous! You cannot help wondering: If bombs which kill civilians have minds, what kind of minds do those politicians have who issue the order to drop this lethal load on the cities and settlements of an independent country? What kind of political responsibility do they have?

People here are trying to present the U.S. military's bandit actions against Libya as a just and almost noble cause. In actual fact it is an outrageous affront to international law and the elementary norms of human morality. Yet another ignominious page has been written in the history of imperialism's bloody crimes.

'Crude Force' Noted

PM181716 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 19 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[IZVESTIYA political observer K. Geyvandov article: "Along a Well-Trodden Path"]

[Text] The situation in the southern Mediterranean and the Near East remains tense following the U.S. aggression against Libya. President Reagan states that this is only the first battle which logically must be followed by others. In this instance the head of the White House can be believed since it is clear from everything that Washington does not intend to seek new paths in Near East affairs. It has decided to simply follow the path which the Israeli aggressors have long since trodden here, continuing to rely on crude force in the matter of a "settlement" of the Arab-Israeli conflict and "pacification" in the region in the American style.

There is no doubt that precisely this was one of the objectives of the U.S. armed aggression against Libya. For it is well known that the Libyan leadership is in the front ranks of those leaders of the Arab world who are categorically against separate deals with the American-Israeli "strategic allies." It advocates an all-embracing and just Near East settlement and actively supports the struggle of the Arab people of Palestine for the restoration of their trampled national rights. In Washington this position is declared "terrorist activity," which allegedly gives it the right to carry out the actions initiated on 25 March by the U.S. bombing of Libya.

Having studied the American-Israeli partners' conduct in the Near East crisis on the basis of the experience of recent decades the following prediction can be made: Encouraged by the armed aggression against the Libyan Jamahiriyah, Washington and Tel Aviv, judging by everything, will make further attempts in the near future to persuade Arab states into separate deals with Israel. In fact, preparatory work in this direction has already begun with the visits to the region by U.S. Vice President Bush and State Department representative Murphy. I have no doubt that they were specially timed to coincide with the beginning of the aggression against Libya.

The leaders of the Arab countries, I believe, are aware of the sinister purpose of the U.S. aggression against Libya. For if immediate measures to deal a rebuff are not taken today, tomorrow any other Near East state could become the object of armed violence by Washington with all the ensuing consequences. The "activity" of the American-Israeli allies leaves no doubt at all about this.

It is reported that a number of leaders of Arab countries have proposed an emergency summit conference which could be held in the very near future. In this context attention is attracted by the wish expressed by M. al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, who stated: "As a result of the crude aggression committed by the United States we have been presented with a historic opportunity to realize where our strength lies. Our strength lies in unity."

'Cynicism' Characterizes U.S. Position

PM181437 Moscow SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA in Russian 19 Apr 86 First Edition p 3

[TASS report: "The U.S. Position in Connection with the Attack on Libya"]

[Text] Washington, 18 Apr -- Official Washington's current position in connection with the terrorist act against Libya can be characterized as extreme cynicism, denying the obvious, and totally ignoring the tragic consequences of the bandit U.S. attack on that sovereign state.

Reagan still believes that "he acted absolutely correctly" with regard to Libya, the President's Deputy Press Secretary Speakes stated frankly. In answer to one question the White House spokesman said brazenly that the United States "knows nothing" about the death of the 18-month-old daughter of M. al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, as a result of the raid by American bombers. "We have seen no documents attesting to her identity," he said. CBS television reported that deaths among the civilian population in Libya were in effect "planned" in advance by the Pentagon.

New facts are being made public to the effect that one of the main aims of the bombing of Tripoli was to kill M. al-Qadhdhafi, although American laws formally forbid organizing or preparing assassination attempts on foreign leaders.

Now that the U.S. plans to eliminate the leader of the Libyan revolution have been wrecked, Washington is launching a campaign of psychological warfare with the aim of destabilizing the situation in the country.

U.S. Actions 'Gangster-like'

PM181628 Moscow SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA in Russian 19 Apr 86 First Edition p 3

[Text] The gangster-like runs by U.S. bombers against independent Libya are taking place under solid cover provided by, so to speak, "shore-based" propaganda artillery from Washington. It is well known that this artillery is thoroughly involved in accusing the Libyan Government of organizing "global terrorist activity." Therefore, the bomb strikes against residential quarters in Tripoli and Banghazi are described by the White House and its fellow-thinkers in Congress as nothing but "a major action against terrorist targets"(!) Proof? Washington claims Libyan "complicity" in the explosions at a West Berlin discotheque and on board a U.S. aircraft. However, no factual or legally substantiated evidence has been submitted. Our readers know that Tripoli has resolutely dissociated itself from these and all other terrorist actions.

...In the evening of 15 April the BBC broadcast live the House of Commons debate on the British Government's complicity in U.S. aggression against Libya. The explanations by M. Thatcher and members of her cabinet had to be made to the accompaniment of a stormy and indignant outcry by parliamentarians. Graduates from Oxford and Cambridge, and therefore well acquainted with the fundamentals of international jurisprudence, they demanded an answer to the question: "By what right?" Neither they, nor any other British people, were told anything intelligible.

The situation is, unfortunately, different in the United States. Chauvinist hysteria there has hit its peak in the last few days. According to a NEWSWEEK opinion poll, 83 percent of Americans described the preceding bomb raid against Libya as "justified," while 75 percent (with 15 percent against) even called it "ligitimate!" That country's population is taught law in a strange fashion! The administration behaves in the international arena according to the cowboy interpretation of legality: Pick up the Winchester at the slightest provocation, and fire indiscriminately. Never mind who is in the right and who is guilty!

It is obvious that the chauvinist intoxication in the country and a feeling of impunity encourage the Washington team. But any intoxication is sooner or later replaced by sobering up. The United States has had repeated occasions to convince itself of this in the most recent past. And as for impunity.... This feeling is false and dangerous! The time of reckoning will come! As a result of its actions, the United States has not only already set the majority of mankind against itself but has also wrecked the meeting of foreign ministers which was planned as an important stage along the path to the Soviet-U.S. summit meeting. The Soviet Government statement emphasizes that, in the event that the rapacious U.S. actions continue, our country will be forced to draw more far-reaching conclusions.

U.S. foreign policy over the last few weeks has made many observers in the West ask: Did Geneva actually happen? Or, rather, was the President actually there?

The unprecedented actions against Libya, the provocation in the Black Sea, the moving of U.S. troops and arms close to the border with Nicaragua, the explosion in Nevada.... And all this happened against the background of anticommunist hysteria fanned by the administration, a hysteria so strikingly reminiscent of R. Reagan's speech about the "evil empire" in the British Parliament. Having studied Reagan's "life and times," specialists are increasingly inclined to turn to more distant landmarks in his life in their quest for the sources of presidential ideology and practice.

Wringing from congressmen 100 million [dollars] to outfit the Nicaraguan "contras" and intimidating them with the prospect of a "second Cuba" appearing in the U.S. "backyard," Reagan recently proclaimed the task of "halting communism and international terrorism" as a "fundamental historical test" which his presidency has been set. At the same time, Americans were able to see their President on television screens and illustrated magazine pages wearing a T-shirt with the following slogan emblazoned across his chest: "Halt Communism in Central America!"

It may have been this aspect of well-staged propaganda that forced American journalists to turn back to the acting days of the present White House leader who, in his capacity as president of the Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood in the fifties, at the height of McCarthyism, delivered rabble-rousing anticommunist speeches which, compared with today's utterances, make it possible to accuse their author of tautology not only of ideas but also of expression.

The favorite pastime of McCarthy's supporters at that time was to seek out the "Reds under the beds" of Americans. Now the "Reds" are sought in Nicaragua, Libya, and farther afield still.

In the fifties Reagan classed as "communist" anyone who at any time said anything good about the Land of the Soviets, anyone who treated the "Bill of Rights" not as a joke but seriously.

In the eighties he classes as "communist dictatorships" such diverse countires, existing under completely different conditions and at completely different stages of development, as Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Libya, Ethiopia, or Angola. The only thing they have in common is that they are members of the Nonaligned Movement, having taken the path of progressive development and being neither socialist nor -- even less so -- communist, have become victims of American monopolistic totalitarianism.

The words "democracy," "peace," and "freedom" appear today in presidential speeches with the frequency of Coca-Cola advertisements on commercial television. Total dependence on the frequency of combat missions by bombers based on U.S. aircraft carriers in the Gulf of Sidra is observed here.

Yet there are still some people in the United States who ask: Is the President not overstepping the mark?

Following the collapse of all its propaganda tricks and capers, Washington today has openly concentrated its efforts on attempts to take confrontation out of mothballs and whip it up, including, among other methods bombing Libyan cities.

The message by M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, to M. al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, notes: "Washington has not heeded our call, dictated by the desire to avoid a further exacerbation of the political climate in the world. The United States has again appeared as the main party guilty of escalating international tension, recklessly gambling with the fate of millions of people for the sake of satisfying its imperial ambitions."

It cannot be put more accurately. Washington, blinded by the might of its militarist machine and haughtily scorning international law, is leading the world toward a most dangerous confrontation.

Proof of Terrorism 'Fictional'

LD180358 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1445 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Report from "The World Toady" program presented by Boris Kalyagin]

[Text] Protests against Washington's policy are resounding around the streets and squares of many of the world's cities. Anti-American protests have been held outside the U.S. Embassies in London, the Nicaraguan capital, and Islamabad, and outside the American Cultural Center in Cape Town; demonstartions have been held in many cities in the FRG, Greece, and Spain; telegrams reporting such actions have been coming in all day today.

Having come up against universal international condemnation, the United States is attempting to justify its military action by claiming that it, allegedly, was an act of self-defense. These explanations, however, do not stand up to inspection. Washington's so-called proof of Tripoli's involvement in international terrorism is of a fictional nature. The United States claims that Libya, with its population of 4 million, situated at a distance of thousands of kilometers from U.S. territory, presents a threat to the United States, cannot be taken seriously. The truth of the matter lies elsewhere, in the fact that Libya's independent policy has long infuriated the U.S. Administration. The latter cannot forgive Libya for managing to remove U.S. military bases from its territory, for nationalizing foreign petroleum companies, and for supporting the national liberation struggle of other peoples. Washington has long been planning to teach Libya a thing or two and thereby give a lesson to other young states who do not wish to carry out instructions from across the ocean.

In his memoirs, former U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig admits that the issue of anti-Libyan operations was discussed as early as the first sitting of the U.S. National Security Council after Reagan's election as president, held on 21 February 1981. At that time, there was no mention of terrorism, but the United States was already devising plans for overthrowing the Al-Qadhdhafi government. Since then, Washington has undertaken many attempts to achieve this objective. The United States imposed economic and diplomatic sanctions on Libya; it held provocative maneuvers off the Libyan coast; it tried to draw Egypt into joint military action against Libya; it attacked Libyan aircraft and ships; and now finally has bombed Libyan cities.

Washington spokesmen claim that only military targets were attacked, so-called terrorist bases. Pentagon chief Weinberger has even boasted that thanks to laser beams the strikes were carried out with exceptional accuracy.

However, it is now known that the U.S. aircraft bombed residential areas of the Libyan capital. As a result, the Romanian, French, FRG, Greek, and Swiss Embassies were damaged in the attack. The VOA has stated the 10 to 15 persons suffered in the U.S. attacks, but correspondents of foreign news agencies in Tripoli report that the number of those killed alone amounts to 100, while the total number or persons killed or injured is close to 1,000. They include many foreigners, women, and children. Al-Qadhdhafi's 15-month-old adopted daughter was killed and his two young sons were injured. This murder of civilians cannot be justified with any arguments.

The Washington administration has dealt a blow not only to Libya but also to the international community's hopes for an improvement in the international atmosphere. The U.S. actions signify a deliberate exacerbation of Soviet-U.S. relations. Our country has frequently addressed serious warnings to the U.S. Administration concerning the dangerous consequences of continuing its anti-Libyan policy. However, Washington has not heeded our appeals.

'Piratic Strategy' Revealed

LD181634 Moscow TASS in English 1540 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS -- by TASS political news analyst Yuriy Kornilov:

Many civilians, including children, women and old people, were killed and wounded, more than 100 residential buildings were destroyed -- this is the outcome of the barbaric U.S. Air Force raid on cities and settlements of sovereign Libya.

An act of political vandalism has been committed against that country. Barbaric actions of the United States against the Libyan people can be qualified from the standpoint of international law only as actions of war criminals comparable with the destruction of Guernica by fascists.

One more shameful page has been written in the history of crimes of American imperialism. To get the proper idea about the scale of those crimes one should add many more facts and figures to the sinister data about the death tally and the extent of destruction on Libyan soil.

Can we forget the U.S. aggression in Vietnam, where the U.S. military, out to "Bomb Vietnam back into the stone age", committed colonialist atrocities exacerbated by the destructive power of modern means of annihilation? Hundreds of thousands of people died during the "dirty war" fought by the U.S. in Vietnam.

The aggressor dropped more than 7 million tons of bombs and sprayed 48 million liters of a poisonous chemical, called 'Agent Orange' on Vietnamese soil. To this day scores of thousands of Vietnamese suffer from the consequences of the poisoning.

There still [as received] more fact and figures to be added to the score -- during an undeclared war unleashed and waged by Washington against Afghanistan more than 2,000 schools, over one half of all medical centers, and hundreds of mosques were destroyed and burned down, 14,000 kilometers of telephone lines and about one half of the entire length of power transmission lines were devasted. The damage caused by the subversive activities of counter-revolutionary forces sent into Afghanistan made up about 40 billion Afghanis.

The scale of an undeclared war started by Washington in 1980 against another sovereign country — Nicaragua — is growing. As Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega recently said in an interview to the Mexican news services NOTIMEX, in the past five years through the fault of the U.S. at least 11,000 Nicaraguans were killed, another 5,000 wounded, and 250,000 had to leave their native places and move deeper into the country's territory.

These frightening figures show the scope of criminal operations carried out by aggressive imperialist quarters of the United States, by the U.S. secret services, their hirelings and henchmen.

Besides, describing Washington's criminal activities, one cannot fail to mention such facts as a counter-revolutionary putsch in Chile, a piratic attack of the U.S. on independent Grenada, support given by U.S. secret services to terrorist UNITA [National Union for the Total Independence of Angola] forces operating on Angolan territory.

Over the years of the Republican administration in the White House the number of CIA's "special operations" increased at least five-fold. At the present time "gentlemen from Langley" are running about 50 major operations of that kind in different regions of the world, to say nothing of less important operations. As former CIA agent John Stockwell said, more than three million people had already fallen victim to "covert wars" waged by the CIA in the developing countries.

Such are the results of American hegemonism, the outcome of interventionist actions of the United States, the frightening "tally of the policy of terror" pursued by Washington in different regions of the world.

All who treasure peace, the ideals of freedom and security of nations resolutely condemn this aggressive, piratic political strategy.

Bosses Try to Cover Tracks

LD191910 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Commentary by Political Observer Valentin Zorin from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Hello, comrades! One gains the impression that Washington did not expect such a reaction to the attack upon a small country, did not count on an explosion of indignation throughout the world taking on such a scale, nor on the political consequences of its military adventure being so wide-spread and so unfavorable for the United States. Evidently, the chauvinistic hysteria which has swamped a certain sector of American society has also had an effect upon the Washington leaders themselves, and has deprived them of the possibility of making a sober and realistic appraisal of the situation which has come about. On the banks of the Potomac today, they cannot hide their evident disappointment and extreme irritation in regard to the European allies, who, in spite of the pressure exerted upon them refused -- with the exception of the Thatcher government -- to back up, even verbally, at least, the piratical U.S. action against Libya.

Washington is pretending that it is astonished by the Soviet Government statement to the effect that the administration itself had made impossible at the given state the scheduled meeting between the foreign ministers of our two countries. The action against Libya, they say, has nothing to do with the Soviet-American dialogue. It should not be pretended, Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev said in Berlin, that the U.S. Administration is unaware that the Soviet-American relations cannot develop independent of the way the United States behaves in the international arena and of the sort of situation which comes about as a result of this. In our interdependent world, one cannot press the buttons of missile launching installations in one place without this reverberating at all ends of the planet.

Libyan children torn to pieces, blood on the streets of Libyan towns -- this is a fact of not just local importance, but an event with a worldwide dimension.

Finding themselves in an extremely difficult political situation, the Washington bosses have set about feverishly covering up their tracks. Official administration spokesmen have put out a wholly mendacious version to the effect that Washington, having discovered in advance about the bomb being prepared by the Libyans in West Berlin, which was then used as the pretext for the villainous attack upon Libya, allegedly asked for the assistance of the Soviet Union in preventing the explosion. But, you see, it met with no response.

In so doing, the Washington officials in their haste failed to notice that in their aspiration to slander our country and shield themselves, they had forgotten about elementary logic. If they knew in advance that a bomb, was being prepared, why did they not prevent it, or at least warn their soldiers not to frequent a dangerous place?

Thus, one lie engenders another, putting its authors into an increasingly silly situation and exposing them before the whole world. The U.S. propaganda machine has been put on full steam ahead over the past few days, engendering one cock and bull story after another, each more absurd than the one before. This very hullaballo itself indacates the confusion at present in official Washington. However, floundering about in lies and demonstrating a total lack of scrupulousness in methods will bring Washington nothing but self-exposure and increasing international isolation.

U.S. Using 'Propaganda Tricks'

LD192326 Moscow World Service in English 1710 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Yuriy Solton commentary]

[Text] There's been no let-up in the outrage all over the world following the bandit American attack on Libya. The member-nations of the United Nations Security Council have demanded that Washington be brought to account. Even America's allies in NATO, except for Britain, have openly expressed their disapproval. Having come under a tide of criticism, Washington is resorting to slander and defeat in a bid to evade the responsibility for the crime it's committed.

The United States State Department has gone so far as to claim that the Soviet Union is responsible for the raid on Libya because, the State Department claims, it was warned about terrorist acts against Americans and asked to bring pressure to bear on Libya. This is a brazen lie. A spokesman for the Soviet Foreign Ministry has told newsmen that in talking about a possible terrorist act the American side had nothing with which to prove its charges. The Americans refused to furnish any concrete evidence. They claimed they didn't want to expose their sources of information. But that arguement doesn't hold water. If the United States really had evidence why has it failed to take action to protect its citizens? It's more likely that certain forces prepared to stage any provocative action to aggravate the international situation were at work.

After the attack on Libya Washington is again spreading rumors about more terrorist acts against Americans and it's saying quite hypocritically that it's seeking Soviet cooperation in that matter. But who is the Soviet Union supposed to cooperate with? Is it supposed to cooperate with those who gave the attack on Libya the go-ahead at government level? Or is it supposed to cooperate with those who sent warplanes to bomb peaceful Libyan cities and those who are responsible for the death of totally innocent people, children among them? The Soviet Union is resolutely opposed to terrorism, whatever form it may take. To cooperate with the United States, which has committed an act of brigandage, would amount to becoming a moral accomplice in its policy of state sponsored terrorism. The Soviet Union will not do that. The Phillistines in Washington are lying and going for propaganda tricks to cover up the traces of their crimes. But they won't be able to do that.

USSR-JAPAN ECONOMIC COOPERATION TALKS CONCLUDE

LD171116 Moscow TASS in English 1036 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- Progress in the development of business relations between the Soviet Union and Japan and their prospects were discussed at the tenth joint conference of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees for economic cooperation which has closed here today. The Soviet delegation to the talks was led by Vladislav Malkevich, a deputy minister of foreign trade of the USSR, and the Japanese delegation by Ryochi Kawai, chairman of the board of the Komatsu corporation. About 400 businessmen of the two countries took part in the conference.

The final plenary meeting, which took place in Moscow's World Trade Center, heard reports of the chairmen of the subcommittees on specific areas and projects of cooperation that had worked at the conference, among them those on trade, the Sakhalin project, chemicals, ports and transport, south Yakut coal mining, timber resources, technological chip and the pulp-and-paper industry.

The sides approved a joint communique on the results of the work of their tenth joint meeting. It expresses the readiness of the sides to make efforts further to expand trade and economic cooperation between the USSR and Japan and to search more vigorously for new forms of such cooperation, in particular, through co-production ventures, scientific and technological exchanges and other progressive forms of business contacts. It was noted that additional possibilities for the expansion of Soviet-Japanese trade and economic contacts were being opened up by the introduction of Guidelines for the Economic and Social Development of the USSR for 1986-1990 and to the Year 2000. The organisations of the two countries were recommended to continue talks on cooperation in the chemicals, pulp-and-paper and timber industries and in transport construction and to improve the structure of mutual trade.

The heads of the Soviet and Japanese delegations said in their speeches at the closing meetings of the conference that much importance was attached to the present-day forum of businessmen from the two countries from the point of view of the further expansion of their mutual business contacts.

During their stay in Moscow, the leaders of the Japanese delegation were received by Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the Council of Ministers and chairman of the State Committee of the USSR for science and technology, and Boris Aristov, minister of foreign trade of the USSR. They also had talks with the leaders of some other Soviet ministries and departments.

Agreement was reached on holding the next joint conference of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees for economic cooperation in Japan in 1987 at a time suitable to both sides.

U.S. BOMBING ATTACKS AGAINST LIBYA CONDEMNED

MPR Condemns Attacks

LD161749 Moscow TASS in English 1434 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Ulaanbaatar April 16 TASS -- The Government of the Mongolian People's Republic has issued a statement condemning the U.S. aggressive actions against Libya.

"The totally unprovoked aggressive act", the statement says, "is indicative of the U.S. Administration's defiant disregard for the norms of international law and for the demands of the world public".

The statement expresses Mongolia's support for the Libyan people, and conveys a demand that the U.S. Administration immediately cease the hostile anti-Libyan campaign.

DPRK Condemns 'Brigand' Action

LD162127 Moscow TASS in English 2024 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Pyongyang April 16 TASS -- The Government of the DPRK and the Korean people are firmly on the side of the Libyan people and will continue assisting its just cause in every possible way. This is said in a statement of the DPRK Government in connection with the U.S. bombing of Libya. The statement was circulated by the CENTRAL KOREAN NEWS AGENCY here today.

The attempts to justify that act of aggression by presenting it as "retaliation" mean the logic of a brigand who violates fundamental norms of international law, the document says. But no provocations can help the United States intimidate the Libyan people and other peaceful peoples of the world.

The United States must immediately end the aggression against the Libyan people. If the USA continues the reckless playing with fire, it will bear full responsibility for all its consequences, the statement says.

U.S., ROK END 'TEAM SPIRIT-86' EXERCISES

LD181320 Moscow TASS in English 1130 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Tokyo April 18 TASS -- The American and South Korean troops ended their "Team Spirit-86" exercises, which had lasted over two months. More than 209,000 officers and men, almost 40 warships, including the Midway attack aircraft carrier and missile cruisers were involved in those exercises of an unprecedented scale.

The annual "Team Spirit" exercises, which have been conducted since the mid-1970s, are used by the Pentagon to train troops in "rapid deployment" operations on an especially large scale American troops from U.S. bases in Japan, the Hawaii islands, the Philippines, Guam and U.S. territory were brought to South Korea for the exercises.

One new feature of the latest exercises was the participation of the 9th airborne division, which is constantly on the alert to carry out "lightning" punitive actions in different parts of the world.

The "Team Spirit-86" scenario was based on simulating offensive operations and "suprise deep-penetration strikes" with the use of every weapon of mass destruction. The Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial regime gave the U.S. armed forces a free hand to simulate the crossing of water obstacles, tank marches [as received] and combat operations in "areas contaminated with radioactive fallout and chemicals" virtually throughout the territory of South Korea.

DRA'S KESHTMAND ARRIVES IN MOSCOW ON OFFICIAL VISIT

LD202324 Moscow TASS in English 2253 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 21 TASS -- Soltan 'Ali Keshtmand, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA), chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan (DRA), arrives in Moscow today for an official visit at the invitation of the Soviet Government.

"Soviet people", emphasizes today's PRAVDA, "cordially welcome the arrival of the chairman of the DRA's Council of Ministers in the USSR and express confidence that his visit will become a new landmark along the lines of strengthening friendship and all-round cooperation between the USSR and the DRA, between the Soviet and Afghan peoples".

The newspaper carries a brief biography and a photograph of the guest.

DRA PROTESTS PAKISTANI VIOLATIONS OF AIRSPACE

LD191201 Moscow TASS in English 0751 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Kabul April 19 TASS -- Pakistan's charge d'affaires ad interim in Democratic Afghanistan has been summoned to the Afghan Foreign Ministry and told that despite this country's repeated warnings, Pakistani military authorities are continuing to stage acts of interference and aggression against Afghanistan, BAKHTAR news agency reported.

According to a report by competent Afghan agencies, Pakistani Air Force planes on April 14 and 16 intruded into Afghan air space over Spinbaldak District, Kandahar Province,and bombed several villages there, killing four and wounding some 50 persons, including women and children, and causing widespread destruction.

The Afghan Government strongly protested the provocative and inhuman actions, which have further complicated relations between the two countries, and demanded that such actions be stopped. Otherwise, it warned, all responsibility for their consequences will be on the Pakistani side.

AFGHAN PEACE ORGANIZATION CONDEMNS ATTACK ON LIBYA

LD162132 Moscow TASS in English 1050 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Kabul April 16 TASS -- U.S. imperialism staged a new flagrant act of international banditry, said a statement issued by Afghanistan's Peace, Solidarity and Friendship Organization.

A bombing raid of U.S. Air Force planes on Tripoli and Banghazi killed and wounded innocent civilians and caused extensive material damage.

This aggression followed a series of provocative actions directed against Libya, the statement said. Using the might of its armed forces, the United States, together with its allies including Israel, had been trying to intimidate the Libyan people and the revolutionary leadership of the country, make Libya give up its anti-imperialist policy. When this plan had failed, Washington resorted to an act of state terrorism.

On behalf of the entire peaceful people of Afghanistan the Peace, Solidarity and Friendship Organization expressed wrath and indignation at the U.S. aggression against an independent Arab country and stated its solidarity with the Libyans' efforts to thwart imperialist conspiracies.

INDIAN CP DENOUNCES U.S. ATTACK ON LIBYA

LD190133 Moscow TASS in English 1551 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] New Delhi April 17 TASS -- The central Secretariat of the Communist Party of India has issued the following statement to the press:

The Central Secretariat of the Communist Party of India vehemently denounces the barbarous military aggression committee by the Reagan administration against Libya.

This action of U.S. imperialism comes at a time when it is already making active preparations to step up its attacks against Nicaragua, Angola and Afghanistan and when it is goind ahead with its nuclear tests despite the urgent and constructive proposals made by Comrade Gorbachev.

The barbarous aggression committed by the Reagan administration against Libya is a challenge to international law, to the U.N. General Assembly, to the non-aligned community of nations, to world peace. Reagan is following in the footsteps of Hitler, with this vital and dangerous difference that he is playing with nuclear weapons which threatens the very existence of world mankind. It is not Libya, but President Reagan who has unleashed a course of international terrorism and brigandage.

Peace-loving forces throughout the world must raise their voice of condemnation immediately against U.S. aggression on Libya, the U.N. General Assembly, as well as the Non-Aligned Movement should forthwith come out denouncing U.S. imperialism as the aggressor and demanding that it immediately stops its attack against Libya and withdraws its entire forces from the Mediterranean. Every attempt must be made by the world community of nations and peace-loving forces of all the continents to stage before it extends its adventurist plans further into other regions. World peace is at stake at the present time and everything must be done immediately before events develop to a point of no return.

The Communist Party of India calls upon all peace-loving forces in India to step up their campaign against U.S. aggression on Libya and demands that the Non-Aligned Movement comes and with a concerted plans to checkmate the present U.S. aggression and defend the national freedom and sovereignty of Libya.

The Communist Party of India calls upon its units throughout the country to hold protest meetings and demonstrations in front of the institutions of the U.S. Government in the country, demanding an immediate end to U.S. aggression against Libya and expressing solidarity with the Libyan people.

The marchers, denouncing the U.S. state terrorism and the American aggressors, distributed a statement, which expressed indignation at the U.S. aggression against the non-aligned country which suffered numerous civilian casualties as a result.

REPORTAGE ON CPSU GENERAL SECRETARY'S VISIT TO GDR

Discusses Palestinian Unity With 'Arafat

JN201824 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1720 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] Brother leader Abu 'Ammar [Yasir 'Arafat] arrived in Baghdad last night from Berlin following an official visit to the GDR. During the visit, 'Arafat led a Palestinian revolution delegation to the 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany.

During the visit, 'Arafat also met with Soviet leader Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev. During the meeting, which was held in a cordial and intimate atmosphere, the two sides reviewed recent developments in Arab, Palestinian, and international arenas. The two sides also discussed the seriousness of the continuation of the U.S. policy of force which aims at striking at the struggle of the Arab nation and the Palestinian people. They also reviewed the threats posed by this U.S. policy to world peace and security. 'Arafat and Gorbachev discussed the importance of Arab solidarity and Palestinian unity to confront these challenges.

Comrade Gorbachev stressed the USSR's firm and resolute stand toward the Palestinian people's just cause and struggle for achieving their legitimate rights, including their right to establish an independent state.

Brother leader Abu 'Ammar thanked Comrade Gorbachev on behalf of the Palestinian people for the support our people and just cause receive from the USSR and friendly socialist states on all levels. 'Arafat expressed appreciation for the USSR's resolute and firm support for the Arab nation against aggressions toward it, particularly U.S. aggressions.

'Arafat held another lengthy meeting with a representative of Gorbachev at the Palestinian Embassy. They reviewed developments in the Palestinian, Arab, and international situations in light of escalating events in the region.

In the presence of the Palestinian delegation, brother leader Abu 'Ammar met with the head and members of the Cuban delegation in Berlin. During the meeting, the two sides discussed current developments in the region and Palestinian-Cuban relations. Brother leader Abu 'Ammar asked the Cuban delegation to convey a special message to Comrade Fidel Castro. The message deals with recent developments in the Palestinian, Arab, and international arenas.

Brother leader Abu 'Ammar met for the second time in Berlin with the Egyptian National Progressive Unionist Grouping Party delegation led by Brother Khalid Muhyi al-Din and Dr Rif 'at al-Sa'id. Talks dealt with the situation in the Palestinian and Arab arenas. The two sides agreed on joint measures in the interest of a unified Arab stand.

Supports Palestinian Dialogue

GF201014 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0840 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] Dubayy, 20 Apr (WAKH) -- Official Palestinian sources are speaking of a joint Soviet-Algerian move to achieve Palestinian national reconciliation which would take place through the convening of a national dialogue conference among the Palestinian factions in Algeria, and which would be supported by the USSR and Syria.

The newspaper AL-BAYAN, published in Dubayy today, quotes these sources as saying that the features of this move appeared through the two meetings Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat held with Soviet leader Gorbachev in East Berlin while the two were attending the celebration [as received] of the ruling party in the GDR, and through the contacts that Algeria is making with representatives of the Palestinian resistance factions.

The sources expressed optimism concerning the meetings of 'Arafat and Gorbachev. These have been the first meetings between them since the Soviet leader assumed power.

The sources pointed out that Algerian officials are currently holding a series of meetings with representatives of the Palestinian factions to arrange for the Palestinian national dialogue conference recently called for by the Algerian president and which has been welcomed by most Palestinian factions. However, the sources said that George Habash's PFLP [Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine] stipulates the annulment of the Amman agreement as a condition for holding the conference. However, Algeria wants to bring all Palestinian factions together to discuss everything and to use the Aden-Algiers agreement as the basis for achieving Palestinian national unity.

Visits Treptow Memorial

LD182201 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1430 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin's Treptow Park. Above the trees, which owing to this year's late spring have not yet come into leaf, rises the lyrical monument: A Soviet soldier, in his bullet-riddled protective cape, holding a sword that has cleft the hated swastika, with a child whom he has rescued in his arms. This is the way he came to Berlin, via the hard roads of war in the unforgettable spring of 1945. And in this guise, as the warrior-liberator, he has remained forever in the memory of humanity. [video shows Treptow cemetery]

Today the delegates and foreign guests of the 11th SED Congress went to Treptow Park to pay their tribute of memory and deepest respect to the immortal exploits of the Soviet Army.

With the leaders of the SED went the delegations of fraternal parties and democratic and national liberation movements of over 100 states. The CPSU delegation was led by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev. Wreaths and bouquets of flowers were laid at the foot of the monument.

[Video shows close-ups of monument, with Soviet sentries guarding it; large group of people approaches from far end of park, led by two parties of soldiers, of the Soviet and GDR Armies, carrying wreaths; soldier mount steps to lay wreaths, while large group of dignitaries stand to attention below for Soviet and GDR national anthems, during which the uniformed military men among them, Soviet and GDR stand at salute. Camera focuses on Gorbachev and Honecker; also visible are Vayno, Medvedev, and Mengistu; others unidentified]

The national anthems of the USSR and the GDR were played. Nobody and nothing has been forgotten. The memory of the heroes is sacred.

Attends German Youth Rally

[Text] The CPSU Central Committee delegation headed by party General Secretary Comrade Gorbachev, which is in Berlin now, today visited the memorial cemetery of fighters of the German revolutionary movement in Friedriechsfelde. The delegation laid a wreath at a memorial there. Along with GDR leaders, the CPSU delegation honored the memory of prominent figures of the German and international communist movement with a minute of silence.

Comments on Prospects for U.S. Summit

LD202103 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Report on CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev's visit to GDR National Economic Institute in Potsdam on 20 April; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] At the 11th SED Congress today discussion of the draft directive of the plan for the development of the GDR economy for the period 1986-90 came to an end. The delegates unanimously confirmed this important document which outlines the prospects for the construction of a developed socialist society in the republic.

Today the CPSU delegation led by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev visited the Central Institute for the Socialist Management of the National Economy attached to the SED Central Committee.

[Begin recording] [Gorbachev] Good day. Thank you for the warm welcome. Well, you know that we are here at the invitation of the Central Committee of your party. Insofar as the plans of the party, the ruling party, are the most immediate matter for the whole people, it touches on the interests of all of the people. I would like to congratulate you on the good results that were under discussion at the congress; you have worked well. And [I also want to] congratulate you on your good prospects. You know, when a man has a completely clear view of the future, how the country, the enterprise and the family will live — this is a great thing.

All of us are so spoiled by socialism that we often forget about this, we have become so accustomed to it; but it is a great thing, both the achievements of today and the very good prospects. And so I wish you happiness, fine accomplishments — well, you will have to work a bit, as I understand it. I am now standing before you, and I want to repeat what I said to the congress: The CPSU and the Soviet people are in favor of continuing to strengthen our friendship, so that this may result in new successes and happiness for the people of the GDR, for the Soviet people, and I think that this has enormous significance, both for Europe and for the situation in the world. [applause] [end recording]

The delegation became acquainted with various departments and laboratories of the institute and with its computer center. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev showed a detailed interest in the organization of the educational process and in scientific research. Having wished the collective of the institute new creative successes, he signed the book for honored guests.

The CPSU delegation also visited today the Cecilienhof Castle in Potsdam, where the conference between the leaders of the three powers of the anti-Hitler coalition took place following the rout of fascism. Today there is a museum in the castle, visited by about 500,000 visitors annually from all over the world.

The heads of government of the USSR, the United States, and Great Britain met in July 1945 in this former palace of the Polish Princess Cecilie. The conference sessions were held in the main hall. They ended with the signing of the Potsdam Agreement on the demilitarization, de-Nazification, and democratization of Germany.

Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev made an entry in the museum's book to honored guests.

Moscow TASS in English at 1945 on 20 April adds the following:

Mikhail Gorbachev made the following entry in the honorary visitors' book of the museum:

"We have been deeply impressed by the acquaintance with the Cecilienhof -- the site of the Potsdam conference which became the symbol of the defeat of fascism and of the establishment of a just peace in Europe. The conference also provided an example of the possibility of cooperation between states belonging to different social systems."

"The assertions that 'the Potsdam and Yalta had split Europe' are in full contradiction with the truth. They created conditions for a peaceful, free and democratic development of all countries in Europe. Europe was split by the West's striving for military superiority and by attempts to revive West German militarism. The Soviet Union, just like the entire socialist community, will not slacken its efforts to overcome the split and to consolidate detente on the basis of further development of the all-European process."]

[Begin recording] [Gorbachev] I think that everyone who comes here is compelled to go back to history, especially in this spot, where the bloodiest war in the history of mankind ended. One cannot but reflect here upon mankind, upon the destiny of the world.

You have reminded us of the good words that were spoken at that time, and recalled the words with which the leaders of the powers of the anti-Hitler coalition took their leave of one another. These one could repeat here now. On the one hand, [there have been] 40 years of peace in Europe, although conflicts have taken place in the world and are still taking place. This is in itself a great victory for peace-loving forces, and, I think, is the great contribution of the socialist countries, as well as of all other peace-loving forces.

On the other hand, we know that the time which we live is a very dangerous and alarming one; some people are once agains thinking up plans and again entertaining illusions of attaining military supremacy and being in command of the world. And if one takes into account the fact that all this is taking place in the nuclear age, then what can such a policy lead to?

For all those who hold peace dear and who remember the sacrifices with which it was won, the main thing now is to do everything to ensure that the sacrifices made in World War II, the results of which were signed here -- summed up here -- were not in vain. There is food for thought here.

In this very place, at this very moment, I would like to say that one of the great results of post-war construction, in terms of the results of the war, is the modern GDR, the socialist GDR, our great friend and a mighty factor of peace in the center of Europe. However, one must think of the future.

I think that your congress is dedicated to this.

One of the delegates said yesterday -- and I even made a note of it on my notepad -- peace will be stronger if socialism is stronger. But socialism itself needs peace, in order to reveal its potential. Good words, those. True words.

This is, perhaps, the theme resounding at the congress. This theme resounded at the 27th party congress, and at the other congresses of our fraternal parties.

I think that this, and our plans for the future, are the best indication of what our peoples are thinking, for what they are striving. We will not just think, but also do everything possible to preserve peace. [applause] [end recording]

[Correspondent] After looking around the Cecilienhof Museum, Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, replying to Western journalists' questions about the prospects for another Soviet-U.S. summit meeting, said:

[Begin recording] [Gorbachev] For a meeting to be held, an appropriate atmosphere in international relations is needed, as well as a real hope that at that meeting we can take a new step. If the American Administration realizes that this is the road that needs to be followed, we are prepared for that. If it continues what it is doing today, with its attempts to explode the international situation and exacerbate it, to disperse the spirit of Geneva, then it seems to me that this could deprive of value all plans for a future meeting. Let them think about this in Washington. We will not hold things up. We are ready for serious steps. And I think you are familiar with our new proposals that I put forward at the SED Congress. We are ready to take real steps toward peace. [end recording]

Meets Honecker

LD210605 Moscow TASS in English 0555 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 21 TASS -- Makhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, and Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, chairman of the GDR Council of State, met in Berlin on April 20.

They discussed questions pertaining to a further deepening of cooperation between the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, the USSR and the GDR. Views were exchanged on topical international issues.

The meeting proceeded in a cordial atmosphere.

TASS REPORTS HONECKER ADDRESS TO 11TH SED CONGRESS

LD180341 Moscow TASS in English 1416 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 17 TASS — The goal of the peaceful foreign policy of the German Democratic Republic is to ensure felicitous external conditions for the continuing effort to build a developed socialist society in the G.D.R. This was stated in a report of the SUPG (Socialist Unity Party of Germany) Central Committee delivered to the 11th SUPG Congress by Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SUPG Central Committee, today.

For the years to come the SUPG and the G.D.R. set forth as the top-priority foreign policy tasks consistent work for arms limitation and disarmament, for averting a nuclear war and preventing the militarization of outer space, for developing the fraternal alliance with the U.S.S.R. and other socialist countries, and for promoting an allround strengthening and growth of the might and international prestige of socialism.

"We," Erich Honecker said, "stand for:

-- The complete termination of nuclear tests considering it to be the first step toward ridding the world of nuclear weapons;

-- A halt to the deployment and a gradual dismantling of the nuclear weapon systems already sited in Europe;

-- The limination of all medium-range missiles set up in Europe;

-- The establishment of zones free from nuclear and chemical weapons;

-- The establishment in central Europe of a zone free from battlefield nuclear weapons;

-- A radical improvement of the international situation and effective guarantees of security of nations."

The speaker noted that the wide-scale Soviet initiatives designed to rid mankind by the year 2000 of all types of nuclear weapons and establish a system of international security opened up a new phase in international development.

"We whole-heartedly approve the proposals put forward by Mikhail Gorbachev and endorsed by the 27th Congress of the CPSU, and are taking part in their realization," Erich Honecker said. "They are fully in line with our ideal of a world without weapons and violence, a world in which every nation is free to decide the question concerning ways of development it will take."

The speaker further said that the G.D.R. would continue to develop cooperation with all CMEA (Council for Mutual Economic Assistance) countries within the framework of socialist economic integration.

Relying on it, Erich Honecker emphasized, the G.D.R. favors further expansion of economic ties with all other countries interested in equitable and mutually beneficial economic cooperation.

"In doing so," the speaker said, "we regard economic ties as an important element of peaceful coexistence."

Touching on the U.S. attack on Libya, Erich Honecker stated: "Barbaric U.S. Air Force bombing strikes at peaceful Libyan cities with innocent people killed and injured in consequence are an act of aggression which causes well-justified indignation and exasperation."

The raids of U.S. warplanes on targets in Libya demonstrate that international peace is becoming less and less stable as a result of imperialism's adventuresome power politics, the speaker said.

From the rostrum of the congress Erich Honecker stated solidarity of the G.D.R. with the anti-imperialist struggle of the Libyan people.

The report noted that after the 10th SUPG congress the German Democratic Republic continued developing successfully as a politically stable socialist country with a highly efficient economy. The plan for 1981-1985 was successfully fulfilled. The fact that the national income in the six months of the previous year equalled the national income for the entire year 1970 attests to the achievements of the country. All the aspects of society's life were further upgraded.

The report formulated the economic strategy of the socialist unity party of Germany for the period ending in 2000. This strategy underlies the guidelines for the 1986-1990 five-year plan.

FURTHER REACTION TO UK SUPPORT FOR LIBYA RAID

Support 'Vicious in Principle'

LD180528 Moscow TASS in English 1214 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] London April 17 TASS -- TASS correspondent Aleksandr Yevstigneyev reports:

Opening an emergency debate in British Parliament, held in answer to the demand of the opposition, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was doing her utmost in an attempt at justifying the U.S. attack against Libya and the role played in it by the British Government.

Labour Opposition Leader Neil Kinnock stressed that the U.S. bombing of Libya was crude contravention of the norms of international law. By allowing the United States to use British territory for a strike against Libya, the government disregarded the consequences of this extremely dangerous step as well as international public opinion, the opinion of Britain's allies in Europe and of the Arab countries, he stressed.

Eric Heffer, a Labour Party MP, described the U.S. aggression against Libya as an act of institutionalized terrorism. The adventurist policy of the United States is a source of enormous threat, including to the European nations, he said.

David Steel, the Liberal Party leader, drew attention to the fact that the U.S. military "operation" had been a blow to international relations. As a result, he said, it has become impossible, for example, to hold at present a scheduled meeting between the Soviet foreign minister and the U.S. secretary of state.

It was vicious in principle that Britain violated international law by supporting the United States and its aggression, which has resulted in losses of life among peaceful Libyan population, stressed David Owen, the Social Democratic Party leader. According to James Callaghan, a former Labour prime minister, and Edward Heath, a former Tory prime minister, Britain should not have allowed U.S. aircraft to take off from her territory for a raid on Libya.

EEC Ministers React

LD180903 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1645 GMT 17 Apr 86

[From the "International Diary" program presented by Vladimir Pasko]

[Excerpt] The situation in the Mediterranean has become a subject of discussion at the emergency meeting of foreign ministers of Common Market countries, which opened today in Paris. As AFP reports, many of the Community members condemn the stance of London, which allowed its territory to be used for mounting the strike against Libya. A union with the Republican donkey [as heard] -- this, if you recall, is the emblem of the party at present in power in the United States -- clearly detracts from the prestige of the British lion in Europe. Tindemans, the Belgian external relations minister, accused Britain of double-dealing, pointing out that its actions went against the position agreed upon by EEC foreign ministers on the eve of the U.S. raid on Libya. The sincerity of the indignation being expressed at the moment in West Europe raises no doubts. It is impossible not to agree with the French LE MATIN, which notes that Western European countries that are U.S. NATO allies, were just not able to clearly define their position in time -- practically deciding not to interfere in the Mediterranean conflict -- but, in the end, were drawn into it.

The Soviet Union has long been calling on West Europeans to look critically on the way things stand. This call once again was clearly made during the meeting a few days ago between Comrade Gorbachev and Carlsson, the prime minister of Sweden. Passivity or, what is more, connivance or complicity in such actions as the U.S. armed aggression against Libya, threatens international relations with disorder. This would have unforseeable consequences. The position of the Soviet Union toward the events in the Mediterranean has received praise from Libya. We are eternally grateful to Grobachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, for his message to Al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, which expresses the full support of the Soviet Union in the fight of the Liyban people against the barbaric aggression of the United States, Mansur, secretary of the People's Bureau of Foreign Liaison of the Supreme People's Committee of Libya told a TASS correspondent in Delhi. He is head of the Libyan delegation at the meeting of the Coordination Bureau of the nonaligned countries.

KARPOV CONDUCTS DISARMAMENT TALKS IN BRITAIN

[TASS report: "Arrival of Delegation"]

[Text] A delegation of the Greens Party (FRG) comprising L. Beckmann, J. Ditfurth, and R. Trampert, its three cochairmen, and N. Kostede, a member of the party's board, arrived in Moscow 13 April at the CPSU Central Committee's invitation. The delegation was met at the airport by I.T. Frolov, member of the CPSU Central Committee and chief editor of the journal KOMMUNIST, V.S. Shaposhnikov, deputy chief of the CPSU Central Committee International Section, and senior officials of the CPSU Central Committee.

Yeltsin Receives Greens

LD190027 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Report from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] Comrade Yeltsin today received a delegation of the Greens Party (FRG). During the conversation, the guests were given detailed information about the work of the Moscow Gorkom and all the working people of the capital in putting into practice the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress in the social, economic, and spiritual spheres. The talk passed in a friendly atmosphere.

Zimyanin, Zagladin Meet Delegation

PM210852 PRAVDA in Russian 20 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[Text] A concluding conversation with the delegation of the leadership of the Greens Party (FRG) was held in the CPSU Central Committee on 18 April. The delegation is now visiting the Soviet Union. Taking part in the conversation were Mikhail Zimyanin, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee; Vadim Zagladin, member of the CPSU Central Committee, first deputy head of the International Department of the CPSU Central Committee; from the West German side -- Lukas Beckmann, Jutta Dittfurt, Reiner Trampert, co-chairman of the Greens Party, and Norbert Kostede, member of the party's board.

The attention of the guests was drawn to the fundamental matters of the domestic and foreign policy of the CPSU and to the party's activities in implementation of the decisions adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress. It was emphasized that in the face of the world's ordeals, through the fault of imperialist forces, the main task is to avert the threat of war, to ensure a peaceful future, and to guarantee mankind's survival. The CPSU's general line in the international arena and the entire foreign policy of the Soviet Union is oriented to precisely this task.

Having condemned the irresponsible actions of the militarist circles of the United States and other NATO countries, which take one action after another with the aim of destabilizing the situation and poisoning the atmosphere in the world and frustrating the peoples' hopes for relaxation of tension, the hopes which appeared as a result of the summit meeting in Geneva, the representatives of the CPSU pointed out that the program for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons, advanced by the USSR, and other Soviet proposals in the field of disarmament are free of one-sided calculations, national or bloc ones. Their implementation does not infringe on any country but meets the interests of all countries and all mankind. Only political will by the West is needed for an end to the arms race to become a reality in our time, the CPSU representatives emphasized. This is precisely what is lacking either in Washington, Bonn, or in some other capitals of NATO countries.

The leaders of the Greens Party stated that they share the concern of the Soviet leadership over the tense situation that had taken shape in the world. They strongly condemned the U.S. "star wars" plans and Washington's disregard for the calls of the USSR and the world public for an end to nuclear explosions. Setting out the views of their party, the delegation members declared their support for the adoption of urgent measures against the arms race and for the establishment of constructive cooperation between countries in various fields -- political, economic, cultural, humanitarian, and in the sphere of environmental protection.

The sides resolutely denounced the U.S. piratic actions against the sovereign state of Libya, Washington's reliance on force in settling any matters in relations between countries, methods of terrorism, including those of state terrorism, which are used against states and governments that are considered unsuitable, and the most flagrant violation of international law.

The representatives of the CPSU and the delegation of the Greens Party were unanimous that in the present acute international situation the peace-loving peoples, public forces, parties, mass organizations, and parliaments must raise their voices in full vigor in a demand to restrain the militarist forces, to issue a rebuff to great power chauvinism, hegemonism and "neoglobalism," and to bring the world back to the road of detente and cooperation. Any blindness caused by bellicosity may have fatal consequences for the world.

The delegation of the Greens Party expressed satisfaction with their visit to the USSR and with the meetings they had with Soviet representatives in Moscow and Leningrad.

The sides agreed that contacts between the CPSU and the Greens Party should be continued in the future as well.

The conversation took place in a spirit of frankness and mutual understanding.

INDIGNATION EXPRESSED AT U.S. RAIDON LIBYA; REPORTS

Jallud Speaks to Press

LD191147 Moscow TASS in English 0846 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 19 TASS -- U.S. aggression against the Libyan people has been a moral, political and military failure, 'Abd al-Salam Jallud, a member of Libya's revolutionary leadership, told a news conference here. He said that the United States has not been able to force the Libyan people to abandon their positions of principle and that Libya will continue to give support for nations fighting for their national emancipation and seek Arab unity and a just solution to the Palestinian problem.

Jallud refuted the U.S. Administration's false charges of Libyan involvement in acts of terrorism in Western Europe and the Middle East. He said the U.S. attack on the Libyan Jamahiriyah has made it clear to the whole world that it is the United States that follows a policy of state terrorism. President Reagan, he said, has personally ordered the raids on Tripoli, Banghazi and other Libyan cities, which have left 37 people killed and another 93 wounded.

Jallud accused the British Government of complicity in the crime.

He expressed the Libyan people's unshakeable confidence in their ultimate victory in the fight for freedom and independence and against U.S. aggression.

Al-Humaydi Addresses Funeral

LD191153 Moscow TASS in English 0955 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 19 TASS -- By TASS special correspondents Vladimir Bogachev and Georgiy Shelenkov: Libyans Friday paid their last respects to compatriots killed in U.S. barbarous air raids. Thousands of people marched through Tripoli streets, chanting: "Reagan is a child killer" and "Disgrace on America."

Speaking at a funeral meeting at the El Gani memorial cemetery, Maj Al-Khuwaylidi al-Humaydi,a member of Libya's revolutionary leadership, said: "Washington has sent its aircraft-carriers to our shores and hurled armadas of planes against the peaceful residential areas of our cities. But the U.S. Administration's attempts to force the Libyan people to their knees are doomed to failure."

The thousands of mourners pledged at the graves of the victims of U.S. aggression to carry on the fight for their homeland's freedom and independence.

People's Committee Protests Raid

LD201123 Moscow TASS in English 1057 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 20 TASS — The People's Committee for Communications and Sea-Going Transport of Libya has firmly protested against the continuing piratic actions of the carrier-based aircraft of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the area of the Mediterranean, which pose a grave threat to civilian flights in that area and the safety of passengers. A note, addressed to the international civil aviation organization, stressed that the banditry of American carrion crows, specifically their mission and bomb raids on the Tripoli and Banghazi airports are a very gross violation of international agreements and conventions.

The document cites facts of American war planes' using civilian airliners as a cover up for entry into Libyan airspace. Such a violation took place on April 17 when an air pirate from an aircraft carrier of the Sixth Fleet was discovered when it tried to approach Libyan airspace under the cover of a Yugoslav air company plane which was on its way to Tripoli.

Nonaligned Delegation Arrives

LD210554 Moscow TASS in English 0539 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 21 TASS -- A special delegation of the Non-Aligned Movement that includes foreign ministers of India, Yugoslavia, Cuba, Senegal, Ghana, and the Congo has arrived in the capital of Libya.

Bali Ram Bhagat, head of the delegation, minister of foreign affairs of India, said that they had arrived to express solidarity with and support for the Government and people of Libya on the part of non-aligned countries in the face of the unprovoked and flagrant violation by the United States of the territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence of Libya.

He also said that the delegation sent by participants in the session of the Coordination Bureau of the non-aligned countries on the level of foreign ministers that had come to a close in New Delhi was planning to meet the Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and then go to New York. There it will urge the U.N. Secretary General to immediately put an end to armed provocations against Libya.

Soviet Ship Departs for Libya

LD181358 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1300 GMT 13 Apr 86

[Text] The Soviet MV Akademik Artsimovich has departed for Libya transporting cement, motor vehicles, and machine tools. Berdyansk dockers prepared it for sailing ahead of schedule. Waiting to be dispatched are tens of thousands more metric tons of peaceful cargo, which our country is supplying for the friendly state according to a bilateral cooperation treaty. The dockers angrily condemned the U.S. aircraft's piratical raid on Libya at a meeting.

Parliamentary Group Comments

LD181422 Moscow TASS in English 1031 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS -- The USSR Parliamentary Group, its Soviet-Arab section issued a statement expressing profound indignation at the new brutal crime of the U.S. militarists -- the bandit air raid on Libya, a sovereign Arab state, and the cruel bombing of its peaceful cities.

By attacking the Libyan Jamahiriyah, the USA has again appeared as the main culprit of the escalation of international tensions, irresponsibly playing with the destinies of millions of people for the sake of satisfying its imperial ambitions, said the statement.

The USSR Parliamentary Group resolutely condemns the American aggression against Libya and demands an immediate end to it. Expressing its full solidarity with the friendly Arab country fighting for its independence, the USSR Parliamentary Group urges all MPs, all people of goodwill to raise the voice of protest against the aggression of the United States which is trying to force by means of arms its will on the people of the Libyan Jamahiriyah, the statement says.

Soviet People Express Support

LD181648 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1400 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Today representatives of Soviet public organizations visited the People's Bureau of the Libyan Jamahiriyah in Moscow and had a meeting with Maghrawi, Libya's charge d'affaires in the USSR. Envoys from the Afro-Asian Solidarity Committee, the Peace Committee, the Soviet Women's Committee, the Youth Committees, and the AUCCTU on behalf of millions of Soviet people expressed their solidarity with the Libyan people and angrily condemned the U.S. bandit action against a sovereign Mediterranean state. Statements of support for the Libyan Jamahiriyah from the Soviet mass public organizations and copies of telegrams, which have been recieved from thousands of solidarity meetings, were handed over to the People's Bureau. Maghrawi thanked them for the support that has been shown and stated that Libya values highly the demonstrations by Soviet people in defense of Libya.

'Many' Civilians Hit by Bombers

LD181426 Moscow in English to North America 2300 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Excerpts] The White House is up against the wall for the atrocities committed by the U.S. Air Force in Tripoli, Banghazi, and other towns. Many civilians, including children, women and old people were killed and badly wounded by bombs and air-to-ground missiles from some 30 combat planes.

The American military came up with a laughable story that the damage to residential areas was done by Libyan SAM's. Supposedly they were launched vertically and then, after missing targets, fell back to the ground, their warheads exploding on the roofs and strees. For American officials to be caught lying is nothing unusual. Surface-to-air missiles carry fragmentation warheads to knock down fragile aircraft. What is more, in case of a miss, they auto-detonate and never fall straight down. So, to suggest that the Libyans inflicted casualties on themselves while gallant American flyers bombed and strafed targets only when they were 100 percent sure they were military is, pardon the expression, pure baloney.

There is more reason to suggest that confronted with heavy antiaircraft fire that they never expected those cowboys riding high-tech planes were not as cool as they are now described. It has been admitted that the crew of the downed F-111 dropped their ordnance on civilian areas right after they were hit. So did other pilots to disengage themselves as quickly as possible and each of the 18 F-111's carried over 11 metric tons of bombs and missiles.

Al-Qadhdhafi Death Sought

LD181532 Moscow World Service in English 1310 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Excerpt] More details have been emerging of American aggression against Libya. In Tripoli, Banghazi, (?Al Alous), and Tarhuna bulldozers continued to clear the ruins. In the overcrowded city [not further identified] hospitals, doctors are fighting for the lives of the wounded, maimed, and burned. Some of the victims have the chance of pulling through. Others are joining the long list of the dead. These are the results of the American air raids on Libya, which Washington now presents as its victory. According to the French news agency, last Tuesday alone more than 100 tons of bombs and some 50 rockets were released on Tripoli and Banghazi. The victims of the night bombings were innocent civilians including women and children. Foreign journalists who visited the affected residential areas of Tripoli personally saw the bodies of the dead and the smoking ruins of buildings.

The aggressor used fragmentation and pellet bombs meant for mass destruction of humans. The casualties are not limited to Libyans: They include four members of the Romanian Embassy, a wife [as heard] of the Italian consul, and a West German. Damage has been inflicted on the buildings of the French and Romanian missions and on the residences of the ambassadors of Switzerland, Finland, and Austria.

As THE WASHINGTON POST has reported, the objective of the attack was to kill Al-Qadhdhafi. What's more, the National Security Council had even prepared a draft statement in advance in which the death of the Libyan leader was described as accidental. This has now been revealed by members of the U.S. Administration. The operation, codenamed Canyon El Dorado, was [words indistinct] on orders personally signed by President Reagan. When generals asked him if they could start the attack on Monday night, Reagan is reported to have said: Fine, Monday will be okay. That imperial okay has caused not only the spilling of innocent blood, it has caused a worldwide storm of indignation which like a boomerang has hit at the United States. Washington's actions have been condemned by the governments and parliaments of dozens of countries. Millions of people all over the world have staged demonstrations to protest against American terrorism.

Tripoli Remains Alert

LD182349 Moscow TASS in English 2259 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 18 TASS -- By TASS correspondent Georgiy Shelenkov: The past twenty-four hours were relatively calm. Relatively, because the blasts of anti-aircraft shells were heard for several minutes over the city at 9 p.m. as spy planes were probably spotted again in the sky.

The evening television news programme showed the leader of the Libyan revolution, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, visiting Tripoli's Central Hospital. The hospital provided treatment for people multilated by American shells and bombs. Among them were old men, women and children. Al-Qadhdhafi came up to every one of them, and those who were able to speak, assured him, "We are not broken. They haven't scared us." The visit to the hospital turned into a demonstration "America, hands off Libya," chanted the wounded, their physicians and nurses.

Television yesterday showed fragments of American bombs. None of these exhibits, said the newscaster, hit a military facility. They were all retrieved in the ruins of apartment houses. The death-dealing shells, he said, were intended for Libyan civilians, for foreign friends who were living and working in Tripoli. The marking, visible on the bomb stabilizers, was yet another piece of evidence of who carried out the sinister mission.

In the morning I revisited the district of Ben Ashur that was hit hardest in the American air raid. The cosy garden, a haven for local kids, was hardly recognizable. The swings were destroyed, trees uprooted, the ground ploughed by bombs and missiles.

"We were all asleep," said a resident from a nearby house, Said Lutfi, "When that started. It was a hell. I heard a terrible noise in the children's room. A metal bar of the outdoor swing flew into the room through wooden shutters. It was mere luck that no one was hurt. But the nearby house collapsed, killing all its inhabitants, a whole family."

The dead were buried today in the city's central cemetery. Thousands of Tripoli residents came to bid their last farewell. Life in the city remains tense. The Libyan air-defence forces remain on high alert. Their radars still register planes taking off from the aircraft-carriers Coral Sea and America and heading toward the Liyban coast. The threat of new piratic raids remains.

Bomb Explodes Near Airport

LD200908 Moscow TASS in English 0846 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 20 TASS — An aerial bomb, dropped during the recent barbaric raid by the U.S. aviation on peaceful Libyan cities, exploded in a residential neighbourhood in the area of Tripoli international airport last night. An official Libyan spokesman told a press conference that the bomb blast injured three people, among them two children. Seventeen dud U.S. fragmentation bombs are reported to have been detected in the area of the airport.

Number of Victims Grows

LD202322 Moscow TASS in English 1808 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 20 TASS -- TASS correspondents Vladimir Bogachev and Georgiy Shelenkov report: Incessant rain, unusual for this time of the year, set in the Libyan capital last night. In the blocks that suffered from the U.S. barbarous bombardment, rain-water was washing brick dust and plaster off the streets near the ruins of houses and draining off in turbid torrents into bomb and rocket craters.

At that time a large group of foreign jouranlists was returning in several buses from Bin Qashir area where they visited the small hamlet of (Shawat) which is located amid orange plantations five kilometers north-east of the international airport, as well as a nearby farm. It was on those nooks -- the very embodiment of peaceful life and peasant labor -- that U.S. bombs and rockets had been dropped on the night of April 14 to 15. Bomb and missile fragments with inscriptions in English were collected in piles near fresh craters, and some of them put on a specially brought long table for everyone to see. An unexploded rocket was lying at the back of an orange orchard. "That night", Fellah Bahsawi al-Marghani told Soviet journalists, "all residents of our village popped out of their houses upon hearing the thunder of explosions. Luckily, everyone survived. However, five people were injured and several buildings and household structures destroyed". Three-year old son Saleh of Milud Muhammad Hasan was wounded during the bombing. "What do you now think about Reagan?" a Western woman journalist asked him. The reply given by the Libyan fellah as well as the wrathful words uttered by other peasants who survived the terrible night left no doubt that the barbarous act committed by the U.S. military on a personal order from the occupant of the White House would never fade from the memory of the Libyan people.

Life has practically come back to normal in the streets of the capital. Trading is brisk in the meat and vegetable stalls. In the central thoroughfare bearing the name of national hero of Libya Omar Mukhtar, several people drink tea or coffee at the tables set directly on the street. A fresh pasted poster-announcement, near which passers-by gathered, attracted our attention on the wall of a low-built house in Fashlum Street where a small bakery is located. Those are instructions in the event of an air raid. There is also a warning to people not to pick up any attractive-looking objects — purses, ball-pens or children's toys — on the streets. The announcement has it that they may explode at touch. Such "souvenirs" had been dropped for the people of the Libyan capital by pilots of U.S. aircraft. This warning is not fortuitous. Last night in Ben Ashur district, where on April 15 U.S. bombs and rockets fell, two boys found some red ball-like object which they decided to show to a passer-by. The "object" exploded. One of the boys was heavily wounded and the passer-by had his left hand torn off. In Tripoli's Central Hospital, where there are now thirty people — victims of the U.S. bombing, three persons died of wounds in the past days. Four people, among them an eleven-year old boy, are in a critical condition. U.S. aircraft do not appear in the skies over Tripoli. However, the number of victims of the recent bandit raids on the Libyan capital continues to grow.

IRAQI LEADER RAMADAN CONCLUDES VISIT TO MOSCOW

Meeting With Ryzhkov

LD191142 Moscow TASS in English 1101 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 19 TASS — Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, today received in the Kremlin Taha Yasin Ramadan, a member of the Revolutionary Command Council and first deputy prime minister of the Republic of Iraq who is staying in Moscow on an official visit.

During their conversation, which covered questions of developing relations between the USSR and Iraq in various fields, they outlined ways of further upgrading and strengthening mutually beneficial economic, scientific and technological cooperation.

During an exchange of opinions on international politics, Nikolay Ryzhkov stressed that efforts to remove the nuclear threat and change the international situation radically for the better are pivotal to the Soviet Union's foreign-policy strategy charted by the 27th Congress of the CPSU.

Taha Yasin Ramadan declared the Iraqi Government support for Soviet initiatives and efforts to completely eliminate nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction and prevent another world war.

Both sides condemned U.S. aggressive actions against Libya, a sovereign Arab nation. The urgent need was stressed for an immediate end to the U.S. aggression which is creating a grave threat to peace and international security.

Arkhipov Concludes Talks

LD191631 Moscow TASS in English 1621 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 19 TASS — Talks have closed today between Ivan Arkhipov, first deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, and Taha Yasin Ramadan, member of the Revolutionary Command Council, first deputy prime minister of the Iraqi Republic.

Ivan Arkhipov and Taha Yasin Ramadan expressed satisfaction with the development of friendly relations existing between the Soviet Union and Iraq and reaffirmed the mutual wish to strengthen them in accordance with the treaty of friendship and cooperation. Special attention was devoted to questions pertaining to a further development of trade-economic and scientific-technological cooperation on a mutually beneficial basis.

Today Yaha Yasin Ramadan has left the Soviet Union.

TOLKUNOV-LED DELEGATION TOURS TUNISIA

LD200413 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0650 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Tunis, 19 Apr (TASS) -- A Soviet parliamentary delegation headed by L.N. Tolkunov, chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Council of the Union is touring Tunisia. It has visited the towns of Sousse and Monastir, major centers of the country's light industry and crafts, also well-known for historical monuments from the Phoenician, Roman, Byzantine, and Arabic cultures.

The Soviet parliamentarians met the governors of the two provinces, and discussed the prospects for the development of Soviet-Tunisian cooperation, specifically between the public of two twin towns, Dushanbe and Monastir.

AL-JUMAYYIL DISCUSSES UNIFIL WITH SOVIET ENVOY

LD182111 Moscow TASS in English 1932 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Beirut April 18 TASS -- President Amin al-Jumayyil of Lebanon has expressed gratitude to the Soviet Union for its support for the efforts aimed at solving the problem of the occupied south of the country, and for the USSR's stand with regard to an extension of the mandate of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

Amin al-Jumayyil stated this on Thursday when receiving Aleksandr Soldatov, the ambassador of the USSR to Lebanon, who paid a parting visit to the president.

Earlier a high appraisal of the Soviet Union's stand in matters concerning an extension of the mandate and the funding of the UNIFIL had been given by Prime Minister Rashid Karami and Nabih Birri, minister for South Lebanese Affairs, Reconstruction, Water and Electrical Resources, and Justice.

FOREIGN MINISTRY OFFICIAL WELCOMES UAE EMBASSY

GF190612 Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD in Arabic 18 Apr 86 p 3

["Exclusive" report from Moscow]

[Text] A senior official at the USSR Foreign Ministry has stated that there are no technical reasons preventing the opening of a UAE Embassy in Moscow. Valeriy Sukhin, deputy chief of the Press Department at the USSR Foreign Ministry, said that his country welcomes the practical steps by the UAE to open an embassy. He added: The Soviet diplomatic mission arrived in Abu Dhabi and is awaiting the nomination of an ambassador. He affirmed that diplomatic representation between the two countries would play a great role in increasing the exchange of trade between the two countries and in developing relations between them to serve the interests of the two peoples in all fields.

Concerning the Iraq-Iran war, Sukhin said that the USSR's principled stand is that it is a meaningless war which harms the interests of the two peoples and those of all peoples and countries in the region.

Concerning the Middle East crisis, he said: A just and comprehensive peace in the region cannot be achieved except by the Arab people and countries and not by the USSR, the United States, or any other party.

Concerning the reaons for not restoring diplomatic representation between Moscow and Riyadh, Sukhin said his country is ready to restore diplomatic representation with Saudi Arabia and that an invitation has been extended to Prince Faysal ibn Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz [chairman of the Saudi youth welfare organization] to visit the USSR. He said this visit would play a positive role in developing Saudi-USSR relations.

NICARAGUA STATES READINESS TO SIGN 'PEACE ACT'

PM141603 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 14 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[TASS report: "Nicaragua's Readiness"]

[Text] Managua, 13 Apr -- The Nicaraguan leadership has declared its readiness to sign 6 June this year the "Peace Act" drawn up by the Contadora group with the aim of reaching a peaceful settlement of the Central American conflict on the condition that the United States totally ceases its aggressive actions against the republic. Exposition of this stand is contained in a Sandinist government statement in circulation here. Reaching an agreement acceptable to all five Central American states on those points in the latest version of the "Peace Act" relating to arms control and the holding of military maneuvers in the region must also be an immutable condition of a political solution to the region's acute problems, the document stresses.

The Nicaraguan Government statement points out that it is agreeable to continuing discussion of those aspects of the situation that has taken shape in the region over which differences still exist. Nicaragua also reaffirms its readiness to quickly resume talks with the United States -- talks unilaterally broken off by that country -- on normalizing relations.

Nicaragua, it notes further, is subjected to increasingly brutal aggression from the largest imperialist power. Washington's interference in the internal affairs of Central American countries is a scandalous violation of the UN Charter and the norms of international relations. The Nicaraguan leadership urged the government of the Contadora group countries and support groups to act while taking the situation in the region into consideration.

ANTI-U.S. DEMONSTRATIONS IN NICARAGUA REPORTED

LD162315 Moscow TASS in English 0815 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Managua April 16 TASS -- The people of Nicaragua are mobilizing their forces as the Reagan administration is toughening its policy of state terrorism.

Spontaneous meetings have been held at factories and state institutions in Managua in protest against the U.S. massive bombing raids against Libya and the White House's plans to wrest from Congress millions of dollars in aid to the Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries.

U.S. imperialism was an enemy of all nations that were defending their sacred right to freedom and independent development, said Lucio Jiminez, general secretary of Nicaragua's Sandinista trade union center.

He pointed out that the United States has trampled on Grenada's freedom and was encroaching on the sovereignty of Libya and Nicaragua. But it would fail to subordinate these countries to its diktat, he added.

The United States was again encroaching upon the elementary norms of international law, said Julio Lopes, head of the International Department of the Sandinista National Liberation Front.

In an interview with the newspaper, BARRICADA, he observed that irrespective of the outcome the debates at U.S. Congress on new allocations for the Somocista mercenaries were unlawful and immoral, and infringing the sovereignty of all of Latin America.

The Reagan administration, Lopes said, was setting on the escalation of the criminal war against Nicaragua, thus enhancing the threat of large-scale armed confrontation in the Central American region.

LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRIES CONDEMN ATTACK ON LIBYA

LD180800 Moscow TASS in English 0740 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Mexico City April 17 TASS -- A mass demonstration was held in the Mexican capital in protest against the U.S. bandit aggression against Libya. Demonstrators, chanting "murderers, hands off Libya," burned the U.S. flag outside the U.S. Embassy building.

Lima April 17 TASS -- The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies of Peru's congress have issued a special resolution condemning the U.S. aggression against Libya and calling it a threat to peace. The Chamber of Deputies urged the government to spearhead an international movement for ending aggressive actions against Libya.

Rio de Janeiro April 17 TASS -- Brazil's progressive forces resolutely condemn the U.S. aggression against Libya, Custodio Gomes Sobrinho, chairman of the Brazilian Society of Friendship and Cultural Links with the USSR, said in a TASS interview. The time is ripe for the people throughout the world to bring home their protests against the escalation of U.S. war preparations.

Quito April 17 TASS -- No one gave the American Administration the right to take the role of a judge and pass a verdict on a whole country and its prople, only because it dislikes the latter's independent policy, said Ecuador's former vice president, Leon Roldos Aguilera. Air raids of Libyan towns, done on President Reagan's personal orders, threaten the stability of the entire planet.

All conflicts must be solved only through peaceful means within the framework of existing international organisations, with no country assuming the right to rule the destinies of peoples.

Georgetown April 17 TASS -- Thousands of people gathered for a protest meeting outside the U.S. Embassy building in the Guyanese capital, keynoted by the slogans "hand off Libya" and "Yankees -- terrorists and murderers." A resolution, adopted by the participants in the meeting, accused Washington of pursuing a policy of state terrorism against those countries which wage struggle for genuine independence.

Buenos Aires April 17 TASS -- Thousands of people took part in a demonstration of protest here against the barbarous bombing of Libyan cities by U.S. planes. Demonstrators marched along the capital's central streets, denouncing the aggressor and demanding that the U.S. leave Libya in peace.

Havana April 17 TASS -- Meetings and demonstrations were held across Cuba in protest against the U.S. barbarous action and in solidarity with the Libyan people. The protesters regard the U.S. actions as a confirmation of the policy of state terrorism pursued by the Washington administration.

La Paz April 17 TASS -- Any armed aggression, undertaken at peacetime, aggravates the international situation and leads to the dangerous exacerbation of existing conflicts, Bolivia's Foreign Affairs Ministry pointed out in its statement. In the international year of peace, it is necessary to renounce any act of violence which may bring about unpredictable consequences for mankind.

Gromyko Reported in Hospital, Suffering From 'Chill'

AU191318 Paris AFP in English 0716 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 19 (AFP) — Soviet President Andrey Gromyko, 76, is suffering from a chill and is under observation in a Moscow hospital, diplomatic sources said here Saturday. The sources said that Mr. Gromyko, the oldest member of the Politburo, fell ill during a two-day trip to Sverdlovsk, in the Urals, on April 10 and 11.

A West German source said that the Soviet president appeared to have a heavy cold or influenza when he last appeared in public on Tuesday to receive a delegation of "Greens" from West Germany.

State Committee for Computers, Information Created

LD191443 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1350 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, 19 Apr (TASS) — The USSR State Committee for Computer Equipment and Information Technology [Gosydarstvennyy Komitet SSR po Vychislitelnoy tekhnike i Informatike] has been formed by a decree of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium.

In order to secure the technical retooling of branches of the national economy and the acceleration of scientific and technical progress on the basis of the use of computer equipment and automated systems, the CPSU Central Committee and the USSR Council of Ministers adopted a resolution "On Improving the Coordination of Work in the Sphere of Computer Technology and on Raising Efficiency in its Use." This document makes the USSR State Committee for Computer Equipment and Information Technology responsible for the implementation of a unified technological policy and for the coordination and development of work throughout the country in the sphere of the creation and utilization of computer technology.

Earthquake Shakes Shikotah; No Casualties Reported

LD170834 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 0809 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk, 17 Apr (TASS) — A strong earthquake occurred yesterday at 1653 Moscow time in the south of the Kurile chain. The center of the earthquake was in the Pacific Ocean 100 km southeast of the island of Shikotah. The force of the quake at the epicenter was about 8 points. Instruments at seismic stations on the islands of the Kurile chain registered the following strength of underground tremors: in Yuzhno-Kurilsk and Malo-Kurilsk — 5 points and in Kurilsk and the island of Iturup — 3 points. There is negligible damage to buildings. There are no casualties among the population.

Council of Ministers Critiques Plan Performances

LD181659 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1500 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] The USSR Council of Ministers held a meeting today and examined the results of the fulfillment of the state plan for the country's economic and social development and the USSR's state budget for the first quarter of 1986. Proceeding from the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress, the USSR Council of Ministers demanded that the ministries, departments, and union republics' councils of ministers implement all necessary measures to consistently and steadily put into effect the decicions of the congress, the policies of the Central Committee's political document to the party congress, and the Basic Guidelines for the Economic and Social Development of the USSR for 1986-1990 and for the Period Through the Year 2000.

Having discussed the reports of Comrade Talyzin, CPSU Central Committee Politburo candidate member, USSR Council of Ministers first deputy chairman, and Gosplan chairman, and Comrade Gostev, USSR finance minister, on the results of the national economy's work in the first quarter of the current year, the USSR Council of Ministers noted that, as a result of widely developed socialist competition and the high creative activity of labor collectives in implementing the decisions adopted by the congress, and of the carrying out of measures for establishing order and discipline, the pace of development has grown, the economy's efficiency has increased, and work is being done to raise the people's welfare.

In comparison with the same period last year, the growth of industrial output in the first quarter of the current year amounted to 6.7 percent with an envisaged 4.3 percent increase in the annual plan. The plan for marketing industrial output has been fulfilled by 102 percent. It was fulfilled by all the union republics and the industrial ministries with the exception of the Ministry of the Petroleum Industry.

Positive shifts have occurred in the key industrial branches, above all in machine building, metallurgy, and the gas industry. Coal industry workers have completed the first quarter with good results. The results of the economic activity of industrial associations and enterprises operating under the new management conditions are higher than for industry as a whole. Agricultural workers have concluded preparations for spring sowing for the most part and have begun fieldwork. Cattle wintering is coming to an end in better conditions than last year, and the productivity of social animal husbandry has risen. Industrial labor productivity has grown 6.3 percent as compared to an envisaged 4.1 percent increase in the annual plan.

An increase in productivity accounted for 94 percent of the growth of industrial production and the entire increase in the volume of freight carried on railway transport; profits also increased.

The implementation of the 12th 5-Year Plan's social program began. The average monthly pay of industrial, office, and professional workers increased 3 percent in the first quarter of the current year over the same period last year. Retail turnover increased. A large number of residential houses, schools, hospitals and children's preschool centers were built with state investments. USSR state turnover was fulfilled in the first quarter by 96.9 percent in terms of revenue and by 96 percent in terms of expenditure.

At the same time, the USSR Council of Minsiters noted that individual sectors of the national economy and a number of associations, enterprises, and organizations are slow to restructure their activities in light of the new requirements, and worked at a level below their existing potential in the first quarter of 1986. While the marketing plan for output was exceeded, the plan as a whole, when contractual and delivery obligations are considered, was underfulfilled by more than R2 billion. The greatest degree of lagging occurred in associations and enterprises of the USSR Ministry of the Petroleum Industry and the Ministry of the Timber, Pulp and Paper, and Wood Processing Industry, and the fruit and vegetable enterprises of the country's state Agro-Industrial Committee. A number of USSR ministries and departments and union republics councils of ministers failed to meet plans for new technology and fell substantially behind in the construction of projects in the social and cultural amenity sphere.

CPSU Central Committee Politburo Members Comrades Aliyev, Vorotnikov, and Zaykov, and CPSU Central Committee Secretary Comrade Biryukova, participated in the proceedings of the USSR Council of Ministers session. The meeting was addressed by Comrade Ryzhkov, CPSU Central Committee Politburo member and USSR Council of Ministers chairman.

CPSU Slogans Set Tone for May Day Preparations

PRAVDA Editorial

[Editorial: "Preparing for May Day"]

[Text] Peace, labor, May.... These simple, concise words that are dear to everyone have indissolubly merged in our minds. Now, when together with like-minded people from all countries of the earth we are preparing to greet May Day — the day of international solidarity of the working people — they resound as a symbol of loyalty to the revolutionary traditions of the workers class, a symbol of our common struggle for the sake of fraternity of the working people, for the sake of peace and social progress.

The particular tone of current May Day preparations in our country has been set by the atmosphere of creativity, initiative, and bold searching created by the 27th CPSU Congress. The decisions taken by it permeate the CPSU Central Committee May Day slogans published yesterday. The party urges:

Workers of the Soviet Union! Let us embody the historic decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress in practice!

Communists are urged to be in the vanguard of the struggle to fulfill the congress decisions and to establish the pure and honest image of the party member through their own personal examples. News from labor collectives and party organizations convincingly shows that the majority of them are persistently working today to implement the party's plans and the large-scale tasks set by the congress to accelerate the country's socioeconomic development and achieve a qualitatively new condition of our society. Nevertheless, only the first steps have been taken so far. Efforts must be increased and the energy of plans translated into the energy of practical action. The main condition of putting the congress decisions into practice is creative work, a high degree of organization, discipline, and working to full capacity.

The CPSU Central Committee urges Soviet people to put all their strength and knowledge into fulfilling the party program and to regard the comprehensive improvement of socialism as the vital cause of everyone. The duty of Communists and all working people is to establish and develop the innovative spirit of the 27th party congress, to strive to reach a decisive turning point in the development of the national economy, and to ensure a sharp turn toward a more organized and efficient economy.

The decisive factor in intensifying the economy — and Soviet people understand this well — is scientific and technical progress. Production, science, and education workers are urged to increase their contribution to accelerating this progress and fundamentally reconstructing the national economy. The country's scientists are expecting to produce revolutionary discoveries and inventions in equipment and technology, increase the effectiveness of scientific research work, and bring this work closer in line with the needs of production.

Large tasks face machine builders. They are on the front line when it comes to retooling the national economy and it is a matter of honor for them to more rapidly create highly productive, reliable, and economical machines, equipment, and instruments. The party urges power engineers to strive to fulfill the Energy Program, transport workers to accelerate freight transportation, and metallurgists and chemical workers to reliably meet the national economy's needs for raw and other materials. The main concern of builders is to conduct matters economically and to build to last, with quality, and on a modern technical basis.

The party congress stressed the necessity to increase attention to the social sphere, which embraces the vital interests of millions of people. A great role is played in fulfilling this task by workers in trade and public catering, and in consumer and municipal services. The CPSU Central Committee urges them to energetically develop modern types of services and to improve the standard of these services.

Workers in the agro-industrial complex are undergoing a serious test during these spring days. The foundations are being laid for a good harvest in the 1st year of the 12th 5-Year Plan and the wintering of livestock and other urgent work is being completed. Nor must the fulfillment of long-term tasks be overlooked. The patriotic duty of workers in the agro-industrial complex is to provide the country with a full supply of foodstuffs in a short space of time. We must aim for a decisive upsurge in every sector of the complex and a rise in the standard of rural economic management. The party appeals to the working people and workers in every sector of the national economy to bring economic growth reserves into play, achieve a precise production rhythm, and meet the plan targets and socialist pledges for 1986 successfully. The guarantee of the most rapid progress possible is high quality, the strictest economy, and firm discipline. A great deal also depends on administrative workers. They must decisively restructure the style and methods of their work and eradicate departmentalism, parochialism, and bureaucracy.

The party urges citizens of the Land of the Soviets to participate more actively in socialist self-management and to enhance the role of the labor collective. Specific wishes have been addressed to cultural figures, Soviet women, Komsomol members, all young men and women, war and labor veterans, and members of the valiant USSR Armed Forces.

Our country holds high the banner of peace and the banner of proletarian internationalism. Loyal to its international duty, the CPSU sends fraternal greetings to the peoples of socialist states; the peoples of developing countries; the working class of capitalist countries, which is waging a stubborn struggle for its rights and vital interests; communist and workers parties; and the courageous fighters for working people's interests. On behalf of all Soviet Communists the party appeals to the peoples of the world to struggle against the nuclear threat and for an end to the arms race and the formation of a comprehensive international security system. To stop nuclear tests and prevent the militarization of space — these appeals by the Leninist party correspond to the hopes and aspirations of all progressive people on earth.

In just over 2 weeks time the May Day celebrations will enter the streets of towns and villages decorated with red banners. Soviet people will greet this day joyfully and festively, closely rallied around their native party. The words of the May Day slogans inspire all of us to new achievements:

Following the Leninist course of the 27th CPSU Congress — forward, along the path of communist creation and peace!

[Editorial: "We Greet May Day With Labor"]

[Text] The flood of red bunting for May Day has not yet burst onto the streets of our cities and villages. But May Day is already confidently marching across the country. This stride is businesslike and purposeful. We traditionally greet May Day with shock work; honest labor for the benefit of the motherland is the main yardstick for everything. That is why we call May Day a holiday of labor. And a holiday of struggle. A day of working people's international solidarity.

Our May Days have their own fine traditions. Each has special notable features. The present one will write its own lines in history.

On 1 May 1886 the workers of Chicago laid down a challenge to capital: They gathered for a meeting and demanded the establishment of an 8-hour working day. The police opened fire on the workers' peaceful demonstration.

As we march in the festive columns we remember those bold people, we remember the participants in our first May Day meetings. We remember the frontrunners of all our May Day columns. Today we are to be the frontrunners. Imposing tasks face each one of us. They have been set by the 27th CPSU Congress — a truly historic milestone in the life of the party, people, and entire world.

There is one more tradition of our party, tested by decades. On the eve of May Day its Central Committee addresses the working class, kolkhoz peasantry, and intelligentsia — the entire working people of our country, the peoples of the socialist countries, the Communists of all countries, the workers of the whole world, and the peoples struggling for their freedom and independence — with slogans that express, in concentrated form, the Soviet Communists' view of the basic, most important tasks of the struggle for the victory of communism and for the cause of peace.

"WORKING PEOPLE OF THE LAND OF THE SOVIETS! THROUGH THE ACCELERATION OF THE COUNTRY'S SOCIOECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT — TOWARD THE ACHIEVEMENT OF A NEW QUALITATIVE CONDITION OF SOCIETY, TOWARD THE TRIUMPH OF COMMUNIST IDEALS!"

The economic strategy elaborated by the party congress sets tasks of extraordinary importance and scale. Let us cite the figures once again. We are already familiar with them. But these figures are not simply for writing down in a notebook, not for ostentatious reports. Behind them lie specific deeds that the motherland expects from each one of us. By the end of the century we must double the national income while doubling the production potential and transforming it qualitatively. Acceleration, the Central Committee Political Report noted, is above all the enhancement of economic growth rates. But not just that. Its thrust is in the new quality of work.

The CPSU Central Committee urges:

"WORKING PEOPLE OF THE SOVIET UNION! LET US ACHIEVE A DECISIVE BREAKTHROUGH IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE NATIONAL ECONOMY! LET US ENSURE A SHARP TURN TOWARD AN ECONOMY OF HIGH ORGANIZATION AND EFFICIENCY!"

Yes, we have a lot of work to do. Very specific work. And the party's appeal draws attention today to specific reserves we have not yet assimilated.

From Soviet scientists the country expects REVOLUTIONARY discoveries and inventions. The times have assigned machine builders THE FRONT LINE in retooling the national economy. Power industry workers, railroad engineers; transport, metallurgy, and chemical industry workers! The success of the matter depends on each of us.

Here is another very important task that we must resolve in the very near future — fully supplying the country with food. Addressing the rural workers, the party calls the task set them by the congress A PATRIOTIC DUTY.

We also link the solution of the new tasks very closely with the creation of a flexible, effective system of management. The party's appeal contains a precise and clear order to management workers: eradicate DEPARTMENTALISM, LOCAL FAVORITISM, AND BUREAUCRACY.

The socialist system develops successfully only when the people themselves really manage their own affairs, when millions of people take part in political life.

"CITIZENS OF THE SOVIET UNION! PARTICIPATE ACTIVELY IN SOCIALIST SELF-MANAGEMENT! SHOW MORE CREATIVE INITIATIVE AND INCREASE THE ROLE OF THE LABOR COLLECTIVE!"

V.I. Lenin saw in the working people's democracy and living creation the main force for the development of the new system. And the party is persistently seeking to intensify the democracy of the socialist system, to strengthen publicity by every means, and to galvanize the activity of the soviets, trade unions, Komsomol, and labor collectives.

Two great words are imprinted on the May Day banners: "Labor" and "Peace." The first is organically linked to the latter.

The guarantee of a successful struggle for progress and a peaceful future lies in the proletarian, socialist internationalism of the working class, in the unity of the proletariat, in its alliance with world socialism and with the national liberation movement. Our affairs and plans are imposing and are turned toward the future and linked most closely with defending that future against the threat of a thermonuclear conflagration.

The nuclear explosion in Nevada shook the whole world. It shook it by its lack of responsibility for the destiny of mankind. But the CPSU's foreign policy course is unaltered.

"PEOPLES OF THE WORLD! ACTIVELY OPPOSE THE DANGER OF NUCLEAR WAR WHICH EMANATES FROM IMPERIALISM! STRIVE FOR A COMPLETE HALT TO NUCLEAR TESTS! LET US NOT PERMIT THE MILITARIZATION OF SPACE!"

The times have set Soviet people tasks of an unprecedented scale. We can cope with them, we only have to tackle them together, without trying to share our difficulties, without avoiding the complications that are inevitable. Our society has always been strong through its cohesion; through the indestructible alliance of the working class, kolkhoz peasantry, and people's intelligentsia; through the indissoluble international unity and fraternal friendship of the peoples of the Soviet Union; and through the tested leadership of the CPSU.

On May Day, marching in the festive column, we will remember that today we are its frontrunners. And we will repeat yet again the words of the party's May Day slogan:

"FOLLOWING THE LENINIST COURSE OF THE 27TH CPSU CONGRESS — FORWARD, ALONG THE PATH OF COMMUNIST CREATION AND PEACE!"

All-Union Meeting of Justice Officials Held

PM180959 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 16 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 6

[TASS report: "Strengthen the Socialist Rule of Law"]

[Text] Now, when the creative strengths of the socialist system are being fully revealed, the organs and institutions of justice and the courts must become more active in helping to consolidate the legal foundations of the country's state and social life even further. Such was the opinion of participants in the all-union conference of justice and court officials held in Moscow on 15 April. The tasks involved in strengthening the rule of law and law and order in light of the 27th CPSU Congress decisions were discussed.

The keynote speaker — USSR justice Minister B.V. Kravtsov — and other speakers analyzed the results of work done in the past 5-year plan and examined problems of making justice more effective. They spoke about ways to improve the drafting of legislation by union republic ministries of justice, the involvement of organs of justice and courts in implementing the principles of social justice, and the education of citizens in a spirit of profound respect for the laws and rules of socialist communal life. The need to take effective measures to improve the activity of courts, expert institutions, the legal profession, notarial offices, and civil registration offices was mentioned. It is also important to raise the standard of work of coordinating-methodological councils for legal propaganda. The task of reinforcing the legal service within soviets of people's deputies, at enterprises, and in organizations remains acute.

The conference stressed that justice and court workers must participate more actively in providing legal backup for the party's strategic course aimed at accelerating the country's socioeconomic development. Above all, this means accelerating the campaign against embezzlement, bribery, speculation, drunkenness, parasitism, unearned income, and economic crimes.

Taking part in the conference were A.V. Vlasov, USSR minister of internal affairs; V.A. Abolentsev, deputy chief of the CPSU Central Committee Administrative Organs Department; and senior officials of the CPSU Central Committee, the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, the USSR Council of Ministers, and a number of ministries and departments.

Kravtsov Comments on Meeting

LD181116 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 0800 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] The tasks of the organs and institutions of justice and courts in fulfilling the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress have been discussed at an all-union conference at the USSR Ministry of Justice. In an interview with our correspondent the USSR Minister of Justice Boris Vasiliyevich Kravtsov said:

[Begin Kravtsov recording] I would like to stress that all of our work should actively promote the fulfillment of the social and economic tasks that were set by the congress. We must find, in an exacting manner, new forms and new methods of work, and conduct a constant search for reserves. This is, in fact, required of each of us today. Improving the economic mechanism is also an important task of our organs.

The reconstruction of the management of the national economy demands an improvement in legal work. There is, of course, a large field of activity for those who work in the organs of justice. However, if we are to speak of implementing the principles of social justice, well, here it is required of us to carry on more firmly and consistently the struggle against the theft of state and social property, against all sorts of malfeasances of office and economic crimes, against the production of low quality output, and against bribery, speculation, parasitism and unearned income. This is a very important direction in the activity of the organs of justice and of the courts. [end recording]

This has significance not only on the legal level, but also on the normal level, for people who know that the thief, the bribe-taker, the speculator, the drunkard and the bad workman will be punished by our Soviet law, by our Soviet court. The laws themselves have become more stringent in this direction. What effect is this having on the practice of the courts?

[Begin Kravtsov recording] The courts have, of course, started to expose more vigorously the causes and conditions that encourage the perpetration of thefts and other crimes, which were discussed today at the collegium. They are also carrying on the struggle against the criminal derivation of unearned income more vigorously. All of this exists. They have started making more special rulings — this also testifies to the activeness of the peoples courts and of the courts of justice in general, and of the organs of justice.

Primarily, attention was focused on those serious inadequacies that still exist in the work of the organs of justice and the courts. There is a lot more work that we could do, of course. We have the potential to work better. The facts show that there is still a great deal of formalism in preventive measures in matters of thefts — superficial explanation of the causes and conditions which encourage theft, whether petty or not — and the equality of the recommendations that the court gives in cases is occasionally low. Specific, qualified measures are still rarely proposed. It turns out like this: there are now more special rulings in quantity, but control of the actual elimination of violations is often carried out on paper.

In this matter we must unite efforts with the procuracy, and with the organs of control, so that the channels used by criminals might really be blocked. Much has been done in the struggle with drunkenness and alcoholism, but we are only at the beginning of the road. The task here is clear: In this matter there must not be any working by fits and starts, or lack of communication, either in the measures that are implemented by the law enforcement organs or jointly with labor collectives and the public. [end recording]

BAM Zone Development Problems Discussed

PM201810 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 17 Apr 86

[TASS report: "Concern for Working People"]

[Text] A joint session of the USSR Supreme Soviet Soviet of the Union and Soviet of Nationalities Housing, Municipal, and Urban Economy Commissions was held in the Kremlin on 16 April. The question of work by Amur Oblast soviet and economic organs on the comprehensive development of cities and settlements in the Baykal-Amur Main Railway Zone was discussed.

It was noted in the report and in deputies' speeches that, in fulfillment of Communist Party and Soviet State resolutions, Amur Oblast's soviet and economic organs are doing definite work to develop cities and settlements in the main railroad zone and to create the necessary essential conditions for the labor and everyday life of people engaged in the construction and exploitation of the railroad and other projects.

At the same time, the work of soviet and economic organs does not meet the party's current demands regarding the need for a state-oriented approach toward the solution of tasks concerning the acceleration of the development of this important region in the country and the establishment of a closer link between economic and social questions. The Amur Oblispolkom provides inadequate leadership of the comprehensive development of cities and settlements and does not make full use of its powers in this connection.

The Ministry of Railways, the Ministry of Transport Construction, the USSR Gosplan, and a number of other ministries and departments fail to ensure the necessary balance in the construction of production and nonproduction projects and do not allocate the necessary funds for housing, municipal, cultural, and consumer services construction. There is a considerable lag in the provision of preschool and medical institutions and sports facilities. The inadequate availability of housing and projects for social, cultural, and consumer services purposes leads to high cadre turnover.

The resolution adopted by the commissions sets out specific recommendations to the Amur Oblispolkom, the RSFSR Council of Ministers, and USSR ministries and departments for the elimination of the shortcomings that were noted. A number of suggestions were made to the USSR Council of Ministers.

The participants in the session also heard a report on the fulfillment of a resolution by the commissions on the question of work by the Dnepropetrovsk Oblast Soviet of People's Deputies concerning the elaboration and implementation of plans for the construction of housing and projects for municipal, cultural, and consumer services purposes in the countryside.

PRAVDA Reviews March Economic Performance

PM201402 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 14 Apr 86
First Edition p 1

[Unattributed "All-Union Competition Diary": "With Our Sights on Acceleration"]

[Text] Industry

Many industrial collectives have worked well in March. Since the beginning of the year, they have taken a course aimed at speeding up the production rate and manufacturing products that are strictly in accordance with contracts and of high quality, and they are firmly keeping to this course. Enterprises setting an example in this respect include the Belorussian Automobile Plant, the I.A. Likhachev Automobile Plant, the Minsk Tractor Plant, the "Sarakanays Metalurgs" Plant (Latvian SSR), the "Spassktsement" Plant (Maritime Kray), and a number of others.

In comparison with March last year, the total volume of industrial production increased by 5 percent. Labor productivity during this period increased by 4.6 percent. The plan for production sales throughout industry as a whole was fulfilled by 102 percent. All the union republics except Moldavia met the targets set. The monthly plan was fulfilled by the majority of industrial ministries.

in comparison with last year, the fulfillment of the production plan improved in physical terms. The target for March was met in the extraction of gas and coal and in the production of basic types of metal products, chemical plant protection agents, synthetic resins and plastics, chemical fibers and yarns, tires, metal-cutting machine tools, instruments, means of automation and computer equipment, electric locomotives, freight and passenger cars, paper and cement. A considerable quantity of certain types of consumer goods was produced in excess of the plan.

At the same time, the monthly plan was not fulfilled for oil extraction and the production of sulfuric acid, soda ash, rolling equipment (the Ministry of Heavy and Transport Machine Building), silage-harvesting and fodder-harvesting combines (the Ministry of Machine Building for Animal Husbandry and Fodder Production), and color television sets.

Good quality and a high technical standard of production is the collectives' chief concern. Workers in many machine-tool building, electrical engineering, and instrument making enterprises and also in other sectors value the honor of their trade mark. But there are a considerable number of plants and factories which receive replacement claims for their products. Attention to quality must everywhere be increased and this indicator made the main indicator in competition.

In every sector there are collectives which successfully realize plans and fulfill their pledges. On the other hand, others fall down on deliveries, manufacture poor quality products, and are only slowly reorienting themselves toward the new approach. Thus, the Glavtyumenneftlegaz is badly letting the sector down. The Uzbek Metallurgical Plant, the "Amurstal" Plant, and the Azerbaydzhan Pipe Rolling Plant are in arrears. The goods manufactured by the Ufa Sewn Goods Association, the Barnaul cotton combine, the Volgograd footwear factory, and certain other enterprises have aroused criticism among consumers.

The country is on the eve of a subbotnik in honor of the 116th anniversary of V.I. Lenin's birth. Millions of Soviet people are preparing for the celebration in "working clothes." They are filled with a desire to hold this celebration in production places, achieve a high output, and make their achievement an everyday norm.

Agriculture

If you listen to meteorologists' reports you involuntarily think: Things are not easy at the moment for crop farmers. What is being sown on kolkhozes and sovkhozes today? The country's territory is so extensive that it is quite difficult to enumerate every crop. For example, in Tula Oblast the feeding of winter crops is in progress; in Krasnodar Kray, sunflowers are being sown; in Chimkent Oblast, cotton is being sown; and in Fergana Oblast and the North Osetian ASSR, the setting of early potatoes has been completed.

Whereas in the country's southern regions grain growers have already sown their grain, in the northern and eastern regions they are completing preparations for this. The overhauling of equipment is nearing conclusion. Figures from the USSR Central Statistical Administration show that by 1 April, 92 of every 100 tractors had been repaired. As much as 98 percent of all plows, seed drills, cultivators, and potato planters were ready or already in the field. At the same time, some rayons in Kazakhstan have dragged out the preparation of sowing and soil cultivation equipment, and even the powerful "Kirov" tractors are not ready to go out into the fields everywhere.

In some areas farm engineering services and rayon agro-industrial association repair and transport enterprises have been sluggish and lacked organization, while others have been let down by suppliers of spare parts and materials. While noting the conscientious work done by the collectives of many industrial enterprises, the USSR State Agro-Industrial Committee also names those which fail to dispatch assembly parts and spare parts to villages on time. The debtors include the Altay and Kharkov Tractor Plants, the Saratov "Serp i Molot" plants, the Michurinsk Automobile Assembly Plant, and the Kostroma "Motordetal" Plant.

Livestock breeders have summed up the results of competition during the first quarter of this year. Many of them, having supported the initiative of front-rank workers, tried during the winter period to also increase livestock productivity and not allow milk yields to fall. Throughout the country as a whole the sale of products to the state increased in comparison with the same period last year: livestock and poultry by 7.6 percent, milk by 6.1 percent, and eggs by 6 percent.

Meat purchases have increased considerably on farms in Kazakhstan, Belorussia, Moldavia, and Latvia, and milk purchases likewise in Uzbekistan, Kirgizia, and Armenia. However, some farms in Estonia have reduced their meat and milk sales.

At the meeting with workers in the city of Tolyatti, it was noted that everyone must meet targets in his work place conscientiously, to a high standard of quality, and with total understanding of his responsibility for the general cause. Achieving the highest possible goals this year is a vital necessity and the patriotic duty of workers in all sectors. This includes workers in the agro-industrial complex.

PM171342 Moscow SOTSIALISTICHESKAYA INDUSTRIYA in Russian 9 Apr 86 p 3

[Report by SOTSIALISTICHESKAYA INDUSTRIYA Heavy Industry Department: "Making Up the Lag: Oilfields in March"]

[Text] The results of the work of oilmen in March inspire hope that the sector's recent protracted lag can and must be overcome. Although the amount of oil owing is still great — 2.8 million metric tons — and there is a lag of more than 24,000 metric tons behind the plan figures for daily production, there are grounds for talking about changes for the better.

In comparison with December, oil extraction rose by 35.6 metric tons per day. In the first quarter of this year, the ministry's associations supplied the country with almost 650,000 metric tons more oil and gas condensate than in the same period last year.

We are publishing a brief summary of the fulfillment of the March oil extraction plan by the leading enterprises of the Ministry of the Petroleum Industry.

Main Administration for Petroleum and Gas in the Tyumen Region	97.0
Nizhnevartovskneftegaz	97.6
Yuganskneftegaz	100.5
Surgutneftegaz	100.6
Noyabrskneftegaz	81.8
Krasnoleninskneftegaz	100.7
Varyeganneftegaz	89.8
Tatneft	98.7
Bashneft	100.4
Komineft	103.9
Mangyshlakneft	100.5
Kuybyshevneft	100.4
Tomskneft	102.5
Permneft	100.4
Udmurtneft	100.7
Orenburgneft	100.7
Grozneft	101.0
Turkmenneft	103.8
Ukrneft	100.8

In the first month of spring the oilmen of the Komi Republic again distinguished themselves: they extracted around 60,000 metric tons of oil over and above the plan and over 100,000 metric tons in all in the first quarter. The successes of the oilmen of Turkmenia, Mangyshlak, and a number of other traditional extracting regions are gratifying. The collective at "Tomskneft," where the transition of wells to mechanized extraction has recently been accelerated, managed to overcome their lag. The pace that has been set made it possible for the Tomsk people to eliminate the lag in April.

Good news came from Tyumen in mid-March: The country's main oil source has again reached the 1 million metric ton daily extraction level. They are undoubtedly benefited from the aid given to the Siberians by people, equipment, and hardware and from the increased attention devoted to the region by party and economic organs. The restructuring in the subunits of the Main Administration for Petroleum and Gas in the Tyumen Region [Glavtyumenneftegaz] has started to bear fruit — production organization is improving, labor and technological discipline has strengthened, and accountability for the job at hand has been beefed up. Since the start of the year, five new fields have come on stream in Tyumen Oblast. All this has made it possible to halt the downhill slide and to increase daily extraction considerably.

Three of the six Tyumen associations successfully coped with the plan for the quarter and additionally produced more than 150,000 metric tons of oil.

Matters among the oilmen of Nizhnevartovsk are clearly being rectified — even if not as quickly as one would like. Since the start of the year average daily extraction there has increased by 20,000 metric tons, which is the largest growth throughout the Main Administration. In March 147 new wells came on stream at the Nizhnevartovsk fields and 80 other wells were transferred to mechanized operation. The "Megionneft," "Novomolodezhinskneft," and "Belozerneft" oil and gas extraction administrations of this major association reached the planned extraction levels.

But for all the positive shifts, the situation in West Siberia gives no grounds for complacency or smugness. In March Glavtyumenneftegaz enterprises fell short of the plan to the tune of 840,000 metric tons of oil, and the lag over the quarter was more than 3 million metric tons.

The serious shortcomings in the organization of maintenance and overhauls are among the main reasons for the lag. The numerous "flying" teams of repairmen from the country's other oil regions sent to help the Tyumen people often stand idle, and the productivity and quality of their work leaves much to be desired. As a result the above-normative number of idle wells in the Siberian fields — there are now approximately 1,500 of them — is being reduced only slowly. These are real reserves capable of ensuring substantial additional amounts of oil extraction.

Losses in the region due to the low reliability of the electricity supply to oil centers remain high. On 21 March there was an emergency outage on the LEP-110 Kholmogory-Pulyakha power line. Electricity supplies to the Sutorminskoye oilfield were cut off. A day later there was another outage on the same line. Once again hundreds of wells shut down, water injection into the beds stopped, and reservoirs and water lines were closed. Direct oil losses at the "Noyabrsknetfegaz" Association alone were almost 3,000 metric tons.

In response to the decisions of the 27th party congress, many oil industry collectives have reviewed their previous pledges and have outlined new and higher targets. Now the most important task for workers in the sector and their associated plants is to make fuller use of every possibility for accelerating restructuring.

CSA Official Urges Overcoming Lagging Behind

LD201638 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1430 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Comment by Nikolay Grigoryevich Belov, "first deputy chief" of the USSR Central Statistical Administration; in the studio, time not given; from the "Vremya" newscast — recorded]

[Text] As you know, the USSR Council of Ministers has examined the results of the development of industry and other branches of the national economy for the first quarter of this year. I will remind you that the increase in industrial production for this period amounted to 6.7 percent, with 4.3 percent planned for the year. Labor productivity grew by 6.3 percent; 94 percent of the increase in output was obtained because of this. These indicators show that as a result of the reorganization which began in our country's economy, it has been possible to halt deceleration and begin a systematic increase of economic growth rates. Noticeable shifts have occurred in the key branches of industry: metallurgy, machine building, power engineering, and the coal and gas industries. Above-plan production has been manufactured amounting overall to R4 billion; this is approximately a whole working day in our great country. The plans for gas and coal recovery, steel production, mineral fertilizers, metalmachining, and other technological equipment, that is, those types of production which determine the growth of our economy, have been overfulfilled.

You may ask: How are the tasks on the manufacture of consumer goods being fulfilled? Generally, there are positive changes here also. The data for the quantity of production manufactured are cited in the USSR Central Statistical Administration report, and it must be said, they are not bad. But one would like more in terms of quality; we all still have a lot of work to do here.

What conclusions can be drawn on the basis of the statistical data? Changes are occurring, and this pleases us all. But the fact that a number of associations, enterprises, and organizations have not fulfilled their planned tasks shows that they are reorganizing their activity slowly in the light of the new demands. It is obvious that it is essential now not only to consolidate and develop — and that is the main thing — the positive changes which have taken shape in the first quarter, but also to do everything possible to overcome the lagging behind which has been tolerated in places which have not succeeded in reaching the planned targets, and secure absolute fulfillment of the plan for the first year of the 12th 5-Year Plan.

Dolgikh Addresses Power Ministry Collegium

PM141307 Moscow TRUD in Russian 6 Apr 86 p 2

[TASS report: "Sector's Tasks Discussed"]

[Text] An enlarged session of the Collegium of the USSR Ministry of Power and Electrification and the Presidium of the Electric Power Station and Electrical Industry Workers Union Central Committee took place in Moscow on 5 April. It discussed tasks facing the collectives of power industry enterprises and construction organizations in fulfilling the 27th CPSU Congress decisions.

A report was delivered by A.I. Mayorets, USSR Minister of Power and electrification. The session stressed that the sector's workers bear a great responsibility for ensuring a reliable power supply to industry, transport, agriculture, and the country's population and for creating on that basis the necessary conditions for all sectors of the national economy to successfully fulfill the rigorous targets for 1986 and the 12th 5-Year Plan as a whole.

The implementation of the congress decisions requires urgent measures to improve the use of the capacity of existing power stations and to improve the economic mechanism.

As the session noted, the implementation of the set tasks requires a fundamental improvement in the work style and methods of the sector's workers, greater cadre responsibility, and increased executive discipline. An atmosphere of creative enthusiasm must be consistently established in every collective.

The session was addressed by V.I. Dolgikh, candidate member of the Politburo and secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. B.Ye. Shcherbina, deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, and I.P. Yastrebov, chief of a CPSU Central Committee department, also took part in the Collegium's work.

'Unusually Mild' April Promotes Crop Growth

PM161511 Moscow SELSKAYA ZHIZN in Russian 13 Apr 86 p 1

[Report by Agrometeorologist L. Platonova: "The Weather and the Crops"]

[Text] In most areas of the European part of the country the weather remained unusually mild in the first 10 days of April, with a small amount of precipitation. The temperature for the period was 3-9 degrees above average.

Southwest of a line joining Leningrad, Vologdo, Yoshkar-Ola, and Orenburg the fields were completely snow-free. The soil was thawing and drying out. In southern oblasts of Belorussia and the Central Chernozem economic regions, and in the Volga area (south of Saratov), where the soil had thawed out completely, the upper layer was soft and workable. Selective fieldwork has begun in these areas, primarily on light soils. Mass sowing of early spring grain crops has been taking place in Moldavia, the Ukraine, Rostov Oblast, and the North Caucasus. In the southernmost oblasts of the Ukraine, in Rostov Oblast, and in the North Caucasus spring barley has already germinated in some fields.

Winter grain crops and sown and meadow grasses have resumed growth south of a line joining Vilnius, Vitebsk, Ryazan, Ulyanovsk, Kuybyshev, and Ural. Agricultural crops have resumed growth approximately 1 week earlier than usual because of the mild weather. Plants were developing rapidly in the Ukraine, Rostov Oblast, and the North Caucasus, where throughout the 10-day period the daytime temperature was 18-26 degrees. In most parts of the Ukraine and North Caucasus, stem extension occured 15-20 days earlier than average in winter grain crops.

The weather stayed warm and mainly dry in the Transcaucasus. The average temperature for the period was 3-6 degrees above average. The maximum temperature was 22-28 degrees, 10-15 degrees in the foothills.

In Central Asia and southern Kazakhstan the weather became considerably warmer in the first 10 days of April, which was conducive to the start of the mass sowing of cotton and other warmth-loving agricultural crops. The sowing of seeds was taking place in well-warmed soil. In most cotton-sowing areas the average soil temperature at a depth of 10 cm was 12-15 degrees, 16-18 degrees in southern areas of Central Asia.

In West Siberia the average 10-day temperature was 3-5 degrees above average; it was near average in East Siberia.

Spring Farm Work Reviewed, Tasks Outlined

PM171302 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 10 Apr 86 Morning Edition p2

[Article by O. Pavlov under the rubric "Agricultural Review": "Discipline in the Field"]

[Excerpts] This spring outwardly appears to be in no hurry; but this is a deceptive impression. Yes, in many regions continually good weather has not yet established itself; it is changeable. But nevertheless meteorologists note that in the last 10 days of March the average daily temperature in the Union's European territory was 4-10 degrees above the average annual temperature. In the Ukraine and the North Caucasus it is generally warm — some days more than 20 degrees. Here, and also in oblasts of the Central Chernozem, the winter crops have come to life earlier than usual and vegetation is now actively continuing.

The snow is melting rapidly in the fields of central Russia, while in the Baltic region, Belorussia, and the Volga region the top soil layer is thawing.

In a word, spring is once again exceptional and is again setting difficult tasks for agricultural workers. On every farm they will have to be resolved independently, confirming to many years' experience. The main thing these days is not to waste moisture; by going out into the fields, not to take too much time; and to act quickly, punctually, to a high degree of quality, and with careful consideration of the specific situation.

In Stavropol, for example, the spring is faily dry and windy and the humidity, particularly in the daytime, is palpable. Under these conditions the farmers work harmoniously and in coordination. The mass sowing of early cereals and pulse crops was completed on 4 April. As soon as the soil was "suitable" the majority of kolkhozes and sovkhozes dealt with the task of sowing barley, oats, and peas in 1 and 1/2 or 2 days. The agronomic and engineering services of the agro-industrial sector and farms worked in a coordinated manner.

Technological discipline... A great deal has been said recently about this, and rightly so. However, not much is actually done. Unfortunately it must be noted that during the 11th 5-Year Plan, the standard of land cultivation in many of the country's large granaries not only did not improve but fell below that of the 10th 5-Year Plan.

More equipment, fertilizers, and means of fighting plant disease and vermin has begun to be received and the area of reclaimed land has increased. This has obviously given rise in some specialists to false confidence that quantity will become quality of its own accord. No, without work, knowledge, and creativity this will not happen. Worse still, statistics provided by a number of science institutions attest that one-third — or even more than one-third — of fertilizer nutrients is used to cultivate weeds. And this: The increase in supplies of material resources not paid for by additional crop yield has led to product price increases.

Even kolkhozes and sovkhozes in one of our most fertile krays — Krasnodar — have not avoided some of these mistakes. Here an unwarrantedly conservative approach has been taken to progressive methods of cultivating soil and protecting land against erosion; and for some reason there have been delays in sowing winter crops, and the fight for their health and survival has not been sufficiently organized. The harvest yield has ceased to grow. An alarming situation has also taken shape in sunflower production, for which Kuban has long been renowned. The rice fields have also not been very gratifying in recent years.

This has been self-critically discussed in the kray. And, it would seem, conclusions have been drawn. In any case, crop farmers are now taking very careful, competent care of winter crops. They have met the requirements of intensive technology almost everywhere. The winter crop is now very pleasing. Specialists confirm that the survival rate of winter crops has not been so high for a long time. But intensive technology is no simple matter; there is still concern for the winter crop in spring and at the beginning of summer. More than one important agrotechnical operation still must be performed in order to ensure crops have optimum conditions for development in specific weather conditions and to form a programmed harvest and grain of excellent quality.

Reclaimed land requires a particularly high degree of technological discipline. During the last 5-year period the return on land of this kind did not correspond to outlays. There are a considerable number of examples of extremely poor-quality utilization of reclaimed land. Year after year millions of irrigated hectares do not receive even one watering.

The 12th 5-Year Plan must be a turning point both in terms of the quality of reclamation building and, in particular, in the use of already available land.

Spring is coming to the fields in more and more of the country's rayons. However it turns out it has just one general law: Know the time to act and do not be slow to do so, and observe discipline in the field under any conditions.

Higher-Quality Field Labor, Sowing Urged

PM151103 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 10 Apr 86 Second Edition p 2

[L. Ivanov "Agricultural Review": "The Ears Will Begin To Stir"]

[Excerpts] In any field, workshop, or seed store today you can hear the instruction to the grain growers which has become the slogan for their competition: "Quality and again quality"! The fate of the harvest depends on the quality of labor, on how the sowing work is completed. Nonregulated financially autonomous detachments and units in Orel and Belgorod Oblasts are carefully top-dressing the winter crops. The machine operators of Alma-Ata and Taldy-Kurgan Oblasts have embarked in an organized fashion on the sowing of grain crops. The corn growers of Azerbaijan and North Osetia and the cotton growers of the Central Asian republics have brought the seeders out into the fields. The mechanized units of Odessa Oblast, where they work by the collective contract method, have decided to carry out the sowing of sugar beet in 4 working days.

The new organs of management of the agro-industrial complex are carefully monitoring the progress of spring work and trying to help the farms to avoid the mistakes made in previous years. Thus an analysis carried out by agro-industrial specialists revealed an undesirable trend which became acute during the last 5-year plan — many farms unjustfiably reduced sowing of grain crops. A year ago the RSFSR "cut" the sowings by 1.6 million hectares, while in the country as a whole the grain area was 1.7 million hectares less than provided for in the zonal farming systems.

Strange as it may seem, wheat has been crowded out of the fields in the country's important granaries — Volgograd, Omsk, and Novosibirsk Oblasts and Altay Kray. Sowings of spring durum wheat have been reduced in Saratov Oblast.

Intensively farmed fields have been extended considerably this year. They account for 37 million hectares. Wheat, corn, millet, rice, sunflowers, sugar beet, soybeans, potatoes, vegetables, and other crops will be sown on these fields. Sowings of winter crops cultivated by intensive techniques cover an area of 14.6 million hectares. They await painstaking cultivation: top-dressing and protection-against weeds, pests, and diseases. Particular efficiency is required of the agronomical and agrochemical services: It is essential not to let the dates for such operations pass by and to ensure that they are fully carried out.

Corn grown by the new techniques can bring a weighty increase in the crop. Last year this increase was 8.8 quintals of grain per hectare. But it could be considerably higher. Why? Primarily because certain farm leaders and specialists and rayon agro-industrial associations were lukewarm about this technique and did not assign intensive plantations to teams and units working on the basis of collective contracts. And it is no accident that Moldavia and Georgia were unable to achieve a substantial increase in gross corn grain yields. There are still frequent cases where this crop, sown for grain, is harvested for green feed or silage. That is what happened last year in Uzbekistan, Dagestan, and Voronezh Oblast.

Taking into account the mistakes formerly committed and avoiding them means laying a firm foundation for the harvest in spring. The farmers measure their every step in the spring fields against the most important barometer: how effective their influence is on increasing the productivity of the grainfields and strengthening the kolkhozes' and sovkhozes' economies.

Agricultural Developments for 13-16 April Reported

LD170514 [Editorial Report] The following is a compilation of reports on agricultural developments in the USSR carried by Moscow Domestic Service in Russian, unless otherwise indicated, on 13-16 April. Times of broadcasts are given in parentheses at the end of each item.

13 April

Sowing of corn for grain and silage is under way in Kazakhstan; 2.5 million hectares are allocated for this in the republic. (0500 GMT)

The sowing of vegetable crops continues in the Kuban. This year they are being grown over an area of approximately 62,000 hectares. (1800 GMT)

Sugar beet sowing has started on all the farms in Kursk Oblast. Sugar beet plantations cover an area of about 200,000 hectares there. (2005 GMT)

Mass sowing of sugar beet started in Belgorod Oblast today. More than 150,000 hectares will be taken under this crop, the area being one of the largest in the RSFSR. The operation is being carried out by mechanized team under collective contract. (2230 GMT)

14 April

As we have been informed at the USSR Agro-Industrial Committee, the frontiers of the sowing of spring crops in the European part of the country have moved from the Northern Caucasus and the Ukraine to Belorussia, the Central Chernozem oblasts, Tula, Orlov and Belgorod Oblasts of the non-Chernozem Zone. (Moscow Television 1430 GMT)

15 April

Uzbek farmers have sown cotton on 1 million hectares so far. Our correspondent adds that sowing rates in the republic could be even higher, citing poor organization of field work in Kara-Kalpak ASSR and Khorezm Oblast. The time for sowing is slipping away, and the majority of machines are still not (?on the fields). (0204 GMT)

The sowing of spring crops is being completed on the first million hectares in Kazakhstan. Sowing has been completed in the republic's southern oblasts. Work is in full swing in Taldy-Kurgan and Kzyl-Orda Oblasts. Land husbandry workers have already sown early grain crops on more than 600,000 hectares. As of today 10 out of 12 oblasts have their tractors out in the fields. (1100 GMT)

Kirghizia: The area sown to corn this year will be double last year's area. (1500 GMT)

16 April

Corn sowing has begun in Dagestan. (0400 GMT)

Cotton sowing has been completed today on nearly 300,000 hectares in Azerbaijan, which is unusually early. Herbicides and mineral and organic fertilizers were applied simultaneously, the process giving an average yield increase of 3-5 quintals. (1100 GMT)

Briefs

New Potato Varieties — Leningrad, 16 Apr (TASS) — Breeders this year have provided varieties of potato with high yields and high pest resistance. These are wild varieties collected by expeditions from Leningrad that have toured Latin America. In the USSR as a whole potatos are grown on over 6,000,000 hectares. In the north of the USSR these new varieties give yields of 350-400 quintals per hectare. They are twice as big as traditional varieties and have good eating qualities, as well as being suitable for industrial technology. Two Cosmos-Series Earth Satellites Launched

'Cosmos-1740'

LD151600 Moscow TASS in English 1545 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 15 TASS — Artificial earth satellite Cosmos-1740, the next in the series, has been launched in the Soviet Union today.

On board the satellite is installed scientific equipment designed to carry on outer space exploration.

The satellite has been launched into an orbit with the following parameters.

— initial period of revolution — 90.2 minutes;

— maximum distance from the earth's surface — 396 kilometres;

— minimum distance from the earth's surface — 208 kilometres;

— inclination of the orbit — 72.9 degrees.

The onboard equipment of the satellite is functioning normally.

'Cosmos-1741

LD180641 Moscow TASS in English 0634 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS — The Soviet Union today launched another satellite in the Cosmos series.

Cosmos-1741 is carrying scientific equipment to continue outer space exploration.

It was inserted into an orbiting path with the following parameters:

— initial period of revolution — 100.8 minutes,

— maximum distance from earth — 824 kilometers,

— minimum distance — 784 kilometers,

— inclination of the orbit — 74 degrees.

The on-board equipment is functioning normally.

'Molniya-3' Communications Satellite Launched

LD190922 Moscow TASS in English 0850 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 19 TASS — The Soviet Union launched the Molniya-3 communications satellite on April 18 to ensure the operation of a long-range telephone and telegraph radio communications system and the transmission of Central Television broadcasts to the "Orbita-2" network and to further the aim of broader international cooperation.

The satellite was inserted into an orbit with an apogee of 40,664 kilometers in the northern hemisphere and a perigee of 638 kilometers in the southern hemisphere. Its period of revolution is 12 hours 16 minutes. The inclination of the orbit is 62.9 degrees.

Communications sessions with Molniya-3 will be conducted under a planned program.

Reportage on Flight of 'Mir' Orbital Station

Experiments Continue

LD190544 Moscow TASS in English 1142 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS — The space flight of Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovyev is in its sixth week.

Along with the testing of the new orbital station Mir, the crew are fulfilling a large amount of work within the framework of the study of the natural resources of the earth and the natural environment. At present the cosmonauts are carrying out several series of visual observations of typical natural objects using the methods developed by the "Priroda" (nature) State Centre. The purpose of the observations is to study the influence of atmospheric disturbances and illumination condition on geophysical research.

The technical experiment "Resonance" was conducted yesterday for determining dynamic characteristics of the Mir station and the value of the load sustained by it. It was conducted in the process of the correction of the orbit of the complex.

According to the telemetric information and reports of the crew, the on-board systems of the manned complex Mir-Soyuz T-15-Progress-25 are functioning normally.

The parametres of its orbit are as follows:

— maximum distance from the earth's surface — 360 km,

— minimum distance from the earth's surface — 336 km,

— period of revolution — 91.3 minutes,

— inclination of the orbit — 51.6 degrees.

Cosmonauts Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovyev are in good health and feel well.

Transport Ship Unloaded

LD210351 Msocow Domestic Service in Russian
2230 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] The flight of the orbital complex Mir — Soyuz T-15 — Progress-25 is continuing. Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovyev have completed operations for unloading the transport ship. Corrections in the trajectory of the complex's movement have been carried out using the propulsion system of the automatic ship. In the cargo carrier tanks only the minimum reserve of fuel necessary for braking Progress-25 and its exit from orbit remains.

Today the crew will check the on-board systems of the automatic cargo carrying ship, and continue experiments to the program for studying the environment, and they will carry out physical exercises. Time has also been allotted for the cosmonauts to rest.

'Progress-25' Undocks

LD210838 Moscow TASS in English 0834 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 21 TASS — The automatic cargo spacecraft Progress-25 placed in near-earth orbit March 19, 1986 has completed its flight.

Progress-25 docked with the orbital complex Mir — Soyuz T-15 March 21.

All planned operations, including unloading, re-fuelling of the joint propulsion system of the space station and the pumping of potable water, were completed. Several adjustments of the manned space complex's orbit were made with the help of the propulsion system of the automatic spacecraft.

At 11.24 p.m. April 20 Progress-25 separated from the Mir station. Its brake engine was activated at the scheduled time. As a result the spacecraft went into a descending trajectory, entered the dense layers of the atmosphere and ceased to exist.

Cosmonauts Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovyev continue planned work aboard the Mir — Soyuz T-15 orbital complex. Today the crew will check individual units of the life-supporting system and carry out another series of visual observations and photography of a number of regions of the Atlantic Ocean.

According to telemetry data and crew reports, the flight is proceeding normally.

Both cosmonauts are in good health and feeling well.

'Intercosmos' Chief Interviewed on Mars Missions

PM151331 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 11 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 3

[Interview with Academician V. Kotelnikov, chairman of the "Intercosmos" Council by B. Konovalov: "Cooperation in Space" — date and place not given]

[Excerpt][Konovalov] What are the prospects of "Intercosmos"? Are new flights planned?

[Kotelnikov] As you know, there are Syrian cosmonauts currently undergoing training at Zvezdnyy Gorodok: They will work for about 1 week on board a Soviet orbiting station, just as previous international crews did.

A protocol on a second joint Soviet-French manned flight was signed in Moscow on 7 March, developing the top-level accord reached during the visit to France by M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. This time, in 1988, the French cosmonaut will spend a longer time working on board the Soviet orbiting station than his predecessor did during the first flight. The scientific research program will be correspondingly more diverse and the French cosmonauts' training will take longer and be more complex. We have now reached the stage of the candidates' medical selection.

[Konovalov] The well-known U.S. astronomer Carl Sagan has suggested the idea of a Soviet-U.S. expedition to Mars. What is your view on that?

[Kotelnikov] Professor C. Sagan and many other scientists — both Soviet and foreign — give voice to public opinion when they point out the senselessness of wasting manpower and resources on military purposes. That opinion finds full understanding in our country. At the summit in Geneva, M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, stated that it is not preparation for "star wars" but large-scale peaceful space exploration projects which are a goal worthy of the great powers. And the Soviet Union adheres to that position consistently. The Soviet side has put forward a proposal to free the world of nuclear weapons by the year 2000. Now it is up to the U.S. side to act.

It is possible that a change in the political situation would make even such bold projects as an international manned flight to Mars a reality. Technically this is complex but feasible.

But for the time being we are beginning to prepare an expedition to Mars using automatic stations. This time the cooperation between the socialist and capitalist countries will be even greater in scale than the "Vega" project. Mars and its satellites will be studied using the most modern instruments. Work on this project is being developed. The time of the automatic stations' launch is now known — the middle of 1988.

Shcherbitskiy Addresses Ukrainian Science Academy

LD181744 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1400 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] The tasks of Ukraine's scientists were examined today at a general meeting of the republic's Academy of Sciences. It was noted at the meeting that during the 5-year plan period, specialists and the republic's academicians have applied over 400 progressive technologies to the national economy. Critically appraising what has been accomplished, those taking part in the meeting analyzed shortcomings in the work and revealed the main causes of these shortcomings, emphasizing that a solution of the tasks posed by the 27th CPSU Congress will depend to a significant degree on further improving the organization of scientific labor and also improving the training of cadres.

The meeting in Kiev was addressed by Comrade Shcherbitskiy, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee.

KRASNAYA ZVEZDA on Servicemen's May Day Slogan

PM151527 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 15 Apr 86 Second Edition p 1

[Editorial: "The Party's Calling Word"]

[Excerpt] The Central Committee's May Day slogans are imbued with the ideas of the struggle for peace and reliable security for all peoples. Fulfilling its people's will and continuing the policy of preserving and strengthening peace, the Soviet state will continue to step up efforts to ensure universal security in close cooperation with all countries and peoples. The CPSU Central Committee appeals to the peoples of all countries to struggle against the threat of war and for the ending of the arms race and the creation of a comprehensive system of international security.

Because of its social nature, imperialism constantly generates an aggressive, adventurist policy. The U.S. ruling circles are continuing to place emphasis on the pursuit of a militarist line and gamble on force in order to dictate their will ot other countries and peoples and in this way also influence the Soviet Union's policy. These are attempts with unsuitable means. No one has ever succeeded with strong-arm methods against our country in the past, and they are simply futile now. We will never forgo our own security or that of our allies.

Soviet Army and Navy servicemen are reliably standing guard over peace and labor. They perceive this CPSU Central Committee slogan as the motherland's order:

"Soviet servicemen! Vigilantly guard our people's peaceful, creative labor!

"Glory to the valiant USSR Armed Forces!"

Soviet people are approaching May Day with profound understanding of their responsibility for fulfilling the 27th CPSU Congress decisions. Whatever effort this requires, everyone must do what is prescribed and do it conscientiously and with full exertion of effort. He is obliged to do so by the acuteness of the present time, feelings of patriotism and civic duty, and responsibility for the present and future of the homeland and for the cause of socialism and peace. The CPSU Central Committee appeals:

"Following the Leninist course of the 27th CPSU Congress — forward, along the path of communist creation and peace!"

DOSAAF Central Committee Holds Plenum 8 Apr

[Report by unidentified correspondent: "USSR DOSAAF Central Committee Plenum"]

[Text] The Fifth USSR DOSAAF Central Committee Plenum was held in Moscow on 8 April. Fleet Admiral G.M. Yegorov, chairman of the USSR DOSAAF Central Committee, delivered a report on the results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the tasks of DOSAAF organizations stemming from its decisions. The report emphasized that today the defense society's entire life and activity must take place under the sign of the practical fulfillment of the 27th party congress decisions. DOSAAF committees and organizations must concentrate their efforts on enhancing moral, political, and psychological training and improving the military-technical and physical training of predraft-age and draft-age young people.

A.I. Golyakov, chief of a sector of the CPSU Central Committee Administrative Organs Department, and D.A. Okhromiy, secretary of the Komsomol Central Committee, participated in the plenum's work.

Military Leaders Attend Conference on Academies' Tasks

PM181328 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 13 Apr 86 Second Edition p 1

[Report by Colonel N. Kalmykov: "Military Academies' New Goals"]

[Text] A training course for leading staff of military academies and chiefs of cadre organs of the branches of the Armed Forces has ended. Experience accumulated in teaching and educating students was exchanged, seminars on teaching methods were held, a group exercise was staged for demonstration purposes, recommendations were elaborated, and ways to further improve the training of higher military education officer cadres at the present stage of the Armed Forces' development were defined.

Those who attended the course heard and discussed a report delivered by Marshal of the Soviet Union S.F. Akhromeyev, chief of the Armed Forces General Staff and USSR first deputy defense minister, on the demands made on the training of officer cadres at the current stage of military building; a report by Army General I.N. Shkadov, USSR deputy defense minister for personnel, on the state of officer cadre training at military academies and ways of further improving it; and a report by Lieutenant General D.A. Volkonogov, deputy chief of the Soviet Army and Navy Main Political Directorate, on the further intensification of ideological, political, and moral education of students in accordance with the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress.

The following comrades took part in the debate on the reports: V.N. Konchits, G.V. Sredin, N.M. Skomorokhov, V.N. Ponikarovskiy, V.K. Strelnikov, N.G. Ivanov, F.I. Voinov, N.V. Meshcheryakov, and others.

Marshal of the Soviet Union S.L. Sokolov, candidate member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and USSR minister of defense, addressed the course participants.

The course was attended by Marshal of the Soviet Union V.G. Kulikov, USSR first deputy defense minister; Army General A.D. Lizichev, chief of the Soviet Army and Navy Main Political Directorate; and A.N. Soshnikov, deputy chief of a CPSU Central Committee department.

Sokolov Order on Air Defense Forces Day

PM151848 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 13 Apr 86 Second Edition p 1

[USSR Defense Minister Order of the Day No 82, dated Moscow, 13 April 1986]

[Text] Comrade soldiers and sailors, sergeants and petty officers!

Comrade ensigns and warrant officers!

Comrade officers, generals, and admirals!

Comrade workers, technicians, engineers, and designers!

Comrade air defense veterans!

Today our country and its Armed Forces are celebrating Air Defence Forces Day. This holiday is being marked in an atmosphere of the Soviet people's great political and labor enthusiasm, evoked by the historic decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress. The party's strategic course toward the acceleration of the country's socioeconomic development, the systematic and comprehensive improvement of socialism, and Soviet society's further progress toward communism has gained the broad support of all working people and Army and Navy servicemen. In endorsing the CPSU's general line and its domestic and foreign policy, the Soviet people and Armed Forces personnel are expressing their adamant will and determination to translate into reality the party's impressive plans and its realistic, comprehensively considered program of action to strengthen the motherland's economic and defense might.

In single combat formation with the servicemen of the other branches of the USSR Armed Forces, the Air Defense Forces are standing guard over the Soviet people's peaceful, creative labor.

Today, while the reactionary forces of imperialism are intensifying the preparation of the material base for a new world war and seeking to alter the military-strategic balance in their own favor, the CPSU and the Soviet Government resolutely advocate curbing the arms race, preventing the militarization of space, and improving the international situation.

Under these conditions, Air Defense Forces personnel are persistently improving their military skill, alertly mounting the combat standby watch, and vigilantly guarding the borders of our socialist homeland's airspace.

I greet and congratulate you on your holiday — Air Defense Forces Day!

I express the wish that personnel will successfully fulfill the demands of the 27th CPSU Congress to enhance the Soviet Armed Forces' vigilance and combat readiness, improve combat and political training, master new hardware and weapons, strengthen discipline and organization, and guarantee the inviolability of the Soviet State's air borders.

To mark Air Defense Forces' Day, I order:

That a festive firework display take place today, 13 April 1986, at 2200 local time, in the capital of our motherland, the hero-city of Moscow; the union republic capitals; the hero-cities of Leningrad, Volgograd, Odessa, Sevastopol, Novorossiysk, Kerch, Tula, Smolensk, and Murmansk; and the hero-fortress of Brest.

Long live our great motherland — the USSR!

Long live the heroic USSR Armed Forces and their valiant Air Defense Forces!

Glory to the CPSU — the inspirer and organizer of all our victories!

Marshal of the Soviet Union S. Sokolov, USSR defense minister.

Col Gen Bobylev Attends Komsomol Ceremony

PM181411 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 10 Apr 86 Second Edition p 3

[Report by Major A. Pochtarev: "Meeting at Komsomol Central Committee"]

[Text] On the eve of Air Defense Forces' Day, a meeting of servicemen — socialist competition pacesetters and those with excellent ratings in combat and political training — was held at the Komsomol Central Committee.

Komsomol Central Committee Secretary D. Okhromiy warmly greeted those present. He paid tribute to the work of the Air Defense Forces' Komsomol organizations in the communist education of Army youth.

Colonel General S. Bobylev, chief of the Air Defense Forces Political Directorate; Senior Lieutenant Yu. Zaykin; Cadet E. Staroselskiy, and others spoke about the continuity of heroic traditions, about how the defenders of the fatherland's airspace are translating the historic decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress into reality, and about how they vigilantly protect the Soviet people's peaceful, creative labor.

The meeting was attended by Major I. Yefimov, the Soviet Army and Navy Main Political Directorate chief's assistant for Komsomol work.

Komsomol Central Committee awards were presented to a large group of servicemen.

NEW SOVIET ARMS PROPOSALS CENTER ON EUROPE

Lomeyko Remarks

LD221216 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1133 GMT 22 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, 22 Apr (TASS) — The USSR's new proposal relating to reducing conventional weapons and armed forces on an all-European scale demonstrates that the Soviet Union is undertaking the most active efforts in order to bring about a lowering of the level of military confrontation in Europe in all forms of weapons, Vladimir Lomeyko, head of the USSR Foreign Ministry Press Center declared.

Our initiative backs up what has been underlined with all possible emphasis: The Soviet Union will never start military actions against Western Europe, unless the USSR and its allies become the target of attack from NATO. The Soviet proposal provides for a reduction of all components of the land troops and tactical aviation of all the European states, as well as of the corresponding U.S. and Canadian forces stationed in Europe. The reduced troop formations and units would be subject to disbandment and their armaments to destruction or to stockpiling on national territories. The geographical zone of the reduction could be the territory of all Europe from the Atlantic to the Urals.

The reduction must be implemented in agreed periods and with the constant preservation of the existing balance in the area of conventional arms and armed forces in Europe without harming anybody's security. It is being suggested that the reduction process should begin with the armed forces of both alliances and with the subsequent inclusion of other European states. At the same time, at each stage of the process of reduction of conventional arms and armed forces, measures must be agreed upon for the prevention of sudden attack.

It goes without saying that reliable verification [kontrol] of these reductions is essential. It may be a question of both national technical means and international forms of verification [proverka], including, if necessary, on-site inspection, the USSR Ministry of Foreign Affairs spokesman pointed out. The process of reducing conventional arms and armed forces in Europe must be implemented in combination with nuclear disarmament measures.

Levin Commentary

LD212206 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1645 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Victor Levin commentary from the "International Diary" program presented by Boris Andrianov]

[Text] In connection with the new Soviet proposal, Western newspapers often repeat the expression. The USSR's peace offensive continues. One could argue as to whether the use of the military term, offensive, is appropriate in the present context, but one cannot but agree with the point that the ideas presented by Comrade Gorbachev in Berlin develop previous proposals. Yes, they are a logical development of an innovative approach to urgent problems facing international life -- an approach founded on a sincere striving to ensure a firm and reliable peace for humanity based on equal security. This approach was clearly explained in the well-known statement, made by the CPSU Central Committee general secretary on 15 January, that proposed the bold and inspiring task of totally eliminating nuclear and chemical weapons by the beginning of the next century. This approach was reflected in the principled directives of the 27th CPSU Congress and, in particular, in the statement in the new edition of the CPSU Program that there is no weapon that the USSR would not be prepared to limit or ban on a mutual basis with effective monitoring.

Our party is boldly breaking stereotyped modes of thought and by all its actions on the world arena is asserting a new philosophy of international relations -- a philosophy appropriate to the nuclear age. Although voices from the West maintain that proposals for a total elimination of nuclear weapons are allegedly utopian, we firmly and consistently support the total liberation of mankind from the nuclear threat. We oppose the perverted logic of the apologists of nuclear weapons who put their trust in them with the deeply humanistic logic of eliminating these weapons in the name of life for the people of the earth. We stand for the reduction and ultimately, the total elimination of not only nuclear but also conventional weapons.

Our political opponents, shuffling the facts and keeping quiet about what the 27th CPSU Congress voiced aloud and with authority, have been trying to create the impression that the USSR is apparently opposing nuclear weapons so vigorously because it allegedly has powerful conventional armed forces; the West mendaciously asserts that Moscow says nothing about reducing them. We repeat, in the new edition of the CPSU Program this malicious invention is authoritatively exposed.

Now our position has been specifically defined in the initiative put forward in Berlin. The USSR proposes reaching accords on a considerable reduction in all components of the land troops and tactical aviation of the European states as well as those of the United States and Canada deployed in Europe. Those military formations and units that were cut would be disbanded and their arms would be destroyed or stockpiled on national territories. In the USSR's opinion the geographical zone for reductions should be the entire territory of Europe -- from the Atlantic to the Urals. Just like conventional weapons, nuclear operative-tactical weapons would be reduced. The USSR's political will for a cardinal solution to the issue of military confrontation has received yet another vivid confirmation. A real possibility is opening up for the continent to increase security by reducing weapons levels.

But at the same time -- and I especially want to emphasize this -- we are not avoiding the tricky problem of monitoring. It is tricky because it touches upon the vital interests of states and demands total equality. So we pose the question of creating a reliable monitoring system for carrying out the process of reducing weapons and armed forces. This monitoring can also include international forms of checking, including, when necessary, on-site inspections. The USSR proposals embrace the entire complex of problems linked with ensuring equal security on both sides; this bears out their businesslike character, their constructiveness, and realism; this is the reason why they have met with such broad approval.

ISRAELYAN PRESENTS NEW CW PROPOSALS IN GENEVA

LD221025 Moscow TASS in English 1016 GMT 22 Apr 86

[Text] Geneva April 22 TASS -- Yevgeniy Korzhev, a TASS correspondent, reports:

New Soviet proposals on a ban on chemical weapons, which were announced by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, in Berlin, have been tabled at the Geneva Conference on Disarmament today.

These proposals are of a concrete character, stressed Soviet representative Viktor Israelyan. They ensure a timely notification on the siting of plants producing chemical weapons and an end to their production, and make it possible to start drawing up procedures for the destruction of the production base and, shortly after the appropriate convention comes into force, eliminating chemical weapons stocks.

The Soviet Union has proposed that the termination of functioning of the plants producing chemical weapons, as well as their destruction and dismantling should be ensured through strict control, including systematic international on-site inspection.

STOCKHOLM SESSION SEEN AS POTENTIAL 'WATERSHED'

LD152203 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1500 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Valentin Gubernatorov report from Sweden]

[Text] In Stockholm, the Conference on Confidence-Building and Security Measures and Disarmament in Europe renewed its work today. Our correspondent Valentin Gubernatorov reports from the Swedish capital:

Many delegates are noting that the present session has started in a complicated situation. The United States is hardening its line in international affairs, undermining confidence, and threatening the security of other countries. In this way, it is violating the basic principles which the Stockholm Conference is called upon to guarantee. In spite of this, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries feel that the 10th session might become a watershed in the work of the forum. The peace initiatives put forward in the statement by Comrade Gorbachev on 15 January, and developed at the 27th CPSU Congress, serve as the basis for such optimism. These proposals have already had a positive influence on the achievement of a number of accords.

Thus, a number of questions have been defined for editing and possible inclusion in a final document, and formulations have been agreed upon in a preliminary form concerning the nonuse of force, the exchange of annual plans for military activity, invitations to observers to exercises, and others. Now our proposal to agree upon prior notification of major exercises of land and air forces, and to put the question of naval activity off to the next stage of the conference, is at the center of the talks. Unfortunately, the United States and its NATO allies have not yet given any intelligible response to this important initiative. This position of the NATO members is naturally holding back the work of the conference, which ends very shortly.

U.S. VIEWPOINT ON SECURITY TERMED 'DELUSION'

LD190648 Moscow in English to North America 2300 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] In a speech in Boston on Wednesday [16 April] Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger defended the star wars program, saying that the United States had achieved some breakthroughs in space weapon technology. This fall the United States is going to assemble small rocket boosters to be used on interceptors of ballistic missiles. There has also been some progress in tracking systems. These and similar disclosures made in the past about progress in the SDI are modest steps, but still they are steps towards militarizing outer space.

Building an experimental booster for an interceptor rocket is not research, so it's about time all talk about star wars being research which does not violate any previous U.S. commitments was stopped. Another thing is that building an antimissile defense in space is a long process. Boosters and tracking systems are essential parts of the SDI, but naturally many more things will have to be built. In other words, in the foreseeable future, we'll have a determined American effort to gain superiority.

Washington knows very well that a new spiral in the arms race is likely to remove all constraints, undermine the existing accords and understandings and lead to a situation nobody will be able to control.

If that day comes, and judging by Washington's determination it is not as far away as some may think, U.S. officials will most certainly make a long face and in their usual demagogic style will try to convince the world that all they wanted was peace, security, and general disarmament.

When they build small rocket boosters, improve tracking systems, test lasers, and keep exploding new types of weapons in Nevada, they not only dash our hopes to see a world without the nukes, they think they are rocking someone else's boat, not their own. They think that they are diminishing someone else's security while enhancing their own. What a delusion. America has a very strong muscle. For a superpower this is not enough. As far as brains go, the best brains are in Livermore and Los Alamos, but quite unfortunately, they are doing the same destructive work as those not so bright ones in Washington.

U.S. 'INTOXICATION WITH MILITARY POWER' DECRIED

LD191941 Moscow TASS in English 1939 GMT 19 Apr 86

["Washington: Intoxication With Military Power" -- TASS item identifier]

[Text] Moscow April 19 TASS -- Follows commentary by Yuriy Kornilov, a TASS political news analyst:

"Contrary to the vital interests and wishes of all peoples, including its own people, Washington has actually embarked on undermining the Geneva accords, on actions which aggravate the tense as it is international situation". A statement to this effect was made by Mikhail Gorbachev in his address to the 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany. There is more than enough ground for this evaluation of the policy pursued by the U.S. ruling circles. Added proof of that is the speech addressed by the U.S. President in New York to the activists of the Republican Party. Ronald Reagan called for combatting what he termed as Soviet expansionism and declared that the USA needs what he described as powerful and unexcelled armed forces.

This statement, in essence a direct call for upsetting the military-strategic parity, which shaped in the world, is in conflict with the joint Soviet-American statement signed in Geneva saying that the sides will not seek to achieve military superiority. The point at issue is not just and not only that they in the White House continue, contrary to common sense, regarding force as almost the sole "argument" of Washington in its relations with other countries, with the whole international community. The belligerent rhetoric, in which the U.S. President has recently engaged himself so much, is accompanied practically with ever more dangerous and defiant actions by Washington in the international arena.

Among them is the policy continued by the USA of intensive material preparations for nuclear war, its ambition to spread the arms race into outer space. Washington refuses to listen to the demands of world public and put an end to nuclear explosions. And now -- the brutal attack of the U.S. militarists against sovereign Libya, the buildup of the campaign of threats against Nicaragua, another sovereign country, the supplies of advanced weapons to hired gangs, reared by the CIA for acts of sabotage against revolutionary Afghanistan. All of these actions are links of one chain, component parts of one policy, the policy, whose architects, who would like to obtain a nuclear space stick, as long and sharp as possible, in order to be able to force their will on the sovereign countries and peoples and appear in the international arena as self-styled policemen, thus replacing the generally recognized principles of international communications with the jungle law.

History has repeatedly borne out that the attempts of the U.S. imperialist circles at ensuring military superiority over the USSR, which is openly advocated by the U.S. President today, has always suffered a fiasco. That was the case with the attempted "nuclear blackmail", in response to which the USSR created its own nuclear shield. The same thing happened when the USA attempted to outstrip our country in the size and power of the nuclear arsenal. This will happen in any other attempt at upsetting the parity of the strategic forces. Today the Soviet Union is ready and can do everything to give a fitting rebuff to any aggressive designs, and uphold its security. The hopes of the imperialist circles to hide from retribution behind an anti-missile shield are illusory.

The facts, the very march of events are irrefutable evidence that the times when imperialism exercised its undivided say in the world, are gone, gone forever. Intoxication with military power, the hegemonistic policy, which so clearly revealed its aggressive essence in the course of the aggressive raid on Libya can lead only to a moral and political defeat of the USA and its growing isolation in the international arena.

It is high time to grow up and face the realities, Ronald Reagan said in New Orleans in March. This is a very apt remark. Yet, the President would be well advised to address it above all, to his own self and to his closest entourage, since facts most convincingly attest that in this day banking on force, on "big stick" and "aircraft carrier diplomacy" can settle nothing -- either in international, or domestic terms.

U.S. PLANS CONSTRUCTION OF NEW LASER SYSTEM

LD190124 Moscow TASS in English 0905 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 18 TASS -- TASS correspondent Aleksandr Shalnev reports:

The U.S. Defense Department is planning to start next year the construction of a laser installation which is to become the first and one of the principal components of the "star wars" system.

According to the information supplied to the Congress by Lieutenant General James Abrahamson, director of the organization in charge of the implementation of the SDI, the construction will begin in the White Sands training ground, New Mexico, and will take up from three to four years. According to WASHINGTON POST, the laser which is being developed today by the Livermore Laboratory in California can also be used as a weapon for hitting satellites during their flight over the territory of the United States.

The news about the coming construction of the laser installation evoked concern in the scientific circles. According to one of the senior workers of the Brookings Institution in Washington, the laser can be used as an offensive weapon, for example, for starting enormous fire in various parts of the globe.

UN DELEGATES DEBATE, CONDEMN U.S. ATTACK ON LIBYA

LD190238 Moscow TASS in English 0755 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 18 TASS -- TASS correspondent Arkadiy Sidoruk reports:

The U.N. Security Council debates on the provocative armed actions of the USA in the central Mediterranean have become a trial of American imperialism which perpetrated a deliberate act of aggression against Libya and is pursuing a policy of state terrorism towards other non-aligned states.

The ruthless atrocity commited by Washington against Libya fits into its policy of international banditry, Afghanistan's delegate Ibrahim Nengrahary said. The criminal actions of the United States constitute a flagrant breach of every principle and norms of international law and a challenge to the whole of mankind, which is making efforts to strengthen international peace and security.

These barbarous actions, the Afghan delegates said, deserve the strongest condemnation of the Security Council and of the international community as a whole.

Arab delegates pointed out that the U.S. act of aggression against Libya would lead to the aggravation of the explosive situation in the Middle East. That act of aggression, Sudan's permanent representative to the United Nations, Omar Bidido, said, looks especially sinister against the background of the continued occupation of Arab lands by Israel and the growing suffering of the Palestinian people, denied their right to a homeland by imperialism and Zionism. Clovis Maksud, the permanent observer of the Arab League at the United Nations warned that state terrorism perpetrated by the Israeli invaders in south Lebanon and in the West Bank of Jordan with Washington's blessing was bound to trigger another upsurge of violence.

The United States is the true terrorist, which is irrefutably illustrated by its dirty armed aggression against the three Indo-Chinese peoples, Laotian delegate Done Somvorachit said. Having denounced the "act of barbarity" against Libya, the permanent representative of Benin to the United Nations, Simon Ogouma, pointed out the need to refrain from the threat or use of force against the terrorial integrity and independence of states in international relations.

Only the British delegate, John Thomson, took upon himself the unseemly role of an advocate of international banditry perpetrated by the USA against Libya. His attempts to justify in the eyes of the world community the position of the conservative Thatcher government, a direct accomplice in the U.S. act of aggression, also looked pitiful.

Non-aligned countries submitted to the Security Council a draft resolution which denounces the U.S. armed attacks on Libya as a breach of the Charter of the United Nations and the norms of international conduct. The draft calls upon the USA to refrain in future from any attacks or on threats to sovereign Libya and asks the U.N. secretary general to take every necessary measure to restore and ensure peace in the central Mediterranean.

UK, France, U.S. Veto Resolution

LD220417 Moscow TASS in English 0408 GMT 22 Apr 86

[Text] New York April 22 TASS -- The United States, Britain and France resorted to a veto in the United Security Council to prevent the adoption of a resolution denouncing the U.S. armed attacks on Libya -- the actions staged by the United States in violation of the United Nations Charter and norms of international law.

A draft resolution submitted to the council by a group of nonaligned countries pointed to a serious concern of the international community over the threat to peace and security which emerged as a result of the U.S. armed attacks on Libyan cities.

Despite the West's veto, the debates in United Nations Security Council, where representatives of more than 40 countries and international organizations condemned that flagrant breach of norms of international law and human morality by the United States, clearly demonstrated that the international community considered Washington to be the main culprit of the aggravating tensions in the world.

Veto Demonstrates 'Isolation'

[Text] New York April 22 TASS -- TASS correspondent Vyacheslav Chernyshev reports:

The U.S., Britain and France used their right of veto at the U.N. Security Council on Monday in order to prevent the adoption of a resolution denouncing U.S. armed attacks on Libya staged by it in violation of the U.N. Charter and norms of international law.

The draft document submitted by a group of non-aligned countries and supported by nine members of the Security Council pointed out a serious concern of the world community over the threat to universal peace and security coming from the U.S. armed attacks on Libyan cities. It urged the U.S. to refrain in the future from any attacks or threats of attack.

Despite the triple veto of the Western countries, the discussion at the Security Council, in the course of which representatives of over 40 countries and international organizations condemned the flagrant violation by the U.S. of the norms of international law and of moral standards common to all mankind, clearly showed that the world community regarded Washington as the main culprit of the heightening of tension on the planet.

It reflected the serious concern over the threat to world peace and security as a result of overt terrorism elevated by the U.S. to the level of state policy within the framework of the doctrine of neoglobalism.

According to 'Ali al-Turayki, Libya's ambassador at the U.N., any nation, any country which says "no" to the attempts of U.S. imperialism to impose it domination is a victim of this policy. Yesterday it was Grenada, today it is Libya and Nicaragua.

This is why American bombs killing women and children, napalm and other most sophisticated means of manslaughter are a warning to all the nations which are threatened by U.S. imperialism.

'Abd al-Mou'men al-Atassi, representative of Syria, said that the voices of nine countries which supported the adoption of the resolution reflected the opinion of the overwhelming majority of countries of the world community, of all the peace-minded nations. They expressed the anguish and indignation of mankind staggered by the killing of women and children in Libya, by destroyed schools, hospitals and residential areas that had been chosen by the aggressors as targets.

Yuriy Dubinin, USSR ambassador to the U.N., said that if anyone could have doubts until recently about who was the one to blame for the present-day heightening of tension, the latest developments had made it perfectly clear.

It is U.S. imperial policy in all its manifestations. In its striving to reverse the course of history, imperialism counts even more openly on the use of force, on interference in the affairs of free nations and on state terrorism.

If one is to analyze the latest developments in a broad international context, the crime against Libya, the same as the stubborn continuation of nuclear tests and ever more insolent threats against Nicaragua cannot be regarded in isolation one from another. They all are the manifestation of the overall policy of Washington, whose militaristic and aggressive nature was revealed to the full these days.

The U.S. and European leaders should realize that these actions undermine the dialogue between the USSR and the U.S., between the East and the West in general. In the extremely complicated situation that has taken shape the problem is as follows: If measures are not taken today for stopping the aggression against Libya, tomorrow any other sovereign country can become the target of armed violence with all the consequences involved for world peace and security.

In this situation the duty of the Security Council was to strongly denounce the adventuresome actions of the U.S. administration and to take all the necessary measures for immediately putting an end to the policy of state terrorism pursued by it.

The fact that the Security Council failed to adopt a resolution to this effect does not mean that the discussion of the problem does not bring any results. On the contrary, it only stresses that the Western countries found themselves in isolation and had to resort to the extreme measure.

As for the U.S., it will not avoid condemnation of its adventuresome actions by all the peace-minded countries, by the world community in general.

The Security Council will continue the discussion of the U.S. aggression against Libya after the arrival in New York of a special delegation of ministers of foreign affairs of non-aligned countries.

WEEKLY 'INTERNATIONAL OBSERVERS ROUNDTABLE'

LD201847 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1130 GMT 20 Apr 86

["International Observers Roundtable" program with Aleksey Nikolayevich Grigoryev, TASS Political Observer; and Viktor Aleksandrovich Tsoppi, member of the NOVOYE VREMYA editorial board; and presented by Igor Pavlovich Charikov, foreign political commentator of All-Union Radio]

11th SED Congress

[Text] [Charikov] Hello there, esteemed comrades. As you well know, our program is a weekly one and this means that each time the participants pick the most important and interesting events of the past 7 days for discussion, examination, and analysis, and consider them from the point of view of their connection with other events and phenomena in international life. In this respect, it seems to me that the 11th SED Congress currently under way in Berlin can be regarded as one of the week's most important events. It is important from various points of view: first, from the point of view of the German Democratic Republic, its development, its social and economic development; second, from the point of view of its involvement in international affairs; and third, it is also important because it provides us with an occasion to discuss the important and serious international problems that were touched on at the congress -- both in Comrade Erich Honecker's report and in the speech delivered by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev at the congress last Friday.

[Grigoryev] The 11th Congress of GDR Communists is indeed a highly important event, both for the Republic itself and for the whole of our socialist community. The socialist world, as Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev said in Berlin, is living through a watershed period. History has harshly confronted our countries with the necessity of making fuller use of the advantages of the new social system. It is a well-known fact that the congresses of Hungarian and Romanian Communists took place last year, that this year our party held its 27th congress, and the congresses of Czechoslovak and Bulgarian Communists were held this year as well. Now we have the GDR. The congress of Polish Communists is still to come. And the decisions of these congresses -- again, as was stressed in Mikhail Sergeyevich's speech in Berlin -- make up socialism's answer to this challenge of the times. The answer will of course be varied, reflecting the distinctive features of the development of each of the fraternal countries, but in its fundamental basis this answer is a single one: We have common goals and one outlook, a communist outlook.

In this regard I would like to say a few words about the 11th SED congress. The report of Comrade Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee, stressed that the last 15 years have been marked by a steady advance of the German Democratic Republic in the economic and social spheres. The 1981-85 plan was successfully fulfilled. The congress is now putting forward the program for the coming 10-15 years. Moreover, of fundamental importance here is the fact that the German Democratic Republic, one of the most developed countries of our community in the industrial sense, is setting itself very serious and important tasks for the development of electrical engineering, electronics, and machine-building, in other words tasks that are not just important for the GDR itself but, I repeat, for the entire community.

There are very interesting tasks, and achievements too, tasks that the congress will set with regard to agriculture. This is very much of interest to us here, since the agro-industrial associations in the GDR have long been functioning successfully, while production associations in the form of combines are also of very great interest, as something we would like to learn about.

Naturally, the report of Comrade Honecker and the congress speeches of GDR Communists in general dealt not just with the domestic tasks of the Republic's working people, but also with the contribution being made by the first state of workers and peasants on German soil to the struggle for peace and for strengthening socialism in the world.

[Tsoppi] This is all the more so significant in that the GDR occupies a central position in Europe. It is located at the meeting point of the two political blocs.

[Grigoryev] Yes, it is the outpost of socialism in Europe. Yes, that is unquestionably so. I would like to say that the SED congress is also taking place at a time when two major and important anniversaries are being marked. First, the anniversary of the party itself. Forty years ago, in 1946, the noteworthy — historic, one might say — handshake between Wilhelm Pieck, chairman of the Communist Party of Germany of the time, and Otto Grotewohl, chairman of the German Social Democratic Party of that time, cemented the alliance between these two detachments of the German working class, an alliance that was so lacking at the end of the twenties and beginning of the thirties. By the way, that handshake is even depicted on the party badge of GDR Communists. And the 2d anniversary, also a very significant one, is the 100th anniversary of the birth of Ernst Thaelmann, leader of the German proletariat. This event was marked in the GDR by the unveiling of a memorial to Ernst Thaelmann and the opening of a park named after him.

[Tsoppi] You were quite right to say, Aleksey Nikolayevich, that a great deal of attention at the congress of our German comrades was paid to the problems of the struggle for peace and the strengthening of European and universal security.

Gorbachev Speech

And in this sense it seems to me that Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev's speech was exceedingly important -- exceedingly important and in keeping with the atmosphere at the Berlin congress, the atmosphere that reigns today in the German Democratic Republic and, generally speaking, the atmosphere that reigns in Europe and throughout the world. Let me recall that the speech was delivered a few days after the United States exploded two nuclear bombs in a row in the Nevada desert, that the speech was made at a time when the whole world was discussing with outrage and indignation the act of banditry undertaken by the United States against sovereign Libya. In the complex, tense, critical situation that has arisen today, our leader's words were able to inspire confidence in many ordinary people, people who are not indifferent to the problem of war and peace, confidence that the Soviet Union is as good as its word and that it will never weaken or abandon its efforts to avert a new war. In this sense our leader's speech differs very substantially from the position adopted by our, so to speak, main negotiating partner on problems of international security, the United States. In essence, you see, and even if you take just the brief space of time that has elapsed since 15 January when the Soviet Union proposed its program for fully ridding mankind of nuclear weapons by the year 2000, in essence no intelligible, constructive, or considered response has emanated from Washington or from the capitals of the NATO bloc allies of the United States.

Let us recall that Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev went to Geneva and talked to Reagan. It seemed that a spur had been provided and that a new dialogue, based on reason and common sense, had been launched. Let me recall that in January we proposed a program for the complete destruction of nuclear weapons which I mentioned a moment ago. These were major initiatives; they meet the interests of all peoples.

[Grigoryev] Let us recall our moratorium on nuclear tests which lasted from 6 August last year right up to 31 March, and went on even further; it continued until the first nuclear blast in Nevada...

[Tsoppi, interrupting] Of course, of course, that is extremely important; this restraint of ours, this consistency, not only in putting forward initiatives, but also in consolidating them with serious actions, specific ones, very important ones, which — the idea was — should have encountered some sort of understanding across the ocean, some sort of response, some sort of counter-step. Unfortunately, they have called forth nothing of the sort. In essence, the United States has embarked on the path of cold war, the path on which it is attempting to undermine the Geneva accords.

Raid on Libya

[Charikov] And not just the path of cold war, as we know.

[Tsoppi] Yes, of course, they are dreaming of a global war, a universal war, while last week they once again proved their love of peace and their love of freedom and democracy, having carried out a truly monstrous terrorist crime against the Libyan republic. There was a very great deal of talk of all sorts around this action, about the fact that the United States is the champion of the struggle against terrorism, and will stop at nothing in order to break this wave of terrorism, but in essence it has played the role of the real terrorist. You know, much has already been written and said about this, the fact that children and women perished in Libya — perfectly peaceful people who had nothing to do with America, who never engaged in any sort of terrorism. Evidently for the United States anybody who is not an American is a terrorist, and those countries refusing to follow this strange logic are also declared allies of the terrorists. Although terrorism per se is, of course, a repulsive phenomenon — this was said more than once at our 27th party congress as well — and, of course, it must be fought, when this terrorism is elevated to state policy, when it become state policy, then the state carrying it out begins to experience a complex, believing it can do anything with impunity. But, of course, it is not so. That wave of protest that has arisen in Europe, and particularly in the Arab world, in Asia, and in Latin America following this crime, shows that nothing passes with impunity.

European Reaction

[Grigoryev] When you talked about reaction to the U.S. crime against Libya, about reaction from various continents, and, above all, in Europe, I would have liked to have said the following: Well, first of all, the United States does have an ally in Europe: that same iron lady, the prime minister of Great Britain, Thatcher, who gave permission for the use of U.S. Air Force bases on British territory to send those same squadrons of F-111 bombers which bombed Libyan cities.

[Charikov] That, in effect, made Britain an accomplice.

[Grigoryev] Britain has become an accomplice.

[Tsoppi] Although other countries refused. France, for example, refused to allow the airplanes to fly over its territory.

[Grigoryev] France forbade it. Spain forbade it. All that is quite so. Naturally, in Britain this Whitehall decision was followed by an outburst of indignation from the opposition parties, the Labour Party, and the Communist Party, and by an outburst of public opinion, and even public opinion polls have shown that the overwhelming majority of the Britons not only condemn the U.S. action but are also protesting the complicity of their own government in this crime.

You have already spoken about France. It must be said that the Americans, in carrying out this action, to put it (?plainly), have simply spat in the faces of their West European allies. After all, take this fact -- it is almost trustworthy, almost accurate; it was reported by the West German newspaper WESTDEUTSCHE ALLGEMEINE. At the moment the squadrons of F-111's were over the Atlantic en route to Libya, later to skirt around Spain and to enter the Mediterranean aerial basin, following almost the same course almost at the same time was an airliner with Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the FRG foreign minister, who was bound for the United States as a sort of West European envoy to attempt somehow to persuade the United States not to snatch at this extreme measure at all. While still en route across the Atlantic, Genscher learned via radio reports and understood that he was too late and that in effect his mission would change nothing. It is true, he met with Reagan; it is true, he conveyed all these doubts and objections from Western Europe, but as they say, it was too late.

[Charikov] Well, formally, the United States, strictly speaking, notified the leaders of the main European powers that such action was in the planning, that is true. Their opinion, first of all, was not asked, and second, having heard it, they disregarded it in effect and this is where...

[Grigoryev, interrupting] They unquestionably disregarded it and it must be said that a really peculiar situation has unfolded in Western Europe. On the one hand, we have this spitting, this quite unceremonious attitude toward their allies, a lack of respect for their opinion; while on the other hand, there is this notorious Atlantic solidarity. Well, I am not talking about Great Britain now, but let us say, that same FRG -- these governments have tried to take up some sort of ostrich position, the famous position of burying one's head in the sand: I see nothing; I hear nothing. Chancellor Kohl made a statement, a long statement, in which he spoke about terrorism, a mass of all sorts of words that repeated Reagan faithfully, but he did not find a single word to express regret that tens, maybe hundreds, of civilians were killed in Libya. This duplicity looks particularly strident against the background of the wave of tumultuous protest from the most varied people and organizations in Europe.

[Tsoppi] After all, essentially, there has also been an attempt to give NATO a new function. They talk all the time about NATO being a defensive alliance which is called on to protect Western Europe from the Soviet Union's aggressive intentions, and that is all. However, in the given situation, two NATO members took part in an aggression on another continent, having flown over that same Mediterranean Sea where the great European civilization was born, which they care about so much, if one is to believe their words.

[Grigoryev] I would like to recall the words Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev uttered a little earlier during his meeting with Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson. There he talked about the responsibility of the world community in general, and of the United Nations, but in the first instance, of Western Europe and of the NATO countries, for what happened to Libya. He emphasized that mankind's self-preservation instinct must be activated, and it is no longer possible to close one's eyes to what is happening in the Mediterranean basin proceeding from any political or ideological differences. Finally, we must go over from words to deeds.

U.S. Aims in Raid

[Charikov] You know, I think we must devote a few words more to this anti-Libyan action by the United States, because it seems to me that it had several simultaneous aims. Well, the first aim, as we have already said, was the repressive aim of punishing an Arab country which the United States had chose...

[Tsoppi, interrupting] Against which they level an unsupported accusation of terrorism.

[Charikov] Yes, against which they level a bald accusation of terrorism, of all the mortal sins, as it were, and Libya is blamed for everything happening in the whole world that displeases them. The second aim of the attack on Libya was to distract the attention of the world public, and of their own public, from the continuing nuclear weapons tests on the Nevada site -- in effect, from the buildup of military power and actual preparations, material preparations, for war.

[Tsoppi] And from the wrecking of all negotiations.

[Charikov] And, yes, from the wrecking of all negotiations. That is, to switch everyone's attention from one subject to another. (?And, you know,) it was very important not to fall for that propaganda trick, as it were, and not to lose sight of the main aim that they are pursuing. And I must say it is to the credit of the international public that it has not swallowed the bait.

[Tsoppi] There is a phrase in use in America now, that terrorism is the bait that Reagan is using to catch votes.

[Charikov] Yes. Incidentally, Reagan was also hoping to gain points in some way, to make political hay of it, as they say in English. In translation -- from English of course -- this means first, to heighten a bit the chauvinistic feeling in the United States, which had frankly been burning rather more sluggishly after Reagan's political setbacks against the background of the Soviet Union's active foreign policy; to give those chauvinistic sentiments a bit of a boost and, riding the wave appear as a peacemaker, appear as the defender of ideals, freedom, democracy, and so on and so forth. Do not forget that he will soon be quitting the political arena, and he wants to go, as the TRIBUNE newspaper writes: He wants to depart from that arena as a man of peace. I think in a certain sense he has succeeded in raising that wave of chauvinistic feeling in the United States. A survey of the American press indicates, for instance, that this is has often been done artificially. Both television and radio have been abuzz about how splendidly the American pilots acquitted themselves, what fine pilots they are, and how brilliantly they carried out the operation.

[Tsoppi] At a meeting with journalists yesterday at a annual dinner in honor of the press, Reagan mainly praised not the pilots who dropped the bombs on Tripoli and Banghazi, but precisely the journalists who had given him so much help in whipping up that frenzy of chauvinism.

[Charikov] Yes, chauvinistic psychosis. You know, it went so far that our Washington correspondent, Vladimir Dunayev, was telling me on the telephone that a taxi driver who was not particularly knowledgeable -- I mean in the deep sense -- about politics, was saying: What a good job we have done in Libya, how we punished those terrorists. You see, that man had to be convinced; and now, imagine: If tomorrow, or next week, the Pentagon and the President of the United States were suddenly to give the order for a direct armed invasion of Nicaragua, that same American, that taxi driver would say: There you are, you see how consistently and how correctly our President acts, by punishing terrorists, this time not somewhere over there in Africa -- North Africa -- but right here on our doorstep, where they have established themselves and are stirring up trouble in Central America.

[Tsoppi] That is just what he is after. Shultz has been saying that this is a splendid military success that has given us a chance to try out the military strength of the United States in practice. And what next? Who is next?

Soviet Viewpoints

[Charikov] That is why, in this situation -- when at the congress in Berlin, new proposals were advanced in the speech by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev -- an appeal has again been addressed to the American leadership, the leaders of the major European powers, to return to the spirit of Geneva, to get back to the conference table, to tackle serious questions, the questions of war and peace, life and death: Now for that very reason, I think, these proposals have rung out with still greater force in the context of the events of the past week.

[Tsoppi] Of course. The voice of our country has been confident, calm; we are not losing our self-control; we are not losing sight of our purpose. It is very significant that the leader of the Soviet delegation was speaking from the capital of the socialist German Democratic Republic to all the people of Western Europe and addressing to them such a sincere appeal: Do not believe the fictions about the aggressiveness of the Soviet Union. Never, under any circumstances, will our country begin military operations against Western Europe unless we and our allies become the target of attack by NATO. I repeat: Never.

That message has, indeed, been heard throughout Western Europe and throughout the world and given many people food for thought; the more so since Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev then immediately went on to advance a new, radical, and very important far-reaching initiative in the sphere of our foreign policy, in the sphere of the struggle to strengthen European security, when he said that the Soviet Union proposes reaching an agreement to considerably reduce all components of the ground forces and tactical air forces of the European states, as well as the corresponding forces of the United States and Canada stationed in Europe; that the military formations and units that would be reduced should be subject to disbandment -- that is, that they should cease to exist, while their armaments would be either destroyed or stored on the national territories. The geographical zone of the reduction evidently should be the entire territory of Europe, from the Atlantic to the Urals. The fact is that our proposal to withdraw medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe has engendered a reaction on the part of the West European member-countries of NATO that is seemingly somewhat unexpected if you look at it logically. They said: well, so you will remove your missiles, but you will still have your conventional forces, and we will again fear the Soviet military threat since we will not have any U.S. missiles capable of responding to your SS-20 missiles. All right, then: We now propose removing that obstacle as well, though it is an obstacle mainly in the eyes of those who believe in the Soviet military threat -- they, too, will be removed.

[Charikov] What we are talking about, Viktor Aleksandrovich, is the talks on mutual reduction of armed forces and armaments in central Europe that have been going on in Vienna for 13 years now. In the political lexicon they are known as the Vienna talks. Well now, what Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev proposed is essentially a continuation, a development of the initiatives that the Soviet Union, on behalf of the socialist countries -- jointly with the socialist countries -- has more than once put forward at various times. To be specific: on 20 February of this year, an extended draft agreement on an initial reduction of ground forces and armaments by the Soviet Union and the United States was submitted for examination by the participants at the talks; that was to be followed by a nonincrease of the level of armed forces and armaments of those sides, and the agreement also dealt with measures in central Europe connected with this.

Incidentally, I want to point out that this proposal on the part of the socialist countries, dated 20 March, was made by the representative of the German Democratic Republic, Ambassador Andre Wieland.

Even then, in this draft agreement, the Soviet Union and the socialist countries proposed within a year of the agreement going into effect -- the one they proposed to conclude -- a reduction, that is, a withdrawal to the limits of their national territory, of, respectively, 11,500 and 6,500 servicemen of the ground forces of the USSR and the United States along with all combat equipment. Well, they proposed a great number of other measures there. It was perfectly obvious that the draft agreement served as the most realistic basis for reaching a compromise, for reaching some kind of compromise. Repeatedly, over many years, the Western side at the Vienna talks -- I have in mind the United States and its closest allies -- the Western side declined our initiatives one after the other, clutching first at one formal obstacle, then at another; first at the factor of control and the verification factor, then at the so-called numerical difference, differences in the calculations of the existing troop contingents. Our latest initiatives did not, as they say, leave even a shadow of a doubt as far as the sincerity of our intentions is concerned, nor any pretexts for not beginning really serious constructive talks in Vienna on the essence of the mandate of these talks, that is, on the reduction of armed forces and arms in central Europe.

[Tsoppi] I would like in this connection to point out another detail which is that we not only put forward our own proposals, our own initiatives, but treat very carefully and attentively all constructive proposals worked out in Europe. So, for example, Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev said that we consider all constructive initiatives valuable and are prepared to examine them, and he gave as an example the idea worked out jointly with the Socialist Unity Party of Germany and the Social Democratic Party of Germany, a West German party, for creating in Europe a zone free of chemical weapons. This is extremely important today. Analyzing the situation in the world it is impossible not to come to what I would call this double conclusion: what times, what season are we going through? What is it, the spring of great hope which was engendered by the Soviet proposals which met with such a lively, what I would call personal response from many, many people in the whole world? Or is it the spring of great alarm which has been engendered by such irresponsible actions by international imperialist reaction? I do not think there is a contradiction here. There is both great hope and there is great, really substantiated alarm. However, never abandon the thought that averting such a development of events in which alarm grows into panic, which grows into a kind of blind, paralyzing terror that deprives us all, the inhabitants of the earth, of the ability to think, the ability to avert the collective end for all of us, the end for all of us in a moment; the thought that the outcome of this duel of healthy forces, the forces of tomorrow, with the forces of the past, which are stubbornly clutching onto their hegemonist ambitions, which want to impose on all mankind their line of conduct through either provocations of the Libyan kind or with the aid of new nuclear explosions -- the thought that very much, comrades, depends on every one of us, on me and you, I have in mind, us, the Soviet people. [sentence as heard]

It has been known for a long time that foreign policy is a continuation of domestic policy. Our country has now moved into a new, crucial historical stage for which we have to achieve a qualitative reconstruction of our society. I remind you of another speech by Mikhail Sergeyevich which he made a few days ago in Tolyatti. He said that the main front in guaranteeing the success of the struggle for peace is the implementation of tasks for the further development of socialist society. The condition of our national economy, the development of science and technology, the qualitative reorganization of the economy, and the increasing of the spiritual, intellectual, and moral potential of Soviet power are decisive. In the final analysis, things depend on the work of each of us: in a word, a strong healthy economy guarantees the success of the policy of peace too. This is what is called the link between foreign policy and domestic policy. This is why the responsibility of each of us is so great today, wherever we work. For capitalism is also developing, but developing while negating itself. It engenders the more and more unbearable inequality of people, more and more conflicts and, literally growing before one's eyes -- and we spoke of this already -- the monstrous danger of world thermonuclear war.

Imperialist foreign policy is the policy of total confrontation and it reflects its internal ideological and political doctrine based on the fact that under capitalism exploitation of many by man exists and will continue to exsit as long as there is capitalism. Well, you see, this is manifested in international relations as we saw, for example, in the mutual relations of the United States and its allies, in the example of their attempts to wreck the talks with the Soviet Union, in the example of their aggressive actions against developing countries, and so on and so forth.

[Charikov] Well, comrades, it seems to me it is time to sum up our conversation today and I would like to say a few words. Victor Aleksandrovich, you recalled that capitalism is carrying out a policy of total confrontation. In doing this it does not balk at any means or unlawful methods and we are repeatedly witnessing this. But our policy differs fundamentally from the policy of the imperialist powers. As Mikhail Sergeyevich said in Berlin, there are no traps in our policy. We stretch out to the West not a fist but an open palm. We are striving toward mutual understanding. We are seeking it. We are striving toward the limitation of the arms race not from our weakness; we need peace, that is true, but everyone needs it. Our policy is dictated by concern for the survival of all mankind, maybe the only civilization in the starry expanse of the galaxy.

Our program has come to an end. On behalf of its participants, I thank you and say good-bye, comrades. All the best to you.

VOSS ATTENDS IPU CONFERENCE IN MEXICO

LD141313 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 9 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[TASS report: "Interparliamentary Union Conference"]

[Text] Mexico City, 8 Apr -- The 75th conference of the Interparliamentary Union has opened here. It is being attended by delegations of parliamentary groups from almost 100 of the union's member-countries. The Soviet delegation is headed by A.E. Voss, chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Soviet of Nationalities and deputy chairman of the USSR Parliamentary Group.

The conference agenda includes the parliamentarians' contributions to the resolution of issues of vital importance for all mankind such as curbing the arms race, disarmament, prevention of the militarization of space, and elimination of dangerous hotbeds of tension on the planet.

Opening the conference, President Miguel de la Madrid of Mexico emphasized that parliaments can make a major contribution to the struggle for the observance of the principles of peaceful coexistence on earth.

The speeches of Antonio Riva Palacio (Mexico), the conference's elected president, and other delegates have demonstrated that the parliamentarians of most countries intend to contribute to the solution of key international problems by means of dialogue.

FURTHER REACTION TO U.S. RAID ON LIBYA

Lomeyko Claims 5 U.S. Planes Lost

AU220853 Paris AFP in English 0849 GMT 22 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 22 (AFP) -- At least five U.S. planes, possibly six, were shot down in the raid on Libya a week ago, Soviet Foreign Ministry Spokesman Vladimir Lomeyko said on Tuesday.

The United States was trying to make people believe that there had been no serious losses in the attack on Libya, but this was not the case, he said.

He added that the Soviet Union had obtained this information "by its own means and using its own radars" and from "various sources".

Mr. Lomeyko added: "Several planes were shot down and destroyed, including an F-111. The wrecks of two aircraft were located on the ground and two planes were monitored at the moment they crashed. That makes a total of five confirmed, and according to another sources, there were six."

As questions rained down on him from journalists, Mr. Lomeyko backpedalled somewhat, refusing to give more details on how he reached his final total, finally adding "well, several planes were destroyed or damaged" and "losses were heavier than announced" by Washington.

Bush Says Further Action Possible

LD211145 Moscow TASS in English 1120 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 21 TASS -- The Reagan administration continues working up hysterical anti-Libyan campaign. U.S. Vice-President George Bush announced the possibility of "further action" against that country. He emphasized that the United States would repeat the raid if necessary.

According to the NBC television company, one more aircraft carrier, the Enterprise, will join this week the forces of the U.S. 6th Fleet used to stage bandit attacks on Libya. This will be essential in the event of a new attack on Libya, NBC emphasized.

One of the tasks of the U.S. bombing raid on Libya was to kill the leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and estabilized the situation in that country with a view to installing a new government suitable to the United States, as the White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan frankly admitted.

Anti-Libyan statements of administration officials are intensifying the chauvinistic frenzy in the United States. In a fit of jingoism, supporters of the cult of strength are destroying French-made goods and foodstuffs in retaliation for the refusal of the French Government to let U.S. F-111 fighter-bombers based in Great Britain fly through France's air space.

At the same time certain quarters in the U.S. are coming to realize that the attack on Libya in the final analysis boomeranged at the United States showing the Reagan administration in the shameful role of a killer of children, women and other innocent Libyan civilians. The U.S. bombing raids on Libya will seriously damage America's interests in the Arab world, THE NEW YORK TIMES wrote.

NEW YORK TIMES columnist Anthony Lewis wrote that the U.S. attack on Libya left the United States and its allies "profoundly divided." There are more worries in Western Europe, he emphasized, about Reagan's unilateral interventionism -- in Lebanon, Nicaragua, Angola -- and about the Rambo talk.

One of the graphic examples that Lewis is right came when former British Prime Minister Edward Health gave an interview to the NBC television company. He said that Libya posed no threat of any kind to the United States, and that the American action could not be justified from the standpoint of the United Nations Charter. Britons fear, the former British premier said, that such an escalation of military action could lead to a nuclear holocaust.

Reagan's 'Rambo Style' Noted

LD212052 Moscow TASS in English 2110 GMT 21 Apr 86

["Alarming Parallels" -- TASS indentifier]

[Text] Moscow April 21 TASS -- TASS News Analyst Sergey Solovyev writes:

The world in which we live is fragile. It has become even more brittle after the piratic strikes of U.S. planes on Libya. The United States has thus taken one more step toward the abyss.

There have been many cases in history when whole states gripped by chauvinistic hysteria, led by extremely irresponsible, fanatical politicians, rushed into the abyss of militaristic ventures.

Everyone knows how all this ended. The trouble is that not all are capable of learning the lessons of history. This is shown patently enough by the militaristic attitudes now prevailing in the USA and particularly by Ronald Reagan's record as the President of the United States.

The military occupation of tiny Grenada, barbarous bombing strikes on Lebanon and Libya, the mining of Nicaraguan ports, the stirring up of regional conflicts in Asia, Africa and Latin America, the masterminding of military coups in independent countries, the assassinations of undesirable politicians -- the mere list of these military-political, subversive and terroristic actions staged during Ronald Reagan's presidency suggests alarming historical parallels.

Just as was the case in the 30's, West European countries, lulled by 'peaceable' assurances, this time coming from their transoceanic ally, try not to irritate the President too much by lamentations about his peace threatening policy. Nevertheless, even the United States allies show the growing concern over his interventionism in Lebanon, Nicaragua, Angola, and also over his pronouncements in Rambo's style, as the newspaper NEW YORK TIMES remarks today.

The character of the latest U.S. hits, Rambo, look evil even on the screen from which he proclaims the cult of crude violence. and appearing in the international scene as a President of a strong power he would be simply dangerous.

President Reagan said once again the other day that the United States needs arms forces unmatched for strength. [sentence as received] In this connection, in view of the ever growing aggressiveness of the United States, it is easy to imagine what 'Rambo' obsessed with the idea of star wars and, moreover, possessing lethal space arms could do to our small and brittle planet. It is only difficult to realize why they in Bonn, London, Paris, Rome, and other capitals are so eager to help that character, gripped with 'military-political insanity' to obtain such weapons.

U.S. 'Lying' To Justify Raid

LD211723 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1445 GMT 21 Apr 86

[From "The World Today" program presented by Igor Fesunenko]

[Excerpts] "A dead end" — this phrase most correctly represents the situation in which the Washington administration has turned following this bandit raid on Libya. Trying to get out of this blind alley, Washington is making a fuss, shouting at its obstinate allies, and shamelessly lying, trying to assert that the Soviet Union allegely was invited to all but cooperate by jointly preventing, so they say, the terrorist act in West Berlin -- the act which served as a pretext for the attack on Libya. But do you not see, the Russians refused, and that left the United States no choice but to take military action against Libya. There is so much lying in this view that it is even ridiculous and embarassing to refute it.

In the first place, no intelligible evidence has been presented by Washington so far on Libya's role in the explosion in the West Berlin discotheque. In the second place, if we say that we believe Washington and suppose the Americans knew beforehand about the planned blast in the discotheque and warned the Russians, then the question arises: Where is the logic? Why then did the Americans not prevent the explosion? Why did U.S. servicemen continue to frequent this ill-fated discotheque? Many of them were injured and one was killed.

It turns out that -- let us work this one out -- the U.S. authorities, knowing beforehand about the explosion, warned Moscow, but for some reason did not consider it possible to warn their own fellow citizens and thus knowingly put them in the firing line -- one even died. How can the administration now look the relatives of those who suffered in the eye? As you can see, Washington is in some difficulty here trying to make its stories tally and tie in. The shamelessness and cynicism of the people who, foaming at the mouth, have thrown themselves into the struggle against terrorism, are striking. At the same time as the — literally a few days before this -- quote heroic act end quote against women and children in Libya, these same Washington people, foaming at the mouth, tried to achieve an allocation of resources to aid the Nicaraguan terrorists — the contras.

History of U.S. 'Banditry' Noted

LD180311 Moscow TASS International Service in Russian 1455 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, 16 Apr (TASS) -- TASS Political Observer Nikolay Chigir writes:

Today, just as exactly 25 years ago, the whole world is indignant in connection with acts of international banditry by the U.S. Government. Today's victim of this piratical aggression is Libya. A quarter of a century ago, the United States organized criminal armed intervention against Cuba.

The time separating these two events, which shook mankind with their severity and perfidy, is considerable. But, as we can see, little has changed in the policy of the biggest imperialist state. As then, now too, the Washington leadership puts its trust only in force, in the law of the fist, in order to achieve its hegemonistic purposes, brazenly trampling on the principles and the very spirit of the UN Charter and international law at the same time.

Now, just as then, the ruling circles in the United States are obsessed with hatred for peoples who have liberated themselves from the imperialist yoke, and for countries which reject U.S. diktat and decisively defend their legitimate right to national independence and sovereignty. Now, just as then, attempts to realize the imperial ambitions of the White House brought and are bringing people death, calamity, and suffering.

We recall what monstrous weapons from their arsenal of imperialist policy the Washington leadership resorted to in reprisal against the Cuban revolution. The CIA and other U.S. special services organized dozens of plots aiming to kill Cuban leaders. They trained, armed, and sent groups of terrorists out to Cuba. By the hand of CIA agents, there were explosions, arson attacks, and other sinister crimes, making victims of many Cuban civilians.

The culmination of the United States aggressive actions against Cuba was the armed intervention by Washington's hired army in the Playa Hiron area, beginning on 17 April 1961, which was preceded by an air bombardment of a number of Cuban towns. But before 3 days had passed, the aggressors were completely defeated.

This was the first major defeat for U.S. imperialism in the Western Hemisphere. Never before, in all the long history of its expansionist policy in Latin America, had the United States met with such a powerful rebuff as that delivered by the people of Cuba. U.S. ruling circles, which had acquired great experience in intervening in the countries of the continent, did not doubt that their military adventure would succeed. But they badly miscalculated. They ignored the indestructible will of the Cuban people to defend their revolutionary gains, nor of their unexampled heroism and unshakable cohesion around the revolutionary government headed by Fidel Castro; nor did they take into account the mighty power of the international solidarity with Cuba, in the front rank of which stood the USSR and the other countries of socialism, which stand there to this day.

The lesson the United States learned at Playa Hiron is extremely instructive. As we see, however, Washington does not wish to draw the correct conclusions from it. The basically aggressive course vis-a-vis independent developing countries has, since the accession of the present U.S. Administration, assumed an extremely dangerous nature for the cause of world peace. Washington's policy of international terrorism, illegality, and arbitrary behavior, of which the aggression against Libya is a specific manifestation today, with the undeclared war against Nicaragua, is one of provoking regional conflicts, perpetuating confrontation, and balancing on the brink of war. But in the final analysis, such a policy turns against its makers, as is evidence by such events as the failure of the U.S. intervention in Cuba in April 1961 and its defeat in the dirty Vietnam adventure.

U.S. 'Crime' Scored

GF171416 Baku International Service in Azeri 1200 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Unattributed commentary: "U.S. State Terrorism in the Middle East"]

[Text] Dear listeners: U.S. imperialism has committed a new crime against the people of Libya. The carrier-based aircraft of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean and the U.S. F-111 bomber aircraft, which took off from airfields in Great Britain, have savagely bombarded Tripoli and Banghazi in Libya. The raids carried out by U.S. aircraft were repeated several times. Dozens of innocent people, including foreign nationals, have died as a result of the bombardments.

The highwayman-like raid on Libya is a continuation of the U.S. policy of aggression against the nonaligned countries, including Iran. This policy is being pursued under the false pretense of, God forbid, struggling against international terrorism. Washington has included Libya, Iran, and a number of other developing countries in the list of, God forbid, the confederation of terrorist states and has given itself the right to resort to vindictive measures against them. The truth, however, is that the gangster-like imperialist policy pursued by Washington is the main source of international terrorism.

The bombing of Libyan cities by the U.S. militarists has been assessed in the world as an example of the U.S. state terrorism policy aimed at restoring the position of U.S. imperialism in the developing countries -- a position lost as a result of the blows dealt to it by the peoples' national liberation movements. Observers have pointed out that after the fall of the shah of Iran a discussion began in Washington on what can be called as the Vietnam syndrome -- that is, on the question of removing the negative outcome of developments in Vietnam and on the possibility of actively interfering in local developments. For example, the Rapid Deployment Force was created to be used as an instrument for such an interference. This force consists of about 300,000 troops. A fleet of U.S. warships spearheaded by the aircraft carrier Nimitz has been ordered to approach Iranian shores. As pointed out by the French [word indistinct] newspaper LE MONDE, this decision was adopted 3 months before the Americans were taken as hostages in Tehran and 6 months before the incidents concerning Afghanistan.

However, many Americans naively do not believe in the consistency of developments. Nevertheless, the fact that Washington has intensified its state terrorism policy indicates the uneasiness felt by these circles over the direction taken by international developments -- one which conflicts with the scenario of the ruling U.S. circles. In fact, the pro-American puppet regime in Sudan fell and the U.S. agents Duvalier and Marcos were ousted from Haiti and the Philippines during the term of office of the current U.S. Administration. The U.S. militarists also suffered a serious defeat in Lebanon. However, all these defeats have failed to awaken Washington. It is because of this that it resorts to new adventures which threaten international peace.

It is clear that the U.S. highwayman-like operation in the western Mediterranean took into consideration the situation in the Near and the Middle East. The disputes between the Arabs and Israel and Iran and Iraq have not yet been resolved. Therefore, it is no coincidence that the U.S. action against Libya, which is within the framework of the U.S. state terrorism policy, came at the time of an escalation in the Iran-Iraq dispute. Washington and its strategic ally Tel Aviv hope that the Iran-Iraq war will continue so that these two Muslim countries will be unable to make worthy contributions to the struggle waged by the peoples in the near and the Middle East against imperialism's policy of usurpation. Under the circumstances, the highwayman-like attack on Libya should be a warning to the ruling circles in Iran and Iraq. The two sides must put aside their differences and agree to an immediate cease-fire. This may be their most effective expression of solidarity with Libya which has falled victim to U.S. imperialism's highwayman-like policy.

As for the Soviet people, they share the wrath and indignation of all peoples, including those of the Iranian people, over the U.S. highwayman-like action against Libya. In its statement on 15 April, our government, which reflects the will of the Soviet peoples, categorically condemned the U.S. aggressive and highwayman-like action against Libya, which is a UN member and a sovereign country. It demanded the immediate termination of this action. The Soviet Government's statement said: Otherwise, the Soviet Union will be forced to draw appropriate conclusions which will take the future into consideration.

Reagan Shows 'Artificial Bravado'

LD180833 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1645 GMT 17 Apr 86

[From the "International Diary" program presented by Vladimir Pasko]

[Text] Libya: New details of the piratical raid by the United States on Tripoli and Banghazi are becoming known. AFP reports the United States dropped 100 tons of bombs. Pilots were given the order not to take risks and to attempt to avoid bombing civilian buildings near the target. The source of this information is the Pentagon -- so it is impossible to trust it. Nevertheless, the fact that it was released is a sign. At a time of general indignation at Washington's actions, the United States is trying to downplay the scale of the aggression and to justify the destruction of inhabited areas. In the words of U.S. representatives, who wish to remain anonymous, pilots dropped the death-bearing load on civilian districts only because they were evading fire from the Libyan air defense.

According to which law, one wonders, did the United States carry out the strike against this sovereign state? I point out that the UN Charter forbids the use of force in international relations. The United States is not simply a member of the United Nations, but a great power, a permanent member of the Security Council, which bears special responsibility for the maintenance of universal peace.

We won this fight with terrorism, the U.S. President announced during the last 24 hours. The White House continues to attempt to justify the raid without there being any proof confirming Libya's involvement in the explosion at a West Berlin discotheque frequented by U.S. soldiers stationed in the FRG. Libya has categorically rejected these conjectures. In the ensuing situation, the bravado with which the President spoke of winning the fight looks artificial. Of all members of the world community, in the words of the United States itself, only three -- Israel, Britain, and Canada -- have dared to come out in solidarity with the pirate raid. This is not winning, but a major political defeat for Washington and a defeat which is logical, brought about by U.S. neoglobalist policy and its approach to solving pressing international problems.

Raid Keeps With 'Militant Policy'

LD180317 Moscow World Service in English 2010 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Viktor Ivanov commentary]

[Text] Now Radio Moscow's Viktor Ivanov comments on the claim of the U.S. Administration that the raid on Libya was an isolated action that allegedly followed the recent terrorist acts in Western Europe. This claim is intended to divert attention from a wish of Washington to continue using force to solve problems in the world. In this context, the raid on Libya is in keeping with the militarist policy pursued by the United States Administration. It is a link in the chain of provocations against universal peace.

The American raid on Tripoli and Banghazi to which civilians including children fell victim is yet another manifestation of Washington's hostile policy towards the countries that pursue an independent course. Middle East countries adjacent to Libya have more than once suffered from American weapons. Battleship New Jersey attacked them with shells, thousands of kilograms each, and Israeli aircraft dropped bombs on them and fired rockets at them. All those weapons were labeled made in USA. All were intended to kill civilians.

The bombing of Libya, the shelling of Lebanon, the aggression against Grenada and other actions of this kind pursue two aims. One is to punish the disobedient, the other to accustom the rest of the world to the thought that the United States has the right to use force wherever and whenever it finds suitable. The United States is trying to reanimate the law of the jungle with the aim of up-to-date weapons of mass annihilation. Who can guarantee that methods of this kind will not be used tomorrow to establish a so-called new order in Nicaragua or any other country? The events show this policy of neoglobalism (?both) a threat not only to nations independent of the United States but also Washington's close allies. The example of Britain shows many of them are not only the nuclear hostages of America, but also potential supporters of the policy of international terrorism as Washington views them.

The American bases in these countries also mean a constant risk of involvement in the conflict that the United States has mounted despite their interests. There is another fairly dangerous aspect about the American raid on Libya. Using weapons in various parts of the world. Washington fans regional conflicts and creates more hotbeds of tension. The policy of neoglobalism provides for wider use of American force. This is fraught with a further aggravation of the explosive situation in the world.

Washington has rejected the Soviet proposal for nuclear disarmament but it has continued nuclear tests and is speeding the development of weapons for star wars. The raid on Libya is a logical follow-up.

U.S. Criticizes Allies

LD181430 Moscow in English to North America 2300 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] The Reagan administration has criticized its allies for failing to cooperate fully in the American raids. The President is (?set) to make this issue a top priority of the Tokyo economic summit in May. With the exception of Great Britain, which agreed to be a launching pad for the raid, only Federal Germany gave verbal support to it. However, it was worded so cautiously that instead of being a clear backing it was rather a demonstration of subervience. Speaking about those allies who had cooperated in the slaughter, President Reagan said that they had earned the lasting respect and friendship of the American people, unquote. With only Britain and Federal Germany at his side, the President said nothing about France, Italy, Greece, the Netherlands and others who condemned the United States. What have they earned for showing foresight?

Today the United States shoots from the hip using long-range F-111's based in Great Britian; tomorrow, hotheads in Washington will concoct something else to justify the bombing of oil fields in Libya or some other place. That, as some U.S. officials already hint, will require the use of strategic B-52 bombers. The day after tomorrow they'll come up with yet another story and will ask for a more severe reprisal. Isn't this climbing the ladder all the way up to pushing the nuclear button? And is there any guarantee that with the help of some overzealous allies, the White House will not go that far?

U.S. 'State Terrorism' Cited

LD190154 Moscow TASS in English 0642 GMT 18 Apr 86

["Terrorism on All Azimuths — TASS identifier]

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS — TASS Political News Analyst Sergey Kulik writes:

The United States piratic attack on Libya is the most glaring violation of international law and human morality since the U.S. invasion of Grenada. This is how the air strikes at the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Banghazi, including their residential districts, dealt at President Reagan's order are assessed all over the world.

While declaring that they are combating "international terrorism", the Washington leaders, by their crimes against Libya, have confirmed their adherence to the policy of "state terrorism", to the aggressive "neoglobalism" doctrine again. The only difference of this doctrine from the previous imperialist doctrines of the White House is that gunboat diplomacy has been replaced with aircraft carrier diplomacy. Terrorist actions instigated from the banks of the Potomac develop into genocide, into extermination of peaceful people of foreign countries.

Since 1981, the United States has spent no less than 150 million dollars on the export of counterrevolution to Nicaragua and some 15 thousand Nicaraguans were killed. Washington's undeclared war in Central America takes the toll of ever more lives every day.

In the Middle East, the Reagan administration encourages Zionist Israel to ever new terrorist actions against neighbouring Arab countries. "Stinger" missiles and other up-to-date kinds of armaments are supplied by the United States to UNITA [National Union for the Total Independence of Angola] terrorists in Angola. Through its "privileged ally", the racist Republic of South Africa, the United States CIA backs terrorists from the MNR [Mozambique National Resistance] in Mozambique. The damage caused by terrorists' subversive actions to Frontline States amounts to at least 12 billion dollars.

The information about the losses of the Afghan people at the hands of counterrevolutionaries directed by Washington was issued in Kabul the other day. The bandits destroyed and burnt down dozens of enterprises, over 2,000 schools, a large number of medical centres, hundreds of mosques. They destroyed 14 thousand kilometres of telephone lines and about 50 percent of electric transmission lines. The total damage caused by counterrevolutionaries runs into nearly 40 billion Afghani.

All this clearly confirms the United States essentially agressive approach to indefendent developing countries which assumes ever more bellicose nature with every day and increasingly threatens peace.

Operation Violated Executive Order

LD182144 Moscow TASS in English 2038 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS -- By TASS News Analyst Leonid Ponomarev.

As Washington is getting more and more hysterical about so-called international terrorism it is appropriate to ask now: but who are genuine terrorists?

It is only natural that the objective criteria for making judgement on that point should be hard facts, not malicious lies of the White House.

And let us begin not with its false declarations, but with one document, dated December 1981. It is called the President's Executive Order No. 12333 and is intended to regulate operations of intelligence agencies of the United States. The document was issued and signed personally by U.S. President Ronald Reagan.

The order has a clause which says among other things that not a single person in the service of the United States or acting on instructions of the U.S. Government must take part in a murder or a conspiracy to murder.

A commendable instruction!

Since the U.S. President and the secretary of state, just as the secretary of defense and the CIA director are in the service of the United States of America, Executive Order No. 12333 naturally applies to them too. Let us now see how they observe it.

High-ranking officials of the U.S. Administration publicly admitted with unconcealed cynicism that one of the main objectives of the U.S. Air Force bombing raids on Libya was to kill the leader of the Libyan revolution Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and if that plan failed -- to provoke a coup d'etat in that country. This is precisely what the executive order in question categorically prohibits. The operation had been planned in detail and long in advance. Many a specialist in dirty undertakings of that kind were involved in its drafting. In other words, that was a bona fide conspiracy of members of the U.S. Government against the government of another country, a conspiracy to murder!

On the eve of the terrorist act the U.S. President, the secretary of state, the secretary of defense, the CIA director and the chairman of the Joints Chiefs of Staff discussed all the details of the operation amid strictest secrecy and sanctioned it. The outcome of the air bombing of Tripoli attests to the fact that the air pirates were painstakingly trying to hunt down their prey. It is appropriate to recall that back in 1981 (the year when Executive Order No. 12333 was issued) the CIA began to implement a plan, approved at the highest level, for the physical liquidation of the leader of the Libyan revolution.

As to the "thou shalt not kill' clause in the order, it is nothing else than a cynical trick devised to mislead public opinion. In reality the present administration is pursuing the policy of state terrorism, using the entire military might of the country, not self-made explosives, for that purpose.

U.S. Hoped To Kill Al-Qadhdhafi

LD191157 Moscow TASS in English 0742 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 18 TASS -- One of the chief objectives of the U.S. air raid on Tripoli was to eliminate the leader of the Libyan revolution, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi.

THE WASHINGTON POST quoted informed administration officials as saying that "the U.S. bombing raid on Libya was planned with hopes that Al-Qadhdhafi would be killed."

That was why the principal target of the raid was his residence, according to the officials.

"We hoped we would get him," one U.S. official involved in planning the raid said. The newspaper reported that National Security Council officials had even drafted a statement which described Al-Qadhdhafi's death as "fortuitous."

The reservation was made in the draft because the administration's action contradicted American laws banning the organization and preparation of attempts on the life of foreign public and political figures.

The United States, incidentally, never adhered to the regulations, but turned assassinations into one of the forms of subversive activity against sovereign nations.

According to numerous confessions by former American intelligence officers, Washington was involved in such terrorist acts as the murder of Price Lumumba, prime minister of the Republic of the Congo; Eduardo Mondlane, chairman of the Front for the Liberation of Mozambique (FRELIMO); Salvador Allende, president of Chile; and Solomon Bandaranaike, prime minister of Ceylon.

Repeated attempts were made on the life of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, Egyptian President Gamal 'Abd al-Nasir and other foreign statesmen.

The United States has assumed the right to remove the leaders of sovereign nations whose policy Washington did not like. The White House employed these methods in the past and is going to use them in the future, totally disregarding international law and the laws of its own country.

U.S. Uses 'Misinformation'

LD182334 Moscow World Service in English 2010 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Excerpts] The United States Administration has been resorting to crude misinformation in a bid to neutralize the outbreak of anger around the world following American air strikes on the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Banghazi. Viktor Ivanov now looks at Washington's version of the attacks and eyewitness accounts. The United States Defense Department report issued on Friday was still another attempt to mislead world public opinion. A Pentagon spokesman, Mr Robert Sims, as he commented on the report at a news conference, claimed that bombing raids had been made only against military targets, that the pilots coped excellently with their mission and that civilian targets were not hit. Mr Sims also alleged that the only bomb that had hit a residential area fell from a damaged bomber which failed to return to base. This is the official version from Washington. However, it starts crumbling when confronted with facts.

Eyewitnesses have been saying that the main victims of the attacks were peaceful civilians, including children. A business consultant for an Italian firm said this upon his arrival in Rome from Tripoli: The Americans bombed houses, there's no doubt about it. I myself helped bring a Libyan child out of the rubble. I'm angry because I saw children killed. I have children, it froze my blood, Mr (?Paris) said, and added: The real tragedy is what was done at 2.00 that morning by the Americans. This is a criminal act, that is real terrorism.

It's clear that a bomb dropped by accident would not cause such extensive damage. However, this is not the only fact that exposes as falsehood Washington's version of the consequences of the attack. Statements by the Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims that the raid on Libya was the only one of the kind in United States military history have nothing to do with the proof itself. The air strike against residential areas of Libya cities merely adds one more line to the war crimes record of the United States and that record includes the cold-blood destruction of a civilian hospital in Grenada, carpet bombings of Vietnam, and the atom bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

FURTHER ANALYSIS OF JAPAN-USSR COOPERATION TALKS

Aristov Meets Businessmen

LD200520 Moscow TASS in English 1728 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS -- Boris Aristov, minister of foreign trade of the U.S.S.R., received the leaders of a delegation of the Japanese business community staying in Moscow in connection with the 10th joint meeting of the Soviet-Japanese and Japano-Soviet committees for economic cooperation.

During the meeting the sides discussed prospects for the development of bilateral relations and noted that the meeting in Moscow was an important step in promoting economic Soviet-Japanese ties.

Talks Assessed Positively

LD190535 Moscow TASS in English 2218 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- The 10th joint meeting of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet Committee for Economic Cooperation was held in Moscow on April 15-17.

The sides noted with satisfaction that such meetings played an important part in expanding and promoting bilateral trade and economic contacts, and pledged to make efforts to scale them up.

In order to define more accurately the prospects for business relations between the two countries, the Soviet side proposed to hold talks with a view to signing an inter-governmental agreement on the principles governing economic cooperation and in order to draft its long-term program.

The sides also reviewed the progress of realization of a series of existing general agreements.

The meeting also discussed ways for expanding supplies of Soviet products with a higher degree of sophistication to Japan, including machines and equipment that meet the world standards, as well as high-quality intermediate products. This will assist in correcting the disbalance that has taken shape in reciprocal trade.

The sides took note of the importance of Japan's commercial and industrial exhibition to be held in Moscow next October.

The joint meeting was positively appraised at a news conference for Soviet and foreign correspondents. It was emphasized that the further development of trade and economic cooperation between the two countries would promote goodneighborly relations between the Soviet Union and Japan.

KYODO Comments on Meeting

OW171311 Tokyo KYODO in English 1252 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow, April 17 KYODO — Japan's private committee for business cooperation with the Soviet Union and its Soviet counterpart wound up their three-day 10th joint session here Thursday with a joint statement confirming both sides' readiness to explore new forms of cooperation.

The statement specifically mentioned the possibility of coproduction ventures and advanced scientific and technological exchanges for the purpose of further developing trade and economic relations between the two countries.

The Soviet Union pointed out the possibility of expanding the bilateral trade and economic relations in the context of its 12th five-year plan starting this year and its long-term social and economic development plan until the year 2000, the statement said.

Japanese business delegates said the conference has opened bright prospects for expansion of bilateral trade. They said the Soviet side displayed a positive readiness to step up economic and technical exchanges with Japan as a means of revitalizing its own economy. They were especially impressed by a Soviet proposal for joint ventures with Japan for processing food and wood in the Far East as a new form of economic cooperation. This was taken as an apparent indication of a new tack in the Soviet Union's external economic policy under its new leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Japanese sources said.

The next joint session will be held in Japan next year at a time yet to be fixed.

The large scale of the Japanese business delegation -- more than 230 members -- reflected a keen interest in the conference, the first to be held since Mikhail Gorbachev came to power.

At the meeting, the Soviet Union asked Japan to supply techniques for saving resources and energy, and extend technical cooperation in wide-ranging fields, such as chemicals, automobiles, machine tools, construction materials, home appliances and medical care, under its new five-year plan. Talks on specific deals will follow the conference, the sources said.

It was agreed that a basic contract for the fourth project for development of forestry resources will be signed by the end of this year so that the five-year project will start next year. The project calls for exporting logs and timber to Japan from the Far East and Siberia in exchange for development equipment and materials.

The conference also confirmed Japanese acceptance of coal developed in south Yakutia and Japanese cooperation in a port expansion project. But regarding a joint project for development of natural gas on the continental shelf off Sakhalin north of Japan, both sides merely agreed to continue consultations because the project itself has to be reexamined as a result of a sharp fall in crude oil prices worldwide.

The Soviet Union also made it clear that two major chemical complex projects will be scaled down and will be undertaken mainly with domestically procured equipment and materials. This will force Japanese firms, which have submitted tenders for the projects, to change their plans, the sources said.

Benefits of Japan-USSR Trade Noted

LD190848 Moscow TASS in English 1350 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 18 TASS -- By TASS commentator Vasiliy Kharkov:

The business community and broad public circles in Japan, according to press reports, have showed lively interest in a joint conference of the Soviet-Japanese and the Japanese-Soviet committees for economic cooperation in Moscow.

The keen attention given to the meeting was underlined by the unusually representative make-up of the Japanese delegation there, which consisted of 237 people, including the presidents of major firms, the heads of commercial and economic organizations and a large group of experts.

Judging by commentaries in today's Japanese press, the work done by the conference is assessed positively in Japan. Its results are seen as a fresh impetus to improving commercial and economic ties between the two countries. Special stress is being made on the initiative of the Soviet side which has suggested very promising new forms of cooperation.

The newspaper MAINICHI said, for instance, that the policy of accelerating economic growth, which has been adopted in the USSR, opens a qualitatively new phase in Soviet-Japanese cooperation. The newspaper NIHON KEIZAI, which is close to Japanese business quarters, said, for its part, that the approach demonstrated by the sides at the conference can mark major change in the nature of Japanese-Soviet business relations.

The conference was the 10th such meeting since the formation of the Soviet-Japanese and the Japanese-Soviet committees for economic cooperation. Their contribution to developing mutually beneficial cooperation is indubitable.

The committees have played an important role in the discussion of a number of major projects, some of which are already being carried out. If in 1983 and 1984 Japanese-Soviet cooperation showed a certain slump, it was explained by interference by external forces. After Washington had imposed its "sanctions" against the USSR, those were joined by Tokyo. Japanese firms lost a number of lucrative contracts as a result, which cost them a total of nearly five billion roubles in missed profits. As early as last year, however, the negative trends in Japanese-Soviet trade were overcome.

Soviet Foreign Minister Edvard Shevardnadze's visit to Japan early this year and the resumption of political consultations between the two countries have created favourable conditions also for broader economic cooperation between them.

The decisions of the 27th Congress of the CPSU, which has set the course for the development of the Soviet Union in the next five years and over a longer-range perspective, have made for a significant increase in the activity of those in Japan who advocate stable and wide-ranging trade and economic relations with the USSR on a long-term footing.

In Japan they cannot but realize the significance of such ties also as an important political factor facilitating stronger relations of goodneighbourliness and better mutual understanding. The Soviet Union rejects any forms of discrimination in trade and economic fields, any kinds of embargoes and bans whose ruinous impact has been felt also by some Japanese firms. Extensive and mutually advantageous Soviet-Japanese economic cooperation not liable to time-serving considerations meets the national interests of both countries.

Japan Trade Official Interviewed

LD180940 Moscow TASS in English 1738 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS — "The Japanese business circles would want to consolidate in practice the latest positive changes in the development of bilateral relations.

For this it is necessary to expand and strengthen constant working contacts between Soviet and Japanese partners", a TASS correspondent was told by Mitsuo Uemura, president of the board of directors of "Sumitomo Corporation", one of the biggest trade partners of Soviet organizations from among Japanese firms. Mitsuo Uemura is a member of the Japanese delegation at the 10th conference of the Soviet-Japanese and Japanese-Soviet committees on economic cooperation.

"At present we witness a tendency towards an upswing of Japanese-Soviet trade, economic, scientific and technical cooperation", Mitsuo Uemura noted. "This was facilitated to a considerable extent by the new five-year agreements on trade turnover and payments between Japan and the USSR for the period of 1986-1990, signed in January this year, and also by the first intergovernmental consultations on questions of developing bilateral trade and economic relations on the level of deputy ministers of the two countries, held last month in Moscow", he said.

"Sumitomo Corporation" is maintaining stable business ties with Soviet organizations for already more than twenty years. In recent years it firmly holds first place among Japanese companies in the trade with Soviet partners. The bulk of the firm's export to the USSR is formed by products of ferrous metallurgy: ferrous rolled stock and pipes for oil and gas pipelines. In addition to this "Sumitomo Corporation" supplies to the Soviet market various machinery and equipment, textiles and chemicals.

In turn, the Japanese firms buys in the Soviet Union non-ferrous metals, timber, coking coal, cotton and various chemicals. The firm is a participant in the general agreements on developing the natural resources of Siberia and the Far East.

In 1985 the trade turnover between "Sumitomo Corporation" and Soviet foreign trade associations amounted to 670 billion dollars. "This is by far not the limit", Mitsuo Uemura stressed, "considering the economic potential of Japan and the Soviet Union and also their mutual interest in further developing trade and economic ties."

DPRK OFFICIAL HITS US-ROK 'MILITARIST PREPARATIONS'

PM160947 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 15 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[TASS report: "Denunciation of Dangerous Course"]

[Text] Pyongyang, 14 Apr -- Yang Hyong-sop, chairman of the DPRK Supreme People's Assembly Standing Committee, has issued a statement expressing concern at South Korea's actions aimed at aggravating the antagonism between North and South and fuelling tension on the Korean peninsula. He drew the attention of the South Korean side to the proposal, put forward by the DPRK in April 1985, to begin talks between the DPRK and South Korean parliaments, above all to conclude a declaration on nonaggression between North and South.

The head of the DPRK parliament denounced the militarist preparations of the United Stated and South Korean on the far-fetched pretext of the "threat from the north." It is essential, he stressed, to put an end to the occupation of the south of the country by U.S. troops and to seek to unite Korea.

Yang Hyong-sop expressed the hope that the governments and parliaments of all countries will support the DPRK's initiatives aimed at safeguarding peace in Korea.

REPORTAGE ON CPSU GENERAL SECRETARY'S VISIT TO GDR

Gorbachev Visits Collective

LD211139 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1030 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] One of the GDR's major engineering combines is named after 7 October, the day the republic was founded. Today the CPSU delegation led by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, which is taking part in the work of the 11th SED Congress, visited the combine's main enterprise in Berlin, which employs more than 20,000 workers. The delegation was accompanied by Guenter Schabowski, member of the SED Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Berlin city party committee.

Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev visited several shops at the works, where powerful grinders and entire automated lines and production sections are assembled. Almost half of the combine's output, which enjoys popularity in world markets, is supplied to the Soviet Union. Berlin's 7 October Works has long been fruitfully cooperating with Moscow's Red Proletariat Engineering Association. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev talked to workers and interested himself in their life and work and the prospects for expanding cooperation between our two countries in such an important industry as machine tool manufacture.

In one shop the CPSU delegation was asked to make an entry in the team log of a leading collective. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev expressed the hope that they would score new labor achievements.

Following the viewing of the works, a rally took place on a shop floor. Neblung, SED Central Committee Party organizer at the works, warmly welcomed the Soviet comrades. Grinder Lachenmayer described how the works' collective fulfilled the precongress pledges. Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev delivered a speech. Next the CPSU delegation was presented with a commemorative red banner with Ernst Thaelmann's portrait.

[Speech by Soviet leader Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev to workers at the 7 October machine tool combine factory in East Berlin on 21 April -- from the "Novosti" newscast; recorded]

[Text] Greetings, dear comrades! Our delegation, which is taking part in the 11th SED Congress, takes great pleasure in being guests of the 7 October Works collective, one of the GDR's leading machine tool engineering works. In your presence, let me extend to you and all working people of the Republic fraternal greetings and a wish for new successes in the construction of a developed socialist society on behalf of the Soviet working class and all our people. [applause] The 11th congress of your party is adding up impressive results achieved in all spheres of life. Great prospects have been revealed in the report to the congress that was delivered by Comrade Erich Honecker and in the delegates' speeches. It can be seen even now that the congress will give new momentum to the confident move forward by the Republic of German workers and peasants. This is important not only for you, its citizen-builders: Just like the achievements of the other fraternal countries, the GDR's successes strengthen the positions of socialism and graphically demonstrate its capabilities and advantages.

What your works comprises and how it operates was described by the combine's general director, Heinz Warzeche, who spoke at the congress and here during our visit to the enterprise. We have seen with our own eyes that it is interesting; we also learned this from our conversations during an inspection of certain shops. Our general impression is good: There is a feeling that a precise labor rhythm is being maintained at the enterprise and that much attention is being devoted to the modernization of production processes. From this comes the high quality of the enterprise's output, including the machine tools it supplies to the Soviet Union. I wish to thank your collective for its conscientious fulfillment of our orders. From my heart I congratulate you, comrades, on receiving the Banner of Honor of the SED Central Committee for outstanding achievements in the socialist competition in honor of the 11th party congress. [applause]

Speaking at this meeting here, I would first of all like to talk about what the life of our country is based on, about what the Soviet people are thinking. I recently visited enterprises in a number of towns in the Volga Basin area. The main thing I took away with me from the numerous meetings and conversations was the conviction that the working people have interpreted as their own most vital interest the course of the 27th CPSU Congress toward acceleration of socioeconomic development. Our people understand that it is necessary to work in a new way; they want to work in a new way and are not afraid of restructuring.

The essence and meaning of this restructuring can perhaps best be shown through a specific example. The USSR's Lada car enjoys quite a good reputation both in our country and abroad. It is apparently also in demand in the GDR. But now an average or even good standard is not enough. When I met with the Volga motor vehicle works collective, I asked them: Why should you, comrades, not try to rise to the level of those who lay down the laws of motor vehicle design? We now have at our disposal everything necessary to take the foremost positions in scientific and technical progress, not only in individual directions, but also, to speak, on all fronts. We are approaching this task in a very serious manner, giving deep thought to the entire complex of problems.

The party poses the issue as follows: Everyone must at his workplace labor with all his strength, knowledge, and skill, showing the maximum economy and thrift. This demands a restructuring of psychology on the part of not only leaders but also all working people: rejecting conservatism and routine and adopting an orientation towards creativity and goals and an innovative approach to problems.

The other side of the matter is this: In conditions when our enterprises are gaining financial autonomy, when the scope for their independent maneuvering is being substantially broadened, the role of the labor collectives is also being sharply enhanced. This means that it is not enough for the worker to know how to carry out his own immediate task; he must also have a mastery of economic knowledge and must more boldly grasp the levers of management.

The task we have now started to tackle will demand no little exertion of strength. But we are confident of success. History has more than once posed difficult tasks before the Soviet working class and the working people of the country. Under the guidance of their own Communist Party, they have coped with them honorably and will cope with them now.

I would like to stress that we attribute important significance in our plans to interaction with our friends and comrades at arms, the peoples of the socialist community countries. Such interaction has enabled all of us over the past decades to overcome difficulties and attain outstanding results. Now this can and must manifest itself even more widely and yield a much greater return.

This applies in full to our relations with, to the relations between the Soviet Union and the GDR. You are aware that yesterday I had a conversation with Comrade Erich Honecker. We reviewed the links between our parties and countries, and concluded with great satisfaction that cooperation is developing successfully, and friendship between our peoples is being built on a firm foundation. [applause]

Comrades, many of you have no doubt been to the Soviet Union and we invite those who have not to come see how our country lives. You will have an opportunity to learn about the Soviet people's warm and fraternal feelings for the GDR's working people. [applause]

We could immediately organize a friendship train.

[Unidentified speaker in German] We could immediately organize a friendship treaty here. [laughter and applause]

Soviet-GDR cooperation in production already has a history of substance, but we must initially look at what we have achieved thus far. The prospects here are broad. I have in mind both the bilateral program for economic and scientific and technical cooperation and our joint participation in the integrated program of scientific and technical progress of the CEMA member-countries. We will have more direct cooperation in production and direct cooperation at the enterprise level.

The implementation of all our joint plans depends on the active work of the governments, the economic organs, and scientific establishments. However, its success will ultimately be decided in production, in the labor collectives. I want to call on you, dear friends, to apply your knowledge and your talents, your workers' gumption, to the cause of scientific and technical integration and the development of new and progressive forms of cooperation. [applause]

I am confident that the creative interaction of workers, engineers, and scientists of the USSR and the GDR will bring remarkable new fruit. [applause]

Comrades! We are living in a complicated, contradictory, and diverse world. Each people, each country has its own problems and concerns, but for all those on earth there is no cause more important than removing the nuclear threat, ending the arms race, and consolidating peace. [applause]

If there were people who still harbored doubts as to who is truly to blame for the current aggravation of tension, the latest events have brought complete clarity; namely it is the U.S. imperialist policy in all its manifestations. In its desire to turn history back, imperialism is placing its stake increasing openly on force, interference in the affairs of free peoples, and state terrorism. Nicaragua is living at the end of a gun barrel; support for the cutthroats in Angola, bandit groups in Afghanistan, and the bloody Pol Pot people in Cambodia has reached an unprecedented scale. It is a question of open acts of violence against sovereign states in each case and attempts to overthrow legitimate governments. These and other actions of the same kind lay bare the aggressive nature of the policy that those in Washington proudly call neoglobalism. Look at the excesses that the U.S. Administration has committed against Libya. In implementing its piratical action against that country, the United States not only failed to take notice of world public opinion, but of the majority of its NATO allies as well. The policy of social revenge is the primary source of military danger in Europe.

Since the days of Churchill, imperialism's ideologists have not ceased to assert that the communists divided Europe. The truth, however, lies elsewhere: It was not the socialist countries that began the political division of Europe into two opposed blocs. If there are those in the West who have forgotten this, let me remind them that the Warsaw treaty was signed 6 years after the creation of the aggressive NATO bloc. The main account for the deepening of the division of Europe today should be presented to those who have transformed it into a field for nuclear missile confrontation, who place question marks over the Yalta and Potsdam agreements which laid down the foundations for the postwar era on our continent, and by those who create obstacles for the free development of trade and cooperation and other forms of collaboration by means of discriminatory lists and other restrictions.

To counterbalance this position of the United States and its zealous assistants, the socialist countries are working in a practical manner in favor of European cooperation and are advancing a far-reaching program for overcoming the division. It was at their initiative that the conference took place in Helsinki where the Final Act was adopted that points out real ways to unify the continent on a peaceful foundation based on equal rights.

We confirm the statement of the willingness to undertake the simultaneous dissolution of the Warsaw Pact and NATO, or, for a start, at least the military organizations of both alliances. We consider it urgently necessary to free Europe from medium-range nuclear weapons. Our new proposals open up broad opportunities for a radical reduction of conventional arms on the European Continent from the Atlantic to the Urals. [applause] Our countries advocate surmounting artificial barriers in the economic sphere; developing mutually beneficial relations between CEMA and the EEC; and all-European cooperation on economic, ecological, and other issues. It is finally time to grasp the simple notion that the currently existing barriers can be overcome, not in the sense that the West will impose its own order on the East, or the East on the West; rather we must turn away from confrontation and military rivalry to the path of peaceful coexistence by joint effort. It is only in that sense that our continent can be united. [applause]

Detente, trust, cooperation, the inviolability of existing borders, and respect for each other's legitimate interests -- these are milestones along the road that will enable Europe to consolidate peace. Very close economic interaction, the broadest exchange of cultural treasures, direct and free contact between citizens of all countries -- this is how we view the peaceful future of Europe and this is what we are prepared to work for. [applause]

A Europe without nuclear warheads and chemical means for waging war, a Europe where armed forces and arms have been radically reduced -- that is how we want to see our common European home. Concern for this pervades the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries' radical proposals. [applause]

Comrades: Workers have spoken of their anxiety over the course of affairs in the international arena on every occasion when I have met with them recently. Supporting and approving our line at the talks, political dialogue, and the search for mutually acceptable solutions, Soviet people often ask whether our counterparts at the talks will not deceive us, whether they will not try to use the talks as a cover for building up their military muscle and to acquire military superiority. We understand such concern and are taking the necessary measures so that this cannot occur. The USSR and the other Warsaw Pact states have solid and reliable defenses. [applause]

We will not allow ourselves to be deceived, just as we will not permit negotiations to be used as a screen. This also related to the new Soviet-U.S. summit meeting. This can take place if the appropriate international atmosphere develops and it will be justified if it leads to real shifts toward disarmament. We are ready for this. Unfortunately, such readiness is not evident in Washington at the moment, which is acting in quite the opposite direction.

The Soviet Union and the fraternal countries of socialism will persistently continue the struggle to avert nuclear war. [applause]

It is not by force of arms, but by the force of example and conviction we wish to assert our ideas. Our peoples guarantee the success of this common cause through their work; your contribution is there as well, dear comrades. Please accept a commemorative present from the CPSU delegation, a sculpture by the sculptor Kiryukhin which conveys the revolutionary burst of the first Communist Subbotnik in Soviet Russia held in 1919, and which the great Lenin described as a great feat. Well, strictly speaking, this is where socialism began: Everything had been destroyed, and the economy had to be built in conditions of intervention and economic blockade. Now, when I look at your works, and when I listen to your plans at the congress and here at this meeting, the most important impression and conclusion immediately arise: namely, how far we all have advanced together, and how far we all have come.

I believe it was difficult for you and for us on our revolutionary road, but we have manifested staying power and an enthusiasm for, and confidence in, the policy of the communist parties, which has led us to victories. I believe that today, when we are at a new stage, setting new tasks for our economies; profound reorganization which will open up opportunities for further social progress in our countries, our peoples will be up to it, the guarantee being adherence to the cause of socialism, and the great ideas of Marx, Engels, and Lenin. I believe an important prerequisite for our common success will be the friendship forged by our peoples in the joint struggle. [applause]

Thank you for the warm welcome. I wish you great accomplishments in the first state of workers and peasants on German soil. [applause]

Attends SED Congress Closing

LD211917 Moscow TASS in English 1852 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 21 TASS — A delegation from the Communist Party of the Soviet Union led by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, today attended a meeting here, which marked the 40th anniversary of the uniting congress and the closure of the 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED).

The meeting was attended by Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee, the full and alternate members of the Political Bureau and the secretaries of the SED Central Committee, and the foreign delegations which had been present at the 11th SED Congress.

Congratulates Honecker on Reelection

LD211301 Moscow TASS in English 1250 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 21 TASS -- Follows the full text of a message of congratulations from Mikhail Gorbachev to Erich Honecker:

"To Comrade Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Central Committee Socialist Unity Party of Germany [SUPG]

Dear Comrade Honecker, the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union warmly congratulates you upon your re-election as general secretary of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany.

This is added evidence of your high authority as a party and state leader who is devoting all his energy, knowledge and rich experience to the good of the German Democratic Republic, the building of a new society on German soil, the cause of strengthening friendship between the USSR and the GDR, strengthening the unity and cohesion of the countries of the socialist community, the struggle for lasting peace and social progress.

We express confidence that the fraternal relations between the USSR and the SUPG, the Soviet Union and the German Democratic Republic will get their further all-round development.

We wish you, dear Comrade Erich Honecker, the communists, all working people of the GDR new accomplishments in socialist construction, in successfully fulfilling the decisions of the 11th SUPG Congress.

With communist greetings,

Mikhail Gorbachev,

General secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union."

Honecker Addresses Closing Session

LD211728 Moscow TASS in English 1715 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 21 TASS -- Erich Honecker, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, said in his closing speech at the party congress that its decisions usher in a qualitatively new stage in further building developed socialist society in the German Democratic Republic.

"Our party's program is being consistently carried out," he said. "This congress has demonstrated convincingly that our spirited Marxist-Leninist party is up to the mark."

"We shall continue holding sacred and strengthening our inviolable spirited alliance with the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the country of Lenin and with the other fraternal parties and countries. This alliance is the guarantee of our further success."

"Our prime task has been and remains to protect peace reliably," Erich Honecker said. "Our party will continue contributing vigorously and constructively to these efforts. We fully support the latest initiative made at our congress by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. It convincingly supplements the large-scale program for completely ridding manking of nuclear weapons by the year 2000. The GDR will exert every effort in its foreign policy to translate this program into life and ensure a peaceful future form mankind."

11th SED Congress Concludes

LD211355 Moscow TASS in English 1346 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 21 TASS -- The 11th five-day congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany has ended in the capital of the German Democratic Republic. The delegates discussed the report of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, the guidelines of the congress for the five-year plan of development of the national economy of the Republic for the coming five-year period.

The party's steering bodies were elected. Erich Honecker was unanimously elected general secretary of the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany at the party Central Committee's first plenary meeting, which was held today.

The concluding speech at the congress was made by Erich Honecker.

Gorbachev Addresses Reception

LD211749 Moscow TASS in English 1745 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 21 TASS -- The Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SUPG) today held a reception in honour of the foreign delegations which took part in the work of the 11th SUPG Congress.

The reception was attended by members of the Political Bureau, alternate members of the Political Bureau and secretaries of the SUPG Central Committee.

Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SUPG Central Committee and chairman of the State Council of the German Democratic Republic, made a speech at the reception.

Mikhail Gorbachev, head of the CPSU delegation and general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, made a speech on behalf of the foreign delegations. He said:

First of all, let me congratulate cordially on behalf of the foreign delegations the Communists, working people of the German Democratic Republic on the successful completion of the 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany.

We convey our congratulations to all the comrades elected to the SUPG Central Committee and its Political Bureau. We greet and congratulate in a sincere and brotherly way our comrade-in-arms and friend Erich Honecker on his re-election to the post of general secretary of the SUPG Central Committee.

The 11th Congress of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany is a major event in the life of the German Democratic Republic. It worked on the days when the 100th anniversary of the birth of Ernst Thaelmann and the 40th anniversary of the formation of the SUPG were celebrated. Your congress is a new landmark along the path of socialism that our German friends have been following for four decades already.

They had to resolve difficult problems: to restore the country's economy, to carry out sweeping social and economic changes and, what is especially important, a revolution in the minds and hearts of people, and to lead them along the road of building a new society. On the international scene, they had to break through imperialism's economic and political blockade and affirm the GDR's right to live and develop as a sovereign socialist state.

The SUPG has overcome all the difficulties with honour. It was tempered in the struggle against the class enemy and accumulated the vast experience of guiding society. There is no doubt that the Communists, working people of the Republic, in replying on what has been achieved, will be able to put into life the large-scale programme cf construction advanced by the 11th congress.

I would like to emphasise the considerable international significance of the congress. Like the recent 27th CPSU Congress and the supreme party forums of the other fraternal parties, it gave the ruling communist parties yet another opportunity to compare notes and exchange first-hand experience. And this opportunity was effectively used.

One can point out with immense satisfaction that the communists of the countries of the socialist community, at the present-day stage in history, which is extremely important and, in fact, crucial, approach all vital problems of our time from common positions.

This applies to the affairs of each of our countries. While appreciating the results of their activity in the years past, the fraternal parties are persistently looking for reserves to accelerate social development. Orientation at scientific and technical progress, creative endeavour of the masses and development of democracy are the earnest [as received] that socialism will reveal in the forthcoming period ever more fully its intrinsic potential, despite prophecies of the anti-communists, will become more harmonious and perfect, and will win over millions of new followers.

This applies to the affairs of the socialist community as a whole. The fraternal parties' determination to raise cooperation between the socialist countries in economics, politics and all other spheres of social activity to a new level that meets the imperative of the time has been graphically demonstrated. We regard this as a major reserve of enhancing the dynamics of socialism development, as a concrete manifestation of the idea of proletarian, socialist internationalism.

Finally, this applies to the international affairs. The fraternal parties are unanimous in their aspiration to do everything possible to prevent nuclear catastrophe, ensure that all peoples exercise the sacred right to choose freely the form of their political set-up, and establish and develop a new, fair international order.

We have no illusions. Each step along this road requires hard effort and encounters opposition from the forces of militarism and reaction. In a bid to establish by force their diktat in the world arena, they are stubbornly continuing the build-up of nuclear armaments on earth and are preparing to move them into outer space.

Today, in the nuclear age, there is an urgent need for uniting all political trends and public movements committed to struggle for the preservation of the human race. We can have, and we do have ideological differences, for instance, with the Social Democrats in the Federal Republic of Germany and other Western countries, and with other political forces, but this should not stand in the way of our concerted action in the campaign for peace.

The communists come forward as the most consistent fighters for peace and international security, for saving society from the nuclear nightmare. They are prepared for cooperation with all those who share these objectives. The peoples may firmly rely on us.

Let me, dear comrades, thank cordially our German friends for their hospitality and wish them wholeheartedly success in continuing the cause of building a developed socialist society on German soil, wish happiness and prosperity to the fraternal people of the German Democratic Republic.

Honecker Addresses Reception

LD211853 Moscow TASS in English 1756 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Berlin April 21 TASS -- The Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany (SED) today held a reception for the foreign delegations to the 11th SED Congress, which was attended by full and alternate members of the Political Bureau and secretaries of the SED Central Committee.

Erich Honecker, general secretary of the SED Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State of the German Democratic Republic, made a speech there.

He greeted all those present in conjunction with the successful completion of the party congress and wished the full and alternate members of the Central Committee great success in their important activities.

"These were days filled with work, with creative and thorough discussions," he said of the congress, describing it as an event of special significance for the GDR.

"It has charted the further course of building developed socialist society in the GDR and provided answers to new questions posed by life," he said. "This is borne out by its decisions to continue the policy of unity between economic and social policies, decisions which require a high level of national economic growth and serve the good of the people. Coming increasingly to the foreground is the task of combing the advantages of socialism with the achievements of the scientific and technological revolution, which will ensure for the GDR a place among the more developed industrialized countries."

"We shall be fulfilling the imposing tasks set by this congress," Erich Honecker said, "in ever closer cooperation with the fraternal socialist countries, first of all the Soviet Union. Complete unanimity on all significant aspects of economic and social strategy creates the best possible prerequisite conditions for this. The Socialist Unity Party of Germany considers it its lofty internationalist duty to increase the might of socialism, strengthen the unity and cohesion of our socialist community and do everything possible to preserve peace for the present and succeeding generations."

"We express our fraternal, heartfelt gratitude to the envoys from the 143 communist parties -- the revolutionary vanguard parties, the people's democratic parties and the national liberation movements, the socialist and social democratic parties. They have made a big contribution to the success of the supreme forum of our party and to the extremely fruitful exchange of experience and opinions on the key issues of the times."

"Clearly evident during your meetings with citizens of the GDR has been a spirit of mutual understanding and internationalist solidarity. The congress of our party has reflected increased possibilities for the interaction of most diverse political forces for peace, international security and social progress."

"We express our special gratitude to the delegation from the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and our friend and Comrade Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev. Your important speech at our congress has convincingly demonstrated the indivisibility of socialism and peace and the historical role of the party and country of V.I. Lenin as the pioneer of peace and social progress. Reaffirmed at the same time have been the complete uninamity of the SED and the CPSU on all fundamental issues of social development and international activities, and our strong and close bonds of like-minded people, spirited associates and allies."

"You may rest assured that the SED will discharge its internationalist duty with honor in working to further strengthen socialism and ensure peace," Erich Honecker said.

In conclusion he proclaimed a toast to the 11th SED Congress, to the successful implementation of its decisions, to further progress in the building of socialism and in efforts for the life of all nations in peace.

Gorbachev, South Yemeni Meet

GENERAL LIZICHEV PAYS OFFICIAL VISIT TO BULGARIA

PM171301 Moscow KRASNAYA ZVEZDA in Russian 17 Apr 86 Second Edition p 3

[TASS report: "Visit to Bulgaria"]

[Text] On 16 April Army General A.D. Lizichev, member of the CPSU Central Committee and chief of the Soviet Army and Navy Main Political Directorate, left for a visit to Bulgaria at the invitation of the Bulgarian People's Army Main Political Directorate.

He was seen off at the airport by Admiral A.I. Sorokin, first deputy chief of the Soviet Army and Navy Main Political Directorate; Lieutenant General D.A. Volkogonov, deputy chief of the Soviet Army and Navy Main Political Directorate, and other officials.

The farewell party included D. Zhulev, Bulgarian ambassador to the USSR, and Major General B. Toshkov, military, naval, and air attache at the Bulgarian Embassy in the USSR.

On the same day, Army Gen A.D. Lizichev arrived in Sofia. He was greeted at the airport by Colonel General M. Mitkov, chief of the Bulgarian People's Army Main Political Directorate; Bulgarian deputy ministers of national defense, and other officials.

HUSAK RECEIVES MASLYUKOV IN PRAGUE FOR TALKS

[Report from the "Novosti" newscast]

[Text] Gustav Husak received Comrade Maslyukov, deputy chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, who is in Prague. They discussed the opportunities for developing cooperation between the USSR and the CSSR in machine building and the electrotechnical industry. It was noted that the program for long-term economic and scientific and technical cooperation between the USSR and the CSSR for the period through the year 2000 creates conditions for the effective utilization of production capacities and creative potential of the two countries with the aim of accelerating their economic and social development.

EEC BOWS TO U.S. 'PRESSURE', ADOPTS LIBYAN SANCTIONS

LD212216 Moscow TASS in English 2145 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Luxembourg April 21 TASS -- Under the United States pressure, the Common Market member countries adopted today a number of discriminatory measures against Libya. President of the Council of Ministers of the European Communities, the Netherlands Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek said at a press conference that the heads of the diplomatic departments of the twelve countries taking part in the session of the Council of Ministers of the European Communities that opened here today endorsed a series of diplomatic sanctions against Libya. Cuts in the personnel of the Libyan Embassies in the capitals of the EEC countries are envisaged with simultaneous reduction of the number of diplomats representing EEC countries in Tripoli. Measures have been adopted against Libyan commercial and tourist agencies in the EEC countries and also against Libyan citizens.

This disgraceful decision shows again that the EEC followed in the wake of Washington that is whipping and unbridled anti-Libyan campaign. It should be noted, however, that the United States and Britain obediently following Washington's lead demanded that the EEC take much broader measures. The Community refused to rupture political and diplomatic ties with Libya and confirmed its negative attitude to economic sanctions.

The decisions adopted in Luxembourg showed again that among Washington's West European partners it is only London that fully supports the course of the White House. British Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe was quite outspoken in saying the day before the session in Luxembourg that Britain will allow again the use of military bases on the British territory for staging another U.S. attack on Libya if the measures taken by the Council of Ministers of the European Communities turn out to be of little effect.

Having adopted the anti-Libyan sanctions today, the EEC has dealt a blow at the victim of the aggression, not at the aggressor. The terroristic actions of the White House were passed in silence. The decisions of the Luxembourg session run counter to the attitudes of the progressive public of West European countries that resolutely condemns the United States barbarous aggression against Libya, Washington's foreign policy course that made terrorism state policy.

THATCHER DENIES MISTAKE IN ACQUIESCING TO U.S. REQUEST

LD221007 Moscow TASS in English 0934 GMT 22 Apr 86

[Text] London April 22 TASS -- TASS correspondent Sergey Terekhov reports:

The Conservative government is going to further act as an obedient executor of Washington's aggressive plans contrary to the will of a major part of the British population demanding that Britain emphatically dissociate itself from the "big stick" policy in the international arena.

This is the only way to interpret the statements made by the head of the Conservative government Margaret Thatcher in an interview with the British television.

Mentioning a possibility of another U.S. air raid of Libya, M. Thatcher said that she did not have the slightest doubt over the permissibility of the use of U.S. military bases in Britain for staging bomb attacks on the Libyan territory.

According to M. Thatcher, London's consent to the drawing of Britain into the aggression was by no means a mistake. She emphasized that, if need be, the government was ready to give another permission for similar raids to be staged by U.S. "F-111" bombers off the British territory.

In the setting of these statements the words of Margaret Thatcher that it is unnatural for her government to resort to the use of force in international affairs sounded as coarse hypocrisy.

Repeating the trite propaganda allegations of Washington, she put forward as the only explanation of the U.S. pirate act against Libya, as well as of the unworthy role played by Britain in that venture, groundless references to some 'complicity' of the Libyan Government in 'international terrorism'.

Another expression of loyalty for the U.S. by the Conservative leader strongly contrasts with the growing anxiety of the British public which comes to realize even more clearly the danger of these "special relations" with the U.S. Administration.

In the past several days a lot of massive protest actions were held throughout Britain against this British-American 'cooperation' as a result of which residents of peaceful Libyan cities are killed.

M. Thatcher had to admit that her decision to support the U.S. Administration had come up against opposition inside the country. The latest public opinion polls show the extent of this opposition.

According to the results of one of the polls published by the U.S. magazine "NEWSWEEK", 66 per cent of the British population do not approve of the decision of the Reagan administration to bomb Libyan cities. 77 per cent of the polled said that the U.S. Government laid too much emphasis on the use of its Armed Forces. The results of another public opinion poll show that over 70 per cent of the British population regard as impermissible the policy of the Conservative government aimed at a further subordination of British national interests to the military-political ventures of the White House.

'PROVOCATIVE' AIR FORCE MANEUVERS BEGIN IN BRITAIN

CARLSSON CONCLUDES VISIT TO MOSCOW; AGREEMENTS SIGNED

Remarks at Press Conference

PM181254 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 18 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[TASS report: "Press Conference in Moscow"]

[Text] Swedish Prime Minister I. Carlsson held a press conference for Soviet and foreign journalists at the USSR Foreign Ministry Press Center on 16 April.

The head of the Swedish Government voiced satisfaction with the results of his visit to the Soviet Union. He emphasized that the meetings and talks with M.S. Gorbachev, N.I. Ryzhkov, and other Soviet leaders confirmed the traditional and stable nature of friendly Swedish-Soviet relations and the coincidence of views on many international problems. This creates a good basis for actions by the two countries in the interests of strengthening peace and the peoples' security.

Concerning the U.S. attack on Libya, the Swedish prime minister declared that that action runs counter to all norms of international law.

Questions about the further development of relations between Sweden and the USSR in various spheres were discussed during the visit, I. Carlsson pointed out. Both sides expressed readiness to broaden and deepen mutually advantageous economic, trade, and cultural cooperation.

The Swedish side evaluates positively the Soviet initiatives, particularly the proposals for eliminating nuclear weapons, ending nuclear explosions, and preventing the militarization of space. As a member of the group of six states, it is ready to make efforts to implement them.

I. Carlsson confirmed Sweden's support for the idea of creating a nuclear-free zone in northern Europe.

On the same day I. Carlsson participated in a meeting between Soviet Foreign Trade Minister B.I. Aristov and Swedish Industry Minister T. Peterson. During the talks the sides continued examining questions of Soviet-Swedish trade and economic relations and the prospects for their further development, which had been the subject of the talks between N.I. Ryzhkov and I. Carlsson.

Bombing of Libya 'Unjustifiable'

LD162030 Moscow TASS in English 1759 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- "It was very important to me to establish personal contacts with Soviet leaders", Swedish Prime Minister, Chairman of the Social Democratic Labour Party of Sweden Ingvar Carlsson said, answering questions from newsmen at the Press Center of the USSR Foreign Ministery today.

"We view the present visit as an important step in relations between our countries which will promote their further strengthening," the prime minister said.

Answering questions from reporters, Ingvar Carlsson called the attention to an official statement of the Swedish Government in connection with the United States' aggression against Libya. The head of the Swedish Government emphasized that the United States actions run counter to international law and norms of inner-state relations. These actions are unjustifiable.

Ingvar Carlsson noted that his government had condemned all forms of terrorism more than once. The threat of terrorism must be removed by means of stepping up international cooperation. It is necessary to combat acts of terrorism by political means, not by acts of aggression.

The head of state of Argentina, Greece, India, Mexico, Tanzania and Sweden hoped that the moratorium on nuclear explosions would last at least till a summit meeting. The nuclear explosion in Nevada was a great disappointment to us all. Ending of nuclear testing is an important problem directly linked with mankind's survival, the prime minister said.

Economic Talks Continue

LD172228 Moscow TASS in English 1831 GMT 16 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 16 TASS -- Trade turnover between the Soviet Union and Sweden in 1981-1985 increased by a third as compared to the preceding five years and reached almost four billion roubles said the USSR Minister of Foreign Trade Boris Aristov during today's conversation with the Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson. Taking part in the talks were members of a Swedish trade and industrial delegation, headed by Minister of Industry Tage Peterson, now staying in the USSR.

The sides expressed satisfaction with the course of bilateral trade and economic cooperation. There was a frank exchange of views on the prospects of developing trade, financial, scientific and technical ties. Boris Aristov confirmed the readiness of Soviet foreign trade organisations to sign a number of big contracts with Swedish firms.

Sweden is among the Soviet Union's top ten partners in Western Europe. In 1985 the volume of Soviet-Swedish trade turnover amounted to almost 800 million roubles. Soviet import rose over the figure for the previous year by 12.7 per cent while the Swedish deficit in trade with the USSR dropped by a third.

Diverse machinery and equipment hold a prominent place in Swedish deliveries: machine tools and electrotechnical equipment, bearings, pumps and compressors, equipment for the pulp-and-paper industry, means of transport, etc. Swedish firms are also active on the Soviet market offering complete industrial plant. Thus, they are delivering equipment for two pulp-and-paper plants that are now under construction and have taken part in the construction in Moscow of the world's biggest milk-processing plant.

Soviet deliveries to Sweden include fuel and energy resources, chemicals, fertilisers, machine tools, sawn timber and other products.

At the same time, as was stressed during the conversation, the volume and range of mutual deliveries still falls short of the level of the economic potential of the two countries. The export possibilities and import requirements of each partner substantially exceed the attained level and more efforts are needed from each side, both on the business and government levels, to achieve a further expansion of cooperation.

Economic Contracts Signed

PM201254 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 18 Apr 86 First Edition p 5

[TASS report: "Cooperation Developing"]

[Text] Further to the accords between N.I. Ryzhkov, chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, and Swedish Prime Minister I. Carlsson recorded in the letters extending the long-term trade agreement between the USSR and Sweden to 1995, on 15-17 April representatives of Soviet organizations and Swedish business circles discussed the opportunities for further developing trade and economic cooperation in the sphere of the timber, pulp and paper, and wood processing industry and in sectors of the agro-industrial complex for opening up the natural resources of the Kola Peninsula, and for developing production collaboration in machine building, and in other directions.

On 17 April contracts were signed between Soviet foreign trade organizations and a number of Swedish firms for the reciprocal supply of goods in 1986-1988, including machinery, equipment, raw material goods, and other products.

Details of Contracts

LD171302 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 17 Apr 86

[From the "Radio Magazine"]

[Excerpts] [Announcer] First of all, we will go to Ulla Lindskog in Moscow; how has the visit [by Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson] gone?

[Lindskog] Ingvar Carlsson's visit to Moscow has been a clear success for trade. Minister of Industry Thage Peterson and about 80 Swedish businessmen also here in Moscow with Carlsson are satisfied. The visit to Moscow ended today with the signing of nine Swedish contracts, three of them big contracts, between 100-200 million kronor each. They are for Cityvarvet, which had an order for repairing vessels, Sandvik metallurgical company which received licenses for [word indistinct], and the biggest order was received by Esab for a plant to produce rear axles for the Soviet automobile industry. The negotiations also seem to have made progress for the other businessmen who have not yet received contracts.

In other words, the visit by Ingvar Carlsson has been a success, especially in the political area. Ingvar Carlsson himself described his discussions with the Soviet leaders -- party leader Gorbachev and government leader Ryzhkov, as follows:

[Carlsson] It is important to get to know our big neighbor leaders. Our discussions here in Moscow were on all the basic matters which concern our two countries and also on a great number of international matters. These discussions were useful, constructive, and, I would also like to say, future-oriented; we avoided discussions of the past. It means that I heard the Soviet thoughts on matters important to us; it has also meant that I could explain in considerable detail Swedish policy, our viewpoints, both directly concerning the relations between us and concerning international matters.

My understanding is that these talks have brought Swedish-Soviet relations forward. The discussions have even provided the opportunity to form good personal relations which we agree to continue and develop.

[Text] Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson and his wife today left Moscow for home. He has been in our country at the invitation of the Soviet Government on an official visit. At Sheremetyevo Airport, which was decorated with the state flags of the Soviet Union and Sweden, the guests were seen off by Comrade Ryzhkov and his wife; Comrade Talyzin; and other officials.

A guard of honor was mounted at the airport by troops of the Moscow garrison. A band played the national anthems of the two countries. Nikolay Ivanovich Ryzhkov and Ingvar Carlsson reviewed the ranks of the Soviet troops. The festive ceremony of leaving-taking ended with a march-past by the guard of honor.

In the streets and squares of the capital through which the motorcade and its motorcycle escort passed, the state flags of the two countries were hoisted and banners with messages of greeting were displayed.

Economic Talks Summarized

LD172330 Moscow TASS in English 1944 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Moscow April 17 TASS -- Sweden's Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson was on an official visit in the Soviet Union from April 14 to 17, 1986, at the invitation of the Soviet Government.

During the stay in the USSR, the prime minister and the persons who were accompanying him familiarized themselves with various aspects of the Soviet people's life and achievements in the field of economy, social matters, science and culture.

Carlsson was received by Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. During their conversation, the sides discussed topical international problems and issues of Soviet-Swedish relations.

Talks were held between Nikolay Ryzhkov, chairman of the Soviet Council of Ministers, and Carlsson.

During the conversations and talks, held in a business-like atmosphere, the sides discussed questions of the greatest concern to mankind: averting the threat of nuclear war, curbing the arms race and achieving disarmament, and eliminating the seats of tension and military conflicts, and the need for stepping up the process of international cooperation.

On considering the present-day situation in Europe and the world in general, the sides expressed profound concern over the continued build-up of world tensions, the further escalation of the nuclear arms race and the threat of the arms race spreading to outer space, as well as over open military actions in various parts of the world. They expressed conviction that the threat or use of force should not be employed for settling international problems or conflicts.

The Soviet side resolutely condemned the American Administration's lawlessness and arbitrariness with regard to Libya. That unjustifiable act of aggression manifested disregard for the interests of small nations and peoples and violation of the U.N. Charter that bans the use of force in international relations.

The Swedish side stressed that this action contradicted all norms of international law, and that conflicts between states should be resolved by peaceful means.

The Soviet side drew attention to the USSR-proposed programme for a total elimination of the nuclear weapons by the turn of the century in strict accordance with the principle of equality and equal security, with due account for the interests of all countries and peoples. Ending nuclear weapon tests would serve these objectives, too. The United States, however, conducted another nuclear explosion contrary to worldwide protests and the will of the peoples, in an open challenge not only to the Soviet Union, but also to the world at large. While considering itself free from the unilateral moratorium, the USSR was ready, as before, to return to the question of mutual moratorium on nuclear explosions if the U.S. Government stated it would refrain from conducting such blasts.

It was pointed out that Sweden had a positive role in the group of six nations on five continents which favoured the curbing of the arms race, prevention of nuclear war and implementation of the concept of universal security without nuclear weapons. The identity of the sides' positions on the principled basis of such a system -- total and irreversible elimination of nuclear weapons -- was noted with satisfaction.

The Swedish side pointed to the need for ending nuclear tests, stressing that this was an important, fundamental issue. It backed the idea set forth in Gorbachev's March 29, 1986, statement that ending nuclear tests was the most real path toward ending the nuclear arms race.

The unanimous opinion was expressed that consolidating peace and security in Europe would be of positive importance for strengthening peaceful relations in northern Europe and for broadening mutually beneficial cooperation between the nations in the regions on a bilateral and multilateral basis.

The Soviet side stated that Sweden's policy of neutrality was an important positive contribution to maintaining peace in Europe.

Both sides expressed their determination to facilitate the process started by the Helsinki Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. The Soviet Union and Sweden attached much importance to the meetings organized within the framework of the process.

The current Stockholm Conference on Confidence and Security-Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe was called upon to work out stage by stage new effective and concrete measures directed at furthering progress in strengthening confidence and security and in achieving disarmament so as to put into life the nations' obligation to refrain from the threat or use of force in relations with each other.

The sides stressed the need for facilitating the maintenance and consolidation of peace and stability in northern Europe and in the Baltic Sea region where security should be strengthened not through stepped-up military activity, but through broader mutually beneficial cooperation.

The Soviet Union and Sweden reaffirmed the importance of strengthening the role and effectiveness of the United Nations as an instrument of consolidating peace and international security capable of promoting inter-state cooperation in all areas on the basis of strict observance by all states of the norms and principles of the organisation's charter.

The sides discussed problems related to the situation in individual parts of the world, including the Near and Middle East and Central America, and the situation around Afghanistan.

The sides stressed the importance of developing international economic cooperation on the basis of the equality and equal benefit, as envisaged by the implementation of the recommendations and agreements contained in the final act of the conference of security and cooperation in Europe, in the final document of the 1980 Madrid meeting, the Charter of Economic Rights and Obligations of States, the declaration on establishing a new international economic order and appropriate U.N. decisions.

The sides expressed their common opinion that the further development of Soviet-Swedish relations in the political, economic, cultural and other spheres was promoting stronger peace and security in Europe.

The reaffirmed their desire to use actively the available opportunities in order to develop and enrich relations and cooperation between the two countries.

The importance was stressed of permanent direct contacts at all levels and especially meetings between the leaders of the Soviet Union and Sweden, which were helpful in ascertaining each other's position and deepening the atmosphere of mutual understanding.

During the visit the sides exchanged letters on extending their long-term trade agreement till 1995, and signed a Soviet-Swedish inter-governmental agreement on reciprocal copyright protection.

On the eve of the visit, letters were exchanged on extending the programme for cooperation in culture, science and education. All this was strengthening the contractual-legal basis of relations between the two countries.

Both sides expressed satisfaction with the results of the talks and pointed out that they would help further deepen and expand goodneighbourly relations between the USSR and Sweden and would serve the interests of ensuring peace and international security.

REPORTS ON ZAYKOV PARTICIPATION IN 17TH PCI CONGRESS

Interviewed by Moscow TV

LD142215 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 14 Apr 86

[Interview with Lev Nikolayevich Zaykov, CPSU delegation head at 17th Italian Communist Party Congress, by Rome correspondent Yuriy Vybornov, date not given; from the "Vremya" newscast; recorded]

[Text] [Vybornov] Lev Nikolayevich, please give us your impressions of the work of the 17th PCI Congress.

[Zaykov] Certainly. The 17th PCI Congress is a great event in the life of the party and in the life of the Italian people. At the congress, both internal and external issues of the policy of the PCI, and of the country, were discussed. In the report, one is heartened by the fact that, in international relations, in international policies, the views expressed fully coincide with the policies of peace, policies of detente, policies aimed at eliminating all nuclear weapons, that are being conducted by our party, by our country. Comrade Natta and the delegates to the congress who spoke fully support Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev's statement of 15 January, in which the main task is the total elimination of nuclear weapons by the year 2000.

[Vybornov] The international situation has again become aggravated. How do you assess the reaction of Italian Communists to this complication?

[Zaykov] I must say that they their attitude toward the latest acts of sabotage which the Americans have undertaken against Libya in the Mediterranean is one of great alarm. Constructive proposals on this issue have been expressed. That is, that this incident must be tackled by political means. In the same way, Italian Communists received with great enthusiasm the proposal made by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev for the withdrawal of the warships of the United States and of the Soviet Union from the Mediterranean. In conclusion, I would like to stress that our parties have good possibilities for further developing relations in the struggle for peace and social progress.

Meets With PCI's Natta

LD151342 Moscow TASS in English 1200 GMT 15 Apr 86

[Text] Rome April 15 TASS -- There was a friendly meeting here, in the building of the Central Committee of the Italian Communist Party (PCI), between Lev Zaykov, member of the Political Bureau of the CPSU Central Committee, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and head of the CPSU delegation at the 17th PCI Congress, and Alessandro Natta, general secretary of the Italian Communist Party. Vadim Zagladin, member of the CPSU Central Committee, Nikolay Lunkov, ambassador of the U.S.S.R. to Italy, Paolo Bufalini, Ugo Pecchioli, Gian Carlo Pajetta -- members of the PCI leadership, and Antonio Rubbi, member of the PCI Central Committee, took part in the meeting,

During the meeting both sides expressed indignation and strongly condemned the U.S. barbarous actions against Libya. The representatives of the CPSU and the PCI were unanimous in that exceptionally vigorous actions of the peace-minded forces were needed, aimed at protecting international security, to give a rebuff to the actions of imperialism's aggressive circles.

Disputable issues existing in the world should be resolved by political means. The terrorist actions of any kind, and, certainly, the aggressive actions similar to the U.S. attack on Libya can but deteriorate complex as it is the international situation.

The sides underlined the exceptional topicality in the present-day conditions of Mikhail Gorbachev's peace initiatives, the proposals put forward by the 27th CPSU Congress and the 17th PCI Congress.

The sides declared for further developing and deepening friendly relations between the CPSU and the PCI, the ties between the U.S.S.R. and Italy, and between the people of the two countries.

The meeting passed in a warm and friendly atmosphere marked by mutual understanding.

Addresses Friendship Meeting

PM170855 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 16 Apr 86 First Edition p 4

[Report by PRAVDA and TASS correspondents G. Zafesov, Yevg. Babenko, and A. Golyayev: "Delegation's Meeting"]

[Text] Rome, 16 Apr -- The CPSU delegation headed by L.N. Zaykov, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, which took part in the 17th Italian Communist Party [PCI] Congress here met with the aktiv of the "Italy-USSR" society. The head of the CPSU delegation addressed those present.

We have just returned from Florence, where at the invitation of the PCI leadership we took part in the Italian Communists' congress, he noted. I must say that the atmosphere of the congress, its businesslike and self-critical approach, and the frank exchange of opinions made a great impression on all the members of the delegation. I think the congress decisions will be a reliable basis for further increasing the PCI's role in the solution of the acute socioeconomic problems which face Italy.

The speaker noted the fundamental similarity of the positions of the PCI and the CPSU in assessing the most important problems of today, and above all in terms of the need to preserve peace, promote the relaxation of international tension, and eliminate the threat of nuclear catastrophe. On behalf of the CPSU delegation, millions of Soviet Communists, and all sincere friends of the Italian people in our country, the speaker stated, I send you warm greetings and wish you success in your noble activity aimed at developing friendship and all-around cooperation with the Soviet people.

The "Italy-USSR" society is the heir to the ancient traditions of friendship between the two peoples and the mouthpiece of their feelings of deep sympathy and respect for each other. These traditions have been carefully preserved and strengthened throughout the two countries' many centuries of history.

The CPSU delegation's visit to Italy is evidence of the developing and strengthening friendship between Soviet and Italian Communists. All members of our delegation, he said, retain fresh memories of the wishes expressed from the 17th PCI Congress platform for the strengthening and development of friendly, constructive ties between the PCI and the CPSU on the basis of the principle of absolute autonomy and independence, in the spirit of complete mutual respect. There may be differences between our parties in their assessments of certain problems, events, or facts. That is only natural. But what is most important is for positive, fraternal dialogue to develop and deepen between the CPSU and the PCI.

The need today, above all, is to ensure a world without wars, without the arms race, without armed conflicts big or small, without the threat of universal nuclear annihilation. Any progress on earth, social progress included, is inconceivable without such a world. The struggle for the "reform and renewal of Italian society and state" which was discussed at the Italian Communists' congress is also inconceivable without such a world.

The struggle against the nuclear menace and the arms race remains the main avenue of foreign policy for the Soviet Union and the CPSU. The 27th CPSU Congress consolidated and developed our party's new approach to questions of world policy and formulated an important initiative, the idea of creating an all-embracing system of international security.

Our priority goal will be the struggle for the implementation of the three-stage program put forward in M.S. Gorbachev's 15 January statement. The implementation of this plan would enable mankind to greet the 21st century without nuclear or other types of weapons of mass destruction, without the threat of collective suicide.

We are confident that the forces of peace and progress throughout the world will be able to neutralize the threat from imperialism, halt the world's slide toward the nuclear abyss, and prevent space from being turned into a battlefield. The efforts aimed at mutual understanding between peoples and their rapprochement and cooperation in the most diverse spheres play a very important part in the resolution of this task.

The role of the "Italy-USSR" society in this respect is indispensable. In its 40 years of existence it has become a prestigious, mass organization uniting tens of thousands of members all over Italy. In our country the "USSR-Italy" society, in its turn, also steadily extends its activity to familiarize the Soviet people with the Italians' life and their very rich cultural heritage.

It is gratifying to note that the festivals of the Soviet Union in Italy and of Italy in the USSR and the holding of bilateral meetings and symposiums on questions of science, the economy, culture, and art have become traditional. The activity of the friendship societies substantially augments and deepens state cultural exchange.

Prominent Italian politicians, cultural personalities, and parliamentarians have often visited our country, and our high-ranking delegations, members of the government, and USSR Supreme Soviet deputies have visited Italy. Links have also strengthened between representatives of such important components of the two countries' state structure as the organs of local power.

I think such authoritative organizations as the "Italy-USSR" and "USSR-Italy" societies will continue to contribute to solving the key problem of today -- the problem of disarmament.

Progress in this very important salient of the struggle for peace depends to a tremendous extent on the efforts of our countries' people and on how active and persistent every one of us is, L.N. Zaykov said in conclusion.

In the period of the 17th PCI Congress' work, the CPSU delegation visited the Galileo optical instruments plant and the Breda freightcar enterprise and familiarized itself with production cycles. There were meetings with many delegates to the Italian Communists' national forum, foreign guests, and journalists.

ITALIAN DAILY INTERVIEWS CPSU'S ZAGLADIN

PM171537 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 12 Apr 86 p 5

[Interview with Vadim Zagladin, first deputy chief of the CPSU Central Committee International Section, by Paolo Garimberti in Florence; date not given]

[Excerpt] Florence -- [Garimberti] Mr Zagladin, the PCI says it considers itself an integral part of the European left and no longer of the communist movement. Does that choice of camp worry you much?

[Zagladin] No, it does not worry us at all. There is the communist movement, there is the Socialist International... Basically, there is in Europe a nonomogeneous left, some of whose components even embody contradictions, but which also has some common traits. It seems normal to me to wonder whether this left can find some kind of coordination to tackle and resolve certain problems. From this viewpoint we Soviets also consider ourselves in integral part of the European left.

[Garimberti] That really is being diplomatic, Mr Zagladin, but leaving word games aside, the fact remain that with this congress the PCI has officially left the communist movement, even the unorthodox movement defined at the 1976 Berlin Conference. In your opinion is the PCI still communist?

[Zagladin] The fact that there are differences with us or with others does not mean that the PCI is losing its communist identity. Natta himself said that there are different forces within the left and the fact that they are all part of the left does not eliminate their specific identifies.

[Garimberti] Yes, but what remains now of the communist movement? How has it changed or what is left of it after Berlin?

[Zagladin] The communist movement is something that moves, as the very word suggests. Every part of it develops in whatever direction it wishes; also the movement develops, though sometimes I believe it develops backward. There are only two characteristics shared by all its component parties: the desire to change the society in which they operate -- in a socialist direction -- and the quest for peace. But one must be realistic; times change and so do parties. One cannot expect everything to remain unchangeable.

[Garimberti] So Carrillo was being prophetic when he said in Berlin in 1976 that the era of clandestineness was over for Communists and they no longer had to go to Moscow like going to mass. Does the CPSU now acknowledge that there is no longer any homogeneousness and does it no longer demand it?

[Zagladin] Homogenousness is not the right word. Relations within the communist movement are regulated precisely on the basis of the Berlin Conference, which ratified each party's autonomy and independence. Then there is the cooperation between parties on the peace issue; this is the only thing on which we all agree.

[Garimberti] That really does not seem much to me. But explain to me why the CPSU delegation to the 16th PCI Congress was headed only by a Central Committee member whereas this time a Politburo and Secretariat member came. Were you trying to win back the PCI at the last moment?

[Zagladin] The choice of the delegation leader depends on many things, including leaders' commitments....

[Garimberti] But your rituals and your hierarchy are even more rigid than the church's!

[Zagladin] Of course it was intended in that way to stress the importance we attach to the 17th PCI Congress. There was a meeting between [PCI Secretary General] Natta and Gorbachev in Moscow in January; there were frank and fraternal discussions and we examined all the problems before us in a new and very thorough manner. The level of the CPSU delegation to the congress is intended as an acknowledgement of how highly we assessed that meeting in January.

[Garimberti] Did you notice that Natta never called Gorbachev "comrade" in his report? Do you not at all regret that emphasis on detachment?

[Zagladin] When they met in Moscow they called one another "comrade." I was there and I heard them.

[Garimberti] So not in public -- only in private?

[Zagladin] These are matters of protocol. In my opinion they should not be given too much importance, as you sometimes do.

[Garimberti] To return to the January meeting: Gorbachev's toast to Natta said that from now on relations between the parties must be free of "all pedantry and incrustations." What did that mean?

[Zagladin] It meant that we are against pedantry and incrustation. Is that too simple? Then I will tell you that it must be acknowledged that we all change in time and that we Soviets are also changing for the better. To conduct good politics you have to be realistic; we are trying to show that we understand the reality of things.

[Garimberti] Natta says in his congress report that the PCI's stance toward the USSR must be regarded in political, not ideological, terms. How do you interpret that statement?

[Zagladin] Ask Natta. Be that as it may, I believe he wishes to stress that on political matters our opinions are very close.

[Garimberti] What about ideological matters?

[Zagladin] There are matters under discussion but they must not be emphasized too much. The emphasis must be placed on the convergence, not on the divergences. Each country develops in its own way and this must be taken into account. Some problems will resolve themselves in time. Others must be discussed immediately and frankly.

[Garimberti] Was Eurocommunism more irksome to you Soviets than the Euro-left is today?

[Zagladin] The question is not well expressed in these terms. First, because we are talking about two separate things. Also, because I believe that Eurocommunism is entirely obsolete, if it ever existed. I found no hint of it in Natta's report.

[Garimberti] Natta says you must leave Afghanistan. How do you answer him?

[Zagladin] We agree. We want this also, but the United States is preventing us.

[Garimberti] I don't understand. How is it preventing you?

[Zagladin] Let us put it this way: An internal struggle, resistance against the legitimate government, is one thing, and can even be understood. However, it is another matter if we are talking about subversive activity conducted from the outside the country and subsidized by the Americans with hundreds of millions of dollars. I believe and hope that the Geneva talks will yield results; it will not be easy but there are good chances.

[Garimberti] Natta said: You Soviets must leave Afghanistan just as the Americans must cease their aggression against Nicaragua. That seems to me an unfeasible parallel. What do you think?

[Zagladin] Natta is right when he says that the United States must cease it aggression against Nicaragua. But he should add that they must also cease their aggression against Afghanistan.

[Garimberti] We had better change the subject. Natta renewed his criticisms of the Soviet system for its lack of democracy. How do you answer that?

[Zagladin] We have different conceptions of democracy. We have ours, Natta evidently has another. Let each adhere to his own: Let the Italians do what they consider right to do, and us too. Since parties must be independent, each must be able to do what its wants. We believe that there is much broader democracy in the Soviet Union than in other countries and we have a plan to develop it still further. That means that there will be a healthy rivalry between the parties not only in theory but also in practice. We wish the Italian party every success; we certainly do not want to impose our model of democracy on it.

[Garimberti] Today L'UNITA published the CPSU message to the PCI congress amid those from other parties. It was not even placed at the beginning: The Yugoslavs are ahead of you. Do you not feel insulted or slighted?

[Zagladin] Pardon me, but such observations are suited to a Kremlinologist -- the day the message is published, the order in which the messages appear....

[Garimberti] Is Kremlinology an unhealthy practice?

[Zagladin] No, but it can become so. If what you mean by Kremlinology is great interest in studying our country and its changes, we say: welcome. But too many Kremlinologists are not objective and, in fact, invent things. So for us, Kremlinology has become a pejorative term. You can be both critical and objective. In fact you must....

[Garimberti] Let us return to the messages. Yours say that "the CPSU believes that communist unity has nothing to do with uniformity and hierarchy." Is this the first time such a formulation has been used, or am I mistaken?

[Zagladin] You are mistaken. It is the second time; we said this at our party congress, just over a month ago.

[Garimberti] It is in any case a new formulation, more flexible than in the past.

[Zagladin] After all, one must be able to adapt one's ideas to actual conditions.

[Garimberti] So, Mr Zagladin, are you convinced that things will change under Gorbachev?

[Zagladin] No, things have already changed.

CHIRAC SAYS FRENCH TROOPS WILL REMAIN IN CHAD

PM141323 Moscow IZVESTIYA in Russian 14 Apr 86 Morning Edition p 4

[Unattributed report under general headline "From IZVESTIYA Teletype Room"]

[Text] France

AP reports from Abidjan that French Prime Minister J. Chirac has confirmed his intention of leaving French troops in Chad.

We will leave Chad only when we consider that the French presence there is no longer needed, he said in an interview with the newspaper FRATERNITE MATIN published in the Republic of the Ivory Coast.

As is well known, within the framework of the interventionist "Hawk" operation, France has over 1,000 soldiers and officers in Chad who have been provided with fighters, helicopters, and tactical missiles.

REPORTAGE ON REACTIONS TO U.S. BOMBING OF LIBYA

Delegation Meets Al-Qadhdhafi

LD220438 Moscow TASS in English 1359 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli April 21 TASS -- Members of the Coordination Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement have stated that U.S. aggressive actions against Libya pose a threat to all the members of the Non-Aligned Movement. During a meeting here with Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, they pointed out that the aggressive actions on the part of the U.S. created a real threat to the cause of peace and security in the Mediterranean region and in the world in general. Representatives of the Non-Aligned Movement denounced the barbarous U.S. aggression against the Libyan people and the gross encroachments of the White House on the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Libya. The delegation expressed firm support for the Libyan people who were courageously holding out against the intrigues of U.S. imperialism. The delegation headed by India's foreign minister Bali Ram Bhagat include ministers of foreign affairs of Yugoslavia, Cuba, Senegal, Ghana and the Congo.

Complaint Lodged With ICAO

LD220646 Moscow TASS in English 0635 GMT 22 Apr 86

[Text] Ottawa, April 22 TASS -- Libya has lodged a complaint with the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) against the defiant actions of the U.S. actions of the U.S. Air Force in the international air space over the Mediterranean. The complaint says that in recent days U.S. fighter aircraft based on the aircraft carriers of the U.S. Sixth Fleet have twice prevented the normal regular flights of civil planes of the Libyan air company.

New Attack Possible

LD220832 Moscow TASS in English 0803 GMT 22 Apr 86

[Text] Washington April 22 TASS -- The U.S. is going to leave two carrier forces in the Mediterranean for an indefinite period of time in case another order is issued on delivering a new strike against Libya, the "CBS" television company has reported quoting the informed sources in the Pentagon. Representatives of the U.S. Defense Department stated point-blank that a new strike against Libya could be even more powerful than the raid of Tripoli and Banghazi last week. It clearly followed from their statements that far less attention will be devoted to avoiding casualties among the peaceful population.

Bombing Site Visited

LD212055 Moscow Television Service in Russian 1700 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Correspondent Leonid Rassadin report from Tripoli, Libya; from the "Vremya" newscast]

[Text] [Video shows Rassadin speaking in front of wrecked building] This happened on 15 April. U.S. planes carried out a raid here on the (Shavat) farm near Tripoli. It may have been an accident, but Tripoli airport is 5 km away, not to mention the fact that it is a civil airport for international air lines. We were brought here only after the military had defused an unexploded shell and made certain that there were no others in the same area.

Vivid proof has been gathered here of a piratic raid by U.S. military aircraft. There are fragments of missiles and bombs; what is more it is obvious the raid was premeditated and aimed at the civilian population. [Video shows photographers taking pictures of wreckage and close-ups of bomb fragments with the markings "Texas Instruments" on them]

[Begin interview of local Libyan with superimposed Russian over vernacular] It was very quiet as usual. Suddenly, we were awakened by a terrible noise and whistling. It was only later that I realized it was the roar of aircraft and the explosion of bombs. We took cover immediately in a shelter here. By a lucky chance no one was hurt. [end interview]

What kind of self-defense against far-off Libya is it that they are reiterating over and over again now in Washington? An open act of state terrorism has been committed against a sovereign Arab state and its peaceful inhabitants.

U.S. Attack Condemned

LD180950 Moscow TASS in English 1456 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Sanaa April 17 TASS -- The Council of Ministers of North Yemen condemns the American air raid on Libyan cities as an act contradicting all existing international laws and treaties, it is said in a special statement by the North Yemen Government published today. The cabinet of ministers confirmed the solidarity of the people of the Yemen Arab Republic with the people of Libya and called for an urgent convocation of an Arab summit to work out a common Arab stand in accordance with the charter of the League of Arab Countries and the treaty on joint Arab defense.

Rabat April 17 TASS -- Moroccan members of parliament denounce the United States attack against Libya and state full solidarity with its people, it is said in a statement adopted by the Chamber of Representatives of the Moroccan parliament after the ending of its special session. Washington's actions, the statement stresses, threaten peace and security in the Mediterranean area and in the whole world. The United States brazenly flouts the sovereignty and independence of states, the United States charter [as received] and generally accepted norms of international law.

Cairo April 17 TASS -- The Egyptian National Committee of Afro-Asian Solidarity qualified the bandit action of the American military as an aggression not only against Libya but also against the entire Arab nation. The actions of the United States, it is said in the committee's statement distributed here, are an act of state terrorism threatening the security of the peoples in the Middle East and the entire world.

SOVIET MEDIATION FURTHERS SYRIAN-PLO ACCORD

JN201326 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 1300 GMT 20 Apr 86

[Text] Citing an Arab diplomatic source in Amman, AFP says that, as a result of Soviet mediations, Damascus has consented to resume dialogue with Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat. The source said that letters were recently exchanged between Syrian officials and PLO leaders and that the letters included proposals to effect a Jordanian-Palestinian reconciliation. [Sentence as heard]

An authorized Palestinian source in Amman said that a high-level PLO delegation may soon leave for Damascus for this purpose, adding that Moscow does not consider the Syrian-PLO differences as basic, but as being personal rather than ideological in nature.

PDRY MINISTER DENOUNCES 'PLOT' TO UNDERMINE ARABS

LD211120 Moscow TASS in English 1036 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Aden April 21 TASS -- An official spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen (PDRY) has made a special statement to ANA news agency, which criticized the U.S. policy in the Middle East and exposed the maneouvres by the U.S. diplomacy designed to drive a wedge into Yemeni-Soviet relations and hamper Democratic Yemen's advancement along the chosen path.

The statement says that the U.S. Administration "continues circulating fabrications with a view to engineering conspiracies and aggressive actions against the progressive national regimes of Arab states. In his speech early in April CIA Director William Casey stated that the Soviet Union had created a situation that put Democratic Yemen in the circumstances leading to the developments of January 13, 1986, which was needed by it in order to get a springboard in the PDRY".

"This statement by the CIA director is a concoction designed to undermine confidence in Democratic Yemen, and distorts the durable and principled relations between our country and the Soviet Union." Such fabrications are made by the U.S. Administration in order to set the stage for conspiracies, undermine security and stability in the region.

The statements by White House senior officials smack of a new plot which is in the making at present, the spokesman said. This conspiracy is designed to plunge the Arab region into tension, discord and instability, weaken the Arab unity and erect new hurdles in the way of efforts taken to convene an emergency session of the heads of the Arab states to discuss the U.S. aggression against fraternal Libya.

Arab states and their peoples, the statement says, realize that the Soviet Union has always sided and continues to side with the just cause of the Arab peoples, including the Arab people of Palestine, and stands for the liberation of the Arab lands occupied by Zionists. The USSR has firmly sided with the Libyan Arab people and its revolution and opposed the U.S. armed aggression. The attempts by the U.S. Administration to distort the international character of relations between Democratic Yemen and the USSR will suffer a fiasco, the document emphasizes.

SUPREME SOVIET DELEGATION CONTINUES TUNISIA VISIT

LD212116 Moscow TASS in English 1516 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] Tunis April 21 TASS -- The USSR Supreme Soviet delegation, led by chairman of the Soviet of the Union, Lev Tolkunov, continues its official visit to Tunisia.

Today the Soviet delegation met with Mohamed Sayah, minister of equipment and housing, Hedi Baccouch, director of the country's ruling Destour Socialist Party, who recently visited the Soviet Union to attend the 27th CPSU Congress, and with Bechir Ben Slama, minister of cultural affairs.

Issues discussed during meetings and talks with Tunisian statemen included Soviet-Tunisian cooperation and prospects for its further development in various fields. Both sides expressed firm conviction that the Soviet-Tunisian relations would continue to develop successfully.

The Soviet MPs also met activists of the "Tunisia-USSR" friendship association, headed by Minister of Cultural Affairs Bechir Ben Slama.

NICARAGUAN PRESIDENT SPEAKS OUT ON U.S. ACTIONS

Ortega Cables Al-Qadhdhafi

LD190244 Moscow TASS in English 0554 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] Managua April 18 TASS — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has sent a message to Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, saying that the national leadership of the Sandinist National Liberation Front, the people and the Government of Nicaragua express sincere feelings of solidarity with the Libyan people subjected to barbarous terrorist aggression on the part of the United States. Noting that the bombings of Tripoli and Banghazi have resulted in the death of civilians, including women, old people and children, the message said the Nicaraguans share the grief of the Libyan families who have lost their near and dear ones as a result of criminal U.S. aggression.

Address to Managuan Workers

LD210908 Moscow TASS in English 0607 GMT 21 Apr 86

[Text] April 21 TASS -- President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua has strongly criticised Washington's criminal armed action against Libya. Addressing workers in Managua, he described as cynical President Reagan's statements about the so-called "heroism" of the American pilots, who bombed the Libyan capital. Such brutal actions, Ortega said, constitute "state terrorism." The American pilots, and together with them President Reagan, who ordered the bombing attack, performed not some "heroic deeds," but the murder in cold blood of women and children. Daniel Ortega exposed the criminal plans hatched by the USA to shift onto Nicaragua responsibility for the possible border conflicts, which Washington intends to instigate in Central America.

German Interview

LD180717 Moscow TASS in English 1451 GMT 17 Apr 86

[Text] Bonn April 17 TASS -- The USA is speeding up the implementation of its plan of an aggression against Nicaragua through broadening its direct participation in the undeclared war, which is being waged now with the hands of the mercenaries in order to try to stifle the Sandinist Revolution, President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua said in an interview with the West German FORWAERTS magazine. He recalled as an example of escalation of imperialist aggression that U.S. war helicopters deployed in the U.S. Air Force bases in Honduras had already taken part in combat operations by the contras.

In face of the defeats suffered by the Somozist gangs from the Sandinist People's Army, Daniel Ortega pointed out, Washington intends to increase support for the mercenaries and, in particular, deploy U.S. troops in close proximity to the camps of the counterrevolutionary gangs, to start patrolling the areas where they operate, and send "advisors" there. This would mean, as a matter of fact, a direct involvement of the USA in aggressive actions against the Nicaraguan people. At hand is a rapidly developing process of "Vietnamization" of the Central American conflict, which is fraught with dangerous consequences to the cause of peace in the region. The Latin American states, the Nicaraguan leader continued, are rejecting the aggressive intrigues of the USA against Nicaragua, in the first place assistance to the mercenaries.

Daniel Ortega reaffirmed the Nicaraguan Government's readiness to resume dialogue with the USA for normalizing bilateral relations and the search for realistic ways to overcome the explosive situation in the region.

Trade Ministry Collegium Holds Session 16 April

PM181516 Moscow PRAVDA in Russian 18 Apr 86 First Edition p 2

[TASS report under general heading: "Collegium Sessions"]

[Text] An enlarged session of the USSR Trade Ministry Collegium was held in Moscow on 16 April. It discussed the tasks of the sector's working people in fulfilling the 27th CPSU Congress decisions.

USSR Trade Minister G.I. Vashchenko delivered the report. The session participants analyzed critically the state of trade services for the population and spoke of the need for a fundamental reorganization of the work of trade and public catering enterprises in accordance with the requirements of the 27th CPSU Congress.

Participating in the Collegium's work were A.P. Biryukova, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee; N.A. Stashenkov, chief of a CPSU Central Committee department; leaders of USSR ministries and departments; union republic trade ministers; and senior officials of the USSR Council of Ministers, the USSR Gosplan, and the AUCCTU.

Nikonov Addresses Fishing Ministry Meeting

PM181205 Moscow SELSKAYA ZHIZN in Russian 18 Apr 86 p 2

[TASS report: "From Critical Positions"]

[Text] An expanded session of the USSR Ministry of the Fishing Industry Collegium in Moscow on 18 April discussed the tasks of the sector's workers in fulfilling the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress.

V.M. Kamentsev, USSR minister of the fishing industry, delivered a report.

Those taking part in the session analyzed critically the state of the country's fishing industry and outlined the main avenues for its development in the light of the requirements of the 27th CPSU Congress.

The Collegium drew special attention to the need to restructure the work of the sector, to the acceleration of the pace of its development on the basis of scientific-technical progress, and to the enlistment into production of reserves for increasing the fish catch in the open regions of the world's oceans and in the country's inland waters.

Special emphasis was placed on the need to step up attention toward questions of improving the quality and expanding the range of edible fish output and effecting an all-around saving of material and fuel and energy resources.

The speakers also mentioned the need for the further improvement of the economic mechanism and the structure of management of the sector, the improvement of work with cadres, and the more active solution of social questions. It was emphasized that the successful fulfillment of the targets of the 12th 5-Year Plan and the USSR Food Program depends on the efforts of all fishing industry workers and their harmonious work.

The session was addressed by V.P Nikonov, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. Taking part in the Collegium were responsible workers of the CPSU Central Committee, USSR Council of Ministers, and ministries and departments.

Nikonov Addresses SELSKAYA ZHIZN Newsmen

PM141012 Moscow SELSKAYA ZHIZN in Russian 11 Apr 86 p 3

[Unattributed report: "Correspondents' Conference"]

[Text] A conference of SELSKAYA ZHIZN correspondents working in union republics, krays, and oblasts has been held in Moscow. At the conference, a detailed discussion was held on the tasks of the newspaper's journalists in the light of the 27th CPSU Congress demands.

The conference participants were addressed by Comrade V.P. Nikonov, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee.

The conference was attended by A.A. Nikonov, president of the V.I. Lenin All-Union Academy of Agricultural Sciences; A.F. Serkov, A.P. Zavgorodniy, V.N. Zhurikov, and S.B. Valter, senior officials of the USSR State Agro-Industrial Committee; and A.G. Yasin, first deputy chairman of the USSR Tsentrosoyuz.

Slyunkov Addresses Training Course for Officials

PM201646 Moscow SOVETSKAYA BELORUSSIYA in Russian 9 Apr 86 p 3

[Unattributed report: "Theory Will Help Practice"]

[Text] A training course for newly elected first secretaries and secretaries of party gorkoms and raykoms and chairmen of city and rayon soviet ispolkoms has been completed at republic courses for raising the qualifications of leading party and soviet cadres. Comrades G.G. Bartoshevich, N.I. Dementey, Yu.B. Kolokolov, A.T. Kuzmin, and V.A. Lepeshkin addressed them on topical problems of Marxist-Leninist theory and communist building practice and on improving organizational, party, and ideological work and party leadership of national economic development in light of the 27th CPSU Congress decisions.

Students in the courses were received by N.N. Slyunkov, candidate member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Belorussian Communist Party Central Committee. During the talk particular attention was paid to further improving the style and methods of party committee and organization activity and to increasing the responsibility of cadres for fulfilling party decisions, state plans, and socialist pledges. The need to closely link ideological work with the resolution of specific production, social, and educational tasks and to orient all organizational and political activity toward successfully meeting the targets of the 12th 5-Year Plan was stressed.

G.G. Bartoshevich, second secretary of the Belorussian Communist Party Central Committee, and V.I. Boris, chief of the Belorussian Communist Party Central Committee Organizational Party Work Department, participated in the meeting.

Students in the courses — chairmen of gorispolkoms and rayispolkoms — were received by G.S. Tarazevich, chairman of the Belorussian SSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, and M.V. Kovalev, chairman of the Belorussian SSR Council of Ministers.

During their training the students visited Minsk party committees and soviet ispolkoms, and also visited Novopolotsk and Baranovichskiy rayon.

Yeltsin Addresses Moscow Propaganda Workers

PM161447 Moscow MOSKOVSKAYA PRAVDA in Russian 12 Apr 86 p 1

[Unattributed report: "Among the Capital's Propaganda Workers"]

[Text] A meeting of Moscow propaganda workers with Moscow CPSU Gorkom secretaries was held yesterday at the Moscow Gorkom and Moscow Obkom Political Enlightenment Center.

Addressing the gathering, B.N. Yeltsin, candidate member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Moscow CPSU Gorkom, stressed the great responsibility of ideological workers,particularly propaganda workers, for explaining fully and in as specific a manner as possible the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress in close connection with working people's daily affairs and interests. The program for restructuring in the national economy is now outlined quite clearly. Restructuring is also necessary in ideological work because serious changes are required in man's consciousness, in his psychology, culture, and style and methods of work.

The 27th CPSU Congress gave clear, profoundly justified instructions; but it would be extremely wrong to be satisfied with the fact that there are decisions and that the aims are known and the tasks are clear. Yes, society has gotten moving and the situation in the labor collectives is being markedly activated and sociopolitical activeness is increasing. But under no circumstances must we be satisfied with that. All of us, and propaganda workers too, of course, have a very great deal to do. The congress tasks must be brought to every Muscovite.

The meeting consisted of answers to numerous questions (about 400 in all) put by propaganda workers both in advance and during the meeting. It was a detailed talk of the utmost frankness, sometimes a keen talk, on questions perturbing the labor collectives and the population of the capital.

The complexity and scale of the tasks of the capital's economic and social development in the 12th 5-Year Plan and for the period through the year 2000 appear particularly clearly and sharply when compared with what we have — with the level achieved in resolving Moscow's economic and social problems whose analysis has relied on considerable material of figures and facts.

The lively, confidential talk touched on the questions most vital for our city's present and future: the reconstruction and retooling of enterprises; the resolute improvement of the quality of output and labor productivity; the prospects for the development of Moscow, including its historical section, while retaining its unique architectural appearance; the attainment of a higher standard of capital construction; the conservation and sanitation of the environment; the tasks of fundamentally improving the operation of passenger transport, trade, public catering, and health care; the most rational use of manpower resources; the improvement of the training of cadres for all sectors of social labor; the alteration of the guidelines for socialist competition in accordance with modern requirements; and a more active and fruitful struggle for the consolidation of order and discipline and against negative phenomena, drunkenness, and alcoholism. Considerable attention was paid to the leader's moral nature. The answers to the questions generated great interest among those assembled.

The tasks were formulated for explaining and propagandizing the decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress and the mobilization of Muscovites to the fulfillment of these decisions.

'Powerful' Cyclone in Arkhangelsk Reported

LD191753 Moscow Domestic Service in Russian 1300 GMT 19 Apr 86

[Text] The cyclone that swept over southern districts of Arkhangelsk Oblast yesterday had been forecast but turned out to be more powerful than expected. The cohesion and good organization displayed by the people, however, prevented the elements from disrupting the course of the subbotnik. Reports are coming into the headquarters for the struggle with the elements set up at Velsk Rayispolkom: The power supply to all farms has been cut off; 15 10-kilovolt power lines have been damaged; the telephone system is out of order; schools have been closed; and in many places ball lightning has been seen.

Most of the destruction wrought by the raging elements has already been rectified. All off-road vehicles are out. Power has been restored to state and collective farm workshops and to stock-farms. In the course of the Leninist communist subbotnik, the rayons hit by the April storm with heavy snowfalls carried out unforeseen work to eliminate the effects of the cyclone in an organized way and also did their planned work.

Moscow Soviet Officials Elected; Grishin Retired

PM161509 Moscow MOSKOVSKAYA PRAVDA in Russian 6 Apr 86 pp 1, 2

[Unattributed report: "Accelerated Pace for the Capital's Development. Sixth Session of the Moscow City Soviet of People's Deputies, 19th Convocation"]

[Excerpts] The sixth session of the Moscow city Soviet of People's Deputies, 19th Convocation, was held yesterday in the Hall of Columns of the House of Unions.

The session was opened by Deputy V.T. Saykin, chairman of Moscow Gorispolkom. Deputy V.A. Protopopov, first secretary of Leninskiy CPSU Raykom, was elected session chairman, and Deputy V.S. Orlova, machine plant adjuster, was elected session secretary.

The session examined the questions "On the Tasks of Moscow City Soviets of People's Deputies Stemming from the 27th CPSU Congress Decisions," "On Progress in the Fulfillment of Voters' Instructions," and others.

Having heard the report by Deputy B.A. Gryaznov, chairman of the Moscow city soviet Credentials Commission, the soviet recognized the credentials of Moscow Soviet Deputies B.N. Yeltsin from No 774 Electoral Okrug and Yu.A. Belyakov from No 834 Electoral Okrug, who were elected 16 March 1986 to replace former deputies.

The Moscow Soviet examined organizational questions.

The Moscow Soviet relieved S.M. Kolomin of his duties as first deputy chairman of Moscow Gorispolkom, V.A. Korolev from his duties as deputy chairman of Moscow Gorispolkom, and B.V. Pokarzhevskiy from his duties as secretary of Moscow Gorispolkom in connection with their retirement on pension.

Deputies Yu.A. Belyakov and L.I. Matveyev were elected first deputy chairmen of Moscow Gorispolkom.

Deputy B.V. Selivanov was relieved of his duties as first deputy chairman of Moscow Gorispolkom and was elected deputy chairman of Moscow Gorispolkom in connection with the reallocation of duties among Moscow Gorispolkom deputy chairmen.

Deputy Yu.A. Prokofyev was elected secretary of Moscow Gorispolkom.

Deputies G.A. Aseyev and V.V. Grishin were relieved of their duties as members of Moscow Gorispolkom in connection with their retirement on pension, and Deputy R.A. Papilov was relieved of his duties as member of Moscow Gorispolkom in connection with transfer to other work.

Deputies B.N. Yeltsin and I.L. Paristyy were elected members of Moscow Gorispolkom.

Deputy G.A. Yagodin was relieved of his duties as chairman of the Moscow city Soviet Standing Commission on Public Education at his personal request.

Z.A. Malkova was elected chairman of Moscow city Soviet Standing Commission on Public Education.

The following appointments were confirmed: P.S. Surov as chief of the Main Administration of Housing and Civil Construction; Deputy V.N. Mudrak as chief of the Main Administration of Health; V.N. Shaposhnikov as chief of the General Department; and N.F. Khoroshilov as chief of the Veterinary Service Department.

The Moscow Soviet introduced partial changes to the composition of the City Court. V.A. Gorbachev, S.V. Kalabanova, E.E. Kishe, I.D. Koshel, V.P. Pankratova, and eE.N. Popov were relieved of their duties as members of Moscow City Court.

I.V. Vorontsov, M.V. Kryukova, M.R. Mednikov, V.A. Monastyrskiy, A.N. Rogov, and G.A. Smorodinskaya were elected members of Moscow City Court.

Taking part in the session's work were B.N. Yeltsin, candidate member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of Moscow CPSU Gorkom; senior officials from the CPSU Central Committee, the USSR and RSFSR Supreme Soviet Presidiums, and the RSFSR Council of Ministers; USSR and RSFSR ministers; and other senior officials from ministries and departments.

Shcherbitskiy Reports at Ukrainian CP Plenum

AU070701 Kiev PRAVDA UKRAINY in Russian 30 Mar 86 pp 2-4

[Unattributed report on the report and concluding speech delivered by V.V. Shcherbitskiy, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and first secretary of the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee, at the 28 March plenum of the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee: "On the Results of the 27th CPSU Congress and the Tasks of the Republic's Party Organizations To Implement Its Decisions"]

[Text] Comrades:

In the unanimous opinion of the Soviet people, as well in the opinion of many foreign political and public figures, the 27th CPSU Congress, held at a crucial stage in the life of the country and of the present-day world as a whole, has become a historic event, an event of world importance. The bold and constructive ideas, the innovative plans and decisions brought forward by the congress are increasingly affecting the life of party organizations, the work of labor collectives in the country, and the development of world events.

The main substance and beat of the congress proceedings were determined by the party Central Committee's Political Report, delivered by Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee. The report offered an exhaustive, Marxist-Leninist characterization of the present-day world, of its main tendencies and contradictions. It thoroughly analyzed the present development stage of Soviet society, clearly defined the main lines and tasks of the party's domestic and foreign policy.

The congress was held in an atmosphere of party-like adherence to principles and creativity, of exactingness and bolshevik truthfulness, and convincingly showed that the party was up to its historic mission and was able to interpret in Lenin's way the peculiarity of the present situation and to draw conclusions from the past.

In its Political Report, the Central Committee straightforwardly and frankly told the party and the people about the omissions made in political and practical activity, about unfavorable trends in the economy and in the sociospiritual sphere, and about the causes of these phenomena. these causes were above all subjective in their nature. These were inertness and stagnation in the forms and methods of management, a declined dynamism in the work, and an increased bureaucratism as a result of which problems accumulated faster than they were solved.

The party has confronted a task of great historic importance — to trace a line which would ensure that the accumulated problems would be settled and a confident progress would be made.

A line aimed at the country's accelerated socioeconomic development was drawn up at the April 1985 CPSU Central Committee plenum. New in principle, this party line was further deepened and thoroughly developed int the congress documents.

The country's accelerated development is the only correct key — a key fully in line with the requirements of the times — to the accomplishment of our immediate and long-term, internal and foreign political tasks. Acceleration is the only way to meet the high targets set in the party program and the Basic Guidelines for socioeconomic development.

In their entire substance, the congress documents and decisions convincingly confirm the party's firm loyalty to the Leninist general line. Their objective is to achieve the supreme goal — full propsperity and a free, thorough development for all members of society.

The principled groundwork set forth in the CPSU Central Committee's Political Report for creating an all-embracing system of international security and clear-cut programmatic foreign political directives are highly important for the destiny of all mankind.

There is every reason to assert, V.V. Shcherbitskiy said, that the Central Committee's Political Report, the resolution adopted by the congress, the new edition of the program, and the endorsed CPSU Statues are prominent documents of creative Marxism-Leninism, documents that contribute a great part to developing the theory and practice of scientific communism.

The 27th CPSU Congress has manifested a monolithic cohesion of the Communists and all Soviet people around the CPSU Central Committee and their own Leninist party.

The congress documents and the speeches delivered by foreign guests have confirmed that the CPSU was a party of social progress and peace; a party that carries high the banner of socialist, proletarian internationalism; a party which has no higher goal that the benefit of the toiler, the preservation of peace, and precluding a thermonuclear catastrophe.

The main political result of the congress is the creatively enriched and endorsed party line aimed at accelerating the country's socioeconomic development, and at the consolidation of general peace.

Numerous responses from the working people, meetings and gatherings held in labor collectives, and meetings with congress delegates have shown that the Ukraine's Communists and people were unanimous in their approval of the results of the 27th CPSU Congress, and have supported our party's strategic line with their practical deeds.

The time has now come for practical actions. The confidence of the people, who believe the party and await concrete action from us, has to be justified. And each Communist, each leader has to do the utmost to materialize the people's hopes and expectations.

The CPSU Central Committee has drawn up concrete measures connected with implementing the resolution of the 27th CPSU Congress and the directives set forth in the Central Committee's Political Report, and emphasized the need to immediately engage all links of the Soviet political system in the energetic work to accomplish the large-scale tasks set by the congress. A complex of measures have been defined to implement the congress directives, and to settle the key problems concerning economic development, social policy, state construction, and ideological work.

Proceeding from nationwide interests and general state positions, what matters now is to thoroughly analyze the situation everywhere, to take into account concrete conditions in each labor collective, city, village, in each branch, and in a businesslike way organize the implementation of the congress decisions.

Of course, the tasks for the present time may be formulated in the following way: to study, to think over, and, mainly, to resolutely act already now, immediately and without delay.

At the congress, Comrade M.S. Gorbachev emphasized that the success of any undertaking was decisively determined by the active and conscious participation of the masses in it.

The republic has operatively developed an extensive campaign to explain the CPSU Central Committee's Political Report and other congress documents. The Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee sent groups of responsible functionaries of the republic's central organs to all oblasts. They visited more than 400 labor collectives, gave concrete assistance in highlighting the congress materials, reported to the working people, spoke at seminars for propagandists, and participated in preparations for plenums and meetings, as well as in outlining organizational and political measures.

All comrades who made the field trips noted that vigorous organizational and political work was conducted in the overwhelming majority of party committees and labor collectives. Concrete measures are being worked out and taken to more rapidly raise production volume and labor productivity, to improve production quality. Much is being done to restructure organizational and educational work, to increase the responsibility of cadres, and to settle social problems. Many congress delegates and front-ranking production workers are initiating valuable actions and making concrete proposals aimed at the successful fulfillment of the plans drawn up for 1986 and the 5-year period as a whole.

At the same time, the speaker pointed out, there are occasional manifestations of an unnecessary haste, and attempts are being made to bring everything again to a brief campaign or to substitute a concrete matter for a talking session. Plans for accomplishing immediate tasks have not been considered in detail everywhere. Some comrades had to be corrected. But Central Committee staffers are unable to visit all gorkoms and raykoms, let alone all basic party organizations.

It is essential to restructure the psychology of cadres and to make all our people aware of the spirit and sense of the congress decisions. Our advance will be faster, The higher the discipline and good organization, and the greater the feeling of responsibility for the matter at hand and for its results, the more rapid will be our advance.

What matters most now in our entire organizational and political activity is:

one, to clearly determine for each party organization and each labor collective both immediate and long-terms concrete practical tasks;

two, to create in each party organization and each labor collective an atmosphere of efficiency and exactingness, of criticism and self-criticism, and to ensure that the work carried out to accomplish the tasks set in the congress decisions is enterprising and fruitful;

three, to establish proper control over the fulfillment of the plans and socialist pledges at each production level — at the level of brigades, shifts, shops, enterprises, kolkhozes, and projects; and to be persistent in accomplishing what has been undertaken.

It is essential to give up the idea that because matters are generally not bad, one may restrict oneself to partial improvements. All must reform — from the top to the bottom — and in earnest. All must reform in evaluations, in criteria, in the style of thinking and acting, in everything what affects our advance.

The essence of the reform is precisely to actively struggle at all levels — from the basic party organization to the republic's Communist Party Central Committee — to implement the 27th CPSU Congress decisions and the line traced by the April 1985 CPSU Central Committee Plenum, and to enhance everywhere an atmosphere of searching for, improving and renewing the forms and methods of activity.

I. Making Use of All Possibilities To Accelerate Economic Development

The 27th CPSU Congress documents have formulated the party's concrete tasks in the field of socioeconomic policy.

As noted in the Political Report, acceleration implies primarily a hastened economic growth. But not only that. Its essence lies in a new quality of growth: in the all-round intensification of production on the basis of scientific and technological progress, in restructuring the economy, and in the effective forms of management, of labor organization, and stimulation.

What comes to the foreground now is the task to determine everywhere the way the matter has to be organized in order to achieve the targets set and the reserves which must be used first.

The 27th Ukrainian Communist Party Congress, V.V. Shcherbitskiy pointed out, thoroughly and critically analyzed the state of affairs in the republic's national economy, the work carried out to accelerate scientific-technological progress, and showed the storng and weak spots in economic development. The conclusion made by the congress was unequivocal: The production, scientific-technological, and cadre potential accumulated in the republic and the republic's experience in accomplishing great economic and political tasks make it possible to work better and more effectively and to accomplish qualitatively new tasks. This is precisely the point from which we must proceed in our practical work at all levels — in every labor collective, every rayon, city, and oblast, in every national economic branch.

A. Increasing Rates and By All Means Intensifying Industrial Production

In line with the CPSU Central Committee's directives, additional possibilities have been found in the republic to hasten economic development in the 12th 5-Year Plan period. Compared with the initial figures, the increases planned for the gross social product have been increased by R7.3 billion, those for the national income by R5.5, and those for production by R5.9 billion. The indexes provided for increasing labor productivitiy and reducing material intensity have become more intense, and provisions have been made to raise the output of many production items.

The accomplishment of the tasks set will largely depend on the deep technical reconstruction of production on the basis of the most up-to-date achievements of science and technology. For this reason the republic's allocations for reconstruction and technical reequipment will amount at least to one-half of all capital investments, or 50 percent more than in the 11th 5-Year Plan period.

The final result of enterprise reconstruction and of new construction is determined primarily by the effectiveness level of technologies and equipment provided for in the plans. This is why particular attention must be paid to their quality.

But what returns are to be expected in the future when — for example, in accordance with data obtained from a selective check carried out in the republic's Ministry of Ferrous Metallurgy — 43 out of the 105 projects are being built in accordance with plans which are 5 or even 10 years old and are clearly outdated?

As is known, in line with a decision of the CPSU Central Committee and the USSR Council of Ministers, large-scale measures must be taken to technically reequip ferrous metallurgy. The republic's Council of Ministers, Gosplan, and Minstry of Ferrous Metallurgy must ensure that the construction and reconstruction of all facilities provided for in this decision are included in the 5-year plan.

The Ukrainian Minstry of Ferrous Metallurgy and the appropriate planning institutes are expected to painstakingly scrutinize the documents, to review the plans, and to make fuller use in the plans of the latest achievements of science and technology.

Naturally enough, this work is complex and labor consuming. It calls for smooth and responsible cooperation among planners, machine builders, customers, and contractors. But it must be done, and in the immediate future. Work is also to be carried out as soon as possible by other ministries and departments in the republic, even more so because there is some experience in this work. For example, the builders of the electric motors plant in Uzhgorod, who have been working at the project since 1979, are now reviewing the provided technological solutions, and this will make it possible to significantly increase the plant's output.

The Ukrainian Council of Ministers and Gosplan must ensure that each branch, enterprise, and association is provided with long-term plans for renewing production with an eye on the latest scientific and technological achievements.

The effectiveness of reconstruction and the pace of the entire national economic development decisively depend on machine construction. So it is essential first to reconstruct and reequip machine building production itself. In the current 5-year period, 70 percent more capital will be invested in this branch than in the 11th 5-year period. What matters is to make full use of these investments and to see to it that they produce the needed results.

So far this requirement has not been complied with everywhere. The reconstruction of the Kremenchug Motor Vehicles Plant, going on for more than 10 years, may be regarded as an example how work must not be done. The outlays have already totaled R214 million, or more than 80 percent of the estimated costs. The plant's fixed assets have increased nearly 2.5 times. But the output of heavy trucks has only been brought to 10 percent of the total production, and labor productivity has only increased 8 percent.

It is to be pointed out that as early as in 1982 a meeting of the republic's party and economic aktivs noted slowness in the plant's preparations for the production of new types of motor vehicles. But there were no changes for the better. Apparently, Comrade A.I. Goryainov, general director of the Kremenchug Motor Vehicles Plant, and Comrade V.A. Ostapenko, the plant's party committee secretary, are not disturbed at the fact that the national economy is undersupplied with new vehicles which are so badly needed. Also Comrade M.I. Zaludyak, Kremenchugskiy Gorkom first secretary, seems to be undisturbed. It is time for Poltava Obkom and for the Machine Building Department of the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee to purposefully examine this issue.

V.V. Shcherbitskiy went on to emphasize that the increase planned for the 5-year period in machine building production should be obtained through putting into production advanced models of machines and equipment. For this purpose, machine builders must increase 6 times the output of items which are being put into production in the country for the first time.

At the same time, some party committees tolerate enterprises which are run along the old lines. So, 25 percent of machine models made in Voroshilovgrad Oblast are more than 10 years old; their share in Vinnitsa Oblast amounts to nearly one-third; and Odessa machine building enterprises are now putting into production fewer machine, equipment, and tool models than they did 5 years ago. Of course, this practice must be stopped. Things must be remedied, and immediately.

This is feasible, and evidence of this is, for example, the experience of Kharkov machine builders. To implement the "Quality" comprehensive program, they have resolved to hasten at least 2-2.5 times the renewal of equipment made by them, to increase the share of high-quality production 1.5 times, and to see to it that this production is competitive on the world market.

Having scrutinized the work experience of front-ranking enterprises, the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee Politburo considers that the machine builders have every chance to cope with the plan set. The Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee Plenum may set for them the 12th 5-Year Plan task to raise production virtually without increasing either the consumption of rolled ferrous metal stock or personnel. These concrete tasks have been reflected in the measures worked out to implement the congress decisions. Their accomplishment has to be well organized and systematically controlled.

One of the most pressing tasks is to accelerate the reequipment of transport. The Ukrainian Council of Ministers, the Main Administration of the River Fleet, and railroad administrations are expected to make wider use of automatic systems for the control of transportation, to more vigorously promote industrial technologies, and to raise the level of comprehensive mechanization of loading and loading operations.

An important reserve for intensification, V.V. Shcherbitskiy said, lies in the full utilization of the created production potential. In the 11th 5-Year Plan period, the national economy could have obtained additional production worth hundreds of millions of rubles had the commissioned facilities reached their capacity on schedule. A number of enterprises are still unsatisfactory in utilizing new capacities. In particular, at the Kherson Combine Plant they have only been utilized 25 percent, and at the Zhitomir Chemical Fiber Plant, 37 percent. At the Kiev Polymer Materials Plant, the line for the production of plastic milk bags, put into operation as early as 1979, has been utilized less than 15 percent.

It is also disturbing that the active part of fixed assets — equipment and machine tools — frequently operates at half capacity: the shift intensity factor in machine building is still insufficient. At Volyn, Rovno, Nikolayev, and Ternopol Oblast enterprises this factor even decreased compared with 1980. Thousands of units of installed equipment are idle each year at machine-building enterprises, and some of them are idle because of the shortage in the workforce.

At the same time the experience of the K.Ye. Voroshilov Combine Plant in Dnepropetrovsk in certifying and rationalizing workplaces and in increasing in this way the shift intensity of equipment has been disseminated insufficiently, notwithstanding the large sums spent for this purpose. Some 1,460 delegations visited the enterprises in the 2 and 1/2 years. But, as ROBITNYCHA HAZETA showed recently (on 21 March 1986), the returns of most of them are scanty. The effectiveness of certifying workplaces is very low in Voroshilovgrad, Zhitomir, Kiev, Nikolayev, Khmelnitskiy, and some other oblasts.

The republic's ministries, departments, and local party and administrative bodies must thoroughly and literally at every enterprise examine the causes of this absolutely abnormal situation, must draw up and take measures to make full use of the existing capacities.

Scientific-technological progress and the radical transformation of society's productive forces is the main lever to intensify production, as noted at the 27th CPSU Congress. For this reason, it is essential to make an energetic turn in science toward the needs of the national economy and to aim fundamental research at the settlement of paramount scientific-technological problems. The republic's Academy of Sciences, Ministry of Higher and Secondary Special Education, as well as other ministries and departments, must take into account the new requirements and analyze the themes of scientific papers; must specify the leading, priority directions; and must concentrate the main forces on them.

Our science can and must produce more advanced technologies capable of comprehensively modernizing production sectors and our entire economic branches. In addition, it is important to make quick use of each scientific and technological novelty. The USSR law on discoveries, inventions, rationalizing proposals, and commercial samples, which is now bieng drafted, will undoubtedly be useful in this respect.

So far — and this has already been noted — only one-third of the inventions and half of the complete scientific elaborations have been put into production. A large share of the blame for this lies on the notorious departmental barriers which hamper the utilization of many useful elaborations.

For example, the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences has developed a technology that is new in principle for the prodution of metal-cutting instruments reinforced with hard alloys. Compared with the common hard-alloy instruments, the life of the cutters is 2-5 times longer, the speed of cutting is twice as fast, and labor intensity is 75-80 percent less. The designers of the cutters have taken their case to the Zhdanov Heavy Machine Building Plant, the Dnepropetrovsk Metallurgical Equipment Plant, the Kiev Kommunist Plant, and many other enterprises. All of them paid so badly needed. Also Comrade M.I. Zaludyak, Kremenchugskiy Gorkom first secretary, seems to be undisturbed. It is time for Poltava Obkom and for the Machine Building Department of the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee to purposefully examine this issue.

The designers of the cutters have taken their case to the Zhdanov Heavy Machine Building Plant, the Dnepropetrovsk Metallurgical Equipment Plant, the Kiev Kommunist Plant, and many other enterprises. All of them paid lip service to the scientists: they made an experimental consignment of instrument for their needs and evaluated the novelty highly. But they did not go any farther. Such facts are to be assessed on principle and in the party spirit, and people responsible for scientific-technological progress are to be compelled to do what is needed in the national economy.

In overcoming departmental barriers and intensifying the integration of science with production, an important role must be played by interbranch scientific-technological and engineering centers. This is a new undertaking which requires constant attention and active support on the part of party and administrative bodies and consistency in its dissemination. It is to be noted that the republic is impermissibly slow in creating scientific-production associations.

The Council of Ministers, the Gosplan, and the Academy of Sciences along with the republic's ministries and departments are expected to clearly define what has to be done and by whom and when to develop the existing organizational structures for cooperation between science and production, to tighten control over the efforts to increase the effectiveness of scientific and technological measures, to achieve the indexes set by the 27th Ukrainian Communist Party Congress, and to amend the republic's scientific-technological programs.

The analysis made by the departments of the Ukrainian Communist Party Central Committee shows many shortcomings incurred in drafting the programs. For example, the republic's labor program has set too low the tasks for increasing labor productivity by applying scientific and technological achievements. What kind of progress is it if, as a result of engaging 11,000 robots and more than 200 flexible automated production units, the plan calls for freeing only 16,500 workers?

In the metal and agro-industrial complexes and the biotechnology programs there are still many small and isolated measures, and departmental mentality is to be felt in the way great tasks are treated. For this reason, in amending the republic's scientific-technological programs, it is essential to take into account the congress requirements, to aim them at a wider application of the newest basic and interbranch technologies, and to strengthen emphasis on resource saving.

Our participation in implementing the Comprehensive Program for Scientific-Technological Progress in CEMA Member-States up to the Year 2000 is particularly important both economically and politically. In one of the five directions of the program — creating new materials — the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences is the main organization. There is a very complex task which has to be accomplished as soon as possible: to achieve the world's leading place in this field. This is a matter of honor for our scientists.

B. By Improving the Investment Policy and Enhancing Construction Efficiency

It is impossible to carry out technical modernization of the national economy without fundamentally improving capital construction. It is necessary to make essential changes to the structural and investment policies, that is, to shift the focus of attention from quantitative indicators to quality and efficiency, and from expanding productive capital to replacing it. The volume of construction work in the republic is enormous: It is necessary within 5 years to bring into operation fixed capital of R133 billion, or almost 19 percent more than in the last 5-year plan period.

To accomplish this task, the Council of Ministers needs first to ensure allocation of capital investments in strict accordance with the norms of the duration of construction, as well as the timely preparation of technical documentation and delivery of equipment. This is the first prerequisite for reducing construction periods. It is also very important to eliminate the reasons for the existence of "lengthy construction periods" [dolgostroi], the primary one being the dissipation of funds in numerous projects.

A clearly abnormal situation has developed in this area, particularly in the coal industry. Hundreds of projects are under construction simultaneously there. At the same time, the annual funds allocated for the construction of many new mines are less than the norm by a factor of 1.5-2, and thus the deadlines for their commissioning drag on. For instance, the "Samsonovskaya-Zapadnaya" and "Sukhodolskaya-Vostochnaya" mines have already been under construction for more than 20 years.

The republic's Council of Ministers, Gosplan, and Ministry of the Coal Industry, and first of all Comrades N.F. Nikolayev, V.P. Fokin, and N.S. Surgay are obliged to eliminate these shortcomings.

Examples of "lengthy construction periods" also exist in other sectors. For instance, the Vinnitsa and Kirovograd Sugar Plants, whose construction was decided on as far back as May 1976, are being built very unsatisfactorily. The normative construction periods there have already doubled. Both clients and subcontractors are at fault here. If these plants are not commissioned in time for the new sugar refining season, the Central Committee will take appropriate strict measures.

In order to focus construction forces and resources, the republic's ministries and departments need to determine which projects should be temporarily mothballed. It is also very important to strengthen the role and responsibility of clients — they must be fully allocated to them and more broadly develop the autonomous economic method of construction.

Proper attention should be paid to introducing industrial methods of construction and equipping workers with highly productive tools and small-scale mechanization equipment. And of course it is very important to significantly enhance the standard of organization of construction production and to seriously work on developing and modernizing the base of the construction industry.

As before, the fundamental concern of subcontracting ministries must be channeling forces and funds into the main avenues. This course has justified itself. It must be firmly pursued in the future.

Comrades P.Ye. Yesipenko, V.I. Ananyev, G.K. Zlobin, B.A. Grechko, V.P. Salo, V.Z. Borisovskiy, and N.A. Pylnikov must work on all the stated issues more correctly and, most importantly, more successfully. They were reminded of this again the other day during discussion of measures to fulfill the current year's construction program.

Increasing the efficiency of capital investments must be considered one of the most important economic-political tasks.

C. Tasks of Developing the Agro-Industrial Complex and Fulfilling the Food Program

The 27th congress included fulfillment of the Food Program among its primary tasks. Party and soviet organs and the republic's Gosagroprom [State Agro-Industrial Committee] must organize the work of all components of the agro-industrial complex in such a way as to substantially improve supplies of food products to the population in the 12th 5-Year Plan period.

The basic way to accomplish this most important task is by fundamentally improving utilization of the powerful potential created in the agrarian sector. The return on invested funds here is low now, for which many of the republic's oblasts were justly criticized at the 27th party congress in the address by the chairman of the USSR Gosagroprom.

The CPSU Central Committee and USSR Council of Ministers have projected a package of measures for further improving the economic mechanism of management in the agro-industrial complex. Our task is to fully and ubiquitously utilize the new conditions of management and economic methods and to focus forces and funds where they will ensure the utmost effect, and on this basis substantially increase the productivity and stability of agricultural production.

First, it is necessary to significantly increase land efficiency and show more concern for the preservation of land resources. After all, the area of agricultural land in many of the republic's oblasts has decreased in the last three 5-year plan periods. The Ukrainian SSR Council of Ministers and oblispolkoms must control more strictly the allocation of land and compensation for it to kolkhozes and sovkhozes.

At the same time, it is necessary to intensify work on enhancing soil fertility in every farm, rayon, and oblast because many kolkhozes and sovkhozes are not carrying out the necessary measures in a timely and comprehensive fashion. Many managers and specialists of farms and agricultural organs are being passive in this important matter, are overlooking shortcomings, and do not know how or simply do not want to organize matters properly. Precisely this explains the fact that, for instance, every fourth farm in Rovno Oblast harvested only 8-15 quintals of food grains per hectare last year. Moreoever, for 5 years the number of these kolkhozes and sovkhozes has not decreased. With what natural calamities can comrades T.I. Panasenko and P.K. Prishchepa explain this?

The number of farms in Nikolayev and Odessa Oblasts that have low yeilds has increased. The accountability of all specialists for improving and maintaining farming systems, using local fertilizers, and expanding and improving land reclamation, including chemical, efficiency should be intensified in all areas.

It is also very important to sensibly utilize what has already justified itself in practice in the republic's advanced farms. In particular, this applies to the many years of accumulated experience in Poltava Oblast of introducing a new soil conservation farming system using a moldboardless method of soil cultivation that permits the effects of unfavorable weather to be more successfully overcome.

With all the conflicting opinions and assessments, the indisputable fact remains that in the past 5-year plan period, Poltava Oblast residents have essentially not reduced grain production, while in the neighboring Dnepropetrovsk, Kiev, Kirovograd, and Kharkov Oblasts it has decreased. And kolkhozes and sovkhozes in Poltava Oblast obtained the highest grain crop in the republic last year.

V.V. Shcherbitskiy then cited the following data of the Poltava Obkom on the efficiency of the plowless method. Nearly all the oblast's kolkhozes and sovkhozes switched to plowless cultivation in the 11th 5-Year Plan period. A gross increase of 2,392,000 metric tons of grain was obtained since its introducton. Seventy-eight thousand metric tons of fuel was saved. The total economic effect was R414 million.

Many farms that are well equipped with subsurface cultivation equipment and therefore have not used plows for the last 10 years annually obtain an average of 40-50 quintals of food grains and 400-500 quintals of beet. The fields there are free from weeds. Moroever, certain agronomists no longer use herbicides.

In the Eighth 5-Year Plan period, that is, before the introduction of plowless cultivation, the yield of food grains in Poltava Oblast was at the average republic level. In the 10th this was surpassed, and in the 11th it was 2.2 quintals greater, including 3.7 quintals greater last year. The average annual sales of grain to the state increased 9 percent in the 11th 5-Year Plan period compared with the 10th. Last year the per-hectare harvest of food grains comprised almost 29 quintals, and corn 40 quintals. In the last 5 years the oblast had the highest harvest of food grains among oblasts on the left bank of the Ukraine.

Plowless soil preparation presented an opportunity to increase the harvests and the economies of farms and to obtain profits, and thereby to settle rural social issues, primarily housing, significantly better.

This is convincing data. One must also take into account, V.V. Shcherbitskiy said, that eroded plowlands in Poltava Oblast occupy 15 percent of its total area. This is significantly less than in neighboring oblasts.

The gross grain crop in the republic must be significantly increased by 1990. For this, it is necessary to increase the per-hectare yield of food grains in the steppe belt by up to 32-33 quintals, in the forest steppe belt by up to 34-35 quintals, and in the forest belt by up to 29-30 quintals.

This increase can and must be primarily ensured by intensive technologies. Last year the yield of winter what and corn in areas using intensive technologies was 1.5 times greater than in conventionally sown areas. This year 40 percent of food grains must be cultivated using intensive technologies. People who will be engaged in this have undergone the necessary training. Fertilizers, equipment, and herbicides are basically available. And everything must be done so that every hectare of these sown areas produces at least 40-50 quintals of high-quality grain.

Corn must be more actively utilized to supplement grain forage supplies. Last year its harvest was almost 32 quintals per hectare — 7 quintals more than that of winter wheat. And about 1,100 farms harvested more than 50 quintals of corn.

Particularly noticeable are the successes of corn growers in Dnepropetrovsk Oblast, who have harvested more than 1 million metric tons of grain for 2 years now. Unfortunately, their experience is not receiving support everywhere. Work with corn has become significantly worse in Crimean Oblast (Comrades V.S. Makarenko and A.M. Roshchupkin), where last year the yield at almost one-third of the farms did not exceed 25 quintals per hectare.

V.V. Shcherbitskiy then discussed certain questions of the conduct of spring sowing work and set concrete tasks for the Ukrainian SSR Gosagroprom and its local organs.

Everything possible must be done at every kolkhoz and sovkhoz to obtain this year's planned gross grain crop. This is a paramount task for every party committee and soviet organ, not to mention agroprom organs.

It is necessary to obtain a substantial increase in food resources by reducing produce losses during harvesting, transportation, storage, and processing, particularly of vegetables and potatoes. For this it is necessary for every oblast to produce and persistently implement measures to accelerate scientific-technological progress in potato, vegetable, melon, crop, and orchard growing and viticultures to consolidate the procurement, trade, and processing bases with the aim of totally preserving the cultivated produce and significantly improving supplies for the population.

In livestock breeding, the republic is faced with the task of increasing, by 1990, the production of meat by 33-36 percent and milk by 12-14 percent compared with the last 5-year plan period's average annual production. Its accomplishment requires deeper intensification of this sector. There is one path here — to ensure a substantial increase in livestock and fowl productivity by rapidly developing fodder production and improving selection and pedigree work, including stepping up research into the implantation of embryos. But of course this should not be done as it was at the Ukrainian Scientific Research Institute of Cattle Breeding and Artificial Insemination, which the newspaper SILSKI VISTI wrote about on 19 March this year.

The Ukrainian SSR Communist Party Central Committee has instructed the Ukrainian SSR Gosagroprom Collegium to implement measures to improve the work of this institute and strengthen its leadership. It is necessary for the Kiev Obkom to assist the party organization.

The reserves in the intensification of livestock breeding are great. Suffice it to say that last year many kolkhozes and sovkhozes obtained less than 2000 kg of milk per cow. The number of farms in Chernigov, Rovno, Voroshilovgrad, and Kirovograd Oblasts having such "records" and results of sorts is particularly significant. Of course, this matter must be urgently corrected, ensuring an increase of milk yields in the named kolkhozes and sovkhozes of at least 600-700 kg for the 5-year plan period.

As calculations by specialists show, the average milk yeild per cow in the republic must reach a minimum of 3,000 kg, and up to 3,500-3,600 kg in Lvov, Kiev, Crimean, Cherkassy and Ivano-Frankovsk Oblasts, and 3,800-4,000 kg in Chernovtsky Oblast.

The average daily weight increase of livestock must everywhere be increased by almost one-third and the delivery weight of each animal must increase a minimum of 40-50 kg. For this, the flowline technology of beef production, which has shown itself well in Cherkassy Oblast, should be introduced in all beet-sowing regions.

But particularly major work lies ahead in pig breeding, where productivity indicators are very low. A study of the state of affairs in many kolkhozes and sovkhozes has shown that the main reason is mismanagement, flagrant disregard for zootechnical and technolgoical requirements, and often the elementary ignorance of specialists.

For instance, farms in Vinnitsa Oblast use up to half of their fodder not for increasing the number of pigs, but for holding on too long to the ones they have, with the result that the fattening periods there are double the normative period. The question arises, Do the oblispolkom and Comrade V.F. Temnyy know about this? If they do, then why have they not taken measures?

Things are no better in Khmelnitskiy, Sumy, and Ternopol Oblasts. The Gosagroprom (Comrade V.K. Solomokha), the Ukrainian Department of the V.I. Lenin Academy of Agricultural Sciences (Comrade G.A. Bogdanov), and oblispolkoms need to properly see to this sector and to establish proper order there within the next 2-3 years.

Everyone understands that it is impossible to sharply increase production of livestock-breeding products without the accelerated development of fodder production and a significant enhancement of fodder quality. Solving the fodder protein problem, whose shortage sharply decreases the fodder yield and particularly grain forage, is of particular significance. The Ukrainian SSR Gosplan and Gosagroprom need to profoundly and critically work through the entire package of issues connected with increasing fodder protein production in every oblast.

In accordance with the requirements of the 27th CPSU Congress, the economic efficiency of agricultural production must be significantly enhanced.

It should be noted that results occur in areas where issues of economy are undertaken not with words, but with deeds, and where state assistance is used sensibly. Many people can recall that kolkhozes in Zhitomir Oblast once had difficulty making ends meet; but in the last 3 years they have obtained an average profit of R154 million. At the same time, 95 farms in Odessa and Sumy Oblasts, 92 in Chernigov Oblast, and 54 in Kherson Oblast finished last year with losses.

Groups of skilled specialists have currently been sent to give on-the-spot assistance to lagging kolkhozes and sovkhozes. Obkoms and oblispolkoms are obliged to help them in their work in every way.

Particular attention must be paid to developing the collective contract on the basis of geniune economic accountability. Work has been done in the republic to teach personnel in practice the experience of using economic accountability and the contract. The task is to make genuine economic accountability, dependence of enterprises' incomes on end results, and self-financing the norm for all components of the agro-industrial complex.

Many problems have accumulated in the food industry, particularly in the development of the material-technical base. Appropriate measures have been projected; it is important to carry them out totally and in an opportune manner. It is also necessary to increase the degree of processing raw materials, expand variety and improve the quality of food goods, and to find additional local resources for this as, for instance, Voroshilovgrad Oblast is doing.

D. Perfecting Management and Improving the Results of Economic Operations.

In the republic, as in the country as a whole, work has been developed to improve planning, ensure a correct combination of branch and territorial principles of managing the national economy, perfect the economic mechanism, and make wider use of economic stimuli for accelerating the rates of production development and for increasing product quality.

This important work must constantly be at the center of party committees' attention, the more so since cases where enterprises working in the new conditions do not improve their indices are not isolated ones. To be specific, last year certain machine-building enterprises of the Ministry of the Machine Tool and Tool Building Industry did not fulfill the plans for labor productivity growth, product output, or higher quality category, while the growth rates of production volume decreased more than twofold. In enterprises of the Ministry of Tractor and Agricultural Machine Building, the volume of products not delivered in line with contracts grew by 1.5 times, while for the Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry this grew by 2.7 times. The leadership of the above ministries are still slow to correct these shortcomings.

The Ukrainian SSR Council of Ministers and Gosplan should look into every similar case in enterprises under republican control, and should take appropriate measures.

Concern is also caused by the fact that many leaders have relaxed the attention they give to the financial aspect of the ministries and departments, enterprises, and organizations which they head. And it is obviously no accident that in the last 5-year plan fewer profits than had been planned were accrued in industry subordinate to the Ukrainian SSR Council of Ministers. Considerable sums derived from enterprises and organizations which were working well were directed toward making up the shortage of circulating capital which had formed as a result of this. Large amounts of bugetary resources also had to be assigned for these purposes which could well have been used for paramount social and other needs.

It is necessary to put a decisive end to such leveling, which encourages a parasitic attitude and guarantees a "quiet life" for some at the expense of others. The Council of Ministers, the State Agro-Industrial Committee, and the Ministry of Finance of the republic must substantially increase the role of the finance and credit mechanism in intensifying labor collectives' interest in and responsibility for the final results of work. The efforts of the financial and banking organs must be aimed not at petty regulation of enterprises' activity but at stimulation of their socialist enterprising spirit and independence and at spreading economic accountability relations.

Unfortunately, many ministries are slow to reorganize thier work. Thus, a considerable amount of unsolved problems have accumulated in the forestry and wood-processing industry. The technical reequipment of production is slow in being implemented here; there are many complaints about product quality; and production plans are not balanced against material resources. However, instead of taking effective measures to improve matters, Comrade I.I. Grunyanskiy, the minister, is directing his main efforts toward justifying the shortcomings, while evading the timely resolution of acute issues. As a result, the branch is operating extremely erratically.

The work to perfect the management structure and the style of work in all sectors of the republic's national economy will have to be energetically and persistently continued. The industrial associations operating in the Ministry of Light Industry, the Ministry of Ferrous Metallurgy, the Ministry of the Construction Materials Industry, the Ministry of Local Industry, and other ministries and departments, frequently duplicate the work of the central apparatus; and the main point is that in practice they often act as obstacles to the expansion of the rights and economic independence of enterprises.

The management apparatus in the construction industry, particularly in the republican sector, is still cumbersome, and a considerable number of departmental construction organizations operate in parallel. In Kharkov Oblast, for instance, work is being carried out by 154 construction organizations subordinated to 20 different ministries and departments.

It is necessary that the Council of Ministers of the Ukrainian SSR accelerate the development of a general scheme for the management of the republic's national economy.

Considerable losses to the economy are also caused by the continuing violations of contract delivery discipline. This year many enterprises are already not fulfilling their contract obligations on time. The output of products which have not been ordered continues as before.

At a number of enterprises of the machine-building industry, light industry, and forestry and wood-processing industries, the necessary measures are not being taken in the struggle against storming [shturmovshchina]. As a result, about half of all goods here are produced in the last 10 days of the month.

Matters cannot continue to be conducted like this. It is necessary for there to be swift and effective intervention by the appropriate economic organs, as well as by party obkoms, gorkoms, and raykoms.

Speaking about the effectiveness of economic operations, the speaker especially dwelt on such a synthesizing index as product quality. It cannot but be a cause for concern, he said, that only few enterprises are delivering products of higher quality category and that only one of every seven new products is awarded the state quality mark. The proportional share of this kind of products in the output of enterprises of the Ukrainian SSR Ministry of Ferrous Metallurgy, Ministry of the Construction Materials Industry, and Ministry of Local Industry and of Donetsk, Dnepropetrovsk, Poltava, and other oblasts is considerably below the pertinent republic average.

The fact that in January and February of this year 15 oblasts reduced the output of index "N" (novelty) products as compared with the corresponding period of last year and that among them the Voroshilovgrad, Kharkov, Transcarpathian, and Zaporozhye Oblasts reduced the output of these products more than other oblasts has to be considered an unusual development. Party committees must make an appropriate evaluation of the actions of those leaders who allow the output of products for which there is no demand, and in this connection they must proceed from the view that half-measures are not enough here.

Ministries and departments and party organizations of enterprises and associations must utilize all possibilities and reserves to ensure the volume and proportional share of products of higher quality category in the overall output in accordance with the tasks set by they guidelines. The adoption of the law on product quality will undoubtedly contribute to the fulfillment of this task.

No matter what sphere we may consider, V.V. Shcherbitskiy further said, be it production operations or material-technical supplies, we must not fail to solve any problems that have become ripe. It is clear that all our work, all measures, including the organizational and management measures, must be subordinated to the main task, that is, a successful fulfillment of the plan of the first year of the 5-year plan and of the 5-year plan as a whole. In the current 5-year plan period the output of industrial products must increase by 18-21 percent and the average annual volume of agricultural production must increase by 13-15 percent.

The tasks are not easy. However, everything must be done to reach the upper limit of these percentages. Considerably higher rates of growth are planned for some types of products. Thus, it is necessary to increase the output of chemical fibers and fabrics by up to 30 percent, of automobile tires by up to 34 percent, and of agricultural machines by up to 70 percent.

The 1986 plan is oriented, to a greater extent that the plans in the preceding years, to accelerating the rates of growth, improving the utilization of reserves, and intensifying production operations. The Ukrainian SSR State Planning Committee has accomplished significant work in this regard.

A fairly good start was made at the beginning of the year. The output of industrial products increased by 7.5 percent as compared with the January-February period of last year. And in this connection nearly the entire increase was due to the increased labor productivity.

The branches of the heavy industry, the construction ministries, and transportation are working stably. The republic's coal miners not only overfulfilled their plans but also increased the output of coal by 1.2 million metric tons as compared with the corresponding 2 months in 1985. Metallurgical workers considerably increased the smelting of pig iron and steel and the output of rolled metal products and coke. Consumer goods valued at R411 million were produced in excess of plans. Agriculture increased the procurement of meat by 12 percent, milk by 6 percent, and eggs by 9 percent. The plans for increased commodity trade and for increased volume of everyday services for the population were fulfilled.

The results of the first 2 months essentially reflected the precongress enthusiasm of labor collectives as well as the more balanced plans. However, it must not be forgotten that the rates of growth achieved in the January-February period of last year by no means represent the basis which we should use as reference in our calculations.

Many indexes for the first quarter considerably exceeded the planned indexes for the whole year. However, this should not be a reason for complacency. There is still a large number of enterprises that are not fulfilling their tasks, including the tasks concerning the reduction of production costs. This means that many leaders still fail to do everything to ensure the fulfillment of plans, do not concern themselves with the quality indexes of economic activities, and do not analyze at what cost they reach the plan.

The task is to further continue to increase the rates of economic growth, to ensure harmonious work of all branches and enterprises everywhere, and to improve their economic efficiency.

II. Persistently Implementing the Party Social Policy

The 27th CPSU Congress worked out a long-term social policy that covers all aspects of the Soviet people's life. The task has been set to ensure a new approach to developing the social sphere of life and to overcome once for all the underestimation of the problems that cannot be put off any longer.

An important place in the social program has been allotted to the task of satisfying the real purchasing demand of the population and of saturating the market with various and, what is the most important, good-quality goods and services. The corresponding Comprehensive Program is oriented to this goal.

But, unfortunately, not all ministries and departments are advancing toward the set goals, and this is true for Volyn, Lvov, and Chernovtsy Oblasts. For instance, the rates of growth of production volume envisaged by the 1986 plan of the light industry are by 1.5 times lower than the average annual rates for the 12th 5-Year Plan. The development of the sewing, footwear, and knitted fabrics industries is especially lagging behind the demand. The republic's light industry needs the support and assistance of the USSR Ministry of the Light Industry, the Ukrainian SSR Gosplan, and the local party and soviet organs.

Not all enterprises of the "A" group have yet been enlisted for the production of consumer goods, and many of them produce them in what can be called very small quantities.

It is time in this important sector to most resolutely overcome conservatism, sluggishness, and clumsiness, especially in reequipping the enterprises, developing and introducing new types of products, and utilizing local opportunities.

Exceptionally responsible work will have to be carried out in fulfilling the task set by the congress of providing a separate apartment or house for every family by the year 2000. The Gosplan, the State Committee for Construction Affairs, the Central Statistical Administration, and the Ministry of Housing and Municipal Services must make the necessary calculations and prepare the necessary proposals for solving this problem.

Simultaneously with increasing the volumes of new housing construction, including by enlisting the resources of the population, it is necessary to accelerate the rates of capital repairs of existing housing funds and the reconstruction of old communal apartments for family occupancy. It is also necessary everywhere to take into account the existing surpluses of living space and introduce order in their utilization.

Unfortunately, the quality of housing construction, as well as of the construction of many other civic projects, is still low. One of the greatest shortages exists in the services for housing repairs and for the construction of private homes. This can no longer be tolerated. This is, first and foremost, a field for concrete activities of the soviets and the aktiv of many thousands of their deputies.

Under the measures on the implementation of the congress' decisions, it is planned to organize on a considerably wider scale everyday services at working peoples' places of work and to actively enlist enterprises and organizations for this task. It is necessary to expand in every way possible the services connected with facilitating domestic work and with tourism and automobile servicing, and to continue developing collective fruit growing and horticulture.

It is also necessary to reduce the gap between the levels of everyday services for the urban and village population. As is known, in the past 5-year plan period the republic noticeably intensified the social restructuring of the village. However, Vinnitsa, Ternopol, and Khmelnitskiy Oblasts failed to fulfill much of what had been planned in this respect. Therefore, it is necessary in every oblast to carefully examine the progress in the implementation of comprehensive measures on the socioeconomic development of the village and, wherever it is necessary, to make the appropriate corrections in the draft plans for the 12th 5-Year Plan period.

The fact that the problem of centralized water supply system has not yet been solved in many villages and, in particular, in Zaporozhye and Nikolayev Oblasts, attests to this necessity. The State Agro-Industrial Committee and the Ministry of Land Reclamation and Water Resources, and the appropriate oblast ispolkoms must find the necessary resources and solve this problem within a short period.

The republic Council of Ministers and Gosplan, the ispolkoms of local soviets, and the appropriate ministries and departments are called upon to persistently work to accomplish the tasks of providing the necessary amenities for cities and villages and of improving everyday services for the population. It should always be remembered that satisfying the demands and concrete needs of the people is a political question and that the party committees have no right to stand aside from these tasks.

It was stressed at the 27th CPSU Congress that the party would persistently strive to eliminate everything that hampers the strict implementation of the principle of social justice. It is necessary everywhere to intensify control over the measure of work and consumption and strive to ensure a strict dependence of wages on labor productivity and quality.

It was noted in the report that the struggle against parasites as well as against embezzlement is not sufficiently consistent everywhere and especially not in Zaporozhye, Dnepropetrovsk, Crimean, Lvov, and Odessa Oblasts and in the republic systems of consumer cooperatives and everyday services. Taking into account new demands, the party, soviet, and law and order organs must restructure their work more actively in the struggle against these phenomena.
